Tax Law. — Taxes on real estate become a lien on the day preceding the second Monday of April. They are payable to the county treasurer between October 1st and December 20th each year, but the owner may, at his option, pay the full amount on or before December 20th, or one half then and the remainder between April 1st and June 20th following. A penalty of fifteen per cent. is added to each semiannual installment not severally paid on or before December 20th and June 20th, or not collected by law prior to the February or August settlement after due. Whenever the tax upon lands has not been paid for two consecutive semiannual tax-paying periods, such amounts become delinquent; and thereupon the county auditor is required to certify the same as delinquent to the auditor of state, after first publishing a list of the delinquent lands in the newspapers. The State has a first and best lien on the premises so certified, for the amount of taxes, assessments, and penalties, together with interest thereon at the rate of eight per cent. per annum. If the taxes on said lands have not been paid for four consecutive years, the State may bring an action for foreclosure of its lien, in the county in which the land is situated. The owner may redeem such land at any time before foreclosure proceedings have been begun. (107 O. L. 735, 740.) Personal property is taxed at the same rate as real estate, and the taxes are payable at the same time and place. Personal property must be listed by the person required to list the same with the assessor of the place where he resided on the second Monday in April in any year within ten days after receiving from such assessor a blank for that purpose. (G. C. § 5375.) Property shall be listed as of the day before the second Monday in April of each year. (G. C. §§ 5376, 5377.) If the taxes are not paid a penalty of ten per cent. is added. (G. C. §§ 5694 et seq.) At the time of taking the lists of personal property the assessor also takes a list of all real estate that has become subject to taxation and is not on the tax list, and of all improvements on real estate which have increased the value thereof more than one hundred dollars, and of all destruction of any part thereof decreasing its value more than one hundred dollars, and the tax list is corrected accordingly. Except as just stated, real estate is not listed by the tax-payer. (G. C. §§ 5543-5578.)

The property of corporations is taxed like the personal property of individuals, except that corporations make their tax returns to the county auditor instead of the local assessor, and include their real estate in such return. And corporations and others operating public utilities make their returns to the tax commission. (G. C. §§ 5404, 5405, 5406; 102 O. L. 224.) Corporations are subject to special franchise or privilege taxes as follows: 1. Sleeping car, freight line, and equipment companies owning and operating carriers not otherwise listed for taxation in the State of Ohio, one and two tenths per cent. of the value of the proportion of the capital stock of such companies representing property owned or used in Ohio. 2. Electric light, gas, natural gas, water works, telephone, messenger or signal, union depot, heating, cooling and water transportation companies, one and two tenths per cent. of the gross receipts of such companies for business done within the State for the year next preceding the first day of May in each year. 3. Street, suburban and interurban railroad companies, one and two tenths per cent. of the gross receipts of such companies for business done within the State for the year next preceding the first day of May in each year. 4. Express and telegraph companies, two per cent. of the gross receipts of such companies for business done within the State for the year next preceding the first day of May in each year. 5. Railroad companies, four per cent. of the gross receipts of such companies for business done within the State for the year next preceding the thirtieth day of June in each year. 6. Pipe line companies, four per cent. of the gross receipts of such companies for business done within the State for the year next preceding the first day of May in each year. 7. All other domestic corporations for profit, except insurance, fraternal beneficial, building and loan, bond investment and other corporations required by law to file annual reports with the superintendent of insurance, three twentieths of one per cent. of the capital stock of such corporations subscribed, issued, and outstanding, but not less than ten dollars in any case. 8. All other foreign corporations for profit, except insurance, fraternal beneficial, building and loan, bond investment and other corporations required by law to file annual reports with the superintendent of insurance, one tenth of one per cent. for the year 1910, and three twentieths of one per cent. for each year thereafter, upon the proportion of the authorized capital stock of the company represented by property owned and authorized and business transacted in the State of Ohio, but not less than ten dollars in any case. All these special taxes are assessed by the state tax commission, composed of three members appointed by the governor subject to confirmation by the Senate. Reports for the purpose of assessing these taxes must be made to the tax commission, as follows: By sleeping car, freight line, and equipment companies between the first and thirty-first days of May in each year; by public utilities other than railroad companies, on or before the first day of August in each year; by railroad companies on or before the first day of October in each year; by domestic corporations for profit, during the month of May in each year; by foreign corporations for profit, during the month of July in each year. (Act passed May 10, 1910, took effect without the approval of the governor May 24, 1910.) (101 O. L. 399-430; 102 O. L. 224-262.)

Testimony. — All persons are competent witnesses except those of unsound mind, and children under ten years of age who appear incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts and transactions respecting which they are examined, or of relating them truly. (G. C. § 11493.)

The following persons cannot testify in certain respects: 1. An attorney concerning any communication made to him by his client in that relation, or his advice to his client, without the client's express consent, or a physician concerning any communication made to him by his patients, in that relation, or his advice to his patient, without his patient's consent: but if the client or patient voluntarily testify, the attorney or physician may be compelled to testify on the same subject. 2. A clergyman or priest concerning a confession made to him in his professional character, in the course of discipline enjoined by the church to which he belongs. 3. Husband or wife concerning any communication made by one to the other, or act done by either in the presence of the other during coverture, unless the communication was made, or act done, in the known presence or hearing of a third person competent of being a witness; and the rule shall be the same if the marital relation has ceased to exist. 4. A person who assigns his claim or interest, concerning any matter in respect to which he would not, if a party, be permitted to testify. 5. A person who, if a party, would be restricted in his evidence under 82 O. L. 125, shall, where the property or thing is sold or transferred by an executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, heir, devisee, or legatee, be restricted in the same manner in any action or proceeding concerning such property or thing. (G. C. § 11494.)

A party cannot testify where the adverse party is the guardian or trustee of either a deaf and dumb or an insane person, or of a child of a deceased person, or is an executor or administrator, or claims or defends as heir, grantee, assignee, devisee, or legatee of a deceased person, except in certain specified cases. (G. C. § 11495.)

A party may compel the adverse party to testify orally, or by deposition, as on cross examination and if the adverse party is a corporation its officers may be thus compelled to testify. (G. C. § 11497.)

Wills. — Any person of full age and of sound mind and memory, and not under any restraint, having property, can give and bequeath the same to any person, by will, lawfully executed. Every will (except nuncupative wills as hereafter provided) must be in writing or typewritten, and signed at the end thereof by the party making the same, or by some other person in his presence and by his express direction, and must be attested and subscribed in the presence of such party by two or more competent witnesses who saw the testator subscribe or heard him acknowledge the same; but verbal wills, made in the last sickness, will be valid in respect to personal estate, if reduced to writing and subscribed by two competent disinterested witnesses within ten days after the speaking of the testamentary words, and offered for probate within six months of the death of the testator. No devisee or legatee should be a witness. If no person interested shall, within one year after probate, appear and contest the will, the probate is forever binding, saving, however, to infants, and persons of insane mind, or in captivity, the like period after disability removed. (G. C. § 12087, 102 O. L. 308.)

As against issue of the body of the testator or an adopted child, or their legal representatives, all bequests to any benevolent, religious, educational, or charitable purpose; or to any municipality, corporation, or association, or in trust, secret or express, for such purpose or bodies, are void, unless the will be executed at least one year prior to the decease of the testator. The testator may by will dispose of his entire estate as he thinks proper, subject to the above restriction and to the rights given to the widow or widower by statute.

Wills executed, proven, and allowed out of the State may be allowed and admitted to record in this State, under certain prescribed proceedings in the probate court; and when so admitted and recorded have the same validity in law as wills made in this State in conformity with the laws thereof. No will is effectual to pass real or personal estate unless it has been duly admitted to probate or record, as provided in the act relating to wills.

Every will when admitted to probate must be filed in the office of the probate judge, and recorded, together with the testimony, by the judge or his clerk, in a book to be kept by him for that purpose. (G. C. §§ 10503 et seq.)

OKLAHOMA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. West, Sherman, Davidson & Moore, of Tulsa.

The next legislature convenes in January, 1919.

Prior to 1889 what is now Oklahoma was made up of various Indian reservations. What were known as the Five Civilized Tribes (Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Creeks, and Seminoles), covering roughly speaking the eastern half of the State, had regular systems of government with written constitutions and laws, and were attached to the Union Agency at Muskogee. There were in all several other Indian agencies. The United States exercised criminal jurisdiction through the federal courts at Fort Smith, Arkansas, Paris, Texas, and Wichita, Kansas. In January, 1889, the government purchased the nucleus of what was afterwards Oklahoma Territory (subsequently very much enlarged in area), and in April, 1889, by presidential proclamation, it was opened to settlement.

By the act of March 1, 1889, a United States court was established in the Indian Territory. (25 U. S. Stats. at Large, 783.) By the act of May 2, 1890, that part of the old Indian Territory which was known as Oklahoma was provided with a territorial government separate from the Indian Territory, and the jurisdiction of the United States courts in Indian Territory was enlarged. (26 U. S. Stats. at Large, 81.) The two territories remained separate and distinct down to 1906. Each successive year, however, new statutes were passed bringing the country nearer the goal of statehood, large bodies of additional Indian land were secured and opened to settlement, and treaties were made with each of the Five Civilized Tribes and enacted into law by Congress.

The Enabling Act for the admission of Oklahoma and Indian Territory was approved June 16, 1906 (34 U. S. Stats. at Large, 267), and amended by act of March 4, 1907. Delegates to a constitutional convention were elected November 6, 1906. That convention assembled in Guthrie, December 20, 1906, drafted a Constitution, and adjourned July 16, 1907. At an election held September 17, 1907, the Constitution was ratified, and state, county, and township officers were elected. On proclamation of the president, November 16, 1907, Oklahoma entered upon full statehood as the forty-sixth State of the Union.

Notes. — Those who do not have access to the United States Statutes at Large will find most of the congressional acts to which reference has been made in the three volume work, "Laws and Treaties," compiled by Charles J. Kappler, published by the Government Printing Office, 1904 & 1913; reference may also be made to Mansfield's Digest of the Statutes of Arkansas (1884); Indian Territory Statutes, published by West Publishing Company; and Wilson's Revised and Annotated Statutes of Oklahoma (1903); Compiled Laws of Oklahoma, 1909; Revised Laws of Oklahoma, 1910; Session Laws, 1911, 1913-1915, 1916, 1917.

Acknowledgments. — Acknowledgments of all instruments affecting real estate should be in substantially the following form: —

STATE OF OKLAHOMA, } ss.
COUNTY, }

Before me, in and for said county and State, on this day of personally appeared and to me known to be the identical person who executed the within and foregoing instrument, and acknowledged to me that executed the same as free and voluntary act and deed for the uses and purposes therein set forth.

Acknowledgments of deeds by corporations must be by the officer or person subscribing the name of the corporation thereto, and must be substantially in the following form: —

STATE OF OKLAHOMA, } ss.
COUNTY, }

Before me, a in and for said county and State, on this day of personally appeared to me known to be the identical person who subscribed the name of the maker thereof to the foregoing instrument as its (attorney in fact, president, vice-president, or mayor, as the case may be), and acknowledged to me that he executed the same as his free and voluntary act and deed, and as the free and voluntary act and deed of such corporation, for the uses and purposes therein set forth.

Acknowledgments must be under the seal of the officer; and (1) when taken in the State, they may be taken before any notary public, county clerk, or clerk of the district court, or county judge of the county where the land is situated; and (2) when taken out of the State, they may be taken by any notary public, clerk of court of record, commissioner of deeds appointed by the governor of Oklahoma for the county, State, or Territory where the same is taken; and (3) when taken in any foreign country, they may be taken before any court of record or clerk of such court, or before any United States consul. (In certain cases acknowledgment may be taken before Indian agent.) See Deeds.

Actions. — For the recovery of money or property there is but one form of action, called a civil action. A civil action is commenced in a court of record by filing with the clerk a petition and causing summons to issue thereon (which is issued always upon a written præcipe), and either procuring service or in good faith attempting to do so. Civil actions before justices of the peace are commenced by summons, or by appearance and agreement of the parties without summons. In the former case the action is commenced from the delivery of the writ to the constable, and in the latter from the docketing of the case.

Defendant has twenty days to answer from return day named in summons, where action is in the district court. In the justices' courts answer is made on or before return day named in summons.

Aliens. — The state Constitution prohibits aliens from acquiring title to or owning land in Oklahoma, and requires the legislature to pass laws whereby such aliens and their heirs hereafter acquiring real estate in Oklahoma by descent, demise, or otherwise shall dispose of it within five years upon condition of escheat or forfeiture to the State; these provisions are, however, expressly declared not to apply to lands owned by aliens at the adoption of the Constitution, nor to Indians born within the United States, nor to aliens who may become bona fide residents of the State.

Appeals. — Appeals lie in all cases, except where judgment is by consent or less than twenty dollars in amount, from justices of the peace to county court, district court, and superior court in those counties having superior court. Plaintiff may appeal from an order of a justice of the peace dissolving an attachment or discharging a garnishment and by giving required notice and bond to prevent the release of attached property until the matter is determined de novo in the county court. Appeals and proceedings in error are taken from the county court direct to the supreme court in all civil cases appealed from justices of the peace, in all criminal cases of which the county court has jurisdiction to criminal court of appeals, and all civil cases originally brought in the county court to the Supreme Court; but in all cases arising under the probate jurisdiction of the county court appeals from judgments of the county court lie to the district court for that county. Appeals and proceedings in error may be taken from the district and superior courts to the supreme court in all civil cases, and in criminal cases to the criminal court of appeals. Appeals lie from state corporation commission to the supreme court from the commission's action prescribing rates, charges, or classifications, affecting train schedules, requiring additional facilities of transportation companies, etc.

Assignments. — Except as affected by the national bankruptcy act of 1898, the following statute respecting assignments is in force.

An insolvent debtor may, in good faith, execute an assignment of property to one or more assignees, in trust, towards the satisfaction of his creditors, provided that said assignment shall contain no condition by which one creditor is to receive preference over another. The assignment must be in writing, subscribed by the assignor, or by his agent thereto authorized in writing, and recorded at the same place where the inventory should be filed as hereinafter shown. Within twenty days after an assignment is made, the assignor must make and file with the register of deeds in the county in which the assignor resided at the date of the assignment, or, if he did not then reside in this State, with a like officer of the county in which his principal place of business was then situated, or, if he had not then a residence or place of business in this State, with a like officer of the county in which the principal part of the assigned property was then situated, a full and true inventory showing first, all the creditors of the assignor; second, the place of residence of each creditor; third, the nature of the debt or liability; fourth, the true consideration of the liability in each case and the place where it arose; fifth, every existing judgment, mortgage, and other security for the payment of any debt or liability of the assignor; sixth, all property of the assignor at the date of the assignment which is exempt by law from execution; seventh, all the assignor's property at the date of the assignment, both real and personal, of every kind not so exempt, and the incumbrances existing thereon, and all vouchers and securities relating thereto, and the value of all such property according to the best knowledge of the assignor. There must be annexed to and filed with the inventory an affidavit of the assignor to the effect that same is in all respects just and true according to the best of assignor's knowledge and belief. The assignment is void if it is not recorded and the inventory is not filed within twenty days after the date of the assignment. The assignment is also void if it tends to coerce any creditor to release or compromise his demand; if it provides for the payment of any claim known to the assignor to be false or fraudulent or for more on any claim than is known to be justly due from assignor; if it reserves any interest in the assigned property or any part thereof to the assignor, before his debts are paid, other than property exempt by law from execution; if it confers upon the assignee any power which, if exercised, might prevent or delay the immediate conversion of the assigned property to the purposes of the trust; if it exempts him from liability for neglect of duty or misconduct. Within thirty days after the assignment the assignee must enter into a bond to the State in double the value of the property assigned, with sureties to the approval of the judge of the district court of the county in which the original inventory is filed, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his trust, which bond must be filed in the same office with the original inventory. He has no authority to dispose of the assigned property or to convert it to the purposes of the trust until the inventory has been made and filed and the assignment recorded and the bond given as hereinbefore stated. If assignment is executed by more than one assignor, it must be recorded and copy of inventory filed with register of deeds of every county in which any of assignors resided at its date, or in which any of them, not then residing in the state, had then a place of business. When assignment embraces real property it is subject also to the provisions of all laws relating to the acknowledgment and recording of transfers of real property.

Attachment. — The plaintiff in a civil action for the recovery of money may at or after the commencement thereof have an attachment against the property of the defendant by, 1, executing and filing with the clerk of the court an undertaking with one or more sureties in a sum not less than double the amount of the plaintiff's claim, to the effect that he shall pay to the defendant all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, including attorney's fees if the order be wrongfully obtained; but no obligation is required where defendants are all non-residents or foreign corporation, and 2, filing an affidavit showing the nature of the plaintiff's claim, that it is just, and the amount which he believes he ought to recover and one or more of the following facts: (1) that the defendant, or one of several defendants, is a foreign corporation or a non-resident; (2) that the defendant, or one of several defendants, has absconded with the intent to defraud his creditors; (3) that the defendant has left the county of his residence to avoid service of summons; (4) that the defendant so conceals himself that summons cannot be served upon him; or (5) is about to remove his property or a part thereof out of the jurisdiction of the court with the intent to defraud his creditors; or (6) is about to convert his property or a part thereof into money for the purpose of placing it beyond the reach of his creditors; (7) has property or rights in action which he conceals; or (8) has assigned, removed, or disposed of, or is about to dispose of his property, or a part thereof, with the intent to defraud, hinder, and delay his creditors; or (9) fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the liability for which the suit is about to be, or has been, brought; or (10) that the damages for which the action is brought are for injuries arising from the commission of a felony misdemeanor, or the seduction of a female; or (11) when the debtor has failed to pay the price or value of any article delivered which by contract he was bound to pay upon delivery.

Orders of attachment may issue to several counties at the same time, binding the property of the defendant from their delivery to the officer; and if issued at the commencement of the suit are returnable at the same time with the summons, and if issued afterwards are returnable in twenty days. They must be levied in the order in which they are received by the sheriff, and take precedence as levied.

A creditor may have an attachment against his debtor's property even though the debt be not due, upon filing affidavit, by himself, agent, or attorney, setting forth the nature of plaintiff's claim, that it is just, when the same will become due, and the existence of some one or more of the following grounds of attachment, viz.: that the debtor has sold, conveyed, or otherwise disposed of his property with the fraudulent intention of cheating or defrauding his creditors, or to hinder or delay them in the collection of their debts; or is about to make such sale or conveyance or disposition of his property with such fraudulent intent; or is about to remove his property or a material part thereof with intent or to the effect of cheating or defrauding his creditors, or hindering or delaying them in the collection of their debts.

Chattel Mortgages and Mortgages of Real Estate. — A mortgage of personal property may be made in substantially the following form: —

This mortgage, made the day of in the year by A. B. of by occupation a mortgagor, to C. D., of by occupation a mortgagee, witnesseth: that the said mortgagor mortgages to the mortgagee (here describe property) as security for the payment to him of dollars, on (or before) the day of with interest thereon (or security for the payment of a note or obligation describing it, etc.).

A chattel mortgage is void as against creditors of the mortgagor or subsequent bona fide purchasers or incumbrancers for value, unless the original or an authenticated copy be filed in the office of the register of deeds of the county where the property or any part thereof is situated.

Every chattel mortgage shall be void as to creditors of the mortgagor or subsequent bona fide purchasers or mortgagees, after the expiration of three years from the filing thereof and each third year thereafter, unless within thirty days next preceding the expiration of said term a copy of the mortgage and a statement of the amount due thereon, verified by affidavit of the mortgagee or his assigns, or agent or attorney, be filed anew in the office of the register of deeds in the county in which the mortgagor then resides.

Chattel mortgages must be signed by the mortgagor. Such signature may either be attested by acknowledgment before any person authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds, or it may be signed and validated by the signature of two persons not interested therein. Mortgages so signed in the presence of two witnesses or acknowledged before an officer, shall be duly admitted of record.

When the conditions of the mortgage have been broken, it may be foreclosed by sale of the property, upon notice posted in five public places in the county at least ten days before the time specified for the sale; which notices shall contain (1) names of mortgagor and mortgagee, and assignor, if any; (2) date of mortgage; (3) nature of default and the amount claimed to be due and the date of notice; (4) description of the property conforming substantially to that contained in the mortgage; (5) time and place of sale; (6) name of party, agent, or attorney foreclosing the mortgage. Where foreclosure has been commenced by such notice, if the mortgagee presents his or his agent's or attorney's affidavit to the district judge to the effect that the mortgagor has a legal counter-claim or set-off, or other valid defense against the whole or a part of the debt, such judge may, by order, enjoin foreclosure by advertisement and direct that all further proceedings to foreclose be had in the court properly having jurisdiction of the matter. If the mortgagor voluntarily removes or permits the removal of mortgaged property from the county the mortgagee may take possession and sell the property as a pledge for the payment of the debt, though the debt be not due.

A mortgage of real property can be created, renewed, or extended only by writing, with the formalities required in the case of grant of real estate; the wife must join in mortgage of homestead. Mortgages of real estate must be foreclosed by action, and a personal decree may be obtained in the same action against the mortgagor for any deficiency from the debt and costs arising on the sale of the mortgaged premises. A recorded mortgage may be discharged by an entry in the margin of the record thereof, stating that payment of the debt has been made, the date of the entry, and subscribed by the holder of the mortgage or his agent or attorney to whom the debt was paid. Or such statement may be made in a separate instrument duly signed and acknowledged and recorded in the office of the register of deeds. The mortgagor must pay expense of such release. A mortgage of a homestead shall be of no validity unless the husband and wife, if the owner is married, concur in and sign the same joint instrument. If either husband or wife become hopelessly insane the district court may make an order permitting the husband or wife not insane to sell and convey or mortgage the homestead.

A registration tax is required on all real estate mortgages; ten cents for each one hundred dollars or major fraction thereof where the mortgage is for five years or more; eight cents for each one hundred dollars where the mortgage is for four years and less than five; six cents for each one hundred dollars where the mortgage is for three years and less than four; four cents for each one hundred dollars where the mortgage is for two years and less than three; and two cents for each one hundred dollars where the mortgage is for less than two years. If the mortgage is for less than one hundred dollars the tax is ten cents. Payment of the tax is a prerequisite to registration, or to receipt of the mortgage in evidence, and any judgment foreclosing a mortgage on which the tax is unpaid is forbidden.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — See Estates.

Conditional Sales. — All instruments in writing, including promissory notes evidencing the conditional sale of personal property and retaining title in vendor until payment of purchase price, are void as against innocent purchasers or creditors of vendor unless the instrument or a copy thereof shall have been deposited in the office of the register of deeds of the county where the property is kept; and when so deposited shall be subject to the laws applicable to the filing of chattel mortgages; and any conditional verbal sale shall be void as to creditors and innocent purchasers for value.

Consignments. — No special statute.

Corporations. — The State Constitution created a corporation commission, with extensive powers with reference to public service corporations. The Constitution also provides with reference to private corporations doing business in the State that they shall not own or control the stock of any competitive corporation, excepting such as may be acquired by foreclosure, execution, or otherwise in satisfaction of a debt, and that all such stock so acquired must be disposed of in twelve months. That no trust company or bank or banking company shall own, hold, or control the stock of any other trust company or bank or banking company except such as is acquired in satisfaction of indebtedness. All corporations, foreign and domestic, before being permitted to do business are required to file in the office of the corporation commission a list of stockholders, officers, and directors, with residence and post-office address and amount of stock held by each. Foreign insurance companies must make satisfactory showing to insurance commissioner and deposit securities of at least one hundred thousand dollars with state treasurer. Foreign corporations before being licensed to do business in the State must designate an agent residing at the capital of the State for service of process. The agent must be a citizen of the State and the certificate of his appointment under the hand of the president and seal of the company filed and recorded in the office of the secretary of state. Action may be brought in any proper county including county where cause of action arose and service on the agent be due service upon the corporation. Failure to comply with this act makes all contracts with citizens of the State void as to the corporation, and courts of the State are prohibited from enforcing them. There is a license tax upon foreign corporations of one dollar for each thousand dollars of its capital stock employed in business done in this State, and they are required to file an annual report with the corporation commission. Between July 1 and August 1 each year foreign corporations doing business in the State must file with the secretary of state an affidavit of the president, vice-president, or other managing officer showing maximum amount of capital such company had invested in the State at any time subsequent to issue of license and to pay additional fee on any excess. Failure to make the reports, file the affidavits and pay the annual fees required within the time prescribed subjects the corporations to forfeiture of license and the right to do business in the State. A lien is declared in favor of the State against its properties for the amounts due. There is a penalty of ten dollars a day for delinquency in filing, in addition to other penalties. In actions in any court of this State wherein the State of Oklahoma is a party, an order may be made for examination at some place within this State of the corporation officers, agents, books and papers. The Constitution further provides that no corporation shall be created or licensed in this State for the purpose of buying, acquiring, trading, or dealing in real estate, other than real estate located in incorporated cities and towns or additions thereto, and prohibits them from buying, acquiring, trading, or dealing in real estate excepting such as is located in cities and towns and additions to the same, except such as shall be necessary and proper for carrying on the chartered business of the company; but corporations are not precluded from taking mortgages on real estate to secure loans on debts, nor from buying in the same at foreclosure sale, but must dispose of land so acquired within seven years after its acquisition.

Private corporations may be formed for mining, manufacturing, and other industrial pursuits, the construction of railroads, wagon roads, street railways, electric light, power, and gas plants, water works, irrigating ditches, colleges, seminaries, churches, libraries, benevolent, charitable, literary, educational and scientific, and historical associations, and conducting the business of insurance, banks of discount and deposit (but not of issue), building, and investment companies, loan, trust, and guarantee associations, merchandising, dealing in town-sites, constructing telegraph and telephone lines and systems, organization and maintenance of commercial clubs and business exchanges, constructing sewers and other municipal improvements. Corporations for industrial pursuits can be formed by the voluntary association of three or more persons, by preparing and filing with the secretary of state articles of incorporation setting forth (1) name of corporation; (2) the purposes for which formed; (3) the place where its principal business is to be transacted; (4) the term for which it is to exist; (5) the number of its directors or trustees, and the names and residences of such of them as are to serve until the election of such officers; (6) the amount of capital stock, and number of shares into which divided.

Insurance companies must consist of seven or more stockholders.

In addition to the above articles of incorporation, the incorporation of a railroad or wagon road company must state (1) kind of road intended to be constructed; (2) the places from and to which it is to run, and all the intermediate branches; (3) the counties through which it will pass; (4) the estimated length and cost of the road.

Articles of incorporation must be subscribed by three or more persons, one third of whom must be residents of the State, and acknowledged before some officer authorized to take acknowledgments in the manner of acknowledging instruments conveying real property.

A corporation cannot issue certificates of stock in excess of the number of shares or the amount of capital stock specified in its articles. It may purchase, hold, and transfer shares of its own stock from its surplus profits upon unanimous consent in writing of all its stockholders. Every corporation must adopt a code of by-laws within thirty days after filing its articles of incorporation.

The enumerated powers of corporation are (1) to have succession by the corporate name for a period limited; (2) sue and be sued; to complain and defend in any court; (3) to make and use a corporate seal and alter the same; (4) to purchase, hold, and convey such real and personal property as the legitimate purposes of the corporation may require, not exceeding the amount limited by law; (5) to appoint subordinate officers and agents and fix their compensations; (6) to make by-laws not inconsistent with law for the management of its property and the regulation of its affairs; (7) to admit stockholders or members, and to sell their stock or shares for the payment of assessments or installments; (8) to enter into obligations and contracts essential to the transaction of its ordinary affairs.

There is no statute regulating amount of capital stock which must be paid in at time of organization. Stockholders are liable for the amount of their unpaid stock and no more; shareholders of trust companies organized under laws of this State are additionally liable for an amount equal to the stock owned. The property of corporations is taxed the same as if owned by individuals. The cost of filing articles of incorporation and issuance of charter is two dollars for those organized for religious and charitable purposes, and for other corporations one tenth of one per cent. of the authorized capital stock, but not in any case less than three dollars. The property of private corporations is assessed by the assessor of the county where it is situated as of the first day of January; and the managing officer of each corporation shall make a sworn statement to the assessor of the county where the property is situated, showing the amount and value of such property. Public service corporations are assessed by the State Board of Equalisation. Corporations holding land must file statement showing list of lands held with corporation commission by January 20 of each year.

Deeds. — No deed, mortgage, or other conveyance relating to real estate or any interest therein, other than a lease for a period not to exceed one year, is valid unless in writing and subscribed by the grantors; if property be the homestead both husband and wife must join. Persons of lawful age (males of twenty-one and females of eighteen years of age or over) and corporate bodies may sell and convey real property. This statement does not relate to lunatics, convicts, persons civilly dead, and some Indians. All persons of whatsoever age, legally married, and otherwise qualified, may dispose of, and make contracts relating to, real estate acquired after marriage.

By statute a warranty deed to real estate may be substantially in the following form: —

Know all men by these presents: —

That part of the first part, in consideration of the sum of dollars, in hand paid, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, do hereby grant, bargain, sell, and convey unto the following described real property and premises, situate in county, State of Oklahoma, to wit: together with all the improvements thereon and the appurtenances thereunto belonging, and warrant the title to the same.

To have and to hold said described premises, unto the said part of the second part, heirs and assigns forever, free, clear, and discharged of and from all former grants, taxes, judgments, mortgages, and other liens and incumbrances of whatsoever nature;

Signed and delivered this day of , 19

(Signature.)

A quitclaim deed to real estate may be substantially the same as a warranty deed, with the word "quitclaim" inserted in connection with the words "do hereby grant, bargain, sell, and convey," and by omitting the words "and warrant the title to the same."

We have no statute requiring certificate as to official character of notaries public, commissioners, etc.

The common-law doctrine with respect to champerty and maintenance is in effect in this State. Conveyances of land by persons out of possession constitute violations of criminal statutes.

Depositions. — Depositions may be used only in the following cases: (1) Where the witness does not reside in the county where the action is pending, or where it may be sent, for trial on change of venue, or is absent from such county; (2) where from age, infirmity, or imprisonment or death the witness is unable to attend court; (3) where the testimony is required upon a motion, or in any other case where the oral testimony of a witness is not required.

Depositions may be taken at any time after service upon the defendant and may be taken in the State before a judge or clerk of a court of record, a county clerk, justice of the peace, notary public, a master commissioner, or any person empowered by special commission. Depositions may be taken out of the State by a judge, justice, or chancellor of any court of record, justice of the peace, notary public, mayor, or chief magistrate of any city or incorporated town, or by any other person authorized by special commission from this State. Officer taking depositions must not be a relative or attorney of either party, or in any manner interested in the event of the action.

Depositions are taken either upon special commission or upon notice. A notice to take depositions must specify the action, the name of the court, and the time and place of taking the same, and be served upon the adverse party, his agent or attorney of record, or left at his usual place of business or residence, so as to allow the adverse party sufficient time and one day of preparation to appear at the place fixed, and may provide for adjournment from day to day. If the opposite party is a non-resident and has no agent or attorney of record in this State, notice may be given by publication made for three successive weeks in some newspaper printed in the county where the action is pending.

The deposition must be written in the presence of the officer either by himself, the witness, or some disinterested person, and subscribed by the witness in the presence of the officer, or may be taken in shorthand by the officer or some disinterested person, transcribed, and then signed by witness as though taken in long hand in the first instance. When taken it must be sealed up in an envelope, indorsed with the title of the cause and the name of the officer taking the same, and by him addressed and transmitted to the clerk of the court wherein the proceeding is pending. The officer taking the deposition shall annex his certificate showing that the witness was first sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; that the deposition was reduced to writing or taken in shorthand, and transcribed by some proper person, and that the deposition was subscribed in the presence of the officer, and that it was taken at the time and place specified in the notice. There is no provision for a caption, but the introduction should show the court in which the action is pending, name of the witness, by whom or on whose behalf he is produced, the fact of his being sworn, and who, if any one, appeared for the parties plaintiff and defendant. The deposition must be filed at least one day before the day of trial.

The fees allowed for taking depositions are, ten cents for swearing witness, fifty cents for subpoena, and fifteen cents for each one hundred words, and twenty-five cents for certificate and seal.

Descent of Property. — The estate of any person dying without having disposed of his estate by will, subject to the payment of his debts, descends in the following manner: —

1. If the decedent leave a surviving husband or wife, and only one child, or the lawful issue of one child, in equal shares to the surviving husband, or wife and child, or issue of such child. If the decedent leave a surviving husband or wife, and more than one child living or one child living and the lawful issue of one or more deceased children, one third to the surviving husband or wife, and the remainder in equal shares to his children, and to the lawful issue of any deceased child, by right of representation; but if there be no child of the decedent living at his death, the remainder goes to all of his lineal descendants; and if all the descendants are in the same degree of kindred to the decedent they share equally, otherwise they take according to the right of representation; provided, if decedent shall have married more than once, the spouse at the time of death shall inherit of the property not acquired during coverture with such spouse only an equal part with each of the living children of decedent, and the lawful issue of any deceased child by right of representation. If the decedent leave no surviving husband or wife, but leaves issue, the whole estate goes to such issue, and if such issue consists of more than one child living, and the lawful issue of one or more deceased children, then the estate goes in equal shares to the children living, or to the child living, and the issue of the deceased child or children by right of representation.

2. If the decedent leave no issue, the estate goes one half to the surviving husband or wife, and the remaining one half to the decedent's father or mother, or if he leave both father and mother, to them in equal shares. If there be no father, then one half goes, in equal shares, to the brothers and sisters of the decedent, and to the children of any deceased brother or sister, by right of representation. If decedent leave no issue, nor husband nor wife, the estate must go to the father or mother, or if he leave both father and mother, to them in equal shares: provided, in all cases where the property is acquired by the joint industry of husband and wife during coverture, and there is no issue, the whole estate to go to the survivor, at whose death if any of the said property remains, one half of such property shall go to the heirs of the husband and one half to the heirs of the wife, according to the right of representation.

3. If there be no issue, nor husband nor wife, nor father, nor mother, then in equal shares to the brothers and sisters of the decedent, and to the children of any deceased brother or sister, by right of representation; if the deceased, being a minor, leave no issue, the estate must go to the parents equally, if living together, if not living together, to the parent having had the care of said deceased minor.

4. If the decedent leave no issue, nor husband, nor wife, nor father, and no brother or sister is living at the time of his death, the estate goes to his mother to the exclusion of the issue, if any, of deceased brothers or sisters.

5. If the decedent leave a surviving husband or wife, and no issue, and no father, nor mother, nor brother, nor sister, the whole estate goes to the surviving husband or wife.

6. If the decedent leave no issue, nor husband, nor wife, and no father, nor mother, nor brother, nor sister, the estate must go to the next of kin, in equal degree, excepting that when there are two or more collateral kindred in equal degrees, but claiming through different ancestors, those who claim through the nearest ancestors must be preferred to those claiming through an ancestor more remote. However: —

7. If the decedent leave several children, or one child and the issue of one or more children, and any such surviving child dies under age, and not having been married, all the estate that came to the deceased child by inheritance from the decedent descends in equal shares to the children of the same parents, and to the issue of any such other children who are dead, by right of representation.

8. If, at the death of such child who dies under age, not having been married, all the other children of his parents are also dead, and any of them left issue, the estate that came to such child by inheritance from his parent descends to the issue of all other children of the same parent; and if all the issue are in the same degree of kindred to the child, they share the estate equally, otherwise they take according to the right of representation.

9. If the decedent leave no husband, wife, or kindred, the estate escheats to the State for the support of common schools.

Prior to the admission of the State into the Union, special provision was made in the several treaties with the Five Civilized Tribes, which constitute, roughly speaking, the eastern half of the State, for the descent and distribution of allotted lands. In most instances it was provided that the descent and distribution should be according to the statute of descent and distribution found in Mansfield's Digest of the Statutes of Arkansas (1884), but in a few instances in accordance with tribal laws. However by the adoption of the Oklahoma statutes in both the enabling act and the state Constitution, the devolution of all lands where descent was cast after November 16, 1907, the date of Oklahoma's admission into the Union, is regulated by the Oklahoma statute. The possible exceptions to this broad statement are not within the scope of this synopsis.

Every illegitimate child is the heir of the person who in writing acknowledges himself to be the father of such child; and in all cases he is an heir of his mother. The issue of all marriages null in law, or dissolved by divorce, are legitimate. If an illegitimate child die intestate without lawful issue, and not having been acknowledged or adopted by his father, his estate goes to his mother and to her heirs at law. Kindred of the half blood inherit equally with those of the whole blood in the same degree, unless the inheritance comes to the intestate by descent, devise, or gift of some one of his ancestors, in which case all those who are not of the blood of such ancestor must be excluded from such inheritance.

All gifts and grants are made as advancements, if expressed in the gift or grant to be so made, or if charged in writing by the decedent as an advancement, or acknowledged in writing as such, by the child or other successor or heir. Excessive advancements are not to be refunded.

Aliens take in all cases by succession, as well as citizens; and no person capable of succeeding under the provisions of title is precluded from succession by reason of the alienage of any relative.

See Inheritance Taxes.

Persons convicted of taking or assisting in taking the life of another cannot inherit the latter's property, nor can such person profit from any life insurance policy held by the deceased.

Divorce. — The causes for divorce are: (1) where either of the parties had a former husband or wife living at the time of the marriage; (2) abandonment for one year; (3) adultery; (4) impotency; (5) where the wife at the time of the marriage was pregnant by another than her husband; (6) extreme cruelty; (7) fraudulent contract; (8) habitual drunkenness; (9) gross neglect of duty; (10) conviction of a felony and imprisonment in the penitentiary subsequent to marriage. A bona fide residence in the State for one year immediately preceding the filing of the petition is necessary. The petition must be verified by affidavit. Service may be made as in any other case by publication or summons. When service by publication is proper a copy of the petition with copy of the publication notice attached thereto, must within six days after first publication is made be enclosed in an envelope addressed to defendant at place of residence and deposited in nearest post office, unless plaintiff make and file affidavit that such residence is unknown to plaintiff and cannot be ascertained by any means in his control. The answer may be in the nature of a cross-bill and alimony may be allowed pending the proceeding.

Dower. — Dower and curtesy are abolished.

Estates. — Wills are probated and estates administered and distributed in the county court. The custodian of a will must deliver the same to the county court or to the executor named in the will within thirty days after the death of the testator. The executor beneficiary of the will may petition the county court to have it proved, and the petition must show: (1) jurisdictional facts; (2) whether the person named as executor consents or refuses to act; (3) the names, ages, and residences of the heirs and devisees of the decedent, so far as known to the petitioner; (4) the probable value and character of the property belonging to the estate; (5) the names of the persons for whom letters testamentary are prayed.

If the executor named in the will shall fail for thirty days after having knowledge of the death of the testator to petition for the probate of the will, he may be held to have renounced his right to letters testamentary. When the petition is filed and the will produced, the court must fix a day for the hearing of the petition, giving notice by publication for at least ten days and not more than thirty. Any beneficiary of the will may contest the same within one year after it has been probated.

At the time of the hearing of the petition the will may be contested for either of the following causes: (1) Competency of the testator to make a will; (2) his freedom at the time of its execution from duress, menace, fraud, or undue influence; (3) the due execution and attestation of the will by the decedent and the witnesses; (4) any other question substantially affecting the validity of the will.

It may be contested at any time within one year after having been probated by verified petition, showing (1) that a will of a later date revoking or changing it has been discovered and is offered; or (2) that some jurisdictional fact was wanting in the former probate; or (3) that the testator was not competent or not free from fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence when the will was made; or (4) that the will was not duly executed and attested.

No discrimination is made between residents and non-residents in the right to petition or act as executor; but no person is competent to act as executor who is not of age, or who has been convicted of an infamous crime, or is a drunkard or improvident, or wanting in understanding and integrity, such disability to be found by the court.

Letters testamentary must be substantially in the following form: —

STATE OF OKLAHOMA, }
COUNTY OF }

The last will of A. B., deceased, a copy of which is herein annexed, having been proved and recorded in the county court of the county of C. D., who is named therein, is hereby appointed executor.

Witness G. H., judge of the county court of the county of with the seal of the court affixed, the day of A. D. 19 .

(Seal and official signature of judge.)

Letters of administration with the will annexed must be substantially in the following form: —

STATE OF OKLAHOMA, }
COUNTY OF }

The last will of A. B., deceased, a copy of which is hereto annexed, having been proved and recorded in the county court of the county of and there being no executor named in the will (or as the case may be), C. D. is hereby appointed administrator with the will annexed.

Witness G. H., judge of the county court of the county of with the seal of the court affixed, the day of A. D. 19 .

(Seal and official signature of judge.)

Letters of administration should be in the form following: —

STATE OF OKLAHOMA, }
COUNTY OF }

C. D. is hereby appointed administrator of the estate of A. B., deceased.

Witness G. H., judge of the county court of the county of with the seal thereof affixed, the day of A. D. 19 .

(Seal and official signature of judge.)

Letters of administration of the estates of persons dying intestate must be granted in the following order: (1) to the surviving husband or wife, or some competent person designated by him or her; (2) to the children of the deceased; (3) to the father or mother of deceased; (4) to the brother of deceased; (5) to sister of deceased; (6) grandchildren of deceased; (7) next of kin entitled to share in distribution of estate; (8) to creditors; (9) to any person competent. Where the deceased was a member of a partnership at the time of his demise, the surviving partner must in no case be appointed administrator; and where several persons are claiming the right to letters, the males are preferred in all cases, and those of the whole blood to those of the half blood. And where any person entitled to administer is a minor, letters must be granted to his or her guardian, or other person entitled, in the discretion of the court.

Every executor, administrator, or guardian appointed by the court in this State who is a non-resident must appoint an agent residing within the State upon whom service may be made.

Every executor and administrator receiving letters must execute a bond to the State of Oklahoma with two or more sureties to be approved by the judge of the county court, which shall be joint and several and in a penal sum not less than twice the value of the personal property and twice the probable value of the annual rents and profits of the real property of the estate; and an additional bond may be required at any time; such bond being conditioned that the executor or administrator shall faithfully execute the duties of the trust according to law. Where there are two or more executors or administrators, separate bonds must be given for each. Such bond may be expressly waived by the will in cases of executors.

Every executor or administrator must, immediately after his appointment, cause to be published in some newspaper in the county, if there be one, if not, then such newspaper as may be designated by the court, a notice to the creditors of the decedent, requiring all persons having claims against him to exhibit them, with the necessary vouchers, to the executor or administrator, at the place of his residence or business, to be specified in the notice within four months from the date of said notice. Such notice must be posted in three public places in the county, one of which shall be at the court-house where county court is held, and published for two consecutive weeks in some newspaper printed in the county. The time expressed in the notice must be within four months from date thereof. After such notice is given, a copy thereof, with the affidavit of publication and posting, must be filed. It is provided further that "if a claim arising upon a contract heretofore made be not presented within the time limited in the notice, it is barred forever," with the exception that if it is a contingent obligation or not due it may be presented within one month after it shall become due or shall have become absolute.

Upon the death of husband or wife the survivor may remain in possession of the homestead until disposed of according to law; and upon the death of such survivor the children may continue in possession until the youngest shall become of age. Upon the death of either husband or wife and the issuing of letters testamentary or of administration, the executor or administrator must immediately deliver to the surviving husband or wife and child or children, 1, all family pictures; 2, a pew in any house of worship; 3, lots in burial ground; 4, family bible and all school-books used by the family, and all other books used as a part of the family library, not exceeding in value one hundred dollars; 5, all wearing apparel of decedent and family; 6, provisions necessary for the family for one year, either provided or growing, or both, and fuel for the same length of time; 7, household and kitchen furniture not exceeding one hundred and fifty dollars in value. And in addition to the above there shall be set apart to the wife and minor children all such personal property or money as is exempt by law from levy and sale under execution, to be used by them together with the homestead; and if no homestead has been selected, the county court must cause one to be designated. If the widow has a maintenance derived from her own property equal to the portion allowed by law from the estate of her deceased husband, the whole of such portion, except the homestead, must be set apart for the minor children.

The debts of the estate must be paid in the following order: (1) Funeral expenses; (2) expenses of the last sickness; (3) funds necessary for the support of the family for ninety days; (4) taxes to the United States, the State, county, or city; (5) debts having preference under the laws of the United States and this State; (6) judgments rendered against the decedent in his lifetime, which are liens upon his property, and mortgages in the order of their date; (7) demands or claims which are presented to the administrator for allowance, or proved within six months after notice of his appointment; (8) all other demands against the estate. If the estate is insufficient to pay all debts, they must be paid in the order as they are classed, and if a remainder is left over after paying any one class, insufficient to pay the next, it should be distributed among them according to their claims.

Executors and administrators may be required to account to the court at any time. See Wills.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Executions — Are: (1) against the property of the judgment debtor; (2) for the delivery of the possession of property with damages and costs; (3) executions in special cases.

All real estate not bound by the lien of the judgment, and all goods and chattels not exempt, are bound from the time of seizure under execution.

An execution against property is issued on præcipe by the clerk and directed to the sheriff of the county. It must be issued within five years from the rendition of the judgment, or within five years from the issuing of a previous execution on the judgment (but this time limit does not apply to judgments against municipalities), and commands the sheriff that of the goods and chattels he cause to be made the money specified in the writ, or, for want of goods and chattels, to be made of the lands and tenements of the debtor. Executions may be issued to several counties at the same time.

When two or more writs of execution against the same debtor shall be issued during the term at which judgment was rendered, or within ten days thereafter, and when two or more writs of execution against the debtor shall be delivered to the officer on the same day, no preference shall be given to either of such writs, and if the property subject to seizure is insufficient to pay them all, it is distributed among the several creditors according to the amounts of their claims. In all other cases the writ of execution first delivered to the officer shall be first satisfied.

The officer shall levy first upon the personal property; and if none can be found then upon the realty of the debtor. Lands and tenements mortgaged may be levied upon and sold subject to such mortgage.

If real estate is levied upon, the sheriff must call three disinterested householders who are residents of the county as appraisers; but if the words "and waive the appraisement," or other words of similar import, shall be inserted in the mortgage or written contract, the court may order sale without appraisement, but in such case no order of sale shall issue for six months after the date of judgment. Personal property seized upon execution is sold upon ten days' notice, which is given by publication in a newspaper printed in the county and posting two notices in the township where the sale is to be had. Sales of real estate under execution must be advertized by publishing notice of time and place of sale for thirty days in a newspaper published in the county and posting same at court-house door and five other public places in the county, two of which must be in township where lands lie; and except where appraisement is not required it must bring two thirds of its appraised value.

Exemptions. — The exemptions of a head of a family residing in the State are: (1) the homestead of the family; (2) all household and kitchen furniture; (3) any lot or lots in a cemetery held for the purpose of sepulture; (4) all implements of husbandry used upon the homestead; (5) all tools, apparatus, and books belonging to and used in any trade or profession; (6) the family library and all family portraits and pictures and wearing apparel; (7) five milk cows and their calves under six months old; (8) one yoke of work oxen, with necessary yokes and chains; (9) two horses or two mules, and one wagon, cart, or dray; (10) one carriage or buggy; (11) one gun; (12) ten hogs; (13) twenty head of sheep; (14) all saddles, bridles, and harness necessary for the use of the family; (15) all provisions and forage on hand and growing for home consumption, and for use of exempt stock for one year; (16) seventy-five per cent. of all current wages and earnings for personal or professional services earned within the last ninety days.

The homestead of any family in the State not within any city or town consists of not more than one hundred and sixty acres of land which may be in one or more parcels to be selected by the owner and within any city, town, or village consists of not exceeding an acre of land to be selected by the owner, owned and occupied as a residence only, but not exceeding in value five thousand dollars, but in no event shall the homestead be reduced to less than a quarter of an acre without regard to value. If the homestead is used for both residence and business purposes, the homestead interest shall not exceed in value five thousand dollars, and nothing in the laws of the United States or treaties with Indian tribes deprives an Indian or other allottee of the benefit of the homestead and exemption laws of the State. The owner of a homestead, if married, cannot sell the same without the consent of his or her spouse; the owner of the homestead may mortgage the same, the spouse, if any, joining therein.

The above exemptions do not apply to a non-resident; to a debtor who is in the act of removing his family from the State, or who has absconded, taking with him his family.

The exemptions reserved to a person not the head of a family are as follows; (1) A lot or lots in a cemetery held for the purpose of sepulture; (2) all wearing apparel; (3) all tools, apparatus and books belonging to any trade or profession; (4) one horse, bridle and saddle, or one yoke of oxen; (5) seventy-five per cent. of all current wages for personal services.

The exemption of the homestead does not apply where the debt is due for purchase money of the homestead or a part of such purchase money.

None of the exempt personal property above mentioned is exempt from attachment on execution for the wages of any clerk, mechanic, laborer, or servant. All pension money is exempt.

Garnishment. — A municipal corporation cannot be garnisheed.

A creditor may proceed by garnishment against any person who shall be indebted to or have in his possession or under his control any property belonging to the debtor, either at the time of the issuing of the summons or at any time thereafter before final judgment, in any action to recover damages founded upon contract, express or implied, and upon judgment or decree, by making, or having made in his behalf, and filing with the clerk, an affidavit stating the amount of his claim over and above all set-offs, and stating that he verily believes that the person proceeded against in garnishment is indebted to or has property real or personal in his possession or under his control belonging to the defendant, and that the defendant has not property liable to execution sufficient to satisfy his claim, and that the property or indebtedness of the person proceeded against in garnishment is not exempt from seizure on execution. When such affidavit has been filed by or on behalf of the plaintiff, and an undertaking, with sureties approved by clerk, in double the amount of plaintiff's claim to pay defendant all damages he may sustain by the garnishment, and attorney's fees if order is wrongfully obtained, is also filed (but no bond required if all defendants are non-residents), a garnishee summons shall be issued, and within twenty days after service of it the garnishee may file with the clerk of the court an affidavit to the effect that he is in no manner indebted to the defendant, and has no property of any kind in his possession or under his control belonging to such defendant or in which he is interested, and upon the filing of such affidavit the proceeding shall be deemed discontinued unless within twenty days thereafter plaintiff serve notice on the garnishee that he elects to take issue on such affidavit, in which case the matter shall stand for trial as other civil actions.

If the garnishee shall fail to make the affidavit above provided, and shall in fact be indebted to the defendant or have property belonging to him, he shall make an affidavit setting forth the facts in reference to such indebtedness or property, but if he fail to do so the court will render judgment against him for the whole amount of the judgment which the plaintiff shall recover against the defendant, together with all costs; and in all cases of trial between the plaintiff and the garnishee costs shall be awarded to the plaintiff and against the garnishee in addition to his liability if the plaintiff recover more than the garnishee admits to be his answer, and if he do not the garnishee shall recover costs of the plaintiff; and the costs in every such case shall include an attorney's fee of twenty-five dollars, to be taxed in favor of the prevailing party.

Inheritance Taxes. — Inheritances and Gifts of Devise (Taxes, etc.). — A tax upon the clear market value of the property involved is imposed upon the transfer thereof by will or the intestate laws of the State, or by deed, grant, bargain, sale, or gift made in contemplation of the death of the grantor or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after such death. The tax does not affect transfers to corporations organized solely for religious, charitable, or educational purposes.

The tax is imposed when the transfer is of tangible property in this State made by any person, or of intangible property made by a resident of this State at time of transfer. "Tangible property" is declared by statute to include many forms of indebtedness including bonds, shares of stock, and other evidences of pecuniary interest in domestic and foreign corporations.

Upon transfers to any father, mother, husband, wife, child, brother or sister, wife or widow of a son or the husband of a daughter, or any child adopted as such, or to any child to whom the decedent or grantor for not less than ten years prior to such transfer stood in the mutually acknowledged relation of a parent: provided, however, such relationship began at or before the child's fifteenth birthday and was continuous for said ten years thereafter, or to any lineal descendant of such person born in lawful wedlock, the tax is imposed at the following rate: One per cent. on amounts up to and including twenty-five thousand dollars; two per cent. on amounts exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars up to and including fifty thousand dollars; three per cent. on any amount exceeding fifty thousand dollars, up to and including one hundred thousand dollars four percent. on any amount exceeding one hundred thousand dollars. The wife is allowed an exemption of fifteen thousand dollars; each child, ten thousand dollars; and each other relative five thousand dollars. Upon transfers to other persons the tax is as follows: Five per cent. on amounts exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars, up to and including twenty-five thousand dollars. Six per cent. on amounts exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars, up to and including fifty thousand dollars; eight per cent. on amounts exceeding fifty thousand dollars, up to and including one hundred thousand dollars. Ten per cent. on amounts exceeding one hundred thousand dollars.

Inquiries should go to the state auditor or proper county judge. The tax is payable to the state treasurer at time of transfer unless the transfer is conditional, in which event the tax is payable when the beneficiary comes into the possession or beneficial enjoyment of the property. The tax bears interest at ten per cent. and is a lien on all property. Corporations are required to keep a record in the State showing all transfers. Rules and regulations governing the administration of this law are promulgated by the state auditor.

Insolvent Laws. — See Assignments.

Interest. — The legal rate of interest cannot exceed six per centum per annum in the absence of a contract as to the rate, but by contract the parties may agree upon any rate not to exceed ten per centum per annum. The taking, receiving, reserving, or charging a greater rate of interest than above allowed, forfeits twice the amount of interest which the note, bill, or other evidence of debt carries; and in case a greater rate of interest has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid, or his legal representative, may recover from the person, firm, or corporation taking or receiving the same twice the amount of interest so paid, but the action therefor must be brought within two years after the maturity of the usurious contract. When suit is brought upon the note defendant may plead as a set off twice the amount of the entire interest "collected, reserved, charged, or received." Provision is also made for cancellation of the debt by tender of the exact amount of money received from the lender less the amount of the entire interest "charged, received, reserved, or collected thereon." It is expressly declared, however, that none of the provisions of the Negotiable Instruments Act are repealed or modified.

Judgments. — Judgments of courts of record of the State (except county courts) and of courts of the United States rendered within the State are liens on real estate of the debtor in the county where the judgment is rendered from and after the time the judgment is entered on the judgment docket. A transcript of such judgment may be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court in any county of the State, and shall be a lien from the date of such filing, the same as in the county where rendered.

Transcripts of judgments rendered in justices' and county courts may be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court, and from the time of such filing shall be a lien on real estate to the same extent as if such judgment had been rendered in the district court.

Liens. — For work done or material furnished in building, altering, or repairing buildings or structures, a lien attaches to the realty. There is also a lien for planting trees and hedges and building fences and sidewalks. Such liens are preferred to all other liens after the commencement of the work of construction giving rise to the lien. If the work is done or material furnished under contract with the owner, trustee, agent, husband, or wife of the owner, the lien may be filed at any time within four months after the last of the work is done or the last of the material is furnished. The lien above named is acquired by filing with the clerk of the district court a statement setting forth the amount claimed, the items thereof as nearly as practicable, the name of the owner, the name of the contractor, the name of the claimant, and description of the property subject to the lien, verified by affidavit.

If the work is done or material is furnished under sub-contract with the contractor, the lien must be filed within sixty days after the last of the work is done or the last of the material is furnished, and, in addition to the filing of the sworn statement above mentioned, a notice in writing of the filing of such lien must be served upon the owner, if he can be found, and if not, after filing an affidavit with the clerk of the district court setting forth the fact that he cannot be found, it may be served by delivering a copy of the statement to the occupant of the land, and if unoccupied, then by posting a copy of such statement on the land. A lien may also be acquired by taking a note for the indebtedness, and filing such note together with a sworn statement to the effect that it is given in payment of the indebtedness for material furnished or labor done and performed.

Action to enforce a mechanics' lien must be brought within one year from and after the filing of the lien in the office of the clerk of the district court.

A preferential lien is given by statute for the performance of labor, or furnishing of material, machinery, or supplies used in digging, drilling, torpedoing, completing, operating, or repairing any oil or gas well, or the furnishing of any supplies or performance of any labor in constructing or putting together any machinery used in drilling, torpedoing, completing, operating, or repairing any gas well; upon the whole leasehold or oil pipe line or gas pipe line, the buildings, appurtenances, material, and supplies furnished, as well as upon all other supplies, materials, and wells upon the premises.

A lien is given for all labor and material to equip or facilitate the operation of a railroad.

A preferential lien for all work and labor under verbal or written contract is given by statute upon the product of such labor, while title to the property remains in the original owner. The lien is effective from and after time labor is performed. It may be enforced as an ordinary action or by attachment proceedings. Action must be commenced within eight months after time labor is performed.

Any person, firm, or corporation furnishing labor, money, material, or supplies for production of, altering or repairs of personal property at request of owner has a lien to that extent upon such property. His lien is subject to prior mortgage liens unless the holder thereof is given notice of intention to furnish such labor etc. and consents thereto in writing.

No lien attaches for lightning-rods, nor does any lien attach to lands acquired under the provisions of chapter 5 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, where the indebtedness is contracted prior to the issuing of a patent. Laborers have a lien on production of labor while title to property remains in hands of original owner. Proceedings to enforce must be instituted within eight months after work is done.

Assessments for drainage ditches, with six per cent. interest, constitute a lien paramount to all claims save those of state, county, or municipality.

Blacksmiths, wheelwrights, and horseshoers have a lien for work done on articles repaired and animals shod.

A thresher has a lien on grain and seed threshed from the date of the commencement of threshing.

Inns, hotels, boarding-houses, and rooming-houses have a lien on baggage of guests for accommodations or advances to the amount of two hundred dollars. See Judgments, Taxes.

Limitations. — Actions for the recovery of real property or for the determination of any adverse right or interest therein can only be brought as follows: (1) an action for the recovery of real property sold on execution brought by execution debtor, his heirs, or any person claiming under him by title acquired after the date of the judgment, within five years from date of the recording of the deed made in pursuance to the sale; (2) an action for the recovery of real property, sold by executors or administrators or guardians upon order or judgment of the court directing such sale, brought by the heirs, devisees of the deceased person, or the ward or his guardian, or any person claiming under any or either of them by title acquired after date of the judgment or order, within five years after the date of the recording of the deed made in pursuance to the sale; (3) an action for the recovery of real property sold for taxes, within two years after date of recording tax deed; (4) an action for the recovery of real property not hereinbefore provided for, within fifteen years; (5) an action for forcible entry and detainer, or forcible detention only, on real property, within two years. Any person entitled to bring an action above specified who may be under any legal disability when the cause of action accrues may sue within two years after the disability is removed.

Civil actions other than for the recovery of real property can be brought as follows: (1) An action upon any agreement, contract, or promise in writing, within five years; (2) an action upon contract not in writing, express or implied, or an action upon a liability created by statute other than forfeiture or penalty, within three years, (3) an action for trespass upon real property, and an action for taking, detaining, or injuring personal property, an action for injury to the rights of another, not arising on contract, and not hereinafter enumerated, and an action for relief on the ground of fraud, the cause of action in such case accruing at the discovery of the fraud, within two years; (4) an action upon a foreign judgment or for libel, slander, assault, battery, malicious prosecution, or false imprisonment, or an action upon a statute for penalty or forfeiture, within one year; (5) an action upon the penal bond of an executor, administrator, guardian, sheriff, or other officer, or upon attachment, injunction or bond for arrest in a civil action, within five years after the cause of action accrues; (6) any other action for relief, within five years after the cause of action accrues.

Married Woman. — Married women have all the property rights of unmarried ones, except that they must be joined by the husband in the conveyance of the homestead when owned by them. Females become of age at eighteen. They may contract at any age after marriage.

Mortgages. — See Chattel Mortgages.

Notaries Public. — Notaries public are appointed by the governor of the State for the term of four years, with jurisdiction only in the county where they respectively reside.

A bond for faithful performance of duty is required in the sum of one thousand dollars. Each notary is required to have a seal containing his name and place of residence, and to affix the same to all his official attestations and acknowledgments in writing executed before him. He is also required to add to his official signature the date of expiration of his commission. The official character of a notary public may be certified to by the county clerk of the county where the notary resides.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — An act entitled "A General Act in relation to negotiable documents" was approved March 2, 1909. (See Session Laws of Oklahoma, 1909, pp. 387-424.) (Rev. Laws, Oklahoma 1910, secs. 4044-4239). This law undertakes to define many general terms in relation to the subject. It provides that a negotiable instrument must conform to the following requirements: (1) It must be in writing and signed by the maker or drawer; (2) must contain an unconditional promise or order to pay a sum certain in money; (3) must be payable on demand, or at a fixed or determinable future time; (4) must be payable to order or bearer; (5) where instrument is addressed to a drawee he must be named or otherwise indicated therein with reasonable certainty. While instruments containing an order or promise to do any act in addition to payment of money are not negotiable, the following provisions are declared not to affect negotiability: (1) Authority to sell collateral if not paid at maturity; (2) authority to confess judgment if not paid at maturity; (3) waiver of benefit of any law intended for advantage or protection of obligor; (4) giving holder election to require something to be done in lieu of payment of money.

The act declares that instruments need not follow the language of the act, but any terms are sufficient which clearly indicate intention to conform to requirements thereof; that every negotiable instrument is deemed prima facie to have been issued for a valuable consideration; and every person, whose signature appears thereon, to have become a party for value. Instruments drawn or indorsed to person as "cashier" or other fiscal officer of bank or corporation deemed prima facie payable to the bank or corporation and may be negotiated by indorsement of the bank, the corporation, or the officer. Presentment for payment not necessary to charge person primarily liable, but if payable at a particular place and he is able and willing to pay there at maturity, it is equivalent to a tender of payment on his part. Except as otherwise provided in the act, presentment for payment is necessary to charge drawers and indorsers. Presentment for payment is dispensed with; 1, Where after reasonable diligence it cannot be made as required by the act; 2, where drawee is fictitious; 3, by waiver express or implied.

Every negotiable instrument is payable at time fixed therein without grace. If day of maturity falls on Sunday or a holiday, it is payable on next succeeding business day. Instruments due on Saturday to be presented for payment on next succeeding business day, except that instruments payable on demand may, at holder's option, be presented for payment before twelve o'clock noon on Saturday when the entire day is not a holiday.

Notice of dishonor to drawer and indorsers may be given by the holder or his agent and either to the party or his agent in that behalf. A waiver of protest in either a foreign bill of exchange or other negotiable instrument is deemed a waiver not only of formal protest but also of presentment and notice. Notice is dispensed with where after due diligence it cannot be given or does not reach the parties.

A bill of exchange is defined as an unconditional order in writing addressed by one person to another, signed by person giving it, requiring the person to whom it is addressed to pay on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time a sum certain in money to order or bearer. It does not operate as an assignment of funds in hands of drawee, and he is not liable until he accepts. Presentment for acceptance must be made where bill is payable after sight or acceptance is necessary to fix maturity of instrument; where bill stipulates for presentment; and where bill is drawn payable elsewhere than at residence or place of business of drawee. Bills which show on their face that they are foreign bills must be protested for non-acceptance and non-payment.

A negotiable promissory note is defined as an unconditional promise in writing made by one person to another signed by the maker engaging to pay on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time a sum certain in money to order or to bearer. When drawn to maker's order it is not complete until indorsed by him.

A check is defined as a bill of exchange drawn on a bank payable on demand. Except as otherwise provided in the act itself, its provisions applicable to bills of exchange payable on demand apply to checks. A check does not of itself operate as an assignment of funds to credit of the drawer with the bank.

Proof of Claims. — A sworn statement to the effect that an account is just and due and unpaid is sufficient to warrant judgment by default.

Records. — Every conveyance of real property, other than a lease for a term not exceeding one year, is void as against any subsequent purchaser or incumbrancer, including an assignee of a mortgage, lease, or other conditional sale of the same property, or any part thereof, in good faith and for a valuable consideration, whose conveyance is first duly recorded. All instruments of conveyance of real property must be recorded with the county clerk of the county in which the real property affected thereby is situated. See Mortgages.

Replevin. — An order of replevin is issued upon affidavit of the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, showing (1) description of the property; (2) that the plaintiff is the owner of the property or has a special ownership or interest therein, stating the facts in relation thereto, and that he is entitled to the immediate possession; (3) that the property is wrongfully detained by the defendant; (4) that it was not taken under an execution, on any order of attachment against the plaintiff, or for the payment of any tax, fine, amercement assessed against him, or by virtue of an order of delivery issued under article ten of the statute, or any other meane or final process issued against the plaintiff; or (5) if taken on execution or any order of attachment against the plaintiff, that it is exempt by law from being so taken; (6) actual value of the property, and where several articles are claimed, the value of each shall be stated as nearly as practicable.

The order is not issued until an undertaking is filed with the clerk on the part of the plaintiff with sufficient sureties in not less than double the value of the property, to the effect that the plaintiff will duly prosecute his action and pay all costs and damages which may be awarded against him, and if the property be delivered to him that he will return the same to the defendant if return thereof be adjudged. When the order is issued at the same time with the summons it is returnable on the same day as the summons and if issued after the summons, it is returnable ten days after date of issuance. The order is executed by the sheriff taking possession of the property, and delivering a copy of the order to the defendant, or leaving it at his usual place of residence. The defendant may recover and retain possession within twenty-four hours after service of the order by executing an undertaking with one or more sufficient sureties, to be approved by the sheriff, in not less than double the amount of the value of the property, to the effect that the defendant will deliver the property to the plaintiff if such delivery be adjudged, and pay all damages that may be awarded against him. If this undertaking is not given within twenty-four hours, the sheriff delivers possession to the plaintiff. Judgment is for possession; if possession cannot be had, for the value of the property and damages for its detention and costs.

Sales of Merchandise. — A sale of an entire stock of merchandise, or any part thereof in bulk, otherwise than in the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business, will be presumed to be fraudulent and void as to creditors unless the vendee at least ten days before transfer in good faith made full and explicit inquiry of vendor as to names and addresses of all creditors and at least ten days before transfer demanded and received list of names and addresses of all creditors with amount due each, statement to be sworn to by vendor and include a declaration of its correctness; and at least ten days before transfer vendee notified each creditor in person or by registered mail; and vendee must also show purchase was made in good faith for fair consideration actually paid.

This act does not apply to sales by executors or receivers or public officers acting in their official capacity.

Service of Summons. — See Actions.

Stay of Execution. — There is no stay of execution except when issued on judgments rendered by justices of the peace, in which case the following stay is allowed: 1. On any judgment for twenty dollars and under thirty dollars, thirty days. 2. On any judgment for over thirty dollars and under fifty dollars, sixty days. 3. On any judgment for over fifty dollars and not exceeding one hundred dollars, ninety days.

Supplementary Proceedings. — After issue of execution upon a judgment, the creditor, his agent or attorney, may make an affidavit that the judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply toward the satisfaction of the judgment, and procure an order requiring the judgment debtor to appear and answer concerning the same, or, upon a showing, by affidavit of the party or otherwise, to the satisfaction of the judge that there is danger of the debtor leaving the State or concealing himself to avoid examination, he may be arrested. Debtor may be examined on oath and other witnesses also examined on either side, and if it appears that he has property which he unjustly refuses to apply to the judgment and that there is danger of his leaving the State, he may be required to give bond to appear from time to time for examination, and in default of giving such security he may be committed as for contempt.

Taxes. — All property, real and personal, is subject to taxation, except public property, the grounds and buildings of library, scientific, educational, benevolent, and religious institutions, devoted solely to the appropriate objects of these institutions, not exceeding ten acres in extent, and not used with a view to pecuniary profit, and the books, papers, furniture, scientific or other apparatus pertaining to the above institutions; family provisions for one year, and family portraits, household goods of heads of families, tools, implements and live stock not exceeding one hundred dollars and two hundred dollars personal property to all ex-Confederate and ex-Union soldiers, and their widows, bona fide residents of the State and heads of families.

Taxes on real property constitute a perpetual lien. Taxes on personal property are a lien on real property in county where the tax is levied for two years. Personal taxes are also lien for the same period on real property in any other county to which the tax has been certified. See Corporations; Liens; Inheritance Taxes.

Testimony. — No person is disqualified as a witness, in either civil or criminal cases, by reason of his being a party to, or interested in, the event of the action, or on account of any religious belief, or by reason of his conviction of a crime. This rule of evidence extends to actions for divorce as well as all others, and even the admissions of the parties are received.

In criminal cases the failure of the accused to testify cannot be alluded to in argument or construed as any evidence of guilt. No party will be allowed to testify in his own behalf in respect to any transaction or communication had personally by such party with a deceased person, when the adverse party is the executor, administrator, heir at law, next of kin, surviving partner, or assignee of such deceased person, when they have acquired title to the cause of action immediately from such deceased person; or of transactions when the other party thereto is deceased; or of transactions with a deceased partner or joint contractor in the absence of his surviving partner or joint contractor; in all cases, however, when the deceased's deposition has been taken, and is used on the trial, the adverse party may testify.

The constitution provides that persons having knowledge of facts tending to establish guilt of others charged with an offense against the State shall not be excused from testifying on the ground that such testimony may incriminate himself, but such person shall not be prosecuted nor subjected to any penalty on account of any matter as to which he may so testify.

The following persons are incompetent to testify: Persons of unsound mind; children under ten years of age, except in the discretion of the court; husband and wife for or against each other, except in cases of agency or joint interest, but in no case concerning communications made during marriage; nor an attorney, clergyman, or physician, with reference to confidential communications made to him, unless the party offers himself as a witness, in which case the communications to such attorney, clergyman, or physician on the same subject are admissible.

Depositions, in order to be read in evidence, must be on file at least one day before the case is called for trial.

Wills. — See Estates.

No limitation is made on the amount a testator may leave to charity. The testator may not, however, deprive his family of its homestead rights by will. No man while married may bequeath more than two thirds of his property away from his wife, nor any woman while married bequeath more than two thirds of her property away from her husband.

No person prevented by law from alienating, conveying, or incumbering real property while living is allowed to bequeath the same by will.

Birth of issue after making of will revokes the will unless provision is made for such issue. Marriage after making of will revokes such will unless wife is provided for therein or provision has been made for her by marriage contract.

To make a nuncupative will valid, and to entitle it to be admitted to probate, the following requisites must be observed: —

First: The estate bequeathed must not exceed in value the sum of one thousand dollars.

Second: It must be proved by two witnesses who were present at the making thereof, one of whom was asked by the testator at the time to bear witness that such was his will, or to that effect.

Third: The decedent must at the time have been in actual military service in the field, or doing duty on shipboard at sea, and in either case in actual contemplation, fear, or peril of death, or the decedent must have been at the time in expectation of immediate death from an injury received the same day.

Every will, other than a nuncupative will, must be in writing; and every will, other than a holographic will and a nuncupative will, must be executed and attested as follows: —

First: It must be subscribed at the end thereof by the testator himself, or some person, in his presence and by his direction, must subscribe his name thereto.

Second: The subscription must be made in the presence of the attesting witnesses, or be acknowledged by the testator to them, to have been made by him or by his authority.

Third: The testator must, at the time of subscribing or acknowledging the same, declare to the attesting witnesses that the instrument is his will; and Fourth: There must be two attesting witnesses, each of whom must sign his name as a witness at the end of the will at the testator's request and in his presence.

OREGON LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Wood, Montague & Matthiessen, of Portland.

The next legislature convenes on the second Monday in January, 1919.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — The distinction heretofore existing between forms of actions at law is abolished, and there is but one form of action at law for the enforcement of private rights or the redress of private wrongs. (L. O. L. § 62.)

Every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest; but a thing in action not arising out of contract cannot be assigned. (L. O. L. §§ 27, 392.)

An executor, or administrator, a trustee of an express trust, or a person expressly authorized by statute, may sue without joining with him the person for whose benefit the action is prosecuted. (L. O. L. §§ 29, 392.)

Actions are commenced by filing a complaint with the clerk of the court, and they are deemed commenced, as to each defendant, when the complaint is filed and the summons served on him. In courts of record the summons is in the form of a notice to the defendant, and must be subscribed by the plaintiff or his attorney. (L. O. L. §§ 14, 15.)

Jury. — In civil cases three fourths of the jury may render a verdict.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See subdivision under Descent and Distribution of Property.

Affidavits. — In all affidavits or depositions the witness must be made to speak in the first person. Depositions shall be taken in the form of question and answer, unless the parties agree to a different mode. An affidavit or deposition taken in another State of the United States, or any Territory thereof, the District of Columbia, or in a foreign country otherwise than upon commission, must be authenticated as follows before it can be used in this State: 1. It must be certified by a commissioner appointed by the governor of this State to take affidavits and depositions in such other State, Territory, District, or country. 2. Or must be certified by a judge of a court having a clerk and a seal to have been taken and subscribed before him at a time and place specified, and the existence of the court, the fact that such judge is a member thereof, and the genuineness of his signature shall be certified by a clerk of the court under the seal thereof. 3. Or such affidavit or deposition may be made and certified before a notary public having a seal and acting as such by authority of any State or Territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, and said seal shall be affixed to said affidavit or deposition, together with the date of the expiration of the notarial commission. (L. O. L. §§ 829, 830.)

Aliens. — Any alien may acquire and hold lands, or any right thereto, or interest therein by purchase, devise, or descent, and he may convey, devise, and mortgage the same, and if he shall die intestate the same shall descend to his heirs; and in all cases such land shall be held, conveyed, mortgaged, or devised, or shall descend, in like manner and with like effect as if such alien were a native or citizen of this State or of the United States. The title to any lands heretofore conveyed shall not be questioned nor in any manner affected by reason of the alienage of any person from or through whom such title may have been derived. (L. O. L. § 7172.) According to a recent constitutional amendment aliens cannot vote. (Laws 1915, p. 11. Const. art. II. § 2.)

Appeals. — An appeal may be taken to the supreme court by serving and filing the notice of appeal within sixty days from the entry of the judgment or decree appealed from; or to the circuit court within thirty days after such entry, and not otherwise. Appeals are taken from the county court and justice's court to the circuit court; and judgments in either court may be examined in the circuit court upon a writ of review for errors of law occurring in the proceedings of the court below. The appellant must give an undertaking for costs, and, if the execution is stayed, an undertaking to pay the judgment if it is affirmed or modified. A writ of review is concurrent with the right of appeal, and is allowed in all cases where an inferior court, officer, or tribunal in exercise of judicial functions has acted erroneously or has exceeded jurisdiction. (L. O. L. § 548 et seq. Session Laws, 1915, ch. 88.)

Arrests. — There shall be no imprisonment for debt (that is, for debt arising upon contracts, express or implied), except in case of fraud or absconding debtors. (Const. art. I. § 19.)

No person shall be arrested in an action at law except in the following cases: 1. In an action for the recovery of money or damages on a cause of action arising out of contract, when the defendant is not a resident of the State, or is about to remove therefrom, or when the action is for an injury to person or character, or for injuring or wrongfully taking, detaining, or converting property. 2. In an action for a fine or penalty, or on a promise to marry, or for money received, or property embezzled, or fraudulently misapplied, or converted to his own use, by a public officer, or by an attorney, or by an officer or agent of a corporation in the course of his employment as such, or by any factor, agent, broker or other person in a fiduciary capacity, or for any misconduct or neglect in office, or in a professional employment. 3. In an action to recover the possession of personal property unjustly detained, when the property or any part thereof has been concealed, removed, or disposed of, so that it cannot be found or taken by the sheriff, and with intent that it should not be so found or taken, or with the intent to deprive the plaintiff of the benefit thereof. 4. When the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in contracting the debt, or incurring the obligation for which the action is brought, or in concealing or disposing of the property, for the taking, detention, or conversion of which the action is brought. 5. When the defendant has removed or disposed of his property, or is about to do so, with intent to defraud his creditors. But no female shall be arrested in any action, except for an injury to person, character, or property. (L. O. L. § 259.)

Defendant may be discharged by giving bail or depositing the money. Expenses of food and fees are to be paid by plaintiff during defendant's imprisonment.

Assignments. — While the statute relative to assignments is still in force, it is practically suspended by operation of the national bankruptcy law of 1898. (144 Pac. 410, 413.)

Attachment. — The plaintiff, at the time of issuing the summons, or at any time afterwards, may have the property of the defendant attached, as security for the satisfaction of any judgment that may be recovered, unless the defendant give security to pay such judgment, in the following cases: 1. In an action upon contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, not secured by mortgage, lien, or pledge upon real estate or personal property, or, if so secured, when such security has been rendered nugatory by act of the defendant. 2. In action upon a contract, express or implied, against a defendant not residing in this State.

The clerk of the court must issue the writ of attachment upon receiving an affidavit, by or on behalf of plaintiff, showing: 1st, that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff (specifying the amount of such indebtedness over and above all legal set-offs or counter-claims) upon a contract for the direct payment of money, and, 2d, either (1) that the payment of the same has not been secured by any mortgage, lien, or pledge upon real or personal property, or (2) that the same was secured by a mortgage, lien, or pledge (as the case may be), but that such security has been rendered nugatory by the act of the defendant, or (3) that the defendant is a non-resident of the State; and 3d, that the sum for which the attachment is asked is an actual bona fide existing debt, due and owing from the defendant to the plaintiff, and that the attachment is not sought nor the action prosecuted to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the defendant.

Upon filing the affidavit with the clerk, the plaintiff shall be entitled to have the writ issue as soon thereafter as he shall file with the clerk his undertaking with one or more sureties, in a sum not less than one hundred dollars, and equal to the amount for which the plaintiff demands judgment, and to the effect that the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be adjudged to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, if the same be wrongful or without sufficient cause, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking. With the undertaking the plaintiff shall also file the affidavits of the sureties, from which affidavits it must appear that such sureties are qualified, and that taken together they are worth double the amount of the sum specified in the undertaking, over all debts and liabilities and property exempt from execution. But if the surety be a surety company, the exhibition of its certificate from the secretary of state, authorizing it to do business in this State, is a sufficient justification. No person not qualified to become bail upon an arrest is qualified to become surety in an undertaking for an attachment. The rights or shares which such defendant may have in the stock of any association or corporation, together with the interests or profit thereon, and all other property in this State of such defendant, not exempt from execution, is liable to be attached.

An attachment cannot be had upon a claim not due.

No attachment or execution shall be issued against a State bank before final judgment.

An affidavit for an attachment may be made by the plaintiff, or his agent or attorney.

Sureties on an attachment bond must be householders or freeholders in the State, or surety companies authorized to do business in the State.

Property attached may be returned to the defendant upon his giving a counter undertaking to redeliver or to pay the demand. Unless a general assignment is made for the benefit of creditors under the state law, before judgment is rendered on attachment, attaching creditors do not share pro rata but are paid in the order of their attachment. (L. O. L. § 295 et seq.)

Chattel Mortgages. — Mortgages of personal property hereafter made shall be executed, witnessed, and acknowledged and recorded in like manner as conveyances of real property. Every such mortgage which shall not be accompanied with immediate delivery and followed by actual and continual change of possession, or recorded, shall be void as against subsequent purchasers and mortgagees in good faith and for valuable consideration of such prop-

Any foreign surety company with a paid-up capital of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars and a surplus of one hundred thousand dollars, incorporated under the laws of any other State of the United States, either solely or among other things for the purpose of transacting business as surety on obligations of persons or corporations, may transact business in this State, after appointing a resident of the State its resident general agent, upon whom all lawful process may be served and showing that it is qualified and authorized to write bonds for the Federal Government. Said service shall be of the same validity as if served on the company. Such service of process in actions and proceedings shall be service on the principal, but the principal shall be allowed thirty days within which to appear and plead. Foreign insurance companies transacting the business of fire, fidelity, and surety insurance must deposit with the state treasurer money or bonds of the par and market value of twenty-five thousand dollars.

Summons as to domestic corporations may be served on the president or other head of a private corporation, secretary, cashier, or managing agent. Service by publication may be made when the defendant is a foreign corporation having property within the State. Pleading of private corporation may be made by any one authorized to receive the service of summons. All rights of a defendant as stockholder in a corporation are subject to attachment. Public corporations may sue and be sued; but judgment against same can be recovered only in special proceeding. The jurisdiction of a state court extends over a corporation only when it has been created under the laws of this State or does business or has property therein, and in the latter case only to the extent of such property at the time jurisdiction attached.

The real estate of corporations is assessed in the county in which the same is situate, in the same manner as individuals. Personal property is assessed in the county where the principal office or place of business is located; but all corporations engaged in transportation by railroad or water craft are assessed in the county where the home port or principal terminus may be. The property of a corporation may be seized and sold for taxes as that of a natural person.

On this day of 19 before me appeared to me personally known, who, being duly sworn (or affirmed) did say that he is the president (or other officer, officers, or agent of) the corporation) of (describing the corporation), and that the seal affixed to said instrument is the corporate seal of said corporation, and that said instrument was signed and sealed in behalf of said corporation by authority of its board of directors, and said acknowledged said instrument to be the free act and deed of said corporation.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal this the day and year first in this, my certificate, written.

For laws on Corporations see L. O. L. § 6679 et seq. Laws 1915, pp. 111, 318.

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for Oregon.

Deeds. — Deeds executed in any other State, Territory, or District of the United States may be executed according to the laws of such State, Territory, or District, and the execution thereof may be acknowledged before any judge of a court of record, justice of the peace, or notary public, or other officer authorized by the laws of such State, Territory, or District to take the acknowledgment of deeds therein, or before any commissioner appointed by the governor of Oregon for such purposes. If executed in any foreign country it may be executed according to the laws of such country, and execution may be acknowledged before any notary public therein, or before any minister plenipotentiary, minister extraordinary, minister resident, chargé d'affaires, commissioner, consul, vice-consul, or consul-general of the United States appointed to reside therein, which acknowledgment shall be certified thereon by officer taking same, under his hand, and if notary public, seal shall be affixed. It is not necessary that the character of the official shall be certified by a United States consul. Deeds executed in this State may be acknowledged before judge of supreme court, county judge, clerk of supreme court, county clerk, justice of the peace, and notary public. A scroll with a pen answers for a seal. Two witnesses are required.

A married woman must join with her husband in making a deed, or her right of dower is not barred.

The acknowledgment of a deed must be substantially in the following form: —

STATE OF }
COUNTY OF } ss.

This certifies that on this day of A. D. 19 before me, the undersigned (here insert name and title), in and for said county and State, personally appeared the within named Robert C. Pope, and Martha J. Pope, his wife, to me personally known to be (or satisfactorily proven to me on oath to be) the individuals described in and who executed the within instrument, and acknowledged to me that they executed the same freely and voluntarily, for the uses and purposes therein expressed.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and fixed my seal the day and year in this certificate first above written.

[Seal.]

(Signature and title.)

In acknowledgments taken before a notary public, the seal of said officer must be affixed thereto. In our opinion, an acknowledgment may be pasted upon an instrument. (L. O. L. § 7100 et seq.)

Depositions. — In all affidavits and depositions the witness must be made to speak in the first person. Depositions shall be taken in the form of question and answer, unless the parties agree to a different mode. It is usual here to take depositions stenographically, by consent of the parties; the notes being afterwards written out, and the transcript signed by the witness. But we think that if objection were made, and one party should insist upon it, the deposition would have to be written out by the commissioner at the time it is taken.

Depositions in the State must be taken upon three days' notice to the adverse party, if place of examination from residence of person to whom notice is given does not exceed twenty-five miles, and one day in addition for every additional twenty-five miles, unless court orders shorter time. Depositions may be taken either in or out of the State upon a commission issued upon five days' notice to the adverse party, which notice must be accompanied by the interrogatories proposed to be propounded to the witness, unless the parties agree to some other mode of examination. It may also be taken in any part of the United States, before any commissioner appointed by the governor upon eight days' notice to adverse party, if distance of place of examination from place where testimony is to be used does not exceed fifty miles, and one additional day for each additional twenty-five miles.

Directions for taking depositions out of the State: —

A deposition may be headed as follows (filling in the blanks with the name of the witness, the place, county, and State, and causing the witness to speak in the first person), to wit: —

I, _____ of _____ in the county of _____ in the State of _____ being first duly sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in answer to the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories annexed to the foregoing commission, depose and say as follows:

To the first interrogatory, I answer:

(Here give the answer, and proceed through all the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories in the same manner.)

The deposition should be written legibly and without interlineation, and each page and each line of each page of the deposition should be numbered.

The name of the witness and words "direct examination" or "cross-examination," as the case may be, should be placed upon the margin of each page of the deposition.

The following form of certificate should be affixed to the depositions, and signed by the commissioner, and the seal of the court or officer affixed: —

STATE OF _____ } ss.

This is to certify that I, _____ clerk of the _____ in the State of _____ by virtue of the foregoing commission to me directed, caused the above named _____ the deponent therein mentioned, to come before me in _____ in said county of _____ on the _____ day of _____

A. D. 19____ and that the foregoing deposition subscribed by said deponent was taken before me at _____ in said county of _____ on the date last named, between the hours of ten o'clock A. M. and six o'clock P. M. of said day, and the same was by me (or by some person, naming him) reduced to writing. That before proceeding to the examination the said deponent was by me duly sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in answer to the several interrogatories and cross-interrogatories annexed, and thereupon he made and gave the foregoing answers; that the said deposition when completed was by me read to said deponent, and the same was thereupon by him in my presence subscribed.

In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and the seal of said court this _____ day of _____ 19____.

Clerk, etc. (giving name) and Commissioner.

The interrogatories, commission, answers, and certificate should be attached and inclosed in an envelope and sealed and directed to the clerk of the court, or justice of the peace, issuing the commission and forwarded by mail to him. Indorse upon the envelope the title of the cause and the word "Deposition." (L. O. L. § 839 et seq.)

Descent and Distribution of Property. — The real property of intestates descends as follows. 1st. In equal shares to his or her children, and to the issue of any deceased child by right of representation; and if there be no child of the intestate living at the time of his or her death, such real property shall descend to all his or her other lineal descendants; and if all such descendants are in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, they shall take such real property equally; or, otherwise, they shall take according to the right of representation. 2d. If the intestate shall leave no lineal descendants, such real property shall descend to his wife, or if the intestate be a married woman and leave no lineal descendants, then such real property shall descend to her husband, and if the intestate leaves no wife or husband, then such real property shall descend in equal proportions to his or her father and mother. 3d. If the intestate shall leave no lineal descendants, neither husband nor wife nor father, such real property shall descend to his or her mother; if the intestate shall leave no lineal descendants, neither husband nor wife, nor mother, such real property shall descend to his or her father; if the intestate shall leave no lineal descendants, neither husband nor wife, nor father, nor mother, such real property shall descend in equal shares to the brothers and sisters of the intestate, and to the issue of any deceased brother or sister by right of representation. 4th. If the intestate shall leave no lineal descendants, neither husband nor wife, nor father, mother, brother, nor sister, such real property shall descend to his or her next of kin in equal degree, excepting that when there are two or more collateral kindred in equal degree but claiming through different ancestors, those who claim through the nearest ancestor shall be preferred to those claiming through a more remote ancestor. 5th. When any child shall die under the age of twenty-one years and leave no husband or wife or children, any real estate which descended to such child shall descend to the heir of the ancestor from whom such real property descended, the same as if such child died before the death of such ancestor. 6th. If the intestate shall leave no lineal descendants or kindred, such real property shall escheat to the State of Oregon. (Session Laws of 1913, ch. 39. A. L. 1915, ch. 191.)

Personal Property is distributed among the persons who would be entitled to the realty of the intestate, except that: If the intestate leave a husband or widow and issue, such husband or widow shall be entitled to receive one half of the personal property; but if the intestate leave a husband or widow and no issue, such husband or widow shall be entitled to receive the whole of the personal property. The degrees of kindred are computed by rules of the civil law. Kindred of half blood shall inherit or receive equally with those of whole blood in same degree. Illegitimate child is heir of mother, and shall inherit or receive her property, real or personal, in like manner as if born in lawful wedlock, but shall not be entitled to inherit or receive, as representing mother, any property of kindred, either lineal or collateral. When parents of child have married and cohabited as husband and wife, child not to be considered illegitimate though marriage shall be adjudged to be void. (L. O. L. § 7349 et seq.)

Claims against the Estates of Deceased Persons. — Administration shall be granted and letters thereof issued as follows: 1. To the widow or next of kin, or both, in the discretion of the court. 2. To one or more of the principal creditors. 3. To any other person competent and qualified whom the court may select. Preference is given in the order above named. If persons named in subdivision one do not apply for administration within thirty days from date of the death of deceased, they shall be deemed to have renounced their right thereto, provided that if they reside without the county the court may direct a citation to issue requiring them within such period to apply, or renounce their right. If persons named in subdivision two do not make application within forty days after such decease, they shall be deemed to have renounced their right. If deceased were a married woman, administration shall be granted her husband, if he be qualified and competent for trust, and apply for same within thirty days, unless by force of a marriage settlement or otherwise she shall have made testamentary disposition of property which renders it necessary and proper to grant administration to another person. (L. O. L. § 1150 et seq.) Non-residents of the State cannot act.

An undertaking in double the probable value of the personal estate, plus double the probable value of the annual rents and profits of the real property with one or more sufficient sureties approved by the county judge, is required, but a testator by express declaration in his will to that effect may waive the requirement of an undertaking. (L. O. L. § 1153.)

Notice is given to creditors by publication in a weekly newspaper of general circulation published in the county, in which administration is granted, once each week, for four successive weeks, requiring all creditors to present their claims to the administrator at a place in the county designated in the notice within six months from the date of first publication. Claims of the same class presented within six months share equally. Claims not presented within said period are not barred, but are not paid until claims previously presented are fully satisfied.

Claims should be verified by the claimant, or some one in his behalf having personal knowledge thereof, before an officer authorized to take affidavits. See Affidavits. They shall set out the claim in full (and if upon a promissory note the same should be annexed), and state that the amount is justly due over and above all just credits and offsets, that no payments have been made thereon except as stated, and no just counter-claim exists thereto to the knowledge of affiant. (L. O. L. § 1238 et seq.)

Claims are paid in the following order: 1. Funeral charges. 2. Taxes due the United States. 3. Expenses of last sickness. 4. Taxes due the State, or any county or public corporation therein. 5. Debts preferred by the laws of the United States. 6. Debts which, at the death of the deceased, were a lien upon his property or any right or interest therein, according to the priority of their several liens. 7. Debts due employees of decedent for wages earned within the ninety days immediately prior to his decease. 8. All other claims. (L. O. L. § 1295.)

The property exempt by law from execution shall be set apart for the widow, and she is allowed her wearing apparel and ornaments.

The court may make her a further allowance when the estate is sufficient to pay all debts and expenses of administration; and if the value of the estate does not exceed one hundred and fifty dollars over and above property exempt from execution, the court shall set the same aside for the widow after payment of funeral charges and expenses of administration. (L. O. L. § 1233 et seq.)

Administrators are required to make semi-annual accountings.

Divorce. — A dissolution of the marriage contract may be declared at the suit of the injured party, for either of the following causes: 1st, impotency; 2d, adultery unforgiven;

3d, conviction of felon; 4th, habitual gross drunkenness contracted since the marriage, and continuing for one year before suit; 5th, willful desertion for the period of one year; 6th, cruel and inhuman treatment, or personal indignities rendering life burdensome.

In a suit for the dissolution of the marriage contract, the plaintiff therein must be an inhabitant of the State at the commencement of the suit, and for one year prior thereto, which residence shall be sufficient to give the court jurisdiction, without regard to the place where the marriage was solemnized, or the cause of a suit arose.

Whenever a marriage shall be declared void or dissolved, the party at whose prayer such decree shall be made shall, in all cases, be entitled to the undivided third part in his or her individual right, in fee, of the whole of the real estate owned by the other at the time of such decree, in addition to the further decree for maintenance, and a woman may resume her own name. A suit for the dissolution of the marriage contract may be commenced and tried in any county of the State in which either party resides. (L. O. L. § 501 et seq.)

Dower. — A widow is entitled to one half part, during her natural life, of all lands whereof her husband was seized of an estate of inheritance at any time during coverture, unless she is lawfully barred. A woman entitled to dower may, at her election, take in lieu of dower an undivided third part in her individual right in fee of the whole of the land of which her husband during the marriage was seized of an estate of inheritance, unless lawfully barred. (Laws, 1917, ch. 331.) A widow may be barred of dower by joining with her husband in a deed of conveyance, by jointure settled on her, with her assent, before marriage, or by the acceptance of any pecuniary provision that may be made for her benefit.

Estates. — By the Curtesy. — The widower of any deceased person shall, as tenant by the curtesy, be entitled to the use during his natural life of one half part of all the lands whereof his wife was seized of an estate of inheritance at any time during the marriage, although no issue born alive, unless he is lawfully barred thereof. He may at his election, take in lieu of curtesy the undivided third part in his individual right in fee of the whole of the land of which his wife was seized of on estate of inheritance during the marriage unless lawfully barred. (Laws, 1917, ch. 331.)

Joint tenancy is abolished save as to trustees and executors, and all persons having an undivided interest in real property are to be deemed and considered tenants in common. An estate in joint tenancy may be created, however, by express agreement of the parties. (L. O. L. §§ 7175, 7177.)

Dower. — See supra.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Execution. — Execution issues immediately, and in the justices' courts is returnable in thirty days; in the circuit and county courts, in sixty days. A levy may be made at once. Execution may issue at any time within ten years after judgment, and as often within that period as any portion of the judgment remains unsatisfied. See Redemption; Stay of Execution. (L. O. L. § 213 et seq.)

Exemptions. — The following property shall be exempt from execution, if selected and reserved by the judgment debtor or his agent at the time of the levy, or as soon thereafter before sale thereof as the same shall be known to him, and not otherwise: Books, pictures, and musical instruments owned by any person, to the value of seventy-five dollars; necessary wearing apparel owned by any person, to the value of one hundred dollars, and, if such person be a householder, for each member of his family to the value of fifty dollars; the tools, implements, apparatus, team, vehicle, harness, or library necessary to enable any person to carry on the trade, occupation, or profession by which such person habitually earns his living, to the value of four hundred dollars; also sufficient quantity of food to support such team, if any, for sixty days. The word "team," in this subdivision, shall not be construed to include more than one yoke of oxen, or pair of horses or mules, as the case may be. Homesteads the actual abode of, and owned by, a family or some member thereof, are exempt from execution.

The following property, if owned by a householder and in actual use, or kept for use, by and for his family, or when being removed from one habitation to another on a change of residence: Ten sheep, with one year's fleece, or the yarn or cloth manufactured therefrom, two cows, and five swine; household goods, furniture, and utensils, to the value of three hundred dollars; also, food sufficient to support such animals, if any, for three months, and provisions actually provided for family use, and necessary for the support of such householder and family for six months; three cords of firewood or one ton of coal; domestic fowl to the value of fifty dollars; the seat or pew occupied by a householder, or his family, in a place of public worship; burial lots; all property of the State, or any county, incorporated city, town, or village therein, or of any other public or municipal corporation of like character.

Where advances of goods, wares, merchandise, or money are made to, or labor performed for, any person, engaged in any undertaking, trade, business, or pursuit, to enable or assist him therein, or which shall be employed in such purpose, such property or money due growing out of the same shall not be exempt from execution on a judgment recovered for such advances.

The earnings of a judgment debtor accruing for personal services performed within the preceding thirty days and to the extent of seventy-five dollars are exempt from execution when it satisfactorily appears such earnings are necessary for the support of the debtor's family, except that when debt is for family expenses incurred within six months, fifty per cent. of such earnings are so subject. (L. O. L. § 221 et seq. Laws of 1915, ch. 27.)

No money or other means of aid to be paid or rendered by any fraternal benefit society shall be attached or levied upon for the debt of any member or beneficiary, either before or after payment. The annuities payable to members of school-teachers' retirement fund associations are exempt from attachment and execution.

Every white male citizen of this State above the age of sixteen years shall be entitled to have and keep, for his own use and defense, the following firearms, to wit: either or any one of the following named guns, and one revolving pistol: a rifle, shotgun (double or single barrel), yager, or musket; the same to be exempt from execution in all cases, under the laws of Oregon. (L. O. L. § 3858.) The sale of weapons, however, is regulated. (Laws, 1913, ch. 256.)

The lands of an enlisted man in the army or navy are exempt from judicial sale while he is actually engaged in the federal service in time of war. (Laws, 1917, ch. 275.)

Garnishment. — All choses in action are subject to garnishment, and a public officer shall be liable to answer as garnishee for moneys in his possession as such public officer, belonging to or claimed by any judgment debtor, except that no clerk or officer of any court shall be required to answer as garnishee as to property in his possession in the custody of the law. (L. O. L. § 258.)

Inheritance Taxes. — The State Inheritance Tax Law (L. O. L. § 1191, et seq.; Laws, 1917, ch. 372) imposes the following taxes: —

When the inheritance, devise, bequest, legacy, gift, or beneficial interest passes to or for the use or benefit of any grandfather, grandmother, father, mother, husband, wife, child, brother, sister, wife or widow of a son, or the husband of a daughter, or any child or children adopted as such in conformity with the laws of this State, or to any person to whom the decedent for not less than ten years prior to death stood in the acknowledged relation of parent, or to any lineal descendant born in lawful wedlock, the tax on the appraised value thereof received by each person is at the rate of one per cent. on any amount in excess of five thousand dollars up to and including twenty-five thousand dollars; at the rate of one and one half per cent. on any amount in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars; up to and including fifty thousand dollars; at the rate of two per cent. on any amount in excess of fifty thousand dollars, up to and including one hundred thousand dollars; at the rate of two and one half per cent. on any amount in excess of one hundred thousand dollars, up to and including two hundred thousand dollars; at the rate of three per cent. on any amount in excess of two hundred thousand dollars, up to and including four hundred thousand dollars; at the rate of three and one half per cent. on any amount in excess of four hundred thousand dollars, up to and including six hundred thousand dollars; at the rate of four per cent. on any amount in excess of six hundred thousand dollars. This tax is to be levied in the above cases only on the excess of five thousand dollars received by each person.

When the inheritance, devise, bequest, legacy, gift, or other beneficial interest in any property or income therefrom passes to or for the use or benefit of any uncle, aunt, niece, nephew, or any lineal descendant of the same, the tax on the appraised value thereof received by each person is at the rate of two per cent. on any amount in excess of one thousand dollars, up to and including five thousand dollars; at the rate of three per cent. on any amount in excess of five thousand dollars, up to and including ten thousand dollars; at the rate of four per cent. on any amount in excess of ten thousand dollars, up to and including twenty-five thousand dollars; at the rate of five per cent. on any amount in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars, up to and including the sum of fifty thousand dollars; at the rate of six per cent. on any amount in excess of fifty thousand dollars, up to and including one hundred thousand dollars; at the rate of seven per cent. on any amount in excess of one hundred thousand dollars, up to and including two hundred thousand dollars; at the rate of eight per cent. on any amount in excess of two hundred thousand dollars. The tax is to be levied in the above cases only on the excess of two thousand dollars (one thousand dollars?) received by each person.

In all other cases the tax on the appraised value thereof received by each person, body politic or corporate, shall be at the rate of three per cent. on any amount in excess of five hundred dollars, up to and including twenty-five hundred dollars; at the rate of four per cent. on any amount in excess of twenty-five hundred dollars, up to and including five thousand dollars; at the rate of five per cent. on any amount in excess of five thousand dollars up to and including ten thousand dollars; at the rate of six per cent. on any amount in excess of ten thousand dollars, up to and including twenty-five thousand dollars; at the rate of seven per cent. on any amount in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars, up to and including fifty thousand dollars; at the rate of eight per cent. on any amount in excess of fifty thousand dollars, up to and including one hundred thousand dollars; at the rate of nine per cent. on any amount in excess of one hundred thousand dollars, up to and including two hundred thousand dollars; at the rate of ten per cent. on any amount in excess of two hundred thousand dollars. Taxes to be levied in the above cases only when the amount received by a person, body politic or corporate, amounts to five hundred dollars or more.

Devises, bequests, legacies, or gifts to benevolent, charitable, or educational institutions incorporated within this State and actually engaged in this State in carrying out the objects and purposes for which so incorporated, or to any person or persons to be held in trust for any such institution in lieu thereof, are exempt from any inheritance tax.

The state treasurer has general supervision over the collection of the tax.

Such devises are taxable whatever the nature of the property, whether the decedent be resident or non-resident, and gifts causa mortis are taxed like a devise.

The tax accrues from the date of the death of the decedent and is payable at the expiration of eight months from the death, except as otherwise provided in the act.

Payments are made to the state treasurer, and such tax is a lien upon the property embraced in the inheritance until paid, and the executor, administrator, or trustee is personally liable for the tax until its payment, to the extent of the value of the property. But such liens must be enforced within five years in the case of a resident deceased, and in the case of a non-resident deceased within six years after notice of death is filed with the state treasurer. (Laws 1915, ch. 42.)

The county judge having jurisdiction appraises the estate, and determines the tax payable.

Insolvent Laws. — See Assignments.

Interest. — Legal rate is six per cent., but contracts providing for not to exceed ten per cent. will be enforced. Judgments and decrees for money upon contracts bearing more than six per cent. interest, and not exceeding ten per cent. per annum, shall bear the same interest borne by such contracts.

Usury is punished by forfeiture to the common school fund of the original sum lent, and costs of action or suits are adjudged against the person seeking to enforce the usurious contract.

Judgments bear interest at six per cent., but judgments and decrees for money upon contracts bearing more than six per cent. interest, and not exceeding ten per cent. per annum, bear the same interest as that stipulated in the contract. Upon accounts, interest is allowed only from their maturity, and then only from the time the balance is ascertained. (Catlin v. Knott, 2 Oregon, 321.) A contract to pay eight per cent. per annum and to pay the taxes is declared valid. (L. O. L. § 6028 et seq.) Laws 1915, ch. 219, provides for loans in small amounts by licensed loan agents at higher rates.

Judgments. — In courts of record, if no defense is made within ten days after service of summons, judgment may be taken against the defendant, when service is had within the county where the action is brought; if service out of the county, then in twenty days, in actions arising upon contract for the recovery of money or damages. (L. O. L. § 185.)

For want of answer judgment may be entered in justice's court seven days after service of summons on the defendant. (Hill's Code, § 2058.) Judgments by default, as of course, can be had only in case of actions arising out of contract and for the recovery of money or damages. In all cases of tort there must be a trial by the court. From the date of docketing a judgment or the transcript thereof, such judgment is a lien upon all the real property of the defendant within the county or counties where the same is docketed, or which he may afterwards acquire therein during the time an execution may issue thereon. Transcripts of a judgment rendered in the United States courts for the district of Oregon may be docketed in the various counties with the same effect. (L. O. L. § 210.) Execution to enforce judgment in a justice's court must not be issued against or levied upon real property of defendant; but when such judgment has been duly docketed in circuit court, it may thereafter be enforced as judgment of such circuit court.

Whenever, after the entry of judgment, a period of ten consecutive years shall elapse without an execution being issued on such judgment, the lien therefor shall expire. (L. O. L. § 206.)

Ten dollars attorney's fee is allowed, by way of costs, to the prevailing party in circuit courts and five dollars in county courts, and written instruments may provide for the recovery of such attorney's fees as the court may adjudge reasonable. (L. O. L. § 565.)

As between judgments obtained at the same term of court their priority is determined as of course by the date of the docketing of the judgment in the "Judgment Lien Docket."

Liens. — Every mechanic, artisan, machinist, builder, contractor, lumber merchant, laborer, teamster, drayman, and other person performing labor upon or furnishing material of any kind to be used in the construction, alteration, or repair, either in whole or part, of any building, wharf, bridge, ditch, flume, tunnel, fence, machinery, or aqueduct, or other structure or superstructure, shall have a lien upon the same for work or labor done or materials furnished by each respectively, whether done or furnished at the instance of the owner or his agent, and every contractor, sub-contractor, architect, builder, or other person having charge of the work in whole or in part shall for this purpose be deemed the agent of the owner. The land upon which any building or other improvement shall be constructed, or so much thereof as may be required for the convenient use and occupation thereof (to be determined by the judgment of the circuit court at the time of foreclosure of the lien), shall also be subject to these liens if the same belonged to the person who caused the building or improvement to be constructed, altered, or repaired, at the time the work was done or the materials were furnished. No lien shall bind any building, structure, or other improvement for a longer period than six months after the notice shall have been filed unless suit be brought in a proper court within that time to enforce the same; or, if a credit be given, then six months after the expiration of such credit; but no lien shall be continued in force for a longer time than two years from the time the work is completed by any agreement to give credit. All mechanics' liens must be foreclosed by suit. (L. O. L. § 7416 et seq.)

Notices of liens must be filed with the county clerk. Original contractor must file his lien within sixty days after completion of his contract; and every mechanic, artisan, machinist, builder, lumber merchant, laborer, or other person, save original contractor, within thirty days after completion of alteration or repair, or after he has ceased to labor or furnish materials. (L. O. L. § 7420.)

Every boat navigating the water so far constructed in this State is subject to liens for labor materials, wharfage, anchorage, or towage, and for damages for injuries to persons or property and for damages growing out of the non-performance or mal-performance of any contract of affreightment or contract for the carrying of passengers. (L. O. L. § 7504 et seq.)

All persons who, as sub-contractor, material-man or laborer, shall furnish to any contractor to railroad corporation any fuel, ties, materials, supplies, or other article or thing, or who shall do or perform any work or labor for such contractor, in conformity with any contract, express or implied, between the contractor and the railroad corporation, shall have a lien upon all property, real, personal, or mixed, of corporation. Aggregate of all liens authorized shall not exceed original contract price between company and contractor. Corporation shall not be liable for any greater sum than amount then actually due by corporation to original contractor. No such lien shall take priority over existing lien. Person performing labor shall cause notice in writing to be served on such officer of corporation at place where the principal office is, as service of summons may be made. If there shall be contractor and sub-contractor, material-man or laborer, copy of original contract shall be served with notice and attached thereto, and service shall be made at any time within twenty days after completion of sub-contract or labor. Corporation may at any time discharge and release itself from liability on account of liens by depositing with clerk of circuit court of county in which principal office is, moneys due by it to original contractor, and publishing notice thereof for two weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in county. Lien is enforced by suit. (L. O. L. § 7429 et seq.)

Common carriers and warehousemen have liens. Attorney has lien for his compensation:

1. Upon papers of client in his possession.
2. Upon money in his hands belonging to client.
3. Upon money in hands of adverse party in an action, suit, or proceeding in which attorney was employed.
4. Upon judgment or decree to extent of costs, or, if there be a special agreement, to the extent of compensation specially agreed on, from the giving notice thereof to the party against whom judgment or decree is given and filing original with clerk where judgment or decree is entered and docketed.

Liens also exist in favor of laborers employed in clearing, ditching, diking, and tilling land, laborers and material-men on mining claims, and loggers as to saw-logs, and blacksmiths, wagon-makers, automobile repairers, and machinists as to chattels on which they have expended labor or materials, agisters, livery-stable keepers, and others.

For judgment liens see Judgments.

Limitations. — 1. Actions for the recovery of real property, or the possession thereof, must be commenced within ten years. 2. An action upon a judgment or decree of any court of the United States, or of any State or Territory within the United States, and upon sealed instruments, within ten years. 3. An action upon a contract or liability, express or implied, excepting those mentioned above; an action upon a liability created by statute, other than a penalty or forfeiture; an action for waste or trespass upon real property; an action for taking, detaining, or injuring personal property, including an action for the recovery thereof, within six years. 4. An action against a sheriff, coroner, or constable, and for penalty or forfeiture, within three years. 5. An action for libel, slander, assault, battery, or false imprisonment, for criminal conversation, or for any injury to the person or rights of another, not arising on contract and not herein especially enumerated, an action upon a statute for a forfeiture or penalty to the State or county, within two years. 6. An action against the sheriff or other officer for escape, within one year. See Liens. The above limitations apply to actions brought in name of State, or any county or other public corporation or for its benefit.

Upon a mutual, open, and current account, the cause of action accrues from the time of the last item proved in the account on either side.

A person under legal disability, at the time the cause of action arose, may bring an action within one year after the disability is removed, with certain exceptions for a few actions. (Laws 1915, ch. 30.) No promises will take a case out of the statute of limitation, unless the same is in writing and signed by the party to be charged; this, however, does not alter the effect of any payment of principal and interest, as such payment upon any contract, including note and bill of exchange, makes the limitation begin at the time of such payment.

When the cause of action has arisen in another State, Territory, or country, between non-residents of this State, and by the laws of the State, Territory, or country where the cause of action arose an action cannot be maintained thereon by reason of the loss of time, no action can be maintained thereon in this State. (L. O. L. § 8 et seq.)

Married Women. — The property and pecuniary rights of every married woman at the time of her marriage, or afterwards acquired, shall not be subject to the debts or contracts of her husband, and she may manage, sell, convey, or devise the same by will to the same extent and in the same manner that her husband can property belonging to him.

Where property is owned by either the husband or wife, the other has no interest therein which can be the subject of contract between them, or such interest as will make the same liable for the contracts or liabilities of either the husband or wife who is not the owner of the property. Should either the husband or wife obtain possession or control of property belonging to the other, either before or after marriage, the owner of the property may maintain an action therefor, or for any right growing out of the same, in the same manner and extent as if they were unmarried.

A married woman is alone responsible in damages for injuries committed by her, except in case where her husband would be responsible with her provided marriage did not exist.

A conveyance, transfer, or lien executed by either husband or wife to or in favor of the other shall be valid to the same extent as between other persons. Either may constitute the other his or her attorney in fact to dispose of his or her property, and may revoke the same in the same manner and extent as other persons.

A wife may receive the wages of her labor and bring action therefor in her own name, and she may prosecute and defend all actions at law or in equity for the preservation and protection of her rights and property. Neither husband nor wife is liable for the debts or liabilities of the other incurred before marriage. They are not liable for the separate debts of each other. Contracts may be made by a wife and the same enforced by or against her in the same manner as if she were unmarried, and she may transact business as a feme sole.

The expenses of the family and the education of the children are chargeable upon the property of both husband and wife, or either of them, and in relation thereto they may be sued jointly or separately.

A married woman may contract expressly in reference to her separate estate, and such separate estate is liable to execution and sale for liabilities so contracted. Any express contract of a married woman made a charge upon her separate estate is binding, and she may be sued alone upon it, and a judgment rendered thereupon may be enforced against the separate property charged. Women become of age at eighteen, or at their marriage.

By act of October, 1880, all laws which impose or recognize civil disabilities upon a wife which are not imposed or recognized as existing as to the husband are repealed: provided that the act shall not confer the right to vote or hold office upon the wife; and for any unjust usurpation of her property or natural rights she has the same right to appeal in her own name alone to the courts of law or equity for redress that the husband has. The rights and responsibilities of the wife as to the children are by the same act made equal with the husband. Married woman may apply to circuit court of county where she resides for order on husband to provide for her support and the support of her minor children, if any, by said husband living with her. Court is empowered to decree such support as is equitable in view of the circumstances of both parties. Practice in such cases shall conform as nearly as may be to practice in divorce cases. A woman may practice law, and has full suffrage rights. (L. O. L. § 7034 et seq.)

Mechanics' Liens. — See Liens.

Mortgages. — Mortgages are executed in the same manner as deeds. An absolute conveyance, if intended as security, will be considered a mortgage.

Mortgages shall be foreclosed, and the property adjudged to be sold to satisfy the debt secured thereby, by a suit in equity, and the plaintiff shall also have a decree for amount of such debt, if it appear that promissory note or other personal obligation has been given for payment of debt, but deficiency judgments will not be given in a suit to foreclose a purchase price mortgage. The holder may, however, disregard the mortgage and sue at law for amount of note. (Page 7. Ford, 65 Ore. 450.) All persons having liens on the property or any part thereof, subsequent to lien of plaintiff, shall be made defendants.

A decree of foreclosure shall have the effect to bar the equity of redemption, and property sold on execution issued upon a decree may be redeemed in like manner and with like effect as property sold on an execution issued on a judgment, and not otherwise. (L. O. L. § 427.) Assignments of mortgages are now required to be made by an instrument in writing executed and acknowledged with the same formality as required in deeds and mortgages of real estate and recorded in the records of mortgages of the county where the land is situated. (L. O. L. § 7135.)

Any mortgage may be discharged by an entry in the margin of the record thereof, signed by the mortgagee, or his personal representative or assignee, acknowledging the satisfaction of the mortgage, in the presence of the county clerk, or his deputy, who shall subscribe the same as a witness; and such entry shall have the same effect as a deed of release duly acknowledged and recorded. When note secured by mortgage on real estate is transferred by indorsement without formal assignment of mortgage, said mortgage may be discharged of record by owner and holder of said promissory note making and filing with recorder of conveyances or county clerk, custodian of record of mortgage, a certificate duly verified by his oath, declaring that he is owner and holder of the note secured by mortgage by indorsement of mortgage, that note has been fully paid, and proving said fact to satisfaction of said recorder of conveyances or county clerk, and also delivering original note to such officer. Certificate and note shall be entered on records in full, and same shall have effect of duly executed deed of release.

After ten years have elapsed from the date of the maturity of any mortgage on real estate, such mortgage shall conclusively be presumed to be paid, satisfied, and discharged, and no action, suit, or other proceeding shall be maintainable for the foreclosure of the same. (Laws 1917, ch. 32.)

The foreclosure of mortgages upon land belonging wholly or in part to enlisted men in the federal service as well as the reduction of the note to judgment, is prohibited for the period during which war continues and sixty days thereafter. (Laws 1917, ch. 275.)

Notaries Public. — Notaries public are appointed by the governor of the State for the term of four years. They are required to use a seal, an impression of which must be filed with the secretary of state, and such seal must be affixed upon all conveyances acknowledged or affidavits, etc., made before them. They must state date of expiration of commission. Their jurisdiction extends throughout the State, and they are authorized to act in any county within the State.

The county clerk of the county where the notary resides is required to record the commission of the notary and to certify to his official character. (Laws 1915, ch. 64; L. O. L. § 2850 et seq.)

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law was enacted in this State in 1899. (L. O. L. § 5834 et seq.) All notes in writing made and signed by any person, whereby he shall promise to pay to any other person or his order, or unto the bearer, any sum of money therein mentioned, shall be due and payable as therein expressed, and shall have the same effect, and be negotiable in like manner, as inland bills of exchange, according to the custom of merchants.

Days of grace are abolished. Negotiable instruments payable on a holiday become due the next business day. Legal holidays are: every Sunday, January 1, February 12, February 22, May 30, July 4, first Monday in September, October 12, December 25, and every day on which an election is held in the State, and every day appointed by the president of the United States or governor of the State for a public fast, thanksgiving, or holiday.

The indorsers on a note when properly charged by protest are liable as long as the maker.

The following form of note is recommended: —

Portland, Oregon, 19 . . . days after date without grace promise to pay to the order of at , dollars in United States gold coin, for value received, with interest after in like coin, at the rate of per cent. per annum until paid. And in case suit is instituted to collect this note or any portion thereof, promise to pay such sum as the court may adjudge reasonable as attorneys' fees in said suit.
(Signature.)

Judgment notes are not allowed.

Practice. — The practice is under a code similar to that of New York, but the distinction between law and equity is not abolished.

Proof of Claims. — Accounts in legal proceedings can be proved only by depositions or by testimony taken in open court. See also Descent and Distribution of Property — Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Claims against insolvent corporations are proved by filing a statement under oath setting out the basis of the claim. Parties interested may file exceptions. Labor claims are preferred. (Laws 1915, ch. 19.)

Records. — There is no period set within which a deed may be recorded, and the effect is that a deed is notice to the world from the time it is recorded, and that, as between two instruments affecting title to the same property, as respects those acting in good faith and without notice, the deed first recorded has precedence over the deed subsequently recorded. (L. O. L. § 7126 et seq.)

Redemption. — All real property sold on execution, except when the estate therein is less than a leasehold for two years' unexpired term, is subject to redemption, and may be redeemed by the following persons, or their successors in interest: 1st. The judgment debtor or his successor in interest, in the whole or any part of the property separately sold. 2d. A creditor having a lien by judgment, decree, or mortgage on any portion of the property, or any portion of any part thereof, separately sold, subsequent in time to that on which the property was sold. (Laws 1917, ch. 352.)

A lien creditor may redeem the property within sixty days from the date of the order confirming the sale, by paying the amount of the purchase-money, with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum thereon from the time of sale, together with the amount of any taxes which the purchaser may have paid thereon, and if the purchaser be also a creditor having a lien prior to that of the redemptioner, the amount of such lien with interest. (L. O. L. § 246.)

If the property be so redeemed, any other lien creditor may, within sixty days from the last redemption, again redeem it on paying the sum paid on the last redemption, with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum thereon from the date of the last preceding redemption in addition, together with the amount of any taxes which the last redemptioner may have paid thereon, and, unless his lien be prior to that of such redemptioner, the amount of such lien with interest. The property may be again, and as often as any lien creditor or redemptioner is disposed, redeem from the last previous redemptioner, within sixty days from the date of the last redemption, on paying the sum paid on the last previous redemption, with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum thereon, from the date of such previous redemption, together with the amount of any taxes paid thereon by such last redemptioner, and the amount of any liens held by such last redemptioner prior to his own, with interest. (L. O. L. § 247.)

The judgment debtor or his successor in interest may redeem the property at any time prior to the confirmation of sale, on paying the amount of the purchase-money, with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum thereon from the date of the sale, together with the amount of any taxes which the purchaser may have paid thereon after the purchase. But if the judgment debtor do not redeem until after the confirmation of the sale, thereafter he shall redeem within one year from order of confirmation, and not otherwise. (Laws 1917, ch. 352.)

After expiration of period for redemption, purchaser or redemptioner is entitled to deed. If judgment debtor redeem, effect of sale shall be terminated, and he shall be restored to his estate. (Laws 1917, ch. 7.) See Tax Law.

Replevin. — In an action for the recovery of personal property, at any time after the action is commenced and before judgment, the plaintiff may claim the immediate delivery of the same by filing an affidavit showing that he is the owner of the same or is entitled to the possession thereof, that the property is wrongfully detained by defendant, the cause of the detention, that the same was not taken for a tax, assessment, or fine pursuant to a statute, or seized under execution or attachment against the property of plaintiff, or, if so seized, that it is by statute exempt from such seizure, and the probable value of such property. The plaintiff may, by indorsement in writing upon the affidavit, require the sheriff to deliver the property up to him. An undertaking with two or more sureties bounden in double the value of the property stated in the affidavit must be filed by the plaintiff, conditioned for the return of the property to the defendant, should possession thereof be adjudged against the plaintiff. Sureties must be householders or freeholders. (L. O. L. § 283 et seq.)

Reports. — There are 87 official volumes of decisions of the supreme court, known as Oregon Reports.

Revision. — Last official revision of statutes in 1910 by William P. Lord and R. W. Montague. Known as Lord's Oregon Laws. Latest Session Laws, 1917.

Sales in Bulk. — There is a law in force providing that sales in bulk shall be made only after the vendor has submitted a written statement under oath as to his creditors, and after notice sent by wire or registered letter to these creditors by the vendee. (Laws 1913, ch. 281.)

Service. — Service of summons requires ten days in the county, twenty days out of the county, and out of the State six weeks' publication. Where there is more than one defendant in a suit in equity, the complaint need only be served on one, to be named by plaintiff by indorsement on the summons. Copy of summons must be served on each defendant. The summons must be signed by a resident attorney and give his post-office address. (Laws 1917, ch. 326.)

Stay of Execution. — Stay of execution is allowed only on appeal, and then only when an undertaking with sureties is given to pay the judgment which may be awarded against the appellant on the appeal. Notwithstanding such undertaking, the party recovering judgment may in ordinary cases enforce it by giving a counter undertaking. (L. O. L. § 551 et seq.)

Supplementary Proceedings. — After issuance of execution against property and upon proof by affidavit of plaintiff, or otherwise, to the satisfaction of the court, that the judgment debtor has property liable to execution, which he refuses to apply towards the satisfaction of the judgment, the court may compel the debtor to appear and answer under oath concerning the same. Either party may examine witnesses in his own behalf. If from such examination it appear that he has property subject to execution, the court shall make an order requiring the same to be applied in satisfaction of the judgment, disobedience to which may be punished as a contempt. (L. O. L. § 253 et seq.)

Tax Law. — Taxes upon the property of non-residents cannot be higher than those upon the property of residents. (L. O. L. p. 29.)

Taxes are payable, one half before April 5 and one half before October 5 of each year. Interest at one per cent. a month or part of a month is charged on all deferred payments. Taxes unpaid on October 5 are delinquent, and on November 5, five per cent. penalty is added. As soon as possible after October 5, the tax collector shall enforce the personal property tax by levy and sale, and any deficit shall be charged against such real property of the delinquent as the tax collector may designate.

One month after the taxes charged against real property are delinquent, the sheriff shall sell delinquent certificates bearing interest at fifteen per cent., unless there be two or more bidders for the delinquent certificates, in which case the certificate is issued to the person bidding the lowest rate of interest. These certificates can be foreclosed after three years, and upon foreclosure a tax deed is issued to one bidding the property in. Redemption is permissible any time before the tax deed is issued. Both real and personal property are assessed as of the date of March 1 each year.

No poll tax shall be levied or collected. No bill regulating taxation or exemption throughout the State shall become a law until approved by the people of the State at a regular general election. (Const. art. ix. § 1 (a), amended by the Laws of 1913, p. 7.)

Vessels of fifty tons or more capacity engaged in either passenger or freight coasting or foreign trade whose home ports of registration are in Oregon, are exempted from all taxes, except taxes for state purposes, until 1935. (Const. art. ix. § 1 (b).)

See also Inheritance Taxes and Corporations.

Testimony. — All persons are competent as witnesses, excepting persons of unsound mind at the time of their production for examination, and children under ten years of age who appear incapable of receiving just impression of the facts respecting which they are examined, or of relating them truly. When a party to a suit by or against an executor or administrator appears as a witness in his own behalf, statements of the deceased in his own favor relating to the subject may be received.

Neither husband nor wife can testify for or against each other without consent. But this does not apply to civil suit or proceeding by one against the other, nor to criminal action or proceeding for a crime committed by one against the other.

No attorney, priest or clergyman, regular physician or surgeon, shall be examined as to any privileged communication without consent of party making same. No public officer shall be examined as to communications made to him in official confidence, when public interest would suffer by disclosure.

If a party to the action, suit, or proceeding offer himself as a witness, that is to be deemed a consent to the examination also of a wife, husband, attorney, clergyman, physician, on the same subject. (L. O. L. § 730 et seq.)

Trust Deeds. — We have no law in this State relating to trust deeds, but § 422 L. O. L., requires that every lien on real estate be foreclosed by suit, whether created by mortgage or otherwise, except a judgment lien. (Thompson v. Marshall, 27 Pac. Rep. 957.)

The supreme court (Ladd v. Johnson, 49 Pac. Rep. 756) has held that an unconditional conveyance to a trustee, for the purpose of raising a fund to pay the debts of the grantor, vests the title to the property so conveyed in the grantee, for the purposes of the trust; distinguishing the case of Thompson v. Marshall, 27 Pac. Rep. 957.

Warehouse Receipts. — The Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act has been enacted in this State. (1913 Laws of Oregon, 581.)

Wills. — Every person of twenty-one years of age and upwards, of sound mind, may, by last will, devise all his estate, real and personal, saving to the widow her dower. Every person over the age of eighteen years, of sound mind, may, by last will, dispose of his goods and chattels. A married woman may, by will, dispose of any real estate held in her own right subject to any rights which her husband may have as tenant by the curtesy. After-acquired real estate will pass. Rule in Shelley's case abolished as to devises. (Fields v. Squire, 1 Dedy 383.)

Every will shall be in writing signed by the testator, or by some other person under his direction, in his presence, and shall be attested by two more competent witnesses, subscribing their names to the will in the presence of the testator.

Typewritten wills are usual in this State, though the supreme court has never passed upon their validity.

Every person who shall sign the testator's name to any will, by his direction, shall subscribe his own name as a witness to such will, and state that he subscribed the testator's name at his request.

If any person make his last will and die, leaving a child or children, or descendants of such child or children, in case of their death, not named or provided for in such will, although born after the making of such will or the death of the testator, every such testator, so far as shall regard such child or children, or their descendants, not provided for, shall be deemed to die intestate; and such child or children, or their descendants, shall be entitled to such proportion of the estate of the testator, real and personal, as if he had died intestate; and the same shall be assigned to them; and all the other heirs, devisees, and legatees shall refund their proportional part.

Any person not an inhabitant, but owning property, real or personal, in this State, may devise or bequeath such property by last will, executed and proved (if real estate be devised) according to the laws of this State, or (if personal estate be bequeathed) according to the laws of this State or of the country, State, or Territory in which the will shall be proved. Copies of such will, and the probate thereof, shall be recorded in the same manner as wills executed and proven in this State, and shall be admitted in evidence in the same manner and with like effect.

No provisions exist under the constitution or statutes of the State imposing any limitation or restrictions upon bequests for charitable purposes.

Should a testator fail in his or her will to name or provide for any child, though born after the making of such will, he or she as to such child shall be deemed to have died intestate.

A will made by an unmarried person is deemed revoked by his or her subsequent marriage. (L. O. L. § 7316 et seq.)

PENNSYLVANIA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

J. Levering Jones, Esq., Dimmer Beeber, Esq., Henry C. Boyer, Esq., E. Waring Wilson, Esq., Harry J. Alker, Jr., Esq., and Harry T. Bauerle, Esq., of Philadelphia.

The next legislature convenes first Tuesday of January, 1919.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — By the Act of Assembly of May 25, 1887, the distinctions, so far as relates to procedure, existing between actions ex contractu are abolished, and all demands heretofore recoverable in an action of debt, assumpsit, or covenant are to be sued for and recovered in one form of action called an "action of assumpsit." In special cases (see Arrests) actions arising on contracts are commenced by a different writ. By the same act the distinction existing between actions ex delicto, so far as relates to procedure, are abolished, and all damages heretofore recoverable in trespass, trover, or trespass on the case, are to be recovered in one form of action called an "action of trespass."

In the common pleas courts in Philadelphia all writs for the commencement of actions (unless otherwise provided by act of assembly) may, at the election of the persons suing out the same, be made returnable on the first Monday of the next term or the first, second, third, or fourth Monday of any intermediate month; provided that writs of scire facias to revive judgments, and all other writs of scire facias and summons sur ground-rent deeds shall be made returnable on the first and third Mondays of any month.

Writs of executions are returnable on the first Monday of each month and the third Monday of September, but no execution to sell real estate will be made returnable on the first Monday of September. (This to avoid two sheriff's sales in that month.)

By the act of April 10, 1913, courts of common pleas are authorized and empowered to fix, by rule or standing order, the return day of all writs of execution and final process thereafter issuing out of said courts.

A writ of summons in actions ex contractu must issue, and may be served on or before the return day.

There is no provision for service of process in personal actions by publication. The act of July 9, 1901, provides the manner of service for the various forms of process. Suits against non-residents owning property here or any corporation incorporated under the laws of any other State or nation may be prosecuted by a foreign attachment, in all actions ex contractu and in actions ex delicto for a tort committed within this Commonwealth.

A summons from a justice of the peace is returnable on a day named therein, which must be not more than eight nor less than five days after the date of the writ; the summons must be served at least four days before the hearing, at which time the justice may render judgment, or otherwise determine the case.

In actions of assumpsit and trespass the plaintiff is required to file of record a declaration which shall consist of a concise statement of his claim. In assumpsit, with copies of all notes, contracts, and book entries. The statement must be signed by the plaintiff's attorney, or, if none, then by plaintiff, and must be supported by affidavit. It should be brief and not be argumentative. In actions of assumpsit the defendant must reply to such statement by an affidavit of defense, and judgment may be taken for want of an affidavit of defense or for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense for the whole or any part of the plaintiff's claim. In actions of trespass the averments, in the statement, of the person by whom the act was committed, the agency or employment of such person, ownership or possession of vehicle, etc., and all similar averments, if not denied, are taken to be admitted. The plaintiff must serve a copy of his statement on the defendant, and in actions of assumpsit and trespass he must give notice to the defendant to file an affidavit of defense thereto within fifteen days. The statement may be filed before or after the return day of the writ, and, in assumpsit, judgment may be taken fifteen days after the service of the statement and notice, where the defendant fails to file an affidavit of defense within that time; such judgment, however, not to be taken on or before the return day. Judgment may be taken for part of a claim admitted to be due and execution issue thereon. The part of the claim contested proceeds in the ordinary way. The practice in the courts of common pleas is now regulated by the act of May 14, 1915. See Proof of Claims.

For the practice in the Philadelphia municipal court, see act of July 12, 1913.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Estates of Deceased Persons.

Adoption of Children. — Courts of common pleas may decree adoption of children under the age of twenty-one by persons living in another State upon petition of either parent of such child, or, if none, the next friend of such child, or of the guardians or overseers of the poor, or of such charitable institution as shall have supported such child for at least one year. By the acts of May 19, 1887, April 22, 1905, P. L. 297, and June 1, 1911, minors and adult persons by order of the court may be adopted as heirs and assume and bear the names of the adopting parents. See Descent.

Affidavits. — Affidavits to be used in this State may be made before any officer authorized by the laws of any of the United States to administer oaths. When made out of the State, except before a commissioner for this State, they must be accompanied by a certificate, under the hand and seal of the clerk or prothonotary of the county court where the same is made, as to the official character of the person administering the oath, and that he was authorized to do so by the laws of his own State. (Act of August 10, 1864.) Commissioners for Pennsylvania residing in other States have also power to administer oaths and affirmations without such certificates.

Aliens. — Alien friends may buy lands not exceeding in quantity five thousand acres, nor in net annual income twenty thousand dollars, and hold the same as citizens may. Aliens may take and hold, without limit, real estate acquired by devise or descent. Conveyance by aliens, before inquisition found, of real estate liable to escheat, are indefeasible in the grantee as to any right of escheat in the Commonwealth. See, also, Tax Law.

Appeals. — The act of May 19, 1897, repeals prior legislation and provides for all appeals as follows: The appeal is entered in the court to which it is taken, and must be accompanied by an affidavit of the appellant, or some one of them, or one of their chief officers or their agent or attorney, that it is not taken for delay, but because appellants believe that they suffered injustice by the sentence, judgment, etc., from which they appeal. When entered, the prothonotary of the appellate court issues a writ in the nature of certiorari directing the record to be sent up on or before the Saturday prior to the first day of the week fixed by appellate court for the argument of the appeal. The appellate court may direct an earlier certification of the record. An appeal to the supreme or superior court except from the superior to the supreme must be taken within six calendar months from the judgment, etc., and it is not a supersedeas unless perfected and bail entered within three weeks. An appeal from the superior to the supreme court must be perfected within three calendar months. Bail must be entered in the court from which the appeal is taken, subject to the revision of the court. The prothonotary fixes the amount and approves the security. Cost of printing paper books on appeal taxed as costs. (Act of April 15, 1907, amended by act of April 27, 1909.) By act of June 13, 1911, whenever any appeal from any final decree of a court of common pleas, or orphans' court, upon any question of distribution shall be cognizable by and taken to the supreme court, all other appeals from the same decree and involving the same question shall also be taken to that court. An appeal from an order, etc., directing the payment of money is a supersedeas if the appellant gives bond, with sufficient surety or sureties, in double the amount of the judgment and costs accrued and likely to accrue. In lieu of the bond appellant may deposit money in amount to be fixed by the court. In either case, upon appeal being perfected the lien of the judgment shall be discharged from appellant's real estate pending the appeal. (Act of April 22, 1909, P. L. 103.) Where the decree directs the assignment or delivery of personal property, an appeal is a supersedeas if the appellant brings the article into the court below, and gives bond, with sufficient sureties, in double the amount of costs, or gives bond in at least double the value of the article. Where the decree directs the execution of a conveyance or other instrument, the appeal is a supersedeas if the appellant executes the instrument and deposits it in the court below, and gives bond as above. See act of May 28, 1907, P. L. 283. An appeal from an injunction decree is a supersedeas if the appellant gives bond, as above, in such sum as the court below shall direct, that the appellant will pay costs and damages suffered by the appellee, and the court may make such order as may be necessary to preserve the status quo pending the appeal. In ejectment the appeal is a supersedeas if the appellant gives bond conditioned against waste, and that he will pay mesne profits, costs, and damages. When the order is one dismissing or removing any person acting in any fiduciary capacity, the appeal is a supersedeas if the appellant deposits in the court below all the assets of the estate and gives bond for cost, and also in double the amount of the total undisputed assets. In mandamus, quo warranto, election cases, and criminal proceedings, and all other cases not above referred to, an appeal does not operate as a supersedeas unless the court below, or the appellate court, or any judge thereof, by general rule or special order, so directs. Appeals without security are not a supersedeas, except in some matters of public concern. No additional bail is required on an appeal from the superior to the supreme court unless the supreme court so orders. If the appellate court is of the opinion that the appeal was sued out for delay, it shall award an additional attorney fee of twenty-five dollars, and damages at the rate of six per cent. per annum in addition to legal interest. Appeals include writs of error.

By the act of June 5, 1913, where the judgment, order, sentence, or decree of lower court is reversed by supreme or superior court, with or without venire or order as to costs, costs shall be paid by losing party.

Arrest. — Imprisonment for debt is abolished in all actions on contract, express or implied, except in proceedings, as for contempt, to enforce civil remedies; actions for fines or penalties; or on promises to marry (see 25 Montg. 26); or for moneys collected by any public officers (see 33 Super. 290); or for any misconduct or neglect in office, or in any professional employment. An attorney at law neglecting to pay over money collected for a client is within the exception.

A plaintiff, after suit brought, may obtain a warrant for the arrest of the defendant, upon satisfactory proof that he is about to remove his property to defraud his creditors, or that he has done so, or that he has property or rights which he fraudulently conceals or refuses to apply to the payment of his debts, or that he fraudulently contracted the debt. Such warrant can only issue in the county where the cause of action arises, or where the judgment shall have been entered.

Defendants may be arrested and held to bail in actions of tort. The action in such cases is commenced by a writ of capias, and the execution may also be by writ of capias ad satisfaciendum. Residence in this State for six months or confinement in prison for three months is not necessary in order that a person, arrested on civil process, may make an assignment for the benefit of creditors and petition for his discharge. Any person arrested on civil process may present his petition to the court issuing the same, or any law judge thereof, setting forth the nature of the proceedings out of which the process, upon which the petitioner is held, issued, the amount of the judgment therein; schedule of all assets; list of all creditors, with addresses, amounts, and nature of debts; a statement of why petitioner is unable to pay the judgment, and shall be verified by oath. The court to which the petition is presented shall grant a rule, returnable at some convenient time, and shall discharge the petitioner pending the hearing of said rule, upon his entering such security for his appearance, surrender, and compliance with the decree of the court as the court shall deem requisite. Actual notice of the hearing of the rule shall be given to the plaintiff in the process, or his counsel of record, and to all creditors whose addresses are known to the petitioner; publication thereof shall be made twice in a daily newspaper in the county, and once in the legal periodical, if any, designated by the court, and an affidavit of such service and publication shall be filed in the case at or before the time fixed for the hearing. Notice to creditors non-resident in the county may be made by registered letter. Upon the hearing of the rule, the petitioner shall answer all questions put to him and shall produce all papers and books required of him; if it shall appear to the court that the petitioner is without means or property with which to pay the judgment, and that he has not secreted or assigned any of his property so as to avoid the payment of the judgment, the court may forthwith discharge him from arrest. The discharge does not release the debtor from liability for his debts. They exist independently of the laws relating to assignments in trust for creditors. Fraudulent insolvency is punished by indictment in the criminal courts. Obtaining money or goods under false pretenses, or fraudulently secreting or removing property to defraud creditors, is also punishable by indictment. The bailee of any property who fraudulently takes or converts the same to his own use, or the use of any other person, except the owner, is deemed guilty of larceny.

Assignments. — The act of June 4, 1901, as amended June 9, 1911 (which is suspended in certain cases, see infra), requires that all assignments be recorded forthwith where the debtor resides or has his principal place of business, and in every county where he owns real estate; however, a failure to record an assignment will not affect its validity, but may reduce the compensation of the assignee. The insolvent must be a resident of the county where the application is made at the time the petition for a receiver is presented. Otherwise the court has no jurisdiction. (Dolhenty's Case, 26 C. C. 34.)

A partial assignment in trust, for the benefit of creditors, or any of them, by an insolvent, shall be deemed an assignment of the whole estate; but a debtor may assign any part of his estate for the benefit of certain of his creditors, if, at the time of so doing, he be solvent. Preferences in assignments inure to the benefit of all the creditors. A judgment recovered adversely is not within the class of preferences mentioned within the act of June 4, 1901. (McCurdy v. Ganty, 26 C. C. 417.)

In the deed of assignment the debtor may name one or more, not exceeding three, persons as assignees. Immediately upon his appointment, the assignee must give notice to all creditors known to him of the date and place of the first meeting, which must not be more than twenty days distant, and at which meeting the creditors may select as many more assignees as there were assignees named in the original deed of assignment. Immediately after said meeting the assignee must give notice to all creditors known to him to file their claims within six months, or be debarred from coming in on the fund. Within twenty days after said meeting the assignee must file a sworn inventory of the estate with its then present value. Before entering upon the performance of his duties the assignee must give bond, with sufficient sureties, in at least double the value of the insolvent's estate as known to him. The assignee may be discharged for dereliction of duty, incompetency, or other reason affecting the estate.

The claimant must furnish to the assignee his statement of claim together with copies of book entries, notes, etc., verified by an affidavit in the following form: —

I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the above is a true statement of my claim against the insolvent estate of _____ that there are no credits or allowances there against, except as therein set forth; that I have not directly or indirectly made or entered into any bargain, arrangement, or agreement, express or implied, to take or receive, directly or indirectly, any money, property, or consideration whatever, to or for myself, or to or for any other person, firm, or corporation whatsoever, other than my dividend as a creditor of said estate, and that there is no collateral security for said indebtedness, or any part thereof, held by me or any one else other than as above set forth. So help me God (or so do I affirm).

All claims must be made as of the date of distribution of the fund, interest being allowed or discount being made to that date. All the assets of the insolvent must be delivered to the assignee. Any lien or claim for wages, for rent, of mechanics or material-men, or otherwise, which by virtue of any act of assembly would be preferred in case of an execution, shall retain its preference in case of an assignment and to the same extent. Upon application of the assignee the court shall vacate and set aside all attachments, such executions as give preferences forbidden by this act (Lobach v. Riegal, 26 County Court Rep. 145), sequestrations, or other legal proceedings not wholly complete; and all money in court or in the hands of the sheriff, by virtue thereof, shall be paid to such assignee. Executions issued on liens upon the assigned real estate may be stayed by the court, to enable the property to be sold by the assignee. Where execution is issued and a levy made, prior to an assignment, under the act of June 4, 1901, further proceedings will be stayed, without prejudice to whatever preference the execution creditor may be entitled to on distribution. (Zacharias v. The Imperial, etc., Co., 11 Dist. 171.)

Realty subject to liens or claims which, under existing laws, would be discharged by a judicial sale, may, upon leave of the court and after notice to claimants, be sold by the assignee at public sale free and clear of such liens. Any collateral security held by a creditor shall be valued by the court, and his dividend shall be on the difference between his claim and the value of his security as appraised. If the creditor surrender his security he may take a dividend on his whole claim.

Moneys due the insolvent estate must be collected and the property of the insolvent must be sold by the assignee within one year after the latter's appointment. As soon after the expiration of said year as the assets shall have been collected, or whensoever thereafter required by the court, the assignee must file his sworn account, and if there are no claims remaining unadjusted, give notice to the insolvent and all creditors known to him of the filing thereof, and that the account will be allowed and distribution made on a certain date unless objections thereto be filed before that time. The time fixed in said notice must be between three and five weeks distant from the date thereof. If at the time of filing the account any claims remain unadjusted the court may hear and decide the disputed matters, or appoint an auditor for that purpose. Three weeks' notice of the hearing before the court or auditor must be given by the assignee. Upon confirmation of his account, the assignee must prepare a schedule of distribution, and upon its approval must distribute the assets in accordance therewith. Provision is made in the act of June 4, 1901, for the release of an insolvent debtor from liability to creditors who accept dividends under the assignment. The insolvent is not discharged from liability to such of his creditors as do not exhibit their claims, or who, before the schedule of distribution is filed, withdraw their claims. The act of June 4, 1901, relating to insolvency does not impair the obligation of contracts in allowing the debtor his exemption, or permitting the assignee to set aside execution. (Hull's Estate, 25 C. C. 353.) The act is not retroactive, and does not apply to a judgment entered prior to its passage. (Smith v. Speakman, 10 Dist. 699.)

Assignments by non-residents are not good against attaching creditors without notice, until recorded where the property is. The debtor may reserve the three hundred dollars' worth of property exempted by law from levy and sale upon execution. By act of May 12, 1891, clerks, servants, and laborers of various sorts have a lien on the proceeds of a sale of property, in case of insolvency, for wages up to two hundred dollars, for services rendered within six months preceding the assignment. If against real estate, lien must be filed in the prothonotary's office of the county wherein the property is situate within three months. A wife's dower in real estate is not barred unless she joins in the assignment. An assignment for the benefit of creditors made by resident in another State and executed in conformity with the laws of that State, will pass title of the property to the assignor in this State. But until recorded in this State no bona-fide purchaser, mortgagee, or creditor having a lien thereon before recorded in the same county, and not having had actual previous notice thereof, is thereby affected. Where at the time of the assignment both the creditor and assignee are residents of the foreign state where it is made, the creditor may not come into this State and seize the property of the assignor in a suit on a foreign attachment. (Bacon v. Horne, 123 Penn. 452.)

As respects the persons and subjects to which the National Bankruptcy Act of July 1, 1898, applies, the act of June 4, 1901, is suspended. (Potts v. Smith Mfg. Co., 25 Pa. Sup. Ct. 206; Boggs Estate, 11 Dist. 188; Nefy & Sons Estate, 14 Dist. 343.)

As to wage-earners and farmers, the act of June 4, 1901, is in force. See Germanton's Asso. Est., 20 Dist. 342, as to farmer.

No assignment of or order for wages to be earned in the future to secure a loan is to be valid against the employer until his written acceptance of the assignment has been obtained and filed. If the assignor be a married man, the written consent of his wife to the assignment must be obtained before acceptance by employer. (Act of June 4, 1913.)

Attachments. — The real and personal property of a non-resident of the State may be held by a foreign attachment. A writ of foreign attachment may be issued against the real or personal estate of any person not residing within this Commonwealth, and not being within the county in which such writ shall issue, at the time of the issuing thereof, or of any corporation incorporated under the laws of any other State or nation in all actions ex contractu and in actions ex delicto for a tort committed within this Commonwealth. (Act of June 13, 1836, as amended by act of March 30, 1905, as amended by act of June 21, 1911.) A writ of foreign attachment will be quashed when the defendant is shown to have been a resident of the county in which the writ issued on the date of its issue and subsequent thereto. (Vandyke v. Macaulay, 4 Dauph. County, 194.) No affidavit is necessary in the commencement of the action, except where the cause of action arises ex delicto. The plaintiff may be compelled to file an affidavit of claim upon the application of the garnishee, and now a writ of foreign attachment abates if a statement be not filed within one year after the writ issues. The sheriff before serving the writ requires security, with one or more sureties, sufficient to indemnify him against risk. In Philadelphia and Allegheny counties the security is approved by the court. (Act of April 10, 1873.) By the act of May 8, 1874, the property of non-residents may be attached for debts less than one hundred dollars on process issued by a justice of the peace. The plaintiff is required to give bond before the attachment can issue, and the defendant may free his property from the attachment by entering security. In either case the security must be for double the amount of the plaintiff's claim. Wages are attachable only when the debt is for boarding or lodging or boarding and lodging not exceeding in amount the sum due for four weeks (act of May 8, 1876, amended by acts of April 10, 1905, and May 1, 1913, P. L. 134; Morris Box Board Co. v. Rossiter, 30 Super. 23. There is some question as to the constitutionality of the act of 1905. See 20 Dist. 327 and 328), nor an unsettled partnership interest, nor can attachment be issued against the share of a deceased distributee after his death, nor will it lie for debts not due, nor can municipal officers be attached. A foreign attachment may be issued at the suit of a non-resident plaintiff. A foreign attachment may issue against any foreign corporation. A non-resident cannot obtain preference over a receiver who has been previously appointed of the property of a citizen of a third State. Service of the writ on an assignee for creditors does not bind the fund. If a bill in equity contains a prayer for the payment of money, a foreign attachment may be issued; also on actions of contract or tort for injuries by owners of vessels to persons or property on land.

The property of any person, resident or not, may be attached under the act of 1869, amended by the act of May 24, 1887, and act of March 28, 1905, upon proof by the affidavit of the plaintiff, or any person for him, that the defendant is justly indebted to him in a sum exceeding one hundred dollars, setting forth the nature and amount of such indebtedness, and that the defendant is about to remove his property out of the jurisdiction of the court with intent to defraud his creditors; or that the defendant has property, rights in action, interest in any public or corporate stock, money, or evidences of debt which he fraudulently conceals; or that the defendant has assigned, disposed of, or removed, or is about to assign, dispose of, or remove, any such property, rights, stock, etc., with intent to defraud his creditors; or that he fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the obligation for which such claim is made. The affidavit may be in the terms of the act; but in such case, on motion to dissolve, the plaintiff must prove specific acts of fraud. (Lit v. Williams, 15 Dist. R. 24.) Before the attachment issues the plaintiff must file a bond, with sufficient surety to be approved by one of the judges of the court, in double the amount claimed, conditioned for the payment of all costs and damages which the defendant may sustain by reason of the attachment, if the plaintiff fail to recover judgment against him. This bond must be to the Commonwealth for the use of any parties injured. The sheriff serves the writ of attachment along with an inventory of the property or other things attached returnable on any of the optional return days. The attachment becomes a lien at the time of service. The defendant may have the property so attached by giving bond in double the amount claimed, with sufficient surety to be approved by the court from which the attachment issues, conditioned for the payment of the debt and costs, or for the return of the property in as good condition as when attached, if judgment be obtained against him. The affidavit and bond must be filed before the return day. If the bond is defective, it is fatal to the writ. He may also apply at any time to the court to hear the evidence and determine the truth of the allegations in the affidavit on which the attachment issued, and the court may thereupon dissolve or continue the attachment. The proceeding differs little from one on an ordinary summons, except that there is a clause of attachment engrafted thereon by means of which the creditor may secure a lien on the property of the fraudulent debtor before he can dispose of it, and before judgment can be obtained against him. The effect of a dissolution of the attachment by the court does not operate as a discontinuance of the action; it may proceed as if commenced by summons. Giving bail to dissolve has the same effect as entering appearance by defendant, and he cannot afterwards complain of any irregularities in the proceedings, but action proceeds as if commenced by summons duly served. (Bellah v. Poole, 8 Del. 292.) Return days are the same as in ordinary actions. The writ must be returnable the next ensuing return day.

The attachment will not lie for a debt not presently due and payable. In some cases it has been held that a creditor who has been induced by fraudulent means to trust his debtor can treat a debt for the goods as immediately due. Insolvency and the mere knowledge of it is not such a fraud as to set aside a sale and enable a seller to rescind. It requires artifice, trick, or false pretense as the means of obtaining possession, to avoid the purchase. Insolvency alone is not a sufficient ground for the attachment.

A confessed judgment and an execution thereon is not a fraudulent disposition of property within the act. But a sheriff's sale on a fraudulent judgment intended as a means of passing title is within the act. If confessed judgments are greatly in excess of the amount due, or without sufficient consideration, they may be held to be fraudulent under the act.

An extraordinary purchase of goods by a trader knowing himself to be insolvent is evidence of fraud under the act. False representations as to financial ability, etc., are sufficient.

The attachment may issue for unliquidated damages on a breach of contract, but it cannot issue for unliquidated damages on a tort.

Real estate cannot be attached; the interest of a pledgor may be. A claim which has been assigned to the creditor may be attached.

If the defendant takes no steps to dissolve the attachment, he cannot for the first time, upon the trial, be permitted to prove that the debt was honestly incurred. (Herman v. Salter, 25 W. N. C. 408.)

An order dissolving an attachment under this act is not reviewable by the supreme court in the absence of anything to show an abuse of the discretion of the court below. (Hoppes v. Houtz, 133 Pa. St. 34.) As between an attachment under this act and a foreign attachment, received by the sheriff and served the same day as the former, but at a later hour, the former has preference.

Domestic attachment, seldom used, provides for cases of debtors absconding or concealing themselves; it divides the property equally among all creditors. It is held not to be affected by the Bankrupt Act.

An attachment in the nature of an execution may issue after judgment has been recovered to attach any money or personal property of the defendant in the hands of third persons, any stock in corporations or other chose in action owned by him, or any debts due to him. Interrogatories are filed which the garnishee must answer, and, if there is a dispute of fact, an issue framed between the plaintiff and the garnishee may be tried by a jury.

Conditional Sales. — The act of June 7, 1915, provides the form of agreements for conditional sales and recording of same. The act, however, does not apply to any contract concerning railroad equipment and rolling-stock, or to any persons, firms, or corporations engaged in the business of selling house-furnishings. The agreement must contain (1) date; (2) names of parties; (3) description of chattels; (4) statement of conditions; (5) purchase price and when payable or due; (6) description sufficient for identification and location of such real property or chattels real. The contract must be signed, and sworn to by the vendor, his agent or attorney, that it is an existing bona-fide contract, and showing the amount of the purchase price remaining unpaid and when payable or due, as well as all other of the said conditions which remain unperformed. Such agreements must be recorded as provided by act in the miscellaneous docket and indexed in the judgment index in the prothonotary's office of the county wherein such real property or chattels real is situate. Every such contract recorded pursuant to said act after the date thereof shall be valid against the creditors of the conditional vendee, and against his subsequent purchasers, mortgagees, or judgment creditors, from the time of the recording thereof until the same be canceled of record. The act provides method of repossession.

Railroad equipment and rolling-stock are covered by the act of July 5, 1883.

Consignments. — See Embezzlement.

Corporations. — By the Constitution (art. III, § 7) the legislature is prohibited from passing any local or special law "creating corporations, or amending, renewing, or extending the charters thereof; or granting to any corporation, association, or individual any special or exclusive immunity, or to any corporation, association, or individual the right to lay down a railroad track." And private corporations are regulated and their powers limited and defined by art. XVI.

By act of April 29, 1874, amended by act of April 17, 1876, and numerous later amendments, provision was made for the incorporation and regulation of certain classes of corporations. They are divided into two classes. 1. Corporations not for profit. Including those for the support of public worship (see act of May 5, 1911) or of benevolent, charitable, educational, missionary, literary, medical, or scientific undertakings; library associations; the promotion of music; painting, the fine arts, agriculture, and horticulture; the maintenance of public or private parks; and facilities for skating, boating, troutling, and other innocent and athletic sports; the preservation of game and fish; clubs for social enjoyment; cemeteries; erection of halls; beneficial or protective societies; fire-engines, hose, and hook-and-ladder companies; and societies for promoting trade and commerce; improvement of streets and public places; military organizations; and for receiving and holding property for unincorporated, religious, etc., societies. 2. Corporations for profit. Those for insurance of lives of domestic animals and of human beings against death, sickness, and personal injury; prevention and punishment of, and insurance against, theft and willful injury to property; construction of highways, bridges, telegraph lines, and ferries; building ships and boats, and carriage of persons and property thereon; supplying water, ice, gas, light, or heat; printing and publishing; establishing and keeping hotels, boarding-houses, opera-houses, droveyards, livery stables, or markets; dealing in patent rights; building and loan associations; real estate associations; trust and safe-deposit companies; manufactures of iron, steel or any metal, or article of metal or wood, or both; grain elevator, storage, and warehouse companies, and generally manufacturing companies (extended to almost every branch of manufacture); mining companies; making malt liquors; companies for the insurance of titles to real estate, the construction or maintenance of wharves, observatories, stage and omnibus lines, and inclined planes, private telegraph lines, driving logs, and municipal sewerage; supplying refrigerating material through pipes; buying, selling, and trading in any kind of goods wholesale; and constructing and maintaining boulevards, and constructing tunnels. Where an application for a corporation of the first class states purposes which are not embraced in the act of 1874 in addition to the "beneficial and protective purposes" allowed by the act, the charter will not be granted. (Gratitude Counsel, 24 C. C. 449.)

By the act of July 9, 1901, corporations may be formed for the transaction of any lawful business not otherwise provided for by the act of April 20, 1874. No corporation, however, may engage in more than one kind of business.

Corporations for profit may be formed by three or more persons, the charter to be subscribed to by two or more persons, one of whom must be a citizen of Pennsylvania, setting forth the corporate name, purpose, place of business, term of duration (which may be perpetual), names and residences of incorporators, and number of shares subscribed by each, the number of directors, with the names and residences of those chosen, and the amount of capital stock, and number or par value of shares thereof. In organizing corporations for profit, ten per cent. of the authorized capital must be paid in cash. This need not be a percentage on each subscription. Ninety per cent. may be paid in property. Notice of intention to form a company must be advertised for three weeks. The charters must be approved (of first class) by a law judge of the county, or (second class) by the governor, and must be acknowledged, sworn to (see act of June 1, 1911) and recorded as required by the act. The capital stock of any corporation created by general or special law may be reduced or increased with the consent of the persons or bodies corporate holding the larger amount in value of its stock. (Acts June 8, 1893; May 3, 1899; Feb. 9, 1901, amended by acts April 22, 1905, P. L. 264 and 280.) A bonus upon the capital stock, or the increase thereof (except building and loan associations, and corporations not for profit), of one third of one per cent. must be paid before the corporation can receive its letters patent or carry on business, and in case of increase of capital stock before the increase papers are filed. Charters of corporations may be forfeited for failure to pay bonus on the capital stock or increase thereof. Such corporations have the usual corporate powers. No corporation shall engage in any business other than that expressly authorized in its charter, nor shall it take or hold any real estate except such as may be necessary and proper for its legitimate business. (Constitution, art. XVI, § 6.) The limit to which they can hold real and personal estate depends upon the purpose of the corporations. Several corporations may be merged and consolidated, forming one corporation. (Amendment act March 31, 1907, P. L. 95; also act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 408.) Stockholders are not individually liable if their stock is full paid, except for work or labor done to carry on the operations of the company, and then only to the amount of stock held by them. There must be not less than three directors, and one third must reside in Pennsylvania. The number can be changed by corporate action. The costs of a charter are about fifty dollars, exclusive of the bonus. Act of April 22, 1903, provides that the corporate title of any corporation may be changed by a two thirds vote of its directors approved by a two thirds vote of the stockholders. Act of March 16, 1905, P. L. 42, provides that executors, administrators, guardians, and trustees shall have the same right and power, either in person or by proxy, at all corporate meetings to vote any and all shares of stock held by them in such fiduciary capacity as the deceased, or legal owner thereof, had in his lifetime. The act of May 31, 1907, makes it a misdemeanor for a railroad to engage in any business other than that of common carrier or to hold land other than is necessary for such business.

By the act of May 15, 1913, Pennsylvania corporations not for profit are empowered to acquire, hold, use, and enjoy real estate of clear yearly rental value or income of fifty thousand dollars.

Any manufacturing corporation organized under the laws of this Commonwealth may, as incidental to its manufacturing business, when, in the judgment of its board of directors, it may be necessary for the successful transaction of such manufacturing business, own and operate barges, tugs, steamboats, or other vessels, carts, wagons, drays, and trucks for the transportation of raw materials and products manufactured therefrom, and any manufacturing corporation now or hereafter organized under the laws of this State may, as incidental to its manufacturing business, when, in the judgment of its board of directors, it may be necessary for the successful transaction of such manufacturing business, engage in the production of raw materials needed in such manufacture.

By the act of May 15, 1913, Pennsylvania corporations not for profit are empowered to acquire, hold, use, and enjoy real estate of clear yearly rental value or income of fifty thousand dollars.

Act of June 1, 1907, gives street railway companies the right of eminent domain.

Companies for building ship canals from navigable rivers in the State to the Great Lakes may be organized by twelve or more persons, five of whom must be citizens of the State. The application for the charter need not be advertised.

Corporations organized for profit, created by general or special law, may buy, sell, mortgage, or otherwise dispose of the shares of stock or bonds of other corporations of this or any other State, and, while the owner of said stock, may exercise all the rights of ownership, including the right to vote thereon.

The act of March 27, 1913, enables citizens of the United States, and corporations authorized to hold real estate within Pennsylvania to hold and convey title to real estate formerly held by or for corporations not authorized by law to hold same.

Under the act of 1855, a foreign corporation cannot hold land, directly or indirectly. It is subject to forfeiture by the State. The act of June 24, 1895, and later acts, provide that aliens or corporations not authorized to hold land may, before inquisition found, convey the same by title indefeasible as to the right of escheat. See, also, act of June 15, 1911. By the act of April 14, 1915, citizens of the United States or corporations authorized to hold real estate in Pennsylvania, grantees of corporations not having such right, shall hold indefeasible titles. Act of June 23, 1911, provides where foreign corporation doing business in this State, and having place of business and authorized agent herein, but not having right to hold real estate herein, had acquired theretofore, and then held title to real estate herein, such corporation was authorized to convey such real estate to person capable of holding title who would have indefeasible title. A foreign corporation, however, may take a mortgage upon real estate as security for a debt, and may purchase in its corporate name at any sheriff or other judicial sale any real estate upon which it may have or hold any mortgage, judgment, or lien, and may hold, lease, or sell and convey the same at pleasure, provided, however, any real estate so purchased shall be sold and conveyed within ten years from the date of such purchase. (Act of May 22, 1878; Leasure v. Ins. Co., 91 Pa. St. 491.) By several acts extending the act of 1878 it is provided that property bought in as aforesaid prior to the act of 1878 may be held for a further period of five years. Foreign insurance companies, however, may hold the premises in which they carry on business. (Act of June 1, 1881.) By act of April 19, 1901, foreign corporations for the manufacture of iron, steel, or glass; quarrying slate, granite, cement rock, stone, or rocks; bottling and selling natural mineral spring water; or for the manufacture, supply, and sale of ice, chemicals, foodstuffs, eatables, cement and cement products, quarrying of cement rocks, electrical apparatus and machinery, petroleum, and petroleum products, or for the manufacture of any form of leather, or any article or things which may be manufactured from leather, or articles or things in which leather is a component part (June 7, 1917); or for the purpose of packing, manipulating or manufacturing tobacco, or manufacturing cigars, cigarettes, or other tobacco products, or for the purpose of briquetting coal or other minerals, or for the purpose of manufacturing rubber (May 24, 1917), paper, wood-pulp, chemical fibre (by amendment of April 20, 1911), manufacturing and selling garden and horticultural implements, and dealing in seeds, plants, bulbs, and flowers, may hold real estate to an amount necessary for corporate purposes. The act of July 16, 1917, extends this right to foreign corporations formed for the manufacturing, selling, importing, exporting, and otherwise dealing in silverware, plated ware, and flatware of every kind and description, and the act of July 6, 1917, to foreign corporations organized for the manufacturing, purchasing, and selling of rubber boots, shoes, tires, and goods of which rubber, cauch, gutta-percha, balata, or any of their substitutes, are a component part, and the various metals entering into the manufacturing of any and all such goods. The act of May 17, 1917, gives the right to foreign corporations formed for the manufacture of automobiles, motor trucks or other motor vehicles or any article appertaining to or entering into the construction thereof, and the act of March 30, 1917, to foreign corporations formed for the manufacture of cigars, tobacco, or both cigars and tobacco, or buying, selling or dealing in cigars or tobacco, or both, or the manufacture and sale of artificial silk. By the act of July 6, 1917, foreign corporations organized for furnishing amusement to the public are authorized to erect and maintain buildings, such as theatres, moving picture houses, opera houses, and other places of amusement within this Commonwealth, and to have and to hold real estate to an amount necessary and proper for corporate purposes. The act of May 13, 1915, gives this right to foreign corporations formed for the mining and manufacturing of any clay into brick, tile, and various articles and products produced from clay, or from clay and other substances mixed therewith; or for the manufacturing and sale of explosives; or for the manufacture of fire-brick and refractories, and for the mining and quarrying of the raw material therefor; or for the manufacture, storage, distribution, or sale of cheese or butter or other dairy or creamery products; or for the manufacture, buying, selling, dealing in, and using of collapsible tubes and metal specialties, or for the building of boats, ships, and the machinery and tackle appertaining thereto; or coal tar, and its products, or roofing, felt, roofing materials, and building papers, or products and by-products of coal and asphalt. Companies for converting, dyeing, and cleaning cotton and other fabrics; making cotton or velvet, or other fabrics, pyroligneous acid, acetate of lime and charcoal, preparation of cattle hair; manufacture of carbon dioxide and magnesia, extracts of wood, bark, leaves, and roots, or any other extract for tanning, cleansing, dyeing, or other purposes, may hold land not exceeding one hundred acres, necessary for manufacturing purposes, and for office, dwellings, and salesrooms, or either. Foreign charitable corporations engaged in publishing books, etc., and having a legally authorized agent here, may own the real estate in which they transact their business and lease part of it, but the clear annual income must not exceed twenty thousand dollars. A foreign corporation is prohibited from doing business here until after it has appointed in writing the secretary of the Commonwealth and his successor in office its agent upon whom process in any action against it may be served; such service to have same legal effect as if served on it — which power of attorney shall contain a statement, under its seal, showing the title and object of such corporation, the location of its principal office in the State, and the post-office address within the State to which the secretary of the Commonwealth shall send by mail any process served on him. License fee is also provided by this act. Violation of these provisions is made a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both. (Act of June 3, 1911.) This act does not apply to foreign insurance companies. By the act of June 7, 1879, it is provided that no institution or company incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth, or any foreign institution or company doing business here, shall go into operation without first having the name of the institution or company, the date of incorporation or organization, the act of assembly er authority under which incorporated or organized, the place of business, the post-office address, and names of the president, secretary, and treasurer, the amount of capital authorized by its charter and the amount of capital paid into the treasury of the company, the amount of its bonded indebtedness and the amount of capital employed wholly in the State of Pennsylvania, registered in the office of the auditor-general. The purchase of a controlling interest of the stock of a Pennsylvania corporation and the voting of it for directors by a foreign corporation is not doing business under the act. (Shepp v. Traction Co., 17 Montg. Co. 52. See, also, Stoner v. Phillipp, 41 Super. 118, 42 Super. 576.)

By the act of May 13, 1915, where a foreign corporation shall have made a contract, etc., prior to the act of June 8, 1911, P. L. 710, without registration, the contract, etc., may be enforced upon compliance with certain conditions.

By the act of May 8, 1901, every foreign mutual savings fund and building and loan association must, before engaging in business in Pennsylvania, receive from the commissioner of banking a certificate authorizing it to do so. Agents of such corporations must also receive certificates. The fee for company's certificate is one hundred dollars, and for agent's certificate one dollar. Company must pay annual license fee of one hundred dollars. A penalty is imposed for failure to obtain certificate.

Act of April 3, 1903, amending § 2 of the act of July 9, 1901, provides that the writ of summons, the writ of attachment in execution, and the writ of sci. fa. in personal actions, where the corporation has no office or place of business in the county, may be served by the sheriff of another county wherein the corporation does business, who shall be deputized for that purpose by the sheriff of the county in which the writ issued.

Foreign corporations, limited partnerships, or joint stock associations, except foreign insurance companies, must, in addition to complying with the laws now in force as to such corporations, pay to the state treasurer a bonus of one third of one per cent. upon the amount of their capital actually employed or to be employed wholly within the State of Pennsylvania, and a like bonus upon each subsequent increase of capital so employed. The bonus required by the act is not an annual tax, but is a price paid the Commonwealth for the privilege of doing business in Pennsylvania and is to be charged on actual capital now invested in this State or any subsequent increase thereof. (Corporation Bonus Case, 25 C. C. 308.) As to regulation of foreign insurance companies see act June 7, 1907 and act to which it is an amendment.

Foreign corporations in which three or more of the stockholders are citizens of this State and which are embraced within corporations of the second class above mentioned (corporations for profit), may become domestic in this State, with the rights and powers of corporations of their class, by making application to the governor. The original charter must be renounced. Limited partnerships must also register and pay tax in the same manner. Tax upon capital stock of corporations is a tax upon their property, franchises, assets, and earning capacity. Foreign corporations doing business in Pennsylvania are taxable, like domestic corporations, on so much of their capital as is invested within this State.

For the purposes of taxation, corporations, except as hereinafter mentioned, must, in the month of November, make a return, sworn to by two officers, to the auditor-general, for the year ending on the first Monday of November. Manufacturing corporations pay no state tax on property actually used for manufacturing purposes. Leasing of manufacturing corporation does not deprive it of exemption from taxation upon its capital stock. Other corporations, except banks, savings institutions, foreign insurance companies, and distilling companies, pay five mills per dollar of appraised value of capital stock, based upon a valuation of the company's assets as appraised under oath by two officers of the company, subject to settlement by the department. See act of June 7, 1879 as amended; see act of June 7, 1911. Building and loan associations, by amendment of June 7, 1911, not subject to act of 1879. All corporations, including manufacturing corporations, pay local taxes on real estate. All corporations are required to retain out of interest paid on their indebtedness, if held in the State, four mills on each dollar of such indebtedness and pay the same to the State. Taxes are due thirty days after they are settled by the department, of which the corporations have notice. Ten per cent. will be added to tax upon failure to make report by the thirty-first day of December in each year.

In addition to the capital stock tax, corporations operating or engaged in either railroad, pipe line, conduit, steamboat, canal, slack water navigation, transportation, street passenger railway, telephone, telegraph, express, electric light, and palace or sleeping cars, pay an annual tax of eight mills upon each dollar of gross receipts, payable semiannually on the last days of January and July. Returns are made to auditor-general by the treasurer, under oath, in January and July of each year. A penalty of ten per cent. will be added to the tax upon failure to make return or pay the tax within thirty days after such tax becomes due. Domestic insurance companies pay eight mills on each dollar of gross premiums received during the year. Foreign insurance companies must make return to auditor-general on the first days of January and July of each year, and the tax is due the last days of January and July. The penalty for non-payment within thirty days is an addition of ten per cent. to the tax. In lieu of the capital stock tax of five mills, state and national banks and savings institutions pay four mills on each dollar of actual value of stock, or, as a substitute, ten mills on the par value of the stock; foreign insurance companies pay two cents on each dollar of gross premiums received from business done in Pennsylvania during the year; companies engaged in distilling liquors and selling same at wholesale pay ten mills on each dollar of actual value of stock.

By act of June 9, 1911, in every suit or judicial proceeding in Pennsylvania, to which a corporation is a party, the existence of such incorporation shall be taken to be admitted, unless it is put in issue by the pleadings.

Foreign insurance companies must file a written instrument with the insurance commissioner constituting him its attorney upon whom legal processes shall be served.

Deeds. — Deeds, mortgages, etc., should be executed under seal, and are usually attested by one or more subscribing witnesses, although this is not necessary to validity, unless the grantor executed by his mark on each. An ink scroll is a good seal. Notary should state date of expiration of commission.

In the State, acknowledgments may be taken by judges of the supreme court, judges of the courts of common pleas of all the counties, mayor and police magistrates or aldermen of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, recorders of deeds, for deeds to be recorded in their respective counties, notaries public, and justices of the peace (a justice of the peace should have a seal). By act of June 7, 1911, the recorder of deeds of any county having less than one million three hundred thousand population may appoint one or more clerks employed in his office to administer oaths or affirmations to all persons pertaining to the business or conducting of said recorder's office.

Out of the State, by the mayor or chief magistrate of the town or place where the deed is executed (under the public seal); before one of the judges of the supreme or district courts of the United States; one of the judges of the circuit or superior courts, or courts of common pleas of any State or Territory, when certified under the hand of the judge and seal of the court; before commissioner appointed by the governor of Pennsylvania, or any notary public in the United States having a seal of office, or by any officer or magistrate of any State or Territory authorized by its laws to take acknowledgments when accompanied, in the case of such officer or magistrate, by a certificate of the clerk of any court of record in such State of the authority so to act. Where the person making the acknowledgment is in the military service of the United States, before any person holding the rank of major, or any higher rank in said service, under a commission from the governor of Pennsylvania.

Without the United States, before ambassadors, ministers plenipotentiary, chargés d'affaires, or other persons exercising ministerial functions, duly appointed by the United States; consuls, vice-consuls, deputy consuls, commercial agents, vice and deputy commercial agents, or consular agents appointed for, and exercising their functions in, the place where the acknowledgment is taken and certified under their public official seal; notaries public, under their seal of office; commissioners appointed by governor of Pennsylvania, or commissioners in chancery.

Deeds, mortgages, or other instruments in writing made by any person or corporation concerning lands, tenements, hereditaments, or property, or any estate or interest therein, lying or being within this Commonwealth, may be acknowledged before a major or officer of higher rank in the military service of the United States in Cuba or in Porto Rico, the Philippine Islands, or other possessions of the United States; or before any civil officer in service of the United States in any of the said places. These provisions not applicable to pending actions or to those heretofore judicially determined. The official character of the person taking such acknowledgment must be proved by his seal, if he have one; and if not, then by a certificate under the seal of any officer of the United States who has an official seal, in any of said places. (Act of May 21, 1901.)

By an act of April 22, 1863, foreign notaries are authorized to take acknowledgments according to the forms of this State, duly certified under their seals of office. This law does not require the additional certificate of the United States consul. The act of April 27, 1876, however, provides that the official acts and exemplifications of foreign notaries in accordance with the laws of their respective countries shall be prima facie evidence of the matters therein set forth, provided that a consul or vice-consul of the United States shall certify under his seal that such notaries are the proper officers, and that such official acts and exemplifications are in accordance with the laws of their respective countries. This act does not expressly refer to acknowledgments, but since its passage it is more prudent to have such consular certificate appended to acknowledgments before notaries in foreign countries.

An attorney in fact should sign the name of principal, writing thereunder his own name, as, "Acting therein by his attorney in fact." There should be a seal opposite both the name of the principal and the name of the attorney. By act of April 22, 1905, P. L. 265, a new form is given for sheriff's and coroner's deeds. The act further provides that, unless expressly limited to a lesser estate, such deeds shall be effective to pass to the grantee or grantees named therein a fee-simple title to the premises conveyed, if the defendant or defendants possessed such title, though technical words of inheritance be not used. Such deeds shall be acknowledged by the sheriff or coroner before the prothonotary or clerk of the court out of which the writ issued, except in cases of testatum writs, where the acknowledgment shall be made before prothonotary of the court of common pleas of the county in which the property is situated. Heretofore such deeds were acknowledged in open court.

Deeds of a corporation are executed with the corporate seal and in the name of the company, signed usually by the president and attested by the secretary. These are proved by oath or by affirmation of either officer executing them. For acknowledgments of corporations by attorney, see below.

Under the old law, no deed or contract relating to real estate by a wife, whether it be her

The act of March 4, 1915, validates defective acknowledgments theretofore made by a husband and wife.

Proof by subscribing witness. If there are no subscribing witnesses to a deed, and any of the parties are dead, the handwriting of such deceased party may be proved by two or more witnesses before any judge who gives a certificate of such proof. The surviving parties must also be examined. Deeds so proved may be recorded. (Act of May 25, 1878.)

[General form of Certificate of Acknowledgment.]

[Proof by Subscribing Witness.]

Be it remembered that on the first day of January, A. D. 19 before me (here insert name and title of official), duly commissioned in and for said county, personally appeared R. C. Brown, one of the subscribing witnesses to the execution of the above indenture, who being duly sworn (or affirmed) according to law, doth depose and say that he did see John Jackson, the grantor above named, sign and seal, and as his act and deed deliver the above indenture (deed or conveyance), for the use and purposes therein mentioned, and that he did also see George M. Thompson subscribe his name thereunto as the other witness of such sealing and delivery, and that the name of this deponent thereunto set and subscribed as a witness is of this deponent's own proper handwriting.

(Signature of witness.)

A deed by a corporation should be executed by its corporate seal attested by the president and secretary. The proof of execution should be substantially as follows, and may be made by either officer, usually the secretary: —

[Certificate of Acknowledgment by a Corporation.]

Be it remembered that on the day of A. D. 19 before me (name and title), personally came John Jones, who, being duly sworn (or affirmed) according to law, doth depose and say that he was personally present and did see the common or corporate seal of the abovenamed (name of corporation) affixed to the foregoing indenture (or deed poll). That the seal so affixed is the common or corporate seal of the said (name of corporation), and was so affixed by the authority of the said corporation as the act and deed thereof. That the abovenamed E. F. is the president of the said corporation, and did sign the said indenture (or deed poll) as such in the presence of this deponent. That this deponent is the secretary of the said corporation, and that the name of this deponent, above signed in attestation of the due execution of the said indenture (or deed poll), is of this deponent's own proper handwriting.

[Seal.] (Signature and title.)

The (name of corporation) doth hereby constitute and appoint (name of appointee) to be its attorney for it, and in its name and as and for its corporate act and deed to acknowledge this (name of instrument) before any person having authority by the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to take such acknowledgment, to the intent that the same may be duly recorded.

I hereby certify that on this _____ day of _____ in the year of our Lord _____ before me, the subscriber (title of officer taking acknowledgment), personally appeared (name of attorney), the attorney named in the foregoing (name of instrument), and by virtue and in pursuance of the authority therein conferred upon him, acknowledged the said (name and instrument) to be the act of the said (corporation's name).

Witness my hand and seal the day and year aforesaid.

Depositions. — A commission to take testimony, when a witness resides out of the State, is obtained by a rule, which may be entered by either party. Interrogatories must be filed at the time, and written notice of the rule and of the name of the commissioner must be served on the adverse party at least fifteen days before the commission issues, in order to give him time to file cross-interrogatories or nominate commissioners on his part.

Formal instructions are furnished with each commission when issued. They are substantially as follows: The commission must be executed by the commissioner named therein. Having agreed upon the time and place of meeting, of which a reasonable notice should be given to the agent who attends to the execution of the commission, that he may collect the witnesses, proceed at the time and place appointed to execute the commission in the following manner.

The caption or title of the depositions should be drawn up thus: —

"Depositions of witnesses produced, sworn (or affirmed), and examined, on the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and at the office of No. street, in the city of and State of under and by virtue of a commission issued out of the court of common pleas for Philadelphia County (as the case may be), to directed for the examination of witnesses in a certain cause depending in said court, wherein is plaintiff and is defendant."

The commissioner will examine the witnesses separately after administering to each of them an oath or affirmation (in the usual form, or in such form as shall be binding on his conscience) that the answers he will give to the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories (if any) shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

The commissioner will then draw up in writing the answers of the witness to the interrogatories in the following form: —

A. B. (insert residence and occupation), aged years and upwards, being duly sworn (or affirmed) and examined on the part of the plaintiff (or defendant), doth depose and say as follows: 1. To the first interrogatory he says, etc. (insert the answer). 2. To the second interrogatory he says, etc. (and so through the interrogatories, until all have been answered). If there are cross-interrogatories, the deposition will proceed thus: 1. To the first cross-interrogatory he saith, etc. (and so throughout). Every interrogatory and cross-interrogatory, and each branch and cause thereof, must be answered, if the witness merely declare "that he has no knowledge of the matter inquired of."

The witness must sign the deposition, or make his mark, if he cannot write, and the commissioner will certify opposite the signature or mark as follows: —

"Examination taken, reduced to writing, and by the witness subscribed and sworn (or affirmed) to, this day of A. D. 19 before me. Commissioner."

And the commissioner will also sign his name to each page of testimony. If, in the examination, any paper, exhibit, or document be produced or referred to, it must be marked by some letter or figure, and further identified by the commissioner in the following manner: "At the execution of a commission to take testimony, between plaintiff, and defendant, this paper was produced and depose unto by (here give the witness's name) at the time of his examination," to which the commissioner and the witness will sign their names.

If an interpreter should be employed, he must be sworn (or affirmed) that he "will truly and faithfully interpret the oath and interrogatories to a witness now to be examined, out of the English language into the language; and will truly and faithfully interpret the answer of the said witness thereto out of the language into the English language." The deposition must also be signed by the interpreter, and the fact certified by the commissioner.

Typewritten depositions are constantly read without objection, but before so taking them it is safer to secure consent of counsel.

The commissioner will indorse his return on the commission thus: "The execution of this commission appears in certain schedules hereto annexed," and the fees of the commissioner should also be indorsed. The depositions and exhibits must be bound up with the commission, some tape passing through and connecting the whole, and securely inclosed in a packet, sealed with the commissioner's seal, with his name written across, or by the side of the seal. The name of the case must be indorsed on the envelope, and it must be addressed to the court from which the commission issued. Unless otherwise instructed, it should be returned by mail, with the following additional indorsement: "Deposited in the post-office at this day of A. D. 19 by me," and this should be signed by the commissioner. No person is allowed to be present during the examination but the commissioner and the witness and such disinterested person as the commissioner may (if he think fit) appoint as clerk. (6 Pa. St. 449.) The attorney of the party who is adverse to the one issuing the commission, however, may be present. (Loewenstien v. Biernbaum, 6 W. N. C. 452.) The instructions should be literally followed, as a slight variance may vitiate the execution of the commission.

In cases pending before justices, either party or their agent may apply for a rule to take depositions upon making affidavit that the testimony of a material witness is wanted who resides out of the county. If the witness resides out of the State, interrogatories are filed and a copy delivered to the opposite party or his agent, who has eight days to file cross-interrogatories. The rule and interrogatories are certified by the justice, and are sufficient authority for the justice named in the rule to take the answers of the witnesses therein named. (Act of April 11, 1901.)

Where the depositions are taken within the State, the witnesses may be examined upon notice of the time and place appointed for the same without filing interrogatories. By act of June 25, 1895, this practice is extended to witnesses living out of the State. This act applies also to proceedings in the orphans' court. (209 Pa. 321.) A rule is entered with leave of the court; at least twenty days' notice must be given. Testimony of non-resident witnesses may also be taken by letters rogatory. Letters rogatory are letters requesting a tribunal or a court of another jurisdiction that testimony of certain witnesses shall be taken by it. They are issued when a commission is not recognized in that jurisdiction.

The act of April 27, 1909, P. L. 258, provides for the taking of the testimony of non-resident witnesses on behalf of defendants in criminal cases to be read in evidence at the trial.

Descent. — The real and personal estate of a decedent, whether male or female, remaining after payment of all just debts and legal charges, which shall not have been sold, or disposed of by will, or otherwise limited by marriage settlement, shall be divided and enjoyed as follows: Where testator leaves spouse surviving and one child only, or shall leave a spouse surviving and no children, but shall leave descendants of one deceased child, the spouse shall be entitled to one-half part of the real and personal estate. Where such intestate leaves spouse and more than one child, or one child and the descendants of a deceased child or children, or the descendants of more than one deceased child, the surviving spouse shall be entitled to one-third part of the real and personal estate. Where such intestate leaves spouse surviving and other kindred, but no issue, the surviving spouse shall be entitled to the real or personal estate, or both, to the aggregate value of five thousand dollars in addition, in the case of a widow, to her exemption allowed by law, and, if such estate exceeds in value the sum of five thousand dollars, the surviving spouse shall be entitled to the sum of five thousand dollars absolutely, to be chosen by him or her from real or personal estate, or both, and in addition thereto shall be entitled to one-half part of the remaining real and personal estate, it being provided by the intestate act that these provisions as to said five thousand dollars shall apply only to cases of actual intestacy of husband or wife, entire or partial, and not to cases where the surviving spouse shall elect to take against the will of the deceased spouse. The intestate act provides the manner in which the said five thousand dollars shall be set aside. The shares of the estate directed by the intestate act to be allotted to the widow shall be in lieu and full satisfaction of her dower at common law, so far as relates to land of which the husband died seized, and her share in lands aliened by the husband in his lifetime, without her joining in the conveyance, shall be the same as her share in the lands of which the husband died seized. The widow shall be entitled to the same share in an estate in remainder vested in interest in the husband during his lifetime, although the particular estate shall not terminate before the death of the husband. This last sentence is true also as to a husband's share in estates vested in remainder in his wife. The shares of the estate directed by the intestate act to be allotted to the surviving husband shall be in lieu of his curtesy at common law. A husband who shall have for one year or upwards previous to the death of his wife willfully neglected or refused to provide for his wife, or shall have for that period or upwards willfully and maliciously deserted her, shall not have the right to claim any title or interest in her real or personal estate after her decease, under the provisions of the intestate act. No wife who shall have, for one year or upwards previous to the death of her husband, willfully and maliciously deserted her husband, shall have the right to claim any title or interest in his real or personal estate, under said intestate act. The real or personal estate of such intestate, not hereinbefore given to the surviving spouse, if any there be, shall descend to and be distributed among his or her issue, as follows: (1) If intestate leaves children, but no other descendant, being the issue of a deceased child, to and among such children. (2) If grandchildren, but no child or other descendant, being the issue of a deceased grandchild, then to and among such grandchildren. (3) If descendants in other degrees of consanguinity, however remote, and all in the same degree of consanguinity to him, then to and among such descendants. (4) If descendants in different degrees of consanguinity to him, the more remote of them being the issue of a deceased child, grandchild, or other descendant, the estate shall descend to and be distributed as follows: (a) Each child of intestate shall receive such share as he or she would have received if all the children of the intestate, who shall then be dead, leaving issue, had been living at the death of such intestate. (b) Each of the grandchildren, if there shall be no children, in like manner shall receive such share as he or she would have received if all the other grandchildren, who shall then be dead, leaving issue, had been living at the death of the intestate, and so in like manner to the remotest degree. (c) In every such case the issue of such deceased child, grandchild, or other descendant, shall take by representation of their parents, respectively, such shares only as would have descended to such parents if they had been living at the death of the intestate. In default of issue, as aforesaid, the estate of such intestate not hereinbefore given to the surviving spouse, if any there be, shall go to the father or mother of such intestate or the one of them living at the death of intestate. If no issue, father and mother, the estate not hereinbefore given to the surviving spouse, if any there be, shall descend and be distributed among the collateral heirs and kindred of such intestate, without distinction between those of the whole and those of the half blood, as follows: (1) If brothers and sisters, or either, and no nephew or niece, or child of a deceased nephew or niece being the issue of a deceased brother or sister, then among such brothers and sisters. (2) If neither brother nor sister, and child of a deceased nephew or niece being the issue of a deceased brother or sister, but nephews or nieces being the children of such deceased brother or sister, then to and among such nephews and nieces. (3) If neither brother nor sister, nor any nephew or niece being the child of such deceased brother or sister, but children of deceased nephews or nieces, then to and among such children of deceased nephews or nieces. (4) If brothers or sisters and nephews or nieces, being children of a deceased brother or sister, and children of deceased nephews or nieces being issue of deceased brothers and sisters, or shall leave members of any two of these three classes, the real and personal estate shall descend to and be distributed among such brothers and sisters, nephews and nieces, as follows: (a) If brothers and sisters, or either, and no nephew or niece, or child of a deceased nephew or niece being the issue of a deceased brother or sister, to and among such brothers and sisters. (b) If neither brother nor sister, and no child of deceased nephew or niece being the issue of a deceased brother or sister, but nephews or nieces being the children of such deceased brother or sister, to and among such nephews and nieces. (c) If neither brother nor sister, nor nephew or niece being the child of such deceased brother or sister, but children of deceased nephews or nieces, then to and among such children of deceased nephews or nieces. (d) If brothers or sisters, and nephews or nieces, being children of a deceased brother or sister, and children of deceased nephews or nieces being issue of deceased brothers and sisters, or shall leave members of any two of these three classes, then to and among such brothers and sisters, nephews and nieces, and children of deceased nephews and nieces, as follows: Each brother and sister shall receive such share as he or she would have received if all the brothers and sisters who died before the intestate, leaving children or children of deceased children surviving the intestate, had been living at the death of the intestate. Each nephew and niece, if the intestate shall leave any brother or sister, shall receive an equal portion of the share which his or her parent would have taken if then living, which portion shall be what he or she would have taken if all the children of his or her parent who died before the intestate, leaving children surviving the intestate had been living at the death of the intestate; but, if such intestate shall leave neither brother nor sister, the nephews and nieces shall take per capita. Each child of a deceased nephew or niece, whether the intestate shall leave members of one or both of the other classes, shall receive an equal portion of the share which his or her parent would have received if living at the death of the intestate. In default of all persons hereinbefore described, the estate of intestate shall descend to and be distributed among the grandparents or descendants of deceased grandparents of such intestate, and, in default thereof, to and among the next of kin to such intestate. The mother of an illegitimate child, her heirs and next of kin, the maternal grandfather and grandmother of said illegitimate child, and said illegitimate child, its heirs and next of kin, shall have capacity to take or inherit from each other personal estate as next of kin, and real estate, as heirs, under the provisions of the intestate act as though said child or children were legitimate. Every illegitimate child shall be considered as a brother or sister to every other child of its mother, legitimate or illegitimate. A child is legitimated for purposes of inheritance under the intestate act by the marriage of its mother and father. Adopted person and adopting parent or parents inherit from one another as though born a lawful child of the adopting parent or parents. In default of known heirs or kindred competent to inherit, the surviving spouse takes entire estate. The intestate act provides the procedure for the surviving spouse in such case. Posthumous children of intestate inherit as though born in the lifetime of such intestate. Relatives and persons concerned in the estate of an intestate must lay legal claim to their shares within seven years of the decease of the intestate, except in case of minors, who are allowed seven years after coming of age. A person finally adjudged guilty, either as accessory or principal, of murder of the first or second degree, shall not be entitled to inherit or take any part of the estate of the person killed, as surviving spouse, heir or next of kin, under the provisions of this act. In default of all such known heirs or kindred or surviving spouse competent to take as aforesaid, the estate of such intestate goes to the Commonwealth. The intestate act does not apply to a distribution of the personal estate of an intestate whose domicile at the time of his death was out of the State. If any person, other than a surviving spouse, entitled under the provisions of the intestate act to inherit or take real or personal property from such intestate, shall have any estate by settlement of such intestate, or shall have been advanced by him in his lifetime, either in real or personal estate, the amount of such settlement or advancement shall be charged against the share of the person who shall have received it, so that the total amount received by him, including the amount of such settlement or advancement shall not exceed the amount received by each of the other persons who are equally entitled, under the provisions of said act, to inherit or take from said intestate. †

Divorce. — A vinculo matrimonii may be decreed by the courts of common pleas for: 1. Incapacity of procreation. 2. Former marriage still subsisting. 3. Adultery. 4. Willful and malicious desertion by either husband or wife, without reasonable cause, for two years. 5. Cruel and barbarous treatment endangering life, or such personal indignities to person as to render condition intolerable and life burdensome. 6. Incestuous marriages are void and divorce may be decreed. 7. Where the marriage was procured by fraud, force, or coercion, and not subsequently confirmed. 8. When either of the parties shall have been, either within or without this State, convicted as principal or accessory either before or after the fact of the crime of arson, burglary, embezzlement, forgery, kidnapping, larceny, murder, either in the first or second degree, assault with intent to kill, voluntary manslaughter, perjury, rape, robbery, sodomy, buggery, treason, or misprision of treason, and be sentenced by a competent court having jurisdiction to imprisonment for any term exceeding two years. Provided that such application for a divorce be made by the husband or wife of the party so convicted and sentenced. (Act of March 9, 1903, as amended by act of May 1, 1909.)

Act of April 18, 1905, P. L. 211, provides where a husband or wife is a hopeless lunatic or non compos mentis, the courts of common pleas of this Commonwealth are invested with the authority to receive a petition or libel for divorce. Service of subpoena in divorce shall be made as now provided, and such service to be made upon the committee of such lunatic. In case of the application by a husband for a divorce from an insane wife, the courts are vested with full authority to provide alimony for the support of the insane wife, and if the wife be the petitioner and have sufficient means, the court may provide for the support of the insane husband, providing the insane husband has not sufficient estate in his own right for his support. Insanity itself is not made a ground for divorce by this act. Its intent is to provide a means of obtaining a divorce from an insane husband or wife, where such insane husband or wife has committed an act recognised heretofore as a cause for divorce. (34 Sup. 272.)

The act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 390, validates divorces heretofore granted under the misinterpretation of the act of 1905, on the ground of insanity.

The libel must be filed in the county in which libellant resides, except act of April 25, 1905, P. L., 309, provides that where a husband and wife are resident in different counties, within this Commonwealth, and a cause of divorce shall arise, the injured party may institute and prosecute proceedings of divorce in either county. (Blaine v. Blaine, 31 C. C. 560.) In suits for divorce for the cause of adultery, the divorce will not be decreed if libellant has been also guilty, or if, after knowledge of defendant's guilt, he or she has condoned it, or if the husband (libellant) connived at the guilt of his wife. A divorce for adultery does not give the respondent the right to marry the particeps criminis, but otherwise both parties are free to marry again. A woman divorced for adultery cannot devise or convey her real estate if she afterwards openly cohabits with her particeps criminis. Alimony and counsel fees before decree are allowed. Where divorce is granted to husband by reason of cruel and barbarous treatment or indignities to his person on the part of his wife, the court may allow her alimony or support. Divorce a mensa may be obtained for adultery, or if the husband maliciously abandons the wife, or turns her out of doors, or by cruelty endangering her life or indignities rendering life burdensome forces her to withdraw from his house. A husband who refuses his wife a home is taken to have deserted her. Alimony and counsel fees are allowed pendente lite. An allowance pendente lite will not be decreed where respondent is a bankrupt. If the wife has sufficient means she will not be allowed alimony pendente lite and counsel fees in divorce proceedings, although the husband's means may be much greater. It never exceeds one third of the husband's income. The decree is a lien upon his real property and may be collected by execution. Under some circumstances, the husband may be required to secure its payment. No provision exists for division of property. The parties may testify in certain cases. See Evidence. The respondent may demand a bill of particulars. The legislature is forbidden to pass any special law granting divorce. By act of April 22, 1905, P. L. 293, it is provided that any libel of divorce may be presented to any court of common pleas, or to any judge thereof, at any time, in term time or in vacation, and a subpoena may be awarded thereon at the time of presentation of said libel, without regard to any return day in court, which said subpoena may be made returnable to the next or any subsequent quarterly return day; provided the time to which it is made returnable be at least thirty days after the awarding of said subpoena.

By act of June 20, 1893, the wife can procure a divorce when she was formerly a citizen of this State, and has married a citizen of any other State, or of any foreign country, and has been compelled to abandon the habitation and domicile of her husband in such other State or foreign country by reason of his adultery, or his cruel and barbarous treatment, or of such indignities to her person as to render her condition intolerable and her life burdensome, or by reason of willful or malicious desertion and absence from the habitation of the other without a reasonable cause, and has thereby been forced to return to her former domicile within this State. The applicant must be a citizen of this State, and shall have actually resided therein for the term of one year prior to filing her petition.

By act of May 1, 1913, any wife who has been deserted, abandoned, or driven from her home by her husband may sue her husband civilly, in any court of Pennsylvania having jurisdiction, as if a feme sole; and in such case wife shall be competent witness, provided right of survivorship in property conveyed to them jointly shall not be disturbed by said act.

By act of May 9, 1913, courts of common pleas have jurisdiction in any action in divorce for any cause now or thereafter allowed by law, notwithstanding marriage of parties and cause of divorce occurred outside of Pennsylvania, and that both parties were at time of occurrence of cause domiciled without Pennsylvania, and that respondent has been served with subpoena only by publication as required by law, and in such cases libellant is competent witness to prove her residence in Pennsylvania; and said courts entertain jurisdiction in all cases of divorce from bonds of matrimony for any cause provided when the applicant for divorce has been at time of filing libel a resident of Pennsylvania for one year previous to filing of libel.

Dower. — See Descent.

Embezzlement. — If any consignee or factor having the possession of merchandise, with authority to sell the same, or having possession of any bill of lading, permit, certificate, receipt, or order for the delivery of merchandise with the like authority, shall deposit or pledge such merchandise or document consigned or entrusted to him as a security for any money borrowed, or negotiable instrument received by such consignee or factor, and shall apply or dispose of the same to his own use, in violation of good faith, with intent to defraud the owner of such merchandise, and if consignee or factor shall, with like fraudulent intent, apply or dispose of, to his own use, any money or negotiable instrument raised or acquired by the sale or other disposition of such merchandise, such consignee or factor in every such case shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, and undergo an imprisonment not exceeding five years. (From the Criminal Code, which also contains provisions against embezzlement by trustees, bankers, attorneys in fact, corporation officers, transporters, guardians, etc.)

Estates of Deceased Persons. — An executor or administrator, is obliged, as soon as appointed, to advertise for six weeks for claims against the decedent's estate. The debts of a decedent are payable in the following order: 1. Funeral expenses, medicines purchased and medical attendance given during the last illness of the decedent, and servants' wages (not exceeding one year). 2. Rents (not exceeding one year). 3. All other debts, except debts due the State, which shall be paid last. The rent is to be apportioned to the date of the death of the testator, whether payable by the terms of the lease at that time or not. Expenses of administration are not included among debts of the decedent, and, unless otherwise specifically provided, are payable out of the residuary estate. The administrator or executor need not file his account until the expiration of six months from the grant of letters; payment of debts except such as by law preferred to rents cannot be compelled during that time. In Philadelphia County, accounts, even if filed, will not be audited till the six months expires. The accounts of executors and administrators are settled in the orphans' court. The audit is advertised in the county. Claims against the decedent's estate should be presented at the audit of the executor's or administrator's account or filed with the executor or administrator before the audit. If at the audit claims against the decedent's estate have not been presented or filed, and the court confirms the account and decrees distribution of the personal estate, the rights of the claimants against the personal estate are gone. The claimant, however, retains his lien against any real estate of such decedent. See below. When the personal estate is not sufficient to pay the debts, the real estate of a decedent may be sold by the executor or administrator for the payment of his debts under the order and control of the orphans' court. The court may order a private sale when a better price can be had. The debts not of record of a decedent are liens upon his real estate for one year from the time of his death, and may be continued by such suit brought within that time and duly prosecuted. No debts of a decedent except they be secured by mortgage or by judgment entered or revived by scire facias within five years prior to the death of such decedent, shall remain a lien on the real estate of such decedent longer than one year after the decease of such debtor, unless an action for the recovery thereof be commenced and be indexed in the judgment index as other liens are indexed against such decedent, his executors or administrators in the county where brought and also where the real estate is situated, within the period of one year after his decease and duly prosecuted to judgment. See Limitations. Where any bond, covenant, debt, or demand is not payable within the said period of one year a copy or written statement of the same must be filed and indexed within said period, in the office of the prothonotary of the county wherein the real estate is situated and be indexed in the county where the executor or administrator resides. Judgments which are a lien at the time of the death shall remain a lien for a period of five years after decedent's death. The widow, if any, or, if no widow, or if she has forfeited her rights, then the children of a decedent are entitled to retain five hundred dollars out of his real or personal estate. Where estate is less than five hundred dollars widow or children, if children, have the right to petition the court to have estate set aside without administration. Should a testator appoint a person executor who is not a resident of this State, the register is bound to require of him a bond with two or more sufficient sureties. Resident executors are not required to give bond. See act June 10, 1911, as to sales of real estate by executors and trustees. See Descent.

Rents of real estate accruing after the death of the owner of such real estate, who has died since June 7, 1917, shall be assets for the payment of debts of such decedent whenever the personal estate shall be insufficient therefor.

Suits against Co-executors. — The executor, administrator, guardian, assignee, or trustee may institute an action at law or other legal or equitable proceedings against a co-executor, administrator, guardian, assignee, or trustee to recover or enforce any debt or obligation due the estate which he represents by the said co-executor or administrator, etc.

Administration. — Letters of administration are granted to the widow, or surviving husband, or such of his relatives or kindred of an intestate as are entitled to the residue of his estate, or both. In case there be no proper kindred, then to a creditor. All administrators are required to give security.

Foreign executors or administrators have ordinarily no power over the decedent's estate in Pennsylvania, except to transfer and receive the interest or dividends of public loans of the State or of any county, city, borough, township, or school district thereof, or any stocks or bonds of a Pennsylvania corporation, standing in the name of, or belonging to decedent, or any mortgage, debt or indenture of mortgage held by, or belonging to, decedent upon real estate in this State, and to enter or have entered satisfaction of the same.

Before any such act shall be done by any such executor, administrator or trustee there shall be filed in the office of the register of wills for the county in which is located the office for the transfer of such loans, stocks, or bonds, or, in the case of a mortgage, of the county where the mortgaged real estate may be situated, when such person is acting under letters of other authority granted by or under the laws of any other State, Territory, or possession of the United States of America, a copy of the will, probate and letters issued thereon, or of such other grant of authority, duly authenticated in accordance with the acts of Congress; or, when such person is acting under letters or other authority granted by or under the laws of any foreign country, a copy of such will, probate and letters issued thereon, or of such other grant of authority, certified by the official custodian of such documents or records, under his official seal, if any, to be a true and correct copy of the originals thereof in his possession or under his control, together with the certificate of the presiding judge or the officer having jurisdiction or authority over such custodian that the attestation is in due form and by the proper officer: Provided, That before any such executor, administrator, or trustee, shall assign or transfer any loans, stocks, bonds, or mortgages, or receive any interest or dividends thereon, or enter satisfaction of any such mortgage, he shall also file, with said register of wills, an affidavit stating that the said decedent is not indebted to any person in this Commonwealth, and that the proposed transfer, assignment, receipt, or entry of satisfaction, without first making and filing such affidavit, shall be void.

Whenever a citizen of the United States, non-resident in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, shall have died owning real estate in this Commonwealth, and by his last will and testament shall have empowered his executor or trustee to sell and convey his real estate, it shall be lawful for said executor or trustee, or his duly appointed successor, although not a resident in this Commonwealth, from and after the expiration of one year from the death of such decedent, to execute any power of sale contained in said last will and testament, and to sell and convey to the purchaser the whole or any part of such real estate located in this Commonwealth; Provided, That, before executing the power of sale, a copy of the last will, probate, and letters testamentary, and of the decree appointing such successor, if any there be, duly authenticated as provided in said act, shall be filed in the office of the register of wills of the county where the land is situated: Provided further, That nothing in this clause shall change or modify the acts of Assembly relating to collateral inheritances.

It shall be lawful for foreign executors or administrators to cause to be issued, in their names as such executors or administrators, writs of scire facias within this Commonwealth, on all judgments in favor of their decedents, the lien of which judgments is about expiring: Provided, That, before any further proceedings are had, letters testamentary or of administration must be granted within this Commonwealth, as provided by law.

It shall be lawful for the orphans' court having jurisdiction of the accounts of any fiduciary to award personal property to the foreign executor or administrator of a deceased non-resident creditor, legatee, or distributee, when it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court, by affidavit or other evidence, that there are no creditors of such non-resident decedent within this Commonwealth; and when it shall further appear by certificate of the register of wills, surrogate, or court of the proper jurisdiction, duly authenticated as required by the acts of Congress, if the domicile of such non-resident creditor, legatee, or distributee was in another State, Territory, or possession of the United States of America, or by the proper diplomatic or consular officer appointed by the United States of America, under his official seal, if such domicile was in a foreign country, that the person claiming to receive such award is authorized under the laws of such State, Territory, possession, or country to receive the property of his decedent: Provided, That the benefits of this clause shall not extend to any case in which it shall appear that the rights of any resident of this Commonwealth may be adversely affected by such transfer of property to such foreign executor or administrator. Law provides for settlement of estates under three hundred dollars without expense of proceedings to formally account.

An employer may, at any time not less than thirty days after the death of an employee, pay all wages due to such deceased employee to the wife, children, father or mother, sister or brother (preference being given in the order named) of the deceased employee, without requiring letters testamentary or of administration to be issued upon the estate of said deceased employee, where such wages due do not exceed seventy-five dollars in amount. If such deceased employee shall not leave a wife or any of said relatives surviving him, then it shall be lawful for the employer in like manner to pay such wages to the creditors of the decedent, as follows: undertaker, physician, boarding-house keeper and nurse, each his or her pro rata share, upon affidavit of fact furnished. The payment of such wages as aforesaid shall be a full discharge and release to the employer from any further claim for such wages.

Estate of Absent Persons. — The act of July 17, 1917, provides for the appointment of a trustee of the estate of a resident of this State who shall have absented himself or herself from his or her home, and shall have been unheard of by the immediate members of his or her family for a period of one year.

Evidence. — May 23, 1887 (amended May 11, 1911), an act was passed relating to the competency of witnesses (amended March 30, 1911), and the rules of evidence in civil and criminal cases, revising, declaring, and consolidating some of the existing acts and rules of law upon these subjects, and also extending some of the provisions of the same. By this law it is provided that in any civil proceedings no interest or policy of law, except as provided in § 5 of the act, shall make any person incompetent as a witness. Among the exceptions in § 5 are cases of persons convicted of perjury in certain cases, also confidential communications between husband and wife. Further, husband and wife are not competent or permitted to testify against each other excepting in certain cases of personal injuries (or injury to their minor children). (Act of April 27, 1909, P. L. 179.) By the act of May 1, 1913, any wife who has been deserted, abandoned, or driven from her home by her husband may sue her husband civilly in any court in this Commonwealth having jurisdiction, upon any cause of action now existing or hereafter accruing, with like effect as if such wife were a feme sole; and in such case the wife shall be a competent witness against the husband. By act of April 21, 1915, in proceedings for divorce libellant is fully competent to prove all the facts, though respondent may not have been personally served and may not be residing in Commonwealth, but has been served by publication. By act of March 13, 1903, if a husband or father willfully deserts and neglects to support his wife or children, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. In any proceedings under this act the wife shall be a competent witness. See, also, act of May 23, 1907, as amended by act of April 27, 1909, P. L. 182. A wife may be a witness against her husband in actions for necessities furnished her, and in criminal cases against him where he attacks her character or conduct. A wife shall be a competent witness in rebuttal in all civil actions brought by her husband where her conduct or character is attacked. (Act of May 8, 1907, P. L. 184.) By the act of June 8, 1893, as amended March 27, 1913, in any proceeding brought by either the husband or wife to protect and recover the separate property of either, both shall be fully competent witnesses, except that neither may testify to confidential communications made by one or the other, unless this privilege be waived upon the trial. Confidential communications between counsel and client are also excepted. In case of claims against the estates of deceased persons and lunatics the claimant cannot testify for his interest as to any matter occurring before the death or adjudication of lunacy. If the proceeding is by or against the surviving or remaining partners, joint promisors, or joint promisees of such deceased or lunatic party, and the matter occurred between such surviving or remaining partners, joint promisors, or joint promisees, and the other party on the record, or between such surviving or remaining partners, promisors, or promisees, and the person having an interest adverse to them, in such case any person may testify as to such matters. There are also other exceptions. The act further provides that a person incompetent may be called to testify against his interest, or where his interest has been released. An interested party may be compelled by the adverse party to testify as if under cross-examination, but in such case the co-plaintiff or co-defendant of such interested party shall become a competent witness. A surviving partner cannot testify as to matters which occurred between him and his deceased partner prior to the death of the latter. (Herron v. Wampler, 198 Pa. 77.) By this act all persons are fully competent witnesses in any criminal proceeding before any tribunal, excepting in certain cases mentioned. By act of June 18, 1895, physicians are not allowed, in civil cases, to disclose information received in a professional capacity "which shall tend to blacken the character of the patient, without his consent."

By the act of June 11, 1891, when a party to any civil action is dead, the surviving party who has any adverse interest may be a competent witness if the matter occurred between himself and another person who may be living at the time of the trial, and who may be competent to testify and who does so testify upon the trial against the surviving party or remaining party, or against the person whose interest may be adverse, or if the relevant matter occurred in the presence or hearing of such living or competent person.

Executions. — See Judgment and Execution; Stay of Execution; Tax Law.

Exemption. — The law exempts from execution property, either real or personal, to the value of three hundred dollars, in addition to wearing apparel, Bibles, and school-books, if claimed by the debtor; the privilege is personal and may be waived at any time. The widow or children of any decedent are entitled to the five hundred dollars from his estate for her or their use. (See Estates of Deceased Persons.) All sewing-machines belonging to private families are also exempt; also pianos, melodeons, or organs, leased or hired, and electric motors, electric fans or dynamos, leased or hired, if notice be given landlord. (Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 407.) Soda-water apparatus, leased or hired, is exempt from execution or distress for rent, in addition to other exempted articles, if notice be given to the landlord that such articles are leased or hired. (Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 423.) The "homestead" is not exempt from execution. No exemption is allowed, however, upon judgments for one hundred dollars or less obtained for wages for manual labor. (Act of March 4, 1887.) Non-residents of the State are not entitled to the benefit of the exemption laws. By the act of April 4, 1889, no exemption of property from levy and sale or attachment shall be allowed on judgment obtained for board for four weeks or less.

Garnishment. — See Attachment.

Holidays, Legal. — See Notes and Bills of Exchange.

Inheritance Taxes. — All estates of every kind situated within this State, whether the person dying be domiciled within or without the State, and all such estates situated in another State, Territory, or country, when the person dying seized thereof has his domicile within this State,¹ and passing either by will, or under the intestate laws of this State, or any part of such estate or estates, or interest therein, transferred by deed, grant, bargain, or sale made, or intended to take effect, in possession or enjoyment, after the death of the grantor or bargainer, to any person or persons, or to bodies corporate or politic, other than to or for the use of father, husband, mother, wife, children, and lineal descendants, born in lawful wedlock, children of a former husband or wife, or the wife or widow of the son of the person dying seized or possessed thereof, is subject to a tax of five dollars on every one hundred dollars of the clear value thereof.

Estates passing from any adopting parent to or for the use of any legally adopted child or children are exempt.

Whenever any foreign executor or administrator or trustee assigns or transfers any stocks or loans in this Commonwealth, standing in the name of the decedent, or in trust for a decedent, which are liable for the collateral inheritance tax, such tax must be paid, on the transfer thereof, to the register of the county where such transfer is made; otherwise the corporation permitting such transfer becomes liable to pay such tax.

No estate less than two hundred and fifty dollars is subject to this tax. In the case of reversionary interests of collaterals in real estate, the tax is not payable until possession. A five per cent. discount is allowed for the payment of the tax within three months after the death of the decedent. At the end of one year interest is charged at the rate of twelve per cent. unless the delay is caused by litigation, claims, or other unavoidable delays, when six per cent. is charged from the end of the year until default, but, in such case, where the estate does not earn six per cent., only the rate realized will be charged. The executor or administrator must see to the payment.

The lien of the tax continues until the tax is settled and satisfied, provided that the lien is limited to the property charged therewith, and provided that all such taxes shall be sued for within five years after they are due and legally demandable; otherwise they are presumed to be paid and cease to be a lien against any purchaser of real estate.

Bequests and devises in trust, the entire income to be used for the care and preservation of the family burial lot or lots of the donor in good order and repair perpetually, are exempt.

The tax is payable to the register of wills of the county where administration has been granted.

By the act of July 11, 1917, all estates, of every kind whatsoever, situated within this State, whether the person dying seized thereof be domiciled within or without this State, and all such estates situate in another State, territory, or country, when the person dying seized thereof shall have his domicile within this State, passing from any person who may die seized or possessed of such estates, either by will or under the intestate laws of this State, or any part of such estates or interests therein, transferred by deed, grant, bargain, or sale, made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor or bargainer, to or for the use of father, mother, husband, wife, children, lineal descendants, born in lawful wedlock, children of a former husband or wife, or the wife or widow of the son of a person dying seized or possessed thereof, or to legally adopted children, are made subject to a tax of two dollars on every one hundred dollars of the clear value of such estates. The tax is also imposed on any estate passing from the mother of an illegitimate child or from any person of whom the mother is a lineal descendant, to such illegitimate child, his wife, or widow. Such tax also applies to any estate passing from an illegitimate child to his mother.

Insolvents. — See Arrest; Assignments.

Interest. — Legal interest is six per cent.; usurious interest cannot be collected, and if paid may be recovered back, provided suit is brought therefor within six months. Negotiable paper taken bona fide in the usual course of business is not affected by the rate of discount allowed on it; and canal and railroad companies may sell their bonds, etc., below par, without making the interest usurious. Most of the savings banks are by special statute authorized to lend money at higher rates of interest. But banking companies are prohibited from taking more than six per cent. Commission merchants and agents may contract with parties outside the State for ~~six~~ per cent. It is not usury to contract to pay a reasonable attorney's fee, in case suit is brought for its collection. Interest is due on every debt from the time it becomes due and payable. By the custom of Pennsylvania, a book account for goods sold bears interest from the end of six months after the sale and delivery, in the absence of a contract as to when interest shall begin to run. The rate is the same on all debts, whether secured by judgment or not.

By act of March 6, 1903, where any advances of money repayable on demand to an amount not less than five thousand dollars are made upon warehouse receipts, bills of lading, certificates of stock, certificates of deposit, bills of exchange, bonds, or other negotiable instruments, pledged as collateral security, it is made lawful to receive or contract to receive as compensation for such advances any sum to be agreed upon in writing by parties to such transaction.

Mortgages are subject to a state tax of four mills, payable by the owners thereof, and it has been customary in mortgages to require mortgagors to pay this tax besides the interest, but by an act of assembly such a contract is prohibited; but when the interest added to the tax does not exceed the legal rate, it has been the practice to require the payment of an amount of additional interest equal to the tax, — for example, to make the interest five and four tenths per cent.

Judgment and Execution. (Times for rendering, see Actions. In justices' courts, see Court Calendar.) — A judgment binds all the interest, legal or equitable, in real estate of the defendant situated in the county where the judgment is entered. A lien on an equitable interest attaches to the legal estate when acquired, by relation back. The verdict of a jury for a specific sum is also a lien upon real estate, which remains unless a new trial is granted or judgment arrested. (Act of March 23, 1877.) Judgments and decrees of the federal courts are liens on land in a county only when entered and indexed in the common pleas court thereof, except that this is not required as to the county in which the federal court was sitting when the judgment or decree was entered. See, as to this, act of June 5, 1913. The lien of a judgment continues for five years, and may be continued by revival. However, a justice's judgment more than five years old not revived by scire facias may by transcript be filed in the prothonotary's office. (Blair & Co. v. Spanling, 10 Klupp, 404.) Judgments and decrees for the payment of money may be transferred from one county of the State to another by filing a transcript of the original record. A transcript filed in the common pleas as a lien will be stricken off when an appeal has been taken and entered according to law. (Vockroth v. Thomas, 7 Lack. 375.) Justices' judgments become liens by filing transcript in the court of common pleas of the proper county, and execution may issue upon them. Priority of time gives a judgment priority of lien; but there is no priority between judgments entered on the same day. Execution out of common pleas courts may be issued (if not stayed; see Stay of Execution) immediately after judgment. By the act of May 19, 1887, executions may issue on judgments five years after entry of same, for the purpose of selling personal property without revival (but not after twenty years), provided a scire facias to revive is issued at the same time the execution is issued; and the execution may be stayed until a trial on the scire facias. The personal property of the defendant in the county is bound by the execution from the time of its delivery to the sheriff, as against other executions, except executions issued by a justice of the peace, which do not bind the defendant's goods until actual levy. Where goods have been levied on as the property of defendant in an execution, the real owner of the goods who was not a party to the litigation has no standing to intervene and ask that the judgment under which the execution was issued should be stricken off or vacated. (Fees v. Shader, 20 Super. 193.) The personal property of the defendant in theory is first liable for the payment of the judgment, and should be exhausted before proceeding against his real estate; but where a plaintiff proceeds against real estate first, the writ would not be stayed unless the defendant should point out personal estate open to execution. Judgments which were a lien against a decedent's land at the time of his death continue to be a lien on real estate owned by a decedent at his death or on real estate conveyed by deed not duly recorded during his lifetime for five years thereafter, and may then be revived. They rank in the order of priority existing at the time of his death.

In order to levy upon the right of a partner in a firm upon an individual judgment a special fi. fa. must be issued directing such levy. Where goods in or upon any leased premises are taken in execution, miners, mechanics, laborers, and clerks employed by the lessee are first entitled to payment out of the proceeds of sale. Notice of the claim must be given to the landlord or bailiff before the sale. The landlord is next entitled to claim rent, not exceeding one year's, apportioned to the date of the levy, or the last levy, if more than one, to which any part of the fund is applicable. (Act of June 12, 1878.) Execution attachments may be had against debts due the defendant, including a judgment debt due him.

The costs allowed by law are small, and include an attorney's fee of three dollars. In attachment suits the garnishee is allowed a reasonable attorney's fee which is fixed by the court. It is seldom more than twenty dollars. If the garnishee, however, has no money or property in his hands, such fee cannot exceed ten dollars. A further attorney's commission may be stipulated for in notes, mortgages, and other instruments, but the negotiability of commercial paper is not thereby destroyed. It is important that such commissions should be included in the assessment of damages and form part of the judgment, as they cannot be collected as incident to it nor as part of the costs. The attorney has no standing himself to claim the commissions. They belong to the plaintiff and not the attorney.

Real estate taken in execution is sold by the sheriff at public sale, and the sheriff makes and acknowledges a deed. See Deeds. If the land is taken in execution on a personal judgment, it must be condemned by a jury as not of sufficient yearly value to satisfy the debt within seven years, before it can be sold. See Stay of Execution. In practice this is a matter of form. The condemnation may be waived by the agreement of the defendant in writing. On a proceeding in rem no condemnation is necessary. The purchaser at sheriff's sale takes all the estate and interest which the defendant in the execution had in the land at the time the lien attached on which the sale was made, and there is no redemption except in sales for taxes and municipal claims. See Tax Law. The equity of redemption of a mortgagor is extinguished by a sheriff's sale in a suit on the mortgage. The dower of a wife is extinguished by a sheriff's sale of the husband's land for his debts or under his mortgage (even though she did not join in the mortgage), unless the sale is fraudulently procured for the purpose.

The money produced on a sheriff's sale of real estate is applied to payment of the liens on the property, in order of their priority. Taxes come first in Philadelphia, and under acts of June 2, 1881, and April 30, 1885, in most counties of the State; mortgages according to date of recording; judgments according to date of entry. As to cutting out mortgages, etc., see Mortgages. By act of 1913, state taxes, unpaid bonus, interest, penalties, and all public accounts are made as first lien upon franchise and property of corporations, companies, associations, joint-stock associations, and limited partnerships.

Execution against the person of a debtor can be had in actions on contract coming within the exception to the act abolishing imprisonment for debt and in actions upon torts. See Arrest.

When goods seized by the sheriff are claimed by a third party the sheriff enters a rule on the claimant for an issue to determine the ownership thereof, of which notice is given to the parties. If the rule is made absolute, the claimant must give bond in double the value of the goods or in double the value of the judgment (see act of May 8, 1909, P. L. 475), and the sheriff then delivers the goods to the claimant. If there be more than one execution, only one bond is required. If the goods are in the claimant's possession, he may file his own bond if he can show that he does not derive title from the defendant. The value of the goods is determined by appraisers appointed by the sheriff, subject to the approval of the court. The appraiser's value is prima facie evidence of the real value, but the real value may be shown. An issue is then framed in which the claimant is the plaintiff and all other parties are defendant. It is a concise statement of the rights of the claimant to the title, sworn to by him, or some one in his behalf, with an affidavit of the defendant that he believes the title of the claimant to be invalid. If the defendant in the issue fails to file such affidavit within fifteen days' notice of a rule to file the same, judgment goes against the defendant for want of such affidavit. Other parties may be allowed to intervene by leave of court. The bond and claimant's statement of title must be filed within two weeks after the rule for an issue is made absolute. If the claimant fails to give bond, but files his statement of title, the court may direct a sale of the goods and the payment of the proceeds into court. Costs follow the judgment. The sheriff upon compliance with the act is free from liability.

Any creditor of a party who has confessed a judgment may petition the court to inquire into its validity, upon petition averring it to be fraudulent; the hearing shall be in not less than three nor more than five days. The parties may be examined. A jury trial is provided for. The lien is preserved; but perishable goods may be ordered sold. The petitioner must give bond before the court grants the rule to test the judgment. (Act of July 9, 1897.) An execution and levy on property brought into the jurisdiction by fraud, artifice, or deceit are void and will be set aside, and if a sale has actually taken place the proceeds will be ordered paid to defendant. (Williams v. Steenrod, 11 Dist. 22.)

The act of April 20, 1905, P. L. 239, provides for and defines the rights, remedies, duties, and liabilities of purchasers of real estate at judicial sales and of the grantees, heirs, devisees, and of the persons then in possession thereof.

The act of May 9, 1913, provides for oral examination of a judgment debtor for purpose of discovering whether he has property which may be made subject to execution on the judgment.

License. — Commercial travelers are not required to take out a license when their employers pay for a license at their chief place of business in the State, but the goods must be sold to dealers or merchants. Commercial travelers from other States should procure county licenses in counties requiring them. Transient retailers of goods, whether represented "to be bankrupt, assignee's, or about to quit business, or of goods damaged by fire, water, or otherwise," must take out a license, renewable monthly. The amount is to be fixed in cities or boroughs, by ordinance, at from twenty-five dollars to two hundred dollars, and in townships it is fixed by the act at twenty-five dollars a month. Retail vendors of goods pay an annual license tax of two dollars, and one mill additional on the dollar upon gross business; wholesale vendors pay three dollars, and a half mill additional on each dollar of gross business. Dealers at any exchange pay twenty-five cents on each thousand dollars of gross business. Foreign mutual savings fund and building and loan associations doing business in this State must pay annual license fee of one hundred dollars. The Act of April 25, 1907, P. L. 122, regulates the annual license fees to be paid by wholesale liquor dealers in cities of the 1st, 2d, and 3d classes and in boroughs and townships. Persons engaged in business of making loans of two hundred dollars or less must secure a license. (Act of May 11, 1909, P. L. 518.) Milk dealers in Philadelphia must take out license. (Act of May 27, 1909, P. L. 237.)

The act of June 7, 1907, provides for the licensing and regulation of foreign companies and agents thereof engaged in the sale of their own bonds or other securities in this State.

Liens. — Shipbuilders, merchants, mechanics, etc., have a lien for one year on vessels for building, repairing, and supplying them. See Mechanics' Liens; Judgment and Execution; Tax Law.

Life Estates. — Upon the application of any lien creditor for a writ of venditioni exponas against property subject to a life estate, the tenant for life shall have at least ten days' notice of the application for such writ; but if the tenant for life be a non-resident and his whereabouts cannot be ascertained after diligent inquiry, upon the presentation to the court by petition of any lien creditor, setting forth such facts, the court may grant an order of publication in at least two weekly newspapers in the county where the life estate is located, for a period of four weeks, and the mailing of a copy of each of such publications to the life tenant's last known place of residence, which will have the same force and effect as if the life tenant had received personal notice.

Limitation. — Actions on contracts, notes, and instruments not under seal must be commenced within six years from the time the right of action accrues; actions for injury wrongfully done to the person, where the injury does not result in death, must be brought within two years. In case of death, within one year after the death, and for slanderous words spoken, written, or printed, within one year. Actions for account (except mutual accounts between merchants), detinue, and replevin, within six years. Debts excepted out of the statute and unclaimed for twenty years are presumed to have been paid. The payment of judgments, mortgages, and other instruments under seal will be presumed after twenty years; but this presumption may be overcome by proof of non-payment. By act of May 8, 1895, in the case of any charge on land "under any proceeding in any court of record, or under any deed, will, mortgage, dower, recognisance, judgment, decree, or other obligation or instrument," which has been due for twenty-one years and no payment has been made on account for that period, and no release, etc., is of record, the proper court may, on specified notice to parties, decree a release. In an action based on a fraud, a statute will run from the date of the fraudulent act complained of unless such fraud has been actively concealed by defendant. (Smith v. Blackly, 198 Pa. 173.)

A debt barred by the statute may be revived by an acknowledgment of it by the debtor as due, coupled with a promise to pay it; and the promise to pay may be implied, if the acknowledgment be plain, express, and unambiguous, and there be nothing to negative such an implication. But the rules upon the subject are so technical and precise that a promissory note or other written acknowledgment of the debt, from the debtor to the creditor, should invariably be taken, if obtainable. See Estates of Deceased Persons.

Actions for the recovery of real estate must be brought within twenty-one years, except in cases of persons under legal disability; but all such are barred after thirty years. Actions to enforce specific performance of contract of sale of real estate, to enforce equity of redemption, or any implied or resulting trust as to realty, must be brought within five years, unless there is a longer time given in the contract, or there has been a substantial performance, or such contract, equity of redemption, or resulting trust shall have been acknowledged in writing by the party to be charged therewith, within the same period. The limitation does not apply to implied trusts arising from the relation of attorney and client. Probate of a will of real estate is conclusive after three years.

The statutes of limitation are subject to the following exceptions as to personal actions: minors, femes covert, non compos mentis, persons in prison, and citizens beyond sea or outside of the United States, when the cause of action accrued. Persons out of the State, but in the United States, and aliens beyond sea, are not excepted. But in civil suits on causes of action arising in the State, a defendant who shall have become a non-resident after the cause of action arose shall not have the benefit of the statute during his period of residence without the State. (Act May 22, 1895.) As to actions for the recovery of real estate, the exceptions are minors, femes covert, non compos mentis, and persons imprisoned; persons beyond sea are not excepted; they were, but the exception has been repealed. Minors attain majority at twenty-one years of age, without regard to sex.

Married Women. — From and after June 1, 1895, no person shall be joined in marriage until a license shall have been obtained for the purpose from the clerk of the orphans' court in the county where the marriage is to be performed, or where either of the parties resides. Any person who shall solemnize a marriage without a license is liable to a fine of one hundred dollars. By the act of May 23, 1887, a magistrate, alderman, notary public (act of March 24, 1905, P. L. 58), or justice of the peace, as well as the court clerk of the county wherein either party resides, and in the county where the license is desired, may inquire as to the legality of the contemplated marriage, and the affidavits, etc., as to the same are to be forwarded to the clerk who issues the license.

The marriage of first cousins is unlawful, and all such marriages contracted after January 1, 1902, are void.

The act of June 8, 1893, gives a married woman the same rights and powers over all her property, real, personal, and mixed, as has an unmarried person, with these exceptions: 1. She cannot convey or mortgage her realty unless her husband joins in the conveyance or mortgage. (She may mortgage her separate estate to secure her husband's debts. Righter v. Livingston, 214 Pa. 28.) 2. She cannot become an accommodation indorser, maker, guarantor, or surety for another. She may dispose of her property, real or personal, by will, but she cannot affect her husband's right to his tenancy by curtesy in her estate, nor his right to take against the will as provided by existing laws.

By act of June 3, 1911, a married woman has the power to make conveyances of real estate to her husband as if she were a feme sole. By the same act all conveyances of real estate theretofore made by any married woman to her husband, which had been duly signed, acknowledged, and delivered by her, were validated and made good in law.

A married woman may sue and be sued civilly and in all respects and in any form of action as an unmarried woman. "But she may not sue her husband except in her proceeding for divorce, or in a proceeding to protect or recover her separate property, nor may he sue her except in a proceeding for divorce or in a proceeding to protect or recover his separate property, nor may she be arrested or imprisoned for her torts.

By the act of May 1, 1913, a married woman who has been deserted, abandoned, or driven from her home by her husband may sue her husband upon any cause of action whatsoever; and she is a competent witness against the husband in such case.

A married woman's separate deed, lease, or mortgage in which her husband does not join is absolutely void, except where her husband has been declared a lunatic, when she may dispose of her separate estate by deed or otherwise, or bind the same by mortgage, as fully and completely as if a feme sole, without her husband's joinder or consent to the deed or mortgage, subject, nevertheless, to the rights of the husband under the intestate laws, provided that the court of common pleas may, upon the petition of the committee of the husband, order a sale of his right or interest in the real estate. (Act of May 25, 1878.) Upon a conveyance of a lunatic's real estate by his committee under an order of court, his wife may release her dower therein in the same manner as if she were a widow; provided that such release be executed prior to a decree declaring that such lunatic has been restored to reason. (Act of March 28, 1879.) She may, if of full age (twenty-one years), give a refunding bond for a legacy or share in a decedent's estate as if unmarried, and she may transfer railroad stock, the loans of this State or the city of Philadelphia, or the loans or (act of March 18, 1875) stock of any corporation created under the laws of this State (act of April 16, 1874), as if unmarried. She may keep a bank account in her own name and draw money on her own check or receipt without the consent of her husband. (Act of May 15, 1874.) She may also sell, assign, transfer, or satisfy a mortgage or judgment as if unmarried (act of May 25, 1878), and may be a corporator or officer of an association incorporated for purposes of learning, benevolence, charity, or religion. (Act of April 9, 1879.) By the act of April 10, 1879, it is made lawful for any married woman of full age to hold stock in any saving fund, building, or loan association, and to have all the rights and privileges of other members, including the right to borrow money from them and bid premiums therefor, and to secure the loan by assigning her stock or other securities, or by executing a bond and mortgage upon her separate estate, provided that the husband join in the bond and mortgage. She may sell, assign, transfer, or withdraw, her stock without her husband's joinder, and the association may collect the loan with dues, interest, premium, and fines, as loans to other members are now by law collected. The act declares that stock so held shall not be liable for the husband's debts. By act of April 22, 1891, married women may grant and convey land as trustees, and such grants previously made by them are confirmed. A judgment confessed by a married woman is no longer prima facie void. When living apart from her husband, under separation articles, she may convey or incumber her real estate without joining her husband. (Act of July 9, 1897.) She may sue in divorce without a next friend.

Where property is claimed by a married woman as against the creditors of her husband, she must show clearly, either that she owned it at the time of her marriage or else acquired it afterwards by gift, bequest, or purchase. In case of purchase after marriage, the burden is upon her to prove distinctly that she paid for it with funds which were furnished by her husband during his solvency without fraudulent intent (see 193 Pa. 91 and 207 Pa. 513), or that she obtained it upon the credit of her separate estate. In the absence of such proof the presumption is a violent one that her husband furnished the means of payments. It has been held that the husband need not be joined in suing the wife.

By the act of May 28, 1915, whenever a man and wife live apart and separate for one year or more, and all marital relations between them have ceased, and the husband, for one year or more, has not supported his wife, nor their child or children, if any they have, from the time of the separation of the husband and wife, and the wife and child or children, if any there are, are maintained either by the wife, by the joint efforts of the wife and children, by the children, or from the income of the wife's separate estate, then in such case the wife may petition the court of common pleas of the county in which she resides to be decreed a feme sole trader; and if the foregoing facts then appear to be true, she shall be so declared a feme sole trader; and thereupon her property shall be subject to her free and absolute disposal during life or by will without liability to be interfered with or obtained by such husband, and in case of intestacy shall go to her next of kin as if he were previously deceased.

A married woman may appoint testamentary guardian for her child or adopted child during his or her minority or any shorter period when the father or adopting father of such child shall be deceased and has not appointed such a guardian. Where she leaves the child an estate, she has the right to appoint a testamentary guardian for such estate of the child, without regard to whether the father is dead or has appointed a testamentary guardian.

Mechanics' Liens. — The scope and intent of the act of June 4, 1901, is that it shall furnish a complete and exclusive system so far as relates to liens for labor or materials commenced to be furnished after its approval. Every structure or other improvement, and the curtilage appurtenant thereto, is subject to a lien for the payment of all debts due to the contractor or sub-contractor in the erection or removal thereof, in the addition thereof, and in the alteration and repair thereof. No lien shall be allowed for labor or materials furnished for purely public purposes, nor against any property held by the committee of a lunatic, the guardian of a minor, or a trustee under deed, will, or appointment by the court, unless by virtue of a contract made under authority of the power contained in a deed or will. No claim for alterations or repairs is valid, unless it be for a sum exceeding one hundred dollars, and, in the case of a sub-contractor, unless notice of intention to file a claim therefor, if the amount due be not paid, is given to the owner before the claimant completes his work or furnishes the last of his materials. No claim is valid against the owner of leased property by reason of any consent given to the tenant to improve the same, unless such consent be in writing and signed by the owner.

A substantial addition to a structure or other improvement is treated as a new erection thereof. Every adaptation of an old structure or other improvement to a new or distinct one which effects a material change in the interior or exterior thereof, is deemed an erection thereof. (See Porter v. Weightman, 29 Super. 488.) Materials placed on or near the curtilage appurtenant to the structure or other improvement, or delivered to the owner or contractor for use therein, are presumed to have been used therein.

A contract made by the owner with one not intended in good faith to be the contractor has no legal effect as to third parties; but such contractor, as to third parties, may be treated as the agent of the owner.

Any sub-contractor, intending to file a claim, must give written notice to the owner to that effect, and a sworn statement of his claim, the amount due, kind of labor or materials furnished, etc., and the date when the last work was done or materials furnished. (See act of March 24, 1909, P. L. 65.) This notice and statement must be served at least one month before the claim is filed, and within three months after the last of the work was done or materials furnished, if he has six months within which to file his claim, and within forty-five days if he has but three months within which to file it. (Wolf Co. v. R. R. 29 Super. 439.)

In the case of tenancies or leasehold estates and of alterations and repairs, the claim must be filed in the court of common pleas of the county wherein property is situate, within three months after the claimant's contract is completed, and in all other cases within six months thereafter. The sci. fa. must be issued within two years, unless the owner waive the necessity for so doing for a further period not exceeding three years. The sci. fa. should contain notice to the defendant to file an affidavit of defense within fifteen days or judgment after it is issued. Final judgment must be entered on the verdict within five years after its recovery. The form of the claim and the writ of sci. fa. issued thereon is changed by the act of April 17, 1905, P. L. 172.

If the legal effect of the contract between the owner and the contractor is that no claim shall be filed by any one, such provision shall be binding; but the only admissible evidence thereof, as against a sub-contractor, shall be proof of actual notice thereof to him, before any labor or materials furnished by him; or proof that a duly written and signed contract to that effect has been filed in the office of the prothonotary of the court of common pleas of the county wherein the structure or other improvement is situate, prior to the commencement of the work upon the ground (Glassport Lumber Co. v. Wolf, 213 Pa. 407), or within ten days after the execution of the principal contract, or not less than ten days prior to the contract with the claimant; and the prothonotary shall index the same, making the contractor the defendant and the owner the plaintiff. The only admissible evidence that such a provision has, notwithstanding its filing, been waived in favor of the claimant shall be a written agreement to that effect, signed by all those who, under the contract, are interested antagonistically to the claimant's allegation. A contract against liens to give notice must be indexed in the judgment lien index. (King v. Ruse, 15 York, 86.) The act of June 4, 1901, favors this construction. It is only necessary under this act that such an agreement should be indexed in judgment index in the name of the contractor alone.

Within one month after the filing of the claim, the claimant shall serve the notice upon the owner of the fact of the filing of the claim, giving the court, term, and number and the date of filing thereof, and shall file of record in said proceedings an affidavit setting forth the fact and manner of service. Service of the notice may be accepted by the owner's attorney; or the claimant, his agent or attorney, may serve the notice upon the owner in any of the methods now provided for by law in the case of a summons; or, if for any cause service by any of the aforesaid methods cannot be had, then by posting the notice upon the property described in the claim and by mailing a copy to the owner at his last known residence. A failure to serve such notice or post it, or have service accepted as hereinbefore provided, and to file an affidavit thereof within the time specified, shall be sufficient ground for striking off the claim.

Mechanics' lien claims may be assigned. The removal or detachment of any structure or other improvement, liable for a mechanics' lien claim, may be enjoined by the court upon the petition of the claimants. If the structure or other improvement be in fact removed, it will still be liable for the claim, except in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, after the removal and without notice.

If the structure or other improvement liable for such claims be destroyed by fire or other casualty, prior to the payment of such claims, any insurance recovered will, after the insured has received all premiums paid by him, and any person having an estate in the property, for whose benefit an insurance was placed thereon, has been paid in full, inure to the benefit of all claimants.

In every distribution hereafter made under legal proceedings in any court, if any portion of the fund for distribution shall have been realized because of labor or materials furnished to any structure or other improvement for the party whose estate is to be distributed, any distributee claiming for labor done or materials furnished to such structure or other improvement shall be entitled to priority against the portion of the fund thus realized.

Mortgages — Are executed and acknowledged like deeds. The wife need not join in a mortgage of the husband's property. Unless intended as a fraud upon her, a sheriff's sale under his mortgage discharges her dower. It is provided by act of June 8, 1881, that no defeasance to any deed absolute on its face shall have the effect of reducing it to a mortgage, unless the defeasance is made at the same time with the deed, and is in writing, signed, sealed, acknowledged, and delivered by the grantee in the deed, and to effect a subsequent grantee or mortgagee it must be recorded before such subsequent grant or mortgage. (Amendment act of April 23, 1909, P. L. 137; O'Donnell v. Vandersall, 213 Pa. 551.) Such defeasances must be recorded and indexed as mortgages. The lien of a mortgage (except for purchase-money) dates from the time of recording it. When the lien of a mortgage upon real estate is prior to all liens upon the same property, except other mortgages, ground rents, purchase-money due to the Commonwealth, taxes, charges, assessments, and municipal claims, whose lien, though afterward accruing, has by law priority given it, the lien of such mortgage is not destroyed or affected by any judicial or other sale whatsoever. This law does not apply to mortgages of unseated lands, or to sales of unseated lands for taxes. If a judicial sale is made under a prior mortgage or ground rent, etc., the subsequent mortgage will be discharged. A purchase-money mortgage is a lien from its date, if recorded within thirty days. A mortgage is usually accompanied by a bond and warrant to confess judgment thereon, which may be entered up in court at any time, and execution issued whenever any part of the debt or interest is due. The usual method of collecting a mortgage debt is by writ of scire facias thereon; according to statute. Notice to subsequent lien-holders is not required. Ejectment may be brought upon a mortgage, but this remedy is rarely resorted to. An assignment of a bond must have two subscribing witnesses and be under seal, to entitle the assignee to sue in his own name. The purchaser of property "under and subject to a mortgage," or other incumbrance, is not personally liable for payment thereof without express agreement, and the words "under and subject" are not construed to create such personal responsibility. The right to enforce personal liability inures only to the person with whom the agreement is made, and does not continue after the grantee has bona fide parted with the property, without express agreement to the contrary. (Act of June 12, 1878.)

Act of June 8, 1911, provides for satisfaction of mortgages to be recorded in Pennsylvania when the original mortgages have been lost, mislaid, or destroyed.

Chattel Mortgages. — Mortgages of personal property without a delivery of possession to the mortgagee are void as against creditors. By the act of assembly of April 27, 1855, lessees of coal collieries, manufactories, and other premises may mortgage their leases with the buildings and machinery, and by act of April 15, 1853, leases of mines, etc., may be mortgaged. Both the lease and mortgage may be recorded, and the other requisites of the laws must be complied with. By the act of April 28, 1887, as amended by the act of May 30, 1891, all iron ore mined and prepared for use, pig iron, blooms, and rolled or hammered iron in sheets, bars, or plates, iron and steel nails, steel ingots and billets, rolled or hammered steel in sheets, bars, or plates, and all boilers, engines, oil, gas, and artesian well supplies, and all steel or iron castings of every description not in place, all petroleum or coal oil, crude or refined, in tanks, barrels, reservoirs, or other receptacle in bulk, all roofing and manufactured slate, as well as slate quarried to be used for roofing or manufactured for other uses, asphaltum, blocks, including all materials used in the manufacture thereof, all manufactured cement in barrels, bags, or bins, including all material on hand used in the manufacture thereof, may be mortgaged for any sum not less than one hundred dollars. The act of assembly provides the form of mortgage, and the mortgage has to be acknowledged and recorded in the proper place; assignments and releases have to be recorded, and mortgagors are criminally liable for not disclosing the existence of such mortgages to purchasers.

Notaries Public. — By the act of March 5, 1791, the governor is authorized to appoint and commission notaries public. Application for an appointment must be made on blank forms prepared for the purpose, which may be obtained at Harrisburg. Before any commission issues, a receipt from the state treasurer shall first be produced showing a payment of twenty-five dollars by the applicant into the state treasury. Upon his appointment and before entering upon his official duties every notary shall take and subscribe an oath of affirmation that he will faithfully perform his official duties, etc., and also shall give bond, with sufficient security, to be approved by the governor, which shall be recorded in the office for recording of deeds within the county where he may reside. Every notary shall provide a public notarial seal, with which he shall authenticate all his acts, instruments, and attestations. In addition to the seal every notary must affix to each notarial act a statement in writing as to when his commission expires. (Act of April 4, 1901.) Women over twenty-one years of age may be appointed notaries public. (Act of April 14, 1893.) Whenever a female notary marries, she must obtain a new commission, which shall cover the time of the original commission, and give a new bond conforming to the change of name. But no additional payment shall be required of her. No person shall be commissioned a notary public unless he has resided within the Commonwealth two years next previous to his appointment. (Act of March 5, 1791.) No person holding or exercising any judicial office in this Commonwealth, or any office or appointment of trust or profit under the constitution or laws of the United States, shall at the same time hold the office of notary public. (Act of April 4, 1840.) The act of March 18, 1903, provides that hereafter any stockholder, director, or clerk in any bank, banking institution, or trust company may at the same time hold the office of notary public; providing that no one of the above shall perform any notarial duty for such bank, banking institution, or trust company in which he or she may be stockholder, director, or clerk. The above act is amended by act of April 27, 1909, so as to allow a clerk to perform certain notarial services for the institution by which he is employed. The act of March 11, 1903, provides that all notarial acts heretofore performed by notaries public in this State, being at the same time justices of the peace, are hereby validated. Act of April 23, 1909, P. L. 151, provides that the offices of justice of the peace and notary public are not incompatible. A notary public's term of office shall be four years. (Act of June 11, 1885. See also act of April 4, 1901.) By the act of June 6, 1893, the jurisdiction of notaries public is extended throughout the State.

The prothonotary of the common pleas of the county in and for which the notary is appointed certifies to his official character.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — Promissory notes, bills of exchange, drafts, orders, and checks are generally negotiable by indorsement; and are, in the hands of bona fide holder for value, clear of all equities or set-offs existing between the original parties. A negotiable promissory note is an unconditional promise, in writing, to pay, on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time, a sum certain in money to order or to bearer. A bill of exchange is an unconditional order, in writing, to pay, on demand or at a fixed or determinable time, a sum certain in money to order or bearer. An inland bill of exchange is a bill both drawn and payable within this State. Any other bill is a foreign bill. Protest is not required except in the case of a foreign bill of exchange. The drawee of a bill of exchange is not liable thereon until he accepts the same, and such acceptance must be in writing and signed by the drawee or his duly authorized agent. Acceptance means an acceptance completed by delivery or notification. The acceptor admits the existence of the drawer, the genuineness of his signature and his capacity and authority to draw the instrument, also the existence of the payee and his then capacity to indorse. A clause in a promissory note, allowing a commission as a collection fee in case of non-payment at maturity, does not render the note uncertain and does not destroy its negotiability. See also Judgment and Execution. In several suits on the same promissory note against the maker and indorser, but one attorney fee of three dollars can be recovered as costs, and not one in each suit. Overdue notes are not negotiable, but are subject to existing equities.

When a person places his indorsement on an instrument negotiable by delivery he incurs all the liabilities of an indorser. An accommodation party is one who has signed the instrument as maker, drawer, acceptor, or indorser, without receiving value therefor, and for the purpose of lending his name to some other person. Such a person is liable on the instrument to a holder for value, notwithstanding such holder at the time of taking the instrument knew him to be only an accommodation party.

A person placing his signature upon an instrument otherwise than as maker, drawer, or acceptor is deemed to be an indorser, unless he clearly indicates by appropriate words his intention to be found in some other capacity.

Every person negotiating an instrument by delivery or by a qualified indorsement warrants: 1, that the instrument is genuine, and in all respects what it purports to be; 2, that he has a good title to it; 3, that all prior parties had the capacity to contract; 4, that he has no knowledge of any fact which would impair the validity of the instrument and render it valueless, but, when the negotiation is by delivery only, the warranty extends in favor of no one further than the immediate transferee.

Where a person not otherwise a party to an instrument places thereon his signature in blank, before delivery, he is liable as indorser, in accordance with the following rules: 1. If the instrument is payable to the order of a third person he is liable to the payee and to all subsequent parties. 2. If the instrument is payable to the order of the maker or drawer, or is payable to bearer, he is liable to all parties subsequent to the maker or drawer. 3. If he signs for the accommodation of the payee, he is liable to all parties subsequent to the payee.

Where the instrument is not payable on demand, presentment must be made on the day it falls due. Where it is payable on demand, presentment must be made within a reasonable time after its issue, except that, in the case of bill of exchange, presentment for payment will be sufficient if made within a reasonable time after the last negotiations thereof.

Presentment for payment to be sufficient must be made: 1, by the holder or by some person authorized to receive payment on his behalf; 2, at a reasonable hour on a business day; 3, at a proper place as herein defined; 4, to a person primarily liable on the instrument, or, if he is absent or inaccessible, to any person at the place where the presentment is made.

Presentment for payment is not necessary in order to charge the person primarily liable on the instrument. But, unless dispensed with, presentment for payment is necessary in order to charge the drawer and indorsers.

Notice of dishonor may be given by or on behalf of the holder or on behalf of any party to the instrument who might be compelled to pay it to the holder and upon taking it up would have a right to reimbursement from the party to whom the notice is given. It may be given either verbally or in writing.

Notice of dishonor must be given to the drawer and to each indorser, except where such notice is waived. Notice of dishonor is dispensed with when, after the exercise of a reasonable diligence, it cannot be given to or does not reach the parties to be charged. Notice of dishonor is not required to be given to the drawer in either of the following cases: 1. Where the drawer and drawee are the same person. 2. Where the drawee is a fictitious person or a person not having capacity to contract. 3. Where the drawee is the person to whom the instrument is presented for payment. 4. Where the drawer has no right to expect or require that the drawee or acceptor will honor the instrument. 5. Where the drawer has countermanded payment.

Notice of dishonor is not required to be given to an indorser in any of the following cases: 1. Where the drawee is a fictitious person or person not having capacity to contract, and the indorser was aware of the fact at the time he indorsed the instrument. 2. Where the indorser is a person to whom the instrument is presented for payment. 3. Where the instrument was made or accepted for his accommodation.

Where notice of dishonor is duly addressed and deposited in the post-office, the sender is deemed to have given due notice notwithstanding any miscarriage in the mails. Notice of dishonor may be waived either before the time of giving notice has arrived or after the omission to give due notice, and the waiver may be expressed or implied.

The holder of a promissory note may bring suit against the maker, or any of the indorsers, or bring separate suits against all, at his pleasure. He can have but one satisfaction. The limitation of time in which suit must be brought is the same as to maker and indorsers. See Limitations.

By the act of June 23, 1897, as amended by act of February 16, 1911, January 1, February 12 and 22, Good Friday, May 30 (Memorial Day), July 4, the first Monday of September (Labor Day), October 12 (Columbus Day), the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November (Election Day), Christmas, every Saturday after twelve o'clock noon until twelve o'clock midnight, and Thanksgiving Day are designated as legal holidays, and in respect to negotiable papers are to be treated and considered as such, and where the day or the last day for doing any act required or permitted to be done in relation to negotiable instrument falls on Sunday or a holiday, the act may be done on the next succeeding secular or business day.

Instruments falling due on Saturday are to be presented for payment on the next succeeding business day, except that instruments payable on demand may, at the option of the holder, be presented for payment before twelve o'clock noon on Saturday when that entire day is not a holiday.

Every negotiable instrument is payable at the time fixed therein without grace.

The act does not invalidate the entry, issuance, or service of any writ or other legal process on Saturday half holiday, or prevent any bank from transacting business if the electors elect to do so.

When January 1, February 12 or 22, May 30, July 4, October 12, or December 25 occur on Sunday, the following Monday shall be a public holiday.

Judgment Notes — Contain a warrant of attorney authorizing a confession of judgment against the maker of the note, and may be filed and entered among the records of any competent court at any time after signature, but cannot be entered after the maker's death. The entry of the note creates a judgment dating from the time of entry, the lien of which binds real estate like that of any other judgment, but execution cannot issue upon it until the note becomes due. Section V of the Act of May 16, 1901, P. L. 194, provides that the negotiability of an instrument is not affected by a provision which authorizes a confession of judgment "if the instrument be not paid at maturity." When, however, a provision authorizes a confession of judgment before maturity, the negotiability of the instrument is destroyed. See Milton National Bank v. Beaver, 25 Superior Court, 494.

Any promissory note or negotiable instrument given for a patent right must have the words "given for a patent right" prominently written or printed over the signature, and such note in the hands of any purchaser or holder shall be subject to the same defenses as in the hands of the original holder. (Act of April 12, 1872.) By the same act it is made a misdemeanor to take, sell, or transfer any promissory note or negotiable instrument given for a patent right without these words so written or printed over the signature. An innocent purchaser of a note for value, however, is not affected by the omission of the words. (93 Pa. 373.)

Partnerships. — The legislature on March 26, 1915, adopted the "uniform partnership act."

On April 12, 1917, the Uniform Limited Partnership Act was adopted in Pennsylvania. This act was on April 13, 1917, amended in respect to the manner in which after dissolution a partner can bind the partnership, and the manner in which the liability of a partner under paragraph (I b) shall be satisfied. There is also the act of 1874, by which the liability of all the partners is limited to the extent of the portions of subscriptions to capital not paid up. Partnerships of the latter kind are bound to use the word "limited" in their papers and transactions. There are various laws applicable to both classes of limited partnerships, and in order to have them formed it is necessary to execute and file certain papers as required by law.

The limited partnership law of 1874 has a provision reading as follows: "No debt shall be contracted or liability incurred for said association, except by one or more of the said managers, and no liability for an amount exceeding five hundred dollars, except against the person incurring it, shall bind the said association, unless reduced to writing and signed by at least two managers." In Bank v. Lauth, 28 W. N. C. 213, the supreme court held that strangers dealing with a limited partnership under the said act are bound by the liability imposed upon it by the act; and this case illustrates the application of such liability. The act of June 8, 1895, provides for renewing such partnership for not over twenty years. Dissatisfied members may have their interest appraised. The partnership may fix the number of managers from three to nine.

Besides the above classes of partnership, two or more persons, by act of May 9, 1899, amended by the acts of July 9, 1901, and of April 12, 1917, may associate for the conduct of any kind of business (except electric light and power, artificial or natural gas, water, railroad, passenger railway, traction, banking or trust company), within the State or elsewhere, and may limit the liability of the partners to the capital stock subscribed plus interest on any unpaid subscriptions. The articles of partnership must contain certain specified details, must be acknowledged and recorded with the recorder of deeds in the county of the principal office, and a copy filed within thirty days thereafter in the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth. Notice must be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the same county once a week for three weeks. In the case of dissolution for any cause, whether by expiration of the period fixed for the partnership, or otherwise, notice thereof shall be published in one newspaper of the county designated as the place wherein the principal office or place of business is located, for six consecutive issues. Hereafter such notices shall be published in the legal journal, if any, of the proper county. (Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 386.) No name or style of partnership shall be adopted which will include the name of any partner whose liability is intended to be limited, unless there shall be added the word "registered." A partnership association formed under the act of June 2, 1874, or a partnership formed under the act of May 9, 1899, must pay a bonus of one third of one per cent. of its capital stock and a like bonus on each subsequent increase thereof.

Practice. — The common law practice is in force, modified by statutes and rules of court. All petitions or papers in the nature thereof must be supported by affidavit.

Preferences. — Fraudulent confession of judgment to one not a bona fide creditor made to defraud creditors, is a misdemeanor. See Arrest and Assignments.

Proof of Claims. — Persons who reside out of the State, sending claims to Pennsylvania for collection, should send full particulars of the names and residences of the parties. Non-resident plaintiffs may be required by rule of court to enter security for costs, if demanded within a reasonable time after suit brought, but the amount usually required is not large. Book debts for goods or services may be proved by the production of the book of original entries, supported by oath of the person who made them, or, if he be absent and cannot be produced, by proof of his handwriting. See Evidence and Estates of Deceased Persons. Disputed claims must be proved by competent evidence, either written evidence or the testimony of witnesses present at the trial or audit, or upon depositions taken under rules of court on notice to opposite party. See Depositions.

Judgment obtained in any other State is conclusive evidence of debt when action is brought upon it, if the record shows that the defendant was duly served with process, or appeared in the action, and is proved before the jury by a copy of the record duly certified according to act of Congress. In a suit on such a judgment, or on a judgment in a foreign country, the plaintiff may have judgment for want of an affidavit of defense, upon filing a statement of claim. See Actions; Assignments.

Recording Acts. — Deeds and other writings authorized to be recorded must be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds in the county where the lands lie. There is a recorder of deeds in each county. Deeds executed within the State must be recorded within ninety days; in Philadelphia deeds must be recorded at once; those executed out of the State, within six months after the execution thereof. Deeds not recorded in time are void as against bona fide purchasers or mortgagees for value without notice, whose deeds or mortgages are duly recorded. However, a deed recorded after six months from the date of its execution has priority over a subsequent deed recorded within six months from its execution, if the recording of the first deed is prior in date to the recording of the second deed. (Gillespie v. The Railroad, 204 Pa. 107.) A purchaser at sheriff's sale is within the protection of the act, but a judgment creditor is not. See Deeds; Mortgages. A person claiming title to lands by twenty years' adverse possession must file and have recorded a statement of his claim. Such statement will act as a deed of conveyance from the owner. By a failure to record such claim, if he is out of possession, no title by twenty-one years' adverse possession shall avail him against the purchaser, mortgagee, or judgment creditor, for value without notice.

Redemption. — See Tax Law; Judgment and Execution.

Replevin. — This action may be brought whenever one man has chattels to the possession of which another is entitled, without regard to the manner of taking.

The Act of April 19, 1901, says: Before any writ of replevin shall issue, the person applying for the said writ shall file with the prothonotary a bond with security in double the value of the goods sought to be replevied. The obligee is the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for the use of the parties interested. The amount of the bond is determined by an affidavit by the plaintiff of the value of the goods and chattels which shall be the cost to the defendant of replacing the goods, should the issue be decided in his favor. The prothonotary's action as to amount of security is subject to revision in court, which may on motion increase the bail, require new bail, or permit substitution of bail. The condition of the bond is that, if the plaintiff or plaintiffs fail to maintain their title to such goods or chattels or prosecute the suit, he or they shall pay unto the party thereunto entitled the value of said goods and chattels and all legal costs, fees, and damages which the defendant or other person to whom such goods or chattels so replevied belonged may sustain by reason of the issuance of such writ of replevin. The court may grant leave to be added as a party defendant to any person found in possession of the goods and chattels upon affidavit filed that the goods and chattels belonged to him, and he may intervene.

Such persons intervening, or defendant, may file a counter-bond within seventy-two hours after goods and chattels are replevied. Such bond is to the Commonwealth for the use of parties interested in same amount as the original bond and upon like conditions. Where several parties claim right of possession, the party in actual or constructive possession upon entering such counter-bond shall be entitled to have the goods and chattels. By act of April 14, 1905, P. L. 164, where a person intervening shall enter a claim property bond for the property replevied, if within seventy-four hours after notice of such entry the plaintiff shall set forth by affidavit by reason of special circumstances that the pecuniary value of such property will not compensate him for the loss thereof, the court or any judge in chambers during vacation time shall order such property impounded in the custody of the sheriff, provided plaintiff enter bond for the costs of the care and storage of the property while impounded. The party finally successful may at his option issue a writ retorno habendo and get physical custody of the goods. The plaintiff files a declaration which shall consist of a concise statement of the plaintiff's title verified by affidavit. The defendant or party intervening may compel the declaration by entering a rule on the plaintiff to file the declaration within fifteen days. If he does not, he is liable to be non-prossed, which will forfeit plaintiff's bond. The defendant or party intervening, upon being served with copy of declaration, shall file an affidavit of defense within fifteen days. Judgment against him may be taken for want of an affidavit of defense or want of a sufficient affidavit of defense. If defendant fails to appear, the plaintiff may file a common appearance and proceed. The suit is tried upon the issue raised by the affidavit of defense and upon no other pleadings. If the title to the goods and chattels be in the party who has not been given possession of the same, the verdict and accusation are as follows: The jury shall determine the value thereof to the successful party, and he may at his option issue a writ in the nature of a writ of retorno habendo requiring the delivery thereof to him with an added clause of fi. fa. as to the damages awarded and costs, and upon failure so to recover them, or upon the first instance, he may issue execution for the value thereof and the damages and costs, or he may sue in the first instance upon the bond given and recover thereon the value of the goods and chattels, damages and costs, in the same manner that recovery is had on the other official bonds. Action on the bond is limited to five years after determination of suit in which the bond is given. Alias and pluries writs may be issued if the goods and chattels are not taken or all the defendants not served.

The act of April 19, 1901, does not give landlord right to give claim property bond and retain goods of tenant levied on.

(Beginning with Barr they are cited as Pennsylvania State Reports (Pa. or Pa. St.), being published under the authority of the State.) Four vols. of Pennypacker report supreme court cases, 1881-1884, not in the regular series. William I. Schaffer is present state reporter: There is a digest of decisions from 1754-1887 by Frederick C. Brightly, with supplements from 1877-1889 and 1889-1895, by Frank F. Brightly, and from 1895-1903, entitled Brightly's Digest. Vail's Supplement, by Ruby R. Vail, Esq. There is an annual cumulative digest by James Monaghan, 1899-July, 1918. An elaborate digest of reports by Pepper and Lewis is now published. There are 23 volumes and supplement, 5 volumes, together with an index and table of contents. Weekly Notes of Cases, 44 vols. (now discontinued), contains supreme court decisions, and some decisions of local courts and some of the United States courts. There are 44 volumes of County Court Reports, a current series in all the lower courts. The Legal Intelligencer, now in its 75th volume, publishes many decisions, reprinted in 20 vols. of Philadelphia Reports and 27 vols. of District Reports. The decisions of the superior court, Kress and Allinson, 12 vols.; Schaffer and Allinson, 3 vols.; Schaffer and Weimer, 63 vols.

Revision. — There is no formal code or revision, Stewart's Purdon's Digest in 6 volumes and supplement, from 1700 to 1917, inclusive, is a digest of the general statutes of the State. There is also a digest of statutes by Pepper and Lewis, 4 vols., with annotations and lists of repealed statutes from 1700 to 1907. The legislature meets on the 1st Tuesday of January in odd years.

Sale of Personal Property. — The act of May 19, 1915, covers the subject of sales. Capacity to buy and sell is regulated by the general law concerning capacity to contract, and to transfer and acquire property. Where necessities are sold and delivered to an infant, or to a person who, by reason of incapacity or drunkenness, is incompetent to contract, he must pay a reasonable price therefor, or return the goods in substantially the same condition as when received, within reasonable time. A contract to sell, or a sale of any goods or choses in action, of the value of five hundred dollars or upwards, shall not be enforceable by action unless the buyer shall accept part of the goods or choses in action, and actually receive the same, or give something in earnest to bind the contract, or unless some note or memorandum in writing of the contract or sale be signed by the party to be charged or his agent in that behalf. In a contract to sell or a sale, unless a contrary intention appears, there is (1) an Executions. — See Judgments.

Executors and Administrators. — See Successions.

Exemptions. — The debtor's homestead not exceeding in value seventy-five dollars; tools and implements used in his trade or employment; two working animals or beasts of burden not exceeding seventy-five dollars in value; necessary clothing for himself and family; household furniture and utensils not exceeding thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents; provision for individual and family use sufficient for three months; libraries of lawyers, judges, clergymen, priests, school and music teachers not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars; one fishing boat and net of a fisherman not exceeding twelve dollars and fifty cents; lettered grave stones; — all of the above are exempt except on a judgment recovered for their purchase price or on a mortgage thereon.

Garnishments. — See Attachments; Judgments.

Guardians. — See Tutor.

Infants. — See Minors.

Injunctions. — Injunctions are issued by the courts of first instance or by justices of the Supreme Court. They may be granted to restrain the commission or continuance of an act claimed to be illegal, where it has produced waste or great and irreparable injury to the plaintiff. Temporary injunctions may be granted during the pendency of the action upon undertaking of the plaintiff with solvent sureties to respond in damages. It may be granted ex parte or after notice and hearing.

Insolvency. — See Bankruptcy.

Insurance. — Our Insurance Law is practically taken from the California Code.

Interest. — Six per cent. is the legal interest, but if interest is not agreed upon in writing same cannot be recovered. The Usury Law, enacted February 24, 1916, fixes the rate of interest on loans secured by mortgage or other security at twelve per cent. per annum, and on unsecured loans at fourteen per cent.; special provisions are made for pawnbrokers.

Judgments. — If no defense is made, judgment is entered at the expiration of the time allowed for the defendant to answer for the relief demanded in the complaint. In actions for unliquidated amounts and the like, judgment is entered after the plaintiff has appeared in court and given proof of the damages or other relief to which he is entitled. Executions on judgments may be issued at any time within five years after entry, and the sheriff must first attempt to satisfy them out of the personal property and then out of the judgment debtor's real property. An execution is returnable in not less than ten and not more than sixty days. If returned wholly or partially unsatisfied, the judgment debtor may be examined as to his property. This may also be done while the execution is issued and outstanding if the judgment creditor proves to the satisfaction of the court that the judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment. Persons indebted to the judgment debtor may pay the amount to the sheriff and his receipt acts as a discharge of the indebtedness to the extent of the debt. On proof by affidavit of a judgment creditor that a third person has money or property of a judgment debtor, or is indebted to him, the judge may require such person to be examined under supplementary proceedings. (See also Limitations.)

Land Law and Land Registration. — A Public Land Law has been enacted as well as the Torrens Title System of land registration and cadastral survey. There is a dual system of registration. The preëxisting Spanish system governed by the Spanish Mortgage Law and the Torrens System.

Language. — Both English and Spanish are official languages in our courts.

Licenses. — Licenses must be obtained for all legitimate business.

Limitations. — An action is considered commenced when the complaint is filed. If the defendant is out of the Philippine Islands when the cause of action accrues, time does not begin to run until he has returned to the Islands, and if he leaves the Islands after the time the action accrues, the time of absence is excluded. If the plaintiff in an action for the recovery of real property is under twenty-one years of age, insane, or in prison, such person may, after the expiration of ten years from the time the cause of action accrues, bring such action within three years after such disability is removed. When payment has been made upon any demand founded upon contract, or a written acknowledgment or promise to pay has been made and signed by the person sought to be charged, prescription runs from the time of such payment, acknowledgment, or promise. Felonies punishable with death or life imprisonment prescribe in twenty years; other felonies in fifteen years; misdemeanors in two months. An action upon a contract, agreement, or promise to pay in writing, or the judgment or decree of a court prescribes in ten years; an action upon a contract not in writing prescribes within six years; an action for trespass upon real estate prescribes within four years; an action for relief on the ground of fraud prescribes within four years, but the right of action does not accrue until the discovery of the fraud; an action for libel prescribes in two years; actions for slander, assault, battery, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, and an action upon statute for a penalty or forfeiture prescribes within one year. Actions for real property and real rights prescribe within ten years. Under the Code of Commerce, merchants are required to preserve their books for five years. The possession of personal property in good faith passes title in three years; otherwise in six years. Ten years' actual adverse public and continued possession of real property passes to the possessor full and complete title. There is no prescription between co-owners, unless they claim and occupy adversely to each other.

Marriage Law. — General Order No. 68, issued by the United States Military Governor in the Philippine Islands on December 18, 1899, is the existing law governing the requisites and formality of marriage, while the effect of marriage upon the parties and their rights, obligations and duties as spouses is governed by Spanish legislation embodied in the Civil Code. The age of consent is fourteen in the male and twelve in the female, although minors under the age of twenty-one require the written consent of their parents or guardian. Marriages may be solemnized by a judge of a court inferior to the Supreme Court, a justice of the peace or a minister of any denomination. No particular form of marriage is required, but the parties must declare, in the presence of the officiating person and at least two witnesses, that they take each other as husband and wife. No license to marry is required. The officiating person must expedite a certificate, the original being filed with the justice of the peace of the municipality where the marriage was celebrated. Marriages may be annulled for statutory causes within the time prescribed by law.

Married Women. — All property belonging to either husband or wife before marriage remains the personal property of the original owner. Property acquired during marriage and improvements on property acquired before marriage belong to the conjugal partnership and constitute the community property. The husband is the head of the community and administers the community property except when declared judicially absent, insane, or suffering civil interdiction, or when legally separated. Before marriage a contract may be executed stipulating the conditions for the conjugal partnership with regard to future and present property. Gifts between spouses during marriage are void except moderate gifts on occasions of birthdays, wedding anniversaries, etc. Parents are bound to give a dowry to their legitimate daughters of one half of their legitimate portion, and the dowry may be estimated or appraised or unestimated. The ownership of the estimated dowry passes to the husband, who upon dissolution of the marriage, must return its value. The husband is the administrator of the unestimated dowry, and upon dissolution of the marriage the same property constituting the dowry must be returned. The separate or personal property of the wife is administered by her unless she transfers the administration to her husband. The wife cannot alienate or mortgage her dowry or paraphernal property without the consent of her husband. A wife cannot sue nor be sued separate and apart from her husband except in actions between them, or in actions concerning the separate property of the wife in which the husband has no right or interest, or where the wife is living separate and apart from her husband. Upon dissolution of the marriage an inventory is taken, and after deducting the debts, charges, and obligations of the conjugal partnership, the husband and wife share equally in the community property.

Mining Law. — The act of Congress of July 1, 1902, as amended by the Act of Congress of February 6, 1905, provides for the location of mineral claims both lode and placer. The Philippine Commission and the Legislature have enacted laws carrying out the provisions of the Acts of Congress by prescribing regulations, etc. Foreigners are excluded.

Mechanics' Lien. — It is doubtful if it exists in the Philippine Islands.

Minors. — The age of majority is twenty-one years. A minor eighteen years of age may be emancipated by his father by a declaration in a public instrument. Parents are liable for the acts of their minor children and may be compelled to pay for their support. Minors may acquire possession, but to perfect title the assistance of their parents or guardians is required. Contracts of minors are voidable, but may be ratified when they become of age.

Mortgages. — Mortgages may be on real or personal property. Real mortgages are covered by the Civil Law enacted prior to American occupation and chattel mortgages are governed by Act No. 1508 of the Philippine Commission. In order that a mortgage may bind third persons, it must be recorded except where the property mortgaged passes into the possession of the mortgagee.

Notaries. — In the city of Manila, notaries are appointed by the Supreme Court. Appointments are confined to practicing attorneys and government officials. In the provinces, notaries are appointed by the courts of first instance. The notary must keep a notarial register, showing date, number, and page of each instrument registered, together with a synopsis of the instruments. Fees of notaries are fixed by law.

Notes, Bills, and Checks — Are governed by the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law.

Partnerships — Are either general or limited, civil or commercial. General partnerships are those in which all the partners have the same liability. Limited partnerships are those in which some partners are general partners with general liability, and others are special or limited partners with limited liability. Civil partnerships are organized under the provisions of the Civil Code, their purpose being civil or industrial; commercial partnerships must be organized under the provisions of the Commercial Code and recorded in the Commercial Register.

The liability of a civil partner is pro rata to the extent of his contribution to the firm's assets, whereas the liability of a commercial partner is joint and several to the full extent of his private property.

Patents. — Patents, trade-marks, and copyrights may be registered under the Trade-Mark Act of the Philippine Commission. The provisions of our Trade-Mark Act are very liberal and ample protection is offered against infringement and unfair competition.

Powers of Attorney. — A general power of attorney only covers the power to administer property, and any other power, the object of which is to transfer or affect any rights

Executions. — See Judgments.

Executors and Administrators. — See Successions.

Exemptions. — The debtor's homestead not exceeding in value seventy-five dollars; tools and implements used in his trade or employment; two working animals or beasts of burden not exceeding seventy-five dollars in value; necessary clothing for himself and family; household furniture and utensils not exceeding thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents; provision for individual and family use sufficient for three months; libraries of lawyers, judges, clergymen, priests, school and music teachers not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars; one fishing boat and net of a fisherman not exceeding twelve dollars and fifty cents; lettered grave stones; — all of the above are exempt except on a judgment recovered for their purchase price or on a mortgage thereon.

Garnishments. — See Attachments; Judgments.

Guardians. — See Tutor.

Infants. — See Minors.

Injunctions. — Injunctions are issued by the courts of first instance or by justices of the Supreme Court. They may be granted to restrain the commission or continuance of an act claimed to be illegal, where it has produced waste or great and irreparable injury to the plaintiff. Temporary injunctions may be granted during the pendency of the action upon undertaking of the plaintiff with solvent sureties to respond in damages. It may be granted ex parte or after notice and hearing.

Insolvency. — See Bankruptcy.

Insurance. — Our Insurance Law is practically taken from the California Code.

Interest. — Six per cent. is the legal interest, but if interest is not agreed upon in writing same cannot be recovered. The Usury Law, enacted February 24, 1916, fixes the rate of interest on loans secured by mortgage or other security at twelve per cent. per annum, and on unsecured loans at fourteen per cent.; special provisions are made for pawnbrokers.

Judgments. — If no defense is made, judgment is entered at the expiration of the time allowed for the defendant to answer for the relief demanded in the complaint. In actions for unliquidated amounts and the like, judgment is entered after the plaintiff has appeared in court and given proof of the damages or other relief to which he is entitled. Executions on judgments may be issued at any time within five years after entry, and the sheriff must first attempt to satisfy them out of the personal property and then out of the judgment debtor's real property. An execution is returnable in not less than ten and not more than sixty days. If returned wholly or partially unsatisfied, the judgment debtor may be examined as to his property. This may also be done while the execution is issued and outstanding if the judgment creditor proves to the satisfaction of the court that the judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment. Persons indebted to the judgment debtor may pay the amount to the sheriff and his receipt acts as a discharge of the indebtedness to the extent of the debt. On proof by affidavit of a judgment creditor that a third person has money or property of a judgment debtor, or is indebted to him, the judge may require such person to be examined under supplementary proceedings. (See also Limitations.)

Land Law and Land Registration. — A Public Land Law has been enacted as well as the Torrens Title System of land registration and cadastral survey. There is a dual system of registration. The preëxisting Spanish system governed by the Spanish Mortgage Law and the Torrens System.

If the defendant is out of the Philippine Islands when the cause of action accrues, time does not begin to run until he has returned to the Islands, and if he leaves the Islands after the time the action accrues, the time of absence is excluded. If the plaintiff in an action for the recovery of real property is under twenty-one years of age, insane, or in prison, such person may, after the expiration of ten years from the time the cause of action accrues, bring such action within three years after such disability is removed. When payment has been made upon any demand founded upon contract, or a written acknowledgment or promise to pay has been made and signed by the person sought to be charged, prescription runs from the time of such payment, acknowledgment, or promise. Felonies punishable with death or life imprisonment prescribe in twenty years; other felonies in fifteen years; misdemeanors in two months. An action upon a contract, agreement, or promise to pay in writing, or the judgment or decree of a court prescribes in ten years; an action upon a contract not in writing prescribes within six years; an action for trespass upon real estate prescribes within four years; an action for relief on the ground of fraud prescribes within four years, but the right of action does not accrue until the discovery of the fraud; an action for libel prescribes in two years; actions for slander, assault, battery, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, and an action upon statute for a penalty or forfeiture prescribes within one year. Actions for real property and real rights prescribe within ten years. Under the Code of Commerce, merchants are required to preserve their books for five years. The possession of personal property in good faith passes title in three years; otherwise in six years. Ten years' actual adverse public and continued possession of real property passes to the possessor full and complete title. There is no prescription between co-owners, unless they claim and occupy adversely to each other.

Marriage Law. — General Order No. 68, issued by the United States Military Governor in the Philippine Islands on December 18, 1899, is the existing law governing the requisites and formality of marriage, while the effect of marriage upon the parties and their rights, obligations and duties as spouses is governed by Spanish legislation embodied in the Civil Code. The age of consent is fourteen in the male and twelve in the female, although minors under the age of twenty-one require the written consent of their parents or guardian. Marriages may be solemnized by a judge of a court inferior to the Supreme Court, a justice of the peace or a minister of any denomination. No particular form of marriage is required, but the parties must declare, in the presence of the officiating person and at least two witnesses, that they take each other as husband and wife. No license to marry is required. The officiating person must expedite a certificate, the original being filed with the justice of the peace of the municipality where the marriage was celebrated. Marriages may be annulled for statutory causes within the time prescribed by law.

Married Women. — All property belonging to either husband or wife before marriage remains the personal property of the original owner. Property acquired during marriage and improvements on property acquired before marriage belong to the conjugal partnership and constitute the community property. The husband is the head of the community and administers the community property except when declared judicially absent, insane, or suffering civil interdiction, or when legally separated. Before marriage a contract may be executed stipulating the conditions for the conjugal partnership with regard to future and present property. Gifts between spouses during marriage are void except moderate gifts on occasions of birthdays, wedding anniversaries, etc. Parents are bound to give a dowry to their legitimate daughters of one half of their legitimate portion, and the dowry may be estimated or appraised or unestimated. The ownership of the estimated dowry passes to the husband, who upon dissolution of the marriage, must return its value. The husband is the administrator of the unestimated dowry, and upon dissolution of the marriage the same property constituting the dowry must be returned. The separate or personal property of the wife is administered by her unless she transfers the administration to her husband. The wife cannot alienate or mortgage her dowry or paraphernal property without the consent of her husband. A wife cannot sue nor be sued separate and apart from her husband except in actions between them, or in actions concerning the separate property of the wife in which the husband has no right or interest, or where the wife is living separate and apart from her husband. Upon dissolution of the marriage an inventory is taken, and after deducting the debts, charges, and obligations of the conjugal partnership, the husband and wife share equally in the community property.

Mining Law. — The act of Congress of July 1, 1902, as amended by the Act of Congress of February 6, 1905, provides for the location of mineral claims both lode and placer. The Philippine Commission and the Legislature have enacted laws carrying out the provisions of the Acts of Congress by prescribing regulations, etc. Foreigners are excluded.

Mechanics' Lien. — It is doubtful if it exists in the Philippine Islands.

Minors. — The age of majority is twenty-one years. A minor eighteen years of age may be emancipated by his father by a declaration in a public instrument. Parents are liable for the acts of their minor children and may be compelled to pay for their support. Minors may acquire possession, but to perfect title the assistance of their parents or guardians is required. Contracts of minors are voidable, but may be ratified when they become of age.

Mortgages. — Mortgages may be on real or personal property. Real mortgages are covered by the Civil Law enacted prior to American occupation and chattel mortgages are governed by Act No. 1508 of the Philippine Commission. In order that a mortgage may bind third persons, it must be recorded except where the property mortgaged passes into the possession of the mortgagee.

Notaries. — In the city of Manila, notaries are appointed by the Supreme Court. Appointments are confined to practicing attorneys and government officials. In the provinces, notaries are appointed by the courts of first instance. The notary must keep a notarial register, showing date, number, and page of each instrument registered, together with a synopsis of the instruments. Fees of notaries are fixed by law.

Notes, Bills, and Checks — Are governed by the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law.

Partnerships — Are either general or limited, civil or commercial. General partnerships are those in which all the partners have the same liability. Limited partnerships are those in which some partners are general partners with general liability, and others are special or limited partners with limited liability. Civil partnerships are organized under the provisions of the Civil Code, their purpose being civil or industrial; commercial partnerships must be organized under the provisions of the Commercial Code and recorded in the Commercial Register.

The liability of a civil partner is pro rata to the extent of his contribution to the firm's assets, whereas the liability of a commercial partner is joint and several to the full extent of his private property.

Patents. — Patents, trade-marks, and copyrights may be registered under the Trade-Mark Act of the Philippine Commission. The provisions of our Trade-Mark Act are very liberal and ample protection is offered against infringement and unfair competition.

Powers of Attorney. — A general power of attorney only covers the power to administer property, and any other power, the object of which is to transfer or affect any rights

Executions. — See Judgments.

Executors and Administrators. — See Successions.

Exemptions. — The debtor's homestead not exceeding in value seventy-five dollars; tools and implements used in his trade or employment; two working animals or beasts of burden not exceeding seventy-five dollars in value; necessary clothing for himself and family; household furniture and utensils not exceeding thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents; provision for individual and family use sufficient for three months; libraries of lawyers, judges, clergymen, priests, school and music teachers not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars; one fishing boat and net of a fisherman not exceeding twelve dollars and fifty cents; lettered grave stones; — all of the above are exempt except on a judgment recovered for their purchase price or on a mortgage thereon.

Garnishments. — See Attachments; Judgments.

Guardians. — See Tutor.

Infants. — See Minors.

Injunctions. — Injunctions are issued by the courts of first instance or by justices of the Supreme Court. They may be granted to restrain the commission or continuance of an act claimed to be illegal, where it has produced waste or great and irreparable injury to the plaintiff. Temporary injunctions may be granted during the pendency of the action upon undertaking of the plaintiff with solvent sureties to respond in damages. It may be granted ex parte or after notice and hearing.

Insolvency. — See Bankruptcy.

Insurance. — Our Insurance Law is practically taken from the California Code.

Interest. — Six per cent. is the legal interest, but if interest is not agreed upon in writing same cannot be recovered. The Usury Law, enacted February 24, 1916, fixes the rate of interest on loans secured by mortgage or other security at twelve per cent. per annum, and on unsecured loans at fourteen per cent.; special provisions are made for pawnbrokers.

Judgments. — If no defense is made, judgment is entered at the expiration of the time allowed for the defendant to answer for the relief demanded in the complaint. In actions for unliquidated amounts and the like, judgment is entered after the plaintiff has appeared in court and given proof of the damages or other relief to which he is entitled. Executions on judgments may be issued at any time within five years after entry, and the sheriff must first attempt to satisfy them out of the personal property and then out of the judgment debtor's real property. An execution is returnable in not less than ten and not more than sixty days. If returned wholly or partially unsatisfied, the judgment debtor may be examined as to his property. This may also be done while the execution is issued and outstanding if the judgment creditor proves to the satisfaction of the court that the judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment. Persons indebted to the judgment debtor may pay the amount to the sheriff and his receipt acts as a discharge of the indebtedness to the extent of the debt. On proof by affidavit of a judgment creditor that a third person has money or property of a judgment debtor, or is indebted to him, the judge may require such person to be examined under supplementary proceedings. (See also Limitations.)

Land Law and Land Registration. — A Public Land Law has been enacted as well as the Torrens Title System of land registration and cadastral survey. There is a dual system of registration. The preëxisting Spanish system governed by the Spanish Mortgage Law and the Torrens System.

Language. — Both English and Spanish are official languages in our courts.

Licenses. — Licenses must be obtained for all legitimate business.

Limitations. — An action is considered commenced when the complaint is filed. If the defendant is out of the Philippine Islands when the cause of action accrues, time does not begin to run until he has returned to the Islands, and if he leaves the Islands after the time the action accrues, the time of absence is excluded. If the plaintiff in an action for the recovery of real property is under twenty-one years of age, insane, or in prison, such person may, after the expiration of ten years from the time the cause of action accrues, bring such action within three years after such disability is removed. When payment has been made upon any demand founded upon contract, or a written acknowledgment or promise to pay has been made and signed by the person sought to be charged, prescription runs from the time of such payment, acknowledgment, or promise. Felonies punishable with death or life imprisonment prescribe in twenty years; other felonies in fifteen years; misdemeanors in two months. An action upon a contract, agreement, or promise to pay in writing, or the judgment or decree of a court prescribes in ten years; an action upon a contract not in writing prescribes within six years; an action for trespass upon real estate prescribes within four years; an action for relief on the ground of fraud prescribes within four years, but the right of action does not accrue until the discovery of the fraud; an action for libel prescribes in two years; actions for slander, assault, battery, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, and an action upon statute for a penalty or forfeiture prescribes within one year. Actions for real property and real rights prescribe within ten years. Under the Code of Commerce, merchants are required to preserve their books for five years. The possession of personal property in good faith passes title in three years; otherwise in six years. Ten years' actual adverse public and continued possession of real property passes to the possessor full and complete title. There is no prescription between co-owners, unless they claim and occupy adversely to each other.

The ownership of the estimated dowry passes to the husband, who upon dissolution of the marriage, must return its value. The husband is the administrator of the unestimated dowry, and upon dissolution of the marriage the same property constituting the dowry must be returned. The separate or personal property of the wife is administered by her unless she transfers the administration to her husband. The wife cannot alienate or mortgage her dowry or paraphernal property without the consent of her husband. A wife cannot sue nor be sued separate and apart from her husband except in actions between them, or in actions concerning the separate property of the wife in which the husband has no right or interest, or where the wife is living separate and apart from her husband. Upon dissolution of the marriage an inventory is taken, and after deducting the debts, charges, and obligations of the conjugal partnership, the husband and wife share equally in the community property.

The notary must keep a notarial register, showing date, number, and page of each instrument registered, together with a synopsis of the instruments. Fees of notaries are fixed by law.

Notes, Bills, and Checks — Are governed by the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law.

Partnerships — Are either general or limited, civil or commercial. General partnerships are those in which all the partners have the same liability. Limited partnerships are those in which some partners are general partners with general liability, and others are special or limited partners with limited liability. Civil partnerships are organized under the provisions of the Civil Code, their purpose being civil or industrial; commercial partnerships must be organized under the provisions of the Commercial Code and recorded in the Commercial Register.

Patents. — Patents, trade-marks, and copyrights may be registered under the Trade-Mark Act of the Philippine Commission. The provisions of our Trade-Mark Act are very liberal and ample protection is offered against infringement and unfair competition.

Powers of Attorney. — A general power of attorney only covers the power to administer property, and any other power, the object of which is to transfer or affect any rights in real property, must be provided for in a public instrument. It is always best under the laws to make the power as detailed and specific as possible.

Prescription. — See Limitations.

Proofs of Claim. — In sending a claim for collection the full name of the party in interest should be given, together with an itemized account, giving the date and amount of each transaction and description of the goods and the terms of the credit. If a written contract exists a certified copy should be forwarded.

Receivers — Are appointed when a corporation has been dissolved, is insolvent or in danger of insolvency, or has forfeited its corporate rights; where a complaint shows that the plaintiff has an interest in property or funds in danger of being lost, removed, or materially injured; in an action for the foreclosure of mortgage where it appears that the property is in danger of being wasted or materially injured; and in any other cause where it is made to appear that the appointment of a receiver is the most convenient and possible means of preserving and administering the property.

Redemption. — Legal redemption under the Civil Code exists in the case of co-owners of property or in the case of owners of adjacent land when the area involved does not exceed one hectare; conventional redemption exists when the vendor reserves to himself the right to recover the thing sold.

Replevin. — The plaintiff in an action for replevin, upon affidavit showing that he is the owner of property or is entitled to its possession, and that the property is wrongfully detained by the defendant, giving the cause thereof, and that it has not been taken for a tax assessment or fine or seized under an execution or judgment, or if so seized is exempt by statute, and upon showing its value and giving a bond may, at the time of issuing the summons, or at any time before answer, claim the delivery of the property to him. A bond with sufficient sureties approved by the court for double the value of the property must be given. The sheriff must take the property and retain it unless the defendant gives a written undertaking in double the value for its return within five days after taking and notice. If this is not done the property must be delivered to the plaintiff. Parties have two days to except to the sureties.

Law Reports. — The decisions of the Supreme Court are published in the Official Gazette issued weekly by the Government and are also published in the Philippine Reports, which now include volume 31. They are published in English and Spanish.

Sales. — A contract of sale is performed and binding when the thing to be sold and the price are agreed upon, though neither has been delivered. The delivery of the things sold can be compelled if it is specified. If the thing sold is destroyed before the time specified for delivery, without fault of the vendor, the obligation is nullified. When earnest money has been paid, the contract may be rescinded if the vendee agrees to forfeit the money paid or the vendor returns double the amount. Unless special agreement is made the vendor is charged with the execution of the instrument of sale. Husband and wife cannot sell property to each other except when judicially separated. A guardian cannot purchase property of his ward, or agents that of their principals, or lawyers the property or rights which may be the object of litigation in which they take part. Costs of delivery in the absence of stipulation are on the vendor. By a contract of sale the vendor guarantees peaceable possession and that there are no hidden faults or defects. Sales of property of co-owners are subject to legal redemption.

Service. — Service of summons on a Philippine corporation is made by delivery of a copy on the president; on a foreign corporation, non-resident joint-stock company or association having a managing or business agent, cashier, or secretary within the Islands, by delivery of a copy to such agent, cashier, or secretary. Service on a minor, under the age of thirteen years, is made personally on the minor, and also on his father, mother, or guardian, and on a person judicially declared insane or incapable of conducting his own affairs, on him and his guardian. In any other case on the defendant. (See also Actions.)

Statutes. — The primary law under which the Government of the Philippine Islands was organized is the act of Congress of July 1, 1902, supplemented by the Act of Congress of August 29, 1916. They provide in general for the Government of the Philippine Islands. The laws in force in the Philippine Islands at the time of American occupation as modified by the orders of the military governors, continue in force until changed by legislative enactments. The Jones Law (Act of Congress of August 29, 1916), provides that the statutory laws in force in the United States hereafter enacted shall not apply to the Philippine Islands, except when specifically provided. That law vests in the Philippine Legislature general legislative powers, except that no export duties shall be levied or collected; that tariff relations between the Islands and the United States shall be governed exclusively by the laws of the United States Congress, and that no tariff law, immigration, currency, or coinage law shall become a law until approved by the President of the United States.

There are numerous Acts of Congress in force in the Philippine Islands such as the Immigration Law of May 1, 1917, the Tariff Law of 1909; etc. The Legislature meets annually. The Codification Committee has completed its labors. The Committee has been reduced to one member, but to date, the Legislature has passed only upon the Administrative Code, leaving the Civil, Criminal, Penal and Procedural Codes for subsequent legislation. Enactments of the Legislature are published in English and Spanish.

Succession — Includes not only the property and obligation in the condition in which they existed at the time of the death, but also the property and obligation of the succession when it is opened. When an executor fails to give bond within sixty days, the court will appoint another. The executor must submit his account to the court within the time specified, which is not to exceed eighteen months except under special circumstances. (See also Decedent's Estates.)

Supplementary Proceedings. — (See Judgments.)

Tariff. — The Islands have a separate tariff system, and exportations to and importations from the United States are, with few exceptions, free. The maximum tariff of foreign goods, other than liquor, luxuries, etc., is one hundred per cent.

Tutor. — The provisions of the Civil Law providing for tutors have been repealed by enactment of the Philippine Commission, adopted from American legislation, and all matters of guardianship are governed by such enactment. The same is true as to the former family council. Courts of first instance on petition appoint guardians for minors, persons of unsound mind and spendthrifts. The father or the mother of the minor is the natural guardian of the person and may be appointed legal guardian of the minor's estate.

Wills. — Persons eighteen years of age or over and of sound mind may make a will. All the provisions of the Civil Law as to the manner of making a will have been repealed. A will in order to be valid must be in writing signed by the testator, or by the testator's name written by some person in his presence and by his express direction, and attested and subscribed to by three or more credible witnesses in the presence of the testator and in the presence of each other. The will must be in the language or dialect known by the testator; each page must be signed by the testator and the attesting witnesses. A will may be revoked by making another, or by a codicil in writing, or by burning, tearing, cancelling, or otherwise obliterating the same by the testator himself or by some other person in his presence and by his express direction. A will may be disallowed if not executed or attested as provided by law; where the testator was insane or incapable of making a will; when the will was executed under duress, fear, or the influence of threats; when it was procured by undue and improper pressure and influence on the part of the beneficiary or of some other person for his benefit; and where the signature of the testator was procured by fraud or trick. The Civil Law provides for disinheritance of forcible heirs, including spouses, upon statutory grounds. A will valid where made is valid in the Philippine Islands. Ancillary proceedings may be instituted in the Philippine Islands upon the filing of a petition supported by an authenticated copy of the probate proceedings instituted where the will was allowed. Property left by intestates without heirs escheats to the Government.

A will made in the Islands by a foreigner may be probated even if it does not satisfy the legal requirements provided the form peculiar to the law of the testator's domicile is followed.

PORTO RICO LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Rounds, Hatch, Dillingham & Debevoise, and O. B. Frazer, Esq.
(resident partner), of San Juan.

REMARKS. — Porto Rico, as non-contiguous territory, is under the control of Congress, and its civil government is based on the act of Congress known as the Jones Act or the Organic Act. (L. March 2, 1917.)

The laws covering contracts, torts, family relations, inheritance, wills, property rights, and other civil matters follow in general the laws of Spain. The criminal law, corporation law (to a large extent), and civil and criminal procedure, including evidence, are taken from the common law.

The next session of the legislature convenes on the second Monday in February, 1919.

Actions. — There is one form of civil action under the Code of Procedure. (Laws of 1904.) Actions are commenced by filing with the clerk of the court a written complaint. If the complaint contains a copy of the instrument upon which the action is brought, the genuineness and due execution of such instrument are admitted unless the answer denying the same is properly sworn to. If the answer containing a defense to such an action contains a copy of a written instrument upon which the defense is founded, its genuineness and due execution are admitted unless the plaintiff file with the clerk, within ten days, an affidavit denying the same. If the complaint is sworn to the answer must contain a specific denial of each one of the matters which the defendant desires to controvert. If the complaint be verified, all subsequent pleadings must be verified. The plaintiff must be the real party at interest. An assignment of cause of action, however, can be made for the purpose of suing thereon, if it is made in general form, but any defense against the original owner can be set up against the assignee if it existed before notice of the assignment. An executor or trustee may sue alone in such capacities. The husband of a married woman must be joined in an action brought by or against her, except when the action concerns her separate property, or when the action is between herself and her husband or when she is living separate and apart from her husband by reason of his desertion of her. An infant, or an insane or incompetent person, must appear by his general guardian, or by a guardian ad litem appointed for that purpose by the court. A person not a party, who has an interest in the matter in litigation in the success of either of the parties, or an interest against both, may intervene upon permission of the court at any time before the trial and take part therein.

Publication of Summons. — When the defendant resides out of the island, or has departed therefrom, or cannot be found within it, or conceals himself in order to avoid service, or has no known place of residence, or is a foreign corporation, service can be made by order of the court by publication, which must be in a newspaper most likely to give notice to the person to be served, and at least once a week for a month; and if the residence is known, a copy of the summons and complaint must also be deposited in the post-office directed to the person to be served at his place of residence. Personal service out of the island is equivalent to publication and deposit in the post-office. If the plaintiff is a non-resident or a foreign corporation, the defendant may require security for costs, which must be given in an undertaking, executed by two or more persons, in the sum of three hundred dollars.

A judgment by confession for money due or to become due, or to secure any person against contingent liability, may be entered without any action upon filing a verified statement signed by the defendant authorizing the entry of judgment for a specified sum, and stating concisely the circumstances out of which the debt arose, and showing that the sum confessed is or will become justly due, or that the sum confessed does not exceed the contingent liability. This is entered by the secretary of the court, who includes the sum of five dollars costs, and it thereupon becomes a judgment which may be enforced in the ordinary manner.

Administration. — See Decedents' Estates.

Affidavits and Acknowledgments. — (1.) In Porto Rico, may be taken before any judge or the secretary of the supreme court or of the district court, by any notary public or United States commissioner for Porto Rico. (2.) In the United States, may be taken before any clerk of a court of record having a seal, any notary public, or commissioner of deeds appointed for that State by Porto Rico. (3.) Without the United States, by any notary public, minister, chargé d'affaires of the United States, resident in and accredited to the country where the affidavit is taken, consul-general, consul, commercial agent, consular agent, or the respective vice or deputy consular officers, or a commissioner of deeds appointed for Porto Rico.

Affidavits should be verified in the following form: Sworn to and subscribed before me by (giving name, age, trade, or occupation, whether married or unmarried, and residence) personally known to me (or who has been identified to my satisfaction by the two witnesses known to me, whose statement to that effect is also signed by them) this the day of .

For acknowledgments the words "Sworn to" are omitted. If the affidavit is taken out of Porto Rico, the signature of the notary public should be certified to by the secretary of state or clerk of the court, as the case may be, and the seal annexed. The notary's seal should always be used. Acknowledgments should always be witnessed by two competent witnesses who are not related either to the notary or to the party executing the instrument.

Agency. — A contract of agency stated in general terms only includes acts of administration. In order to compromise, alienate, mortgage, purchase real property, to execute documents of cancellation, and any other act of "strict ownership" an express commission is required. In the absence of instructions to the contrary, an agent may appoint a substitute, for whose acts he will be responsible. Unauthorized acts by an agent may be ratified expressly or by implication. Appointment of a new agent revokes the authority of the preceding agent on the date on which the notice is given him. The death of the principal revokes the agency, contracts with third persons made by the agent when both were unaware of the death of the principal or of other termination of the agency are valid.

Aliens. — Aliens include all except citizens of the United States. There are no restrictions, except that they cannot serve on a jury. The District Court of the United States for Porto Rico has power to naturalize aliens.

Appeal. — See Courts.

Arbitration. — Arbitration may be by agreement, and the award of the arbitrators is considered to all intents and purposes the same as by a court of competent jurisdiction. They cannot include matrimonial questions, future support, or composition of a crime; the civil action arising from a crime, however, may be compromised. A guardian may settle only by arbitration under authorization of the court, and arbitration by the father or mother of the property or rights of their children must be approved by the court if the amount involved is over five hundred dollars. Arbitration by corporations must be made with the formalities necessary to alienate their property. An agent can arbitrate only when express authority is given him for this purpose. There may be one arbitrator, but if more there must be an odd number, and the compromise must be contained in a public instrument.

Arrest. — A person can be arrested in a civil action for the recovery of money or damages: (1.) In a cause of action arising upon a contract where the defendant is about to leave Porto Rico with the intent to defraud his creditors. He can also be arrested in an action for damages for willful injury to person, to character or property (knowing that the property belongs to another). (2.) In an action to recover property embezzled or fraudulently misappropriated or converted, by a judge, officer, an officer of a corporation, or an attorney, broker, agent or clerk, or any other person in a fiduciary capacity. (3.) In an action to recover possession of personal property unjustly detained, where the property, or a part thereof, has been sold or removed to prevent its being found. (4.) When the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in incurring an obligation. (5.) When the defendant has or is about to dispose of his property with the intent to defraud his creditors, fraudulently declaring himself insolvent. The order of arrest is made upon affidavit, which must be accompanied by an undertaking of at least five hundred dollars for all costs and damages, and may be made at the issuance of the summons or at any time thereafter before judgment. The order of arrest fixes the amount of bail.

There is no imprisonment for debt in Porto Rico.

Attachment. — Attachments may be had in any action brought for the fulfillment of an obligation. This includes contracts, damages, cases of negligence, etc. The attachment may consist, if the action is brought for the delivery of any particular object in the possession of the defendant, or of a third person in the name of the defendant, in prohibiting him from alienating it or incumbering it until judgment is rendered. If the relief consists in the doing of a thing, attachment may be issued in the sum necessary to execute the work left undone or done otherwise than as provided in the agreement. The action is to perform the accomplishment of an act. The attachment may be issued in the form of an injunction, prohibiting the defendant from executing or continuing the execution of the act and attaching a sum sufficient to indemnify against any act executed in contravention of the rights of the plaintiff. Attachment may always include a sum necessary to recover damages claimed in the complaint. The complaint must be filed before or at the same time as the petition for the attachment. A bond must be given to secure the defendant against any damage which may be caused to him by reason of the attachment, unless it is clearly shown by means of either a public document, a private document certified to before a judge or notary, by the person bound therein, or by his heirs, a private document signed before a notary, or a certificate of any judicial proceeding in which the debtor may have confessed the existence of the obligation that the fulfillment of the obligation may be legally enforced. Attachment is granted on the complaint and a petition containing a statement of the points of law and fact on which the plaintiff relies. If the plaintiff is successful the court must order the cancellation of the bond at the termination of the action. The bond must be given by a surety company, or if personal security, it must be given by owners of real estate in Porto Rico who pay to the treasurer of Porto Rico a tax on property representing a capital double the value of the bond required by the court for ordering the remedy. A mortgage bond may be given executed upon property be subject to amendment, alteration, or repeal by the legislature. Domestic banking or insurance corporations must submit their articles of incorporation for approval to the executive council, which may require amendments. Every corporation must display its name at the entrance of its office or in the case of a foreign corporation at the office of its agent.

By an attorney-general's ruling, the purposes for which any domestic or foreign corporation is organized must be allied.

Courts. — There are seven district courts in the island which have a general civil and criminal jurisdiction. An action is begun from the time the complaint is filed with the secretary of the court who issues the summons. All subsequent papers must be filed, and when the action is at issue the clerk places it upon the calendar without further notice of issue taken. Appeals from the judgment of the district court are had to the supreme court of Porto Rico, and must be taken within one month from the date of notification by the clerk of the court of the judgment. The supreme court is composed of five judges, who are appointed by the president of the United States, and they may affirm, reverse, or modify the judgment of the lower court. In all cases where the amount involved is over five thousand dollars, an appeal lies to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit. Irrespective of the amount involved, appeals may also be taken in cases in which writs of error may be taken from a state court. Each municipality has its municipal court for the jurisdiction of misdemeanors, and civil jurisdiction in all cases in which the amount involved is four hundred dollars or less. Suits involving less than four hundred dollars must be brought in the municipal court. Appeals may be taken to the district court on any judgment, even though the defendant after answering did not appear at the trial. In the district court the case is retried de novo. Appeals may be taken from the district court to the supreme court if the amount involved is over three hundred dollars. There are also petty magistrates and justices of the peace in the various towns. There is a United States court provided for in the organic act, in which all suits can be brought which may be brought in a United States court in one of the States in which citizens of the United States not domiciled in Porto Rico or of a foreign country are parties. It has been held that the court has no jurisdiction so far as diverse citizenship is concerned, if there are citizens of Porto Rico among both parties plaintiff and defendant. The jurisdictional amount is three thousand dollars. Causes may be removed by the defendant from the insular court to the federal court in cases where the jurisdictional amount and diverse citizenship is present in the same manner as from a state court. Appeals and writs of error may be taken from the United States district court to the United States supreme court in accordance with Section 238 of the Judicial Code. Appeals and writs of error may be taken in other cases to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit in accordance with Sections 116 and 128 of the Judicial Code as amended, January 28, 1915. The United States district court acts in the same manner as a federal district court in the United States and has the combined jurisdiction of the old district and circuit courts. Regular terms are held in November and May of each year at San Juan, and special terms are held at Ponce and Mayaguez. Attorneys are admitted to the federal court who are admitted in the supreme court or the district court of the United States or the highest court of any State or the supreme court of Porto Rico and who speak the English language. Attorneys in the insular courts are admitted on examination, and in some cases on certificate and examination, and upon certificate alone after one year's residence. Criminal actions in the insular district courts are tried by a jury of twelve. In the federal court, actions at law and criminal cases are tried by a jury of twelve, in a similar manner as in the circuit courts of the United States. There are no juries in civil cases in the insular courts.

Decedents' Estates. — If the will is proved and recorded, or, in case of intestacy, a declaration of heirship has been made (see Successions), the executor of the will, or the surviving spouse of the decedent, or any heirs at law if there be no will, or in default of these an unsecured creditor having a written title to his debt, may apply to the district court for administration. Secured creditors, or creditors whose claims are secured by heirs independently of the estate of the decedent, can apply for administration of an estate. Petition must be accompanied by a certified copy of the will, if made by the executor, and upon filing the petition the executor, surviving spouse, heirs and legatees, and all creditors of the estate are summoned to appear within a period not less than eight or more than fifteen days. Where the guardian or father or mother of a minor has any interest in the estate in conflict with the minor, a guardian ad litem, who must be an attorney upon whom all papers shall be served, must be appointed for the latter. Where parties cannot be served personally the summons shall be published once a week for three weeks, and a certified copy of the notice sent by mail to the last known address. Default for non-appearance is made when twenty days have elapsed after the last publication. The judge can appoint a temporary administrator pending the appointment of a permanent administrator, where there is no testamentary trustee under the will, and where there is no movable personal property capable of being easily removed or concealed. The judge may, upon application of the petitioner, direct the marshal to take immediate possession, make an inventory of the property and deposit it with some responsible party, who may be one of the heirs, pending the appointment of a permanent bonded trustee or administrator. On the return of the summons the administrator is appointed by the judge. This administrator may be the surviving spouse, or the party having the largest interest in the estate, or, if necessary, a third person. Unless the requirement is waived a bond must be given in an amount to be fixed by the judge. Money must be placed in a designated depository. The administrator or executor is required to immediately proceed to make a complete inventory of the real and personal property, giving ten days' notice to heirs, legatees, creditors, and other parties interested, of the same. The inventory must be made in the presence of a notary or of two witnesses and must be filed with the clerk of the court. An administrator without judicial order is required to make ordinary repairs, procure the necessary labor, fertilisers, etc., as required for the cultivation of rural property. Extraordinary expenses can only be made upon the permission of the court after written notice to the heirs upon petition. The judge may provide that work be done on bids, if the work is over five hundred dollars. Administrators shall sell the crops, may lease dwelling-houses and rural property of small value, and renew any lease which was in force at the time of the death of the testator, except where the annual rent is more than one thousand dollars or lease for more than six years. Leases must be made to the highest bidder at public auction, the minimum bid acceptable not to be less than the average rent for five preceding years. All rural property not in possession of the heirs, or that which had been cultivated by the decedent, must be leased. Administrator shall only sell property which is likely to deteriorate in value or is expensive to maintain, and property which is necessary for the payment of debts and expenses. The judge may order on application that payments from income be made to the heirs, legatees, and surviving spouse for their support in amounts proportionate to their shares. Actions brought by or against the decedent are stayed by his death until the executor takes charge or administrator is appointed and is substituted as the party in the action. The compensation of administrators and executors is at the rate of five per cent. on receipts of one thousand dollars, two and one half per cent. up to ten thousand dollars, and one per cent. above ten thousand dollars, and expenses as approved by the judge. Administrators and executors have to file a verified quarterly statement of the amounts received and expended which are open for inspection at the clerk's office. On filing final accounts all parties are cited for the settlement. The account is settled and approved after the service of the citation unless objections are filed. On filing of objections, matter is brought on for hearing and taking of testimony. Appeals may be taken from final order for settling an account. The court may direct the executor or administrator to file his final order at any time on the petition of an heir, legatee, or creditor or surety, showing that sufficient time has elapsed to settle the estate. The final decree settling the account contains directions for the distribution of the surplus remaining among those entitled to it by law. In case the heirs decide to accept the succession without the benefit of inventory, no inventory is made and they are responsible personally for the debts. The executor or administrator is required to file written acceptance of his trust with an oath binding himself to discharge his duties to the best of his ability, and he may not take charge of the effects of decedent's estate until this is done and letters of administration are issued to him. When there is sufficient money on hand to pay all claims against decedent's estate, the executor or administrator must apply, unless such person is appointed by the will, for a commissioner of partition, who shall divide the estate between the heirs and legatees. The document of partition is entitled to be recorded with the registrar of property, and the heirs may be placed in possession upon an order of the district court confirming the partition. The order is made upon the report filed by the petitioner. This is approved as of course, unless there are objections filed after eight days' notice of filing of the papers. The heirs may agree to have a partition made without the appointment of a commissioner, but this agreement must be approved by the district court in the case of minors and incapacitated heirs.

Deeds. — Deeds must be in writing, and to affect third parties must be recorded in the registry of property (q. v.). The deed itself must be drawn up by a notary and is kept in his original protocol, and he issues a first copy to the parties. There must be two witnesses who are not related to the notary or to the parties. It must recite how the title of the grantor was acquired, the date and place where passed, the names, surnames, domiciles, and estates of the parties, a description of the property, the consideration with all its terms and conditions.

Depositions. — These may be taken before commissioners for Porto Rico who are appointed for the different States. Such depositions, if certified by the commissioner with his official seal are as effectual as if taken in the island. Their fees by law are fixed at fifty cents per page for the deposition, one dollar for each oath, one dollar for authentication, sealing up, etc. They must be taken in the form of question and answer, must be read to or by the witness, whose corrections must be written at the bottom of the deposition and then subscribed. Parties in writing may agree to any other mode. Depositions can be taken in an action at any time after the service of the summons or appearance of the defendant, and may be read by either party or their privies. Objections to questions should be taken at the time the deposition is taken, and are ruled on by the court at the trial. Depositions taken out of Porto Rico are usually taken on a commission issued under the seal of the court under an order from the judge which is granted upon five days' notice to the opposite party and may be directed to any person agreed upon, or, if the parties do not agree, to any judge or justice of the peace, or commissioner selected by the judge. If the commission is issued out of the United States, it may be directed to a minister, consul, consular agent of the United States, or to any party agreed upon. It is the custom for the parties desiring a commission to select the name of some notary public, and unless this is opposed by the opposite party the judge will issue a commission to him. Interrogatories, unless waived, must be attached to the notice of motion, and the cross interrogatories must be proposed on the hearing thereof, but all objections, except as to the form of the interrogatories and cross interrogatories may be made when the deposition is offered in evidence. The court may direct that the examination be without written interrogatories. The commissioner sends the depositions which are taken under him to the court in a sealed envelope directed to the clerk thereof. Where a foreign country does not permit a commission, the usual letters rogatory are used. In an action pending in any of the United States when a commission is issued for the examination of a witness in Porto Rico, under an action pending in a state court, the commission is exhibited to the district court of the district in which the witness resides, with an affidavit showing the materiality of the testimony. The court then issues a subpoena to testify before the commission.

Descent and Distribution of Property. — Intestate succession occurs as follows: Relatives in the same degree inherit an equal share. Brothers of the whole blood receive double that of brothers of the half blood. The nearer degrees exclude the more remote, except that the relatives of a predeceased heir in a direct descending line take by representation. In the collateral line representation occurs only in favor of the children of brothers or sisters; where of the whole blood or of the half blood, such representation takes per stirpes and not per capita. If, however, the children of a deceased brother be the only heirs, they take per capita. Degrees are counted by generations. Thus, brothers are two degrees apart among collaterals, uncle and nephew are three degrees apart, first cousins, four, etc. Descendants, including legitimate and acknowledged illegitimate children and their issue succeed first. In default of issue, ancestors inherit to the exclusion of collaterals. If there are different ancestors of different lines, but all of equal degree, one half goes to the paternal ancestors and one half to the maternal. Ancestors also succeed, to the exclusion of all other persons, to things donated by them to their descendants who die without issue, when the objects donated are included in the inheritance. Acknowledged illegitimate children, in default of legitimate descendants, succeed to the whole of the inheritance. If they concur with legitimate descendants or ascendants they receive a portion equal to one half of that of each legitimate child. In default of brothers and nephews, the surviving spouse succeeds to all of the property. If neither brothers nor sisters, nor children of brothers or sisters, nor a surviving spouse, the other collateral relatives shall succeed without distinction of lines or preference by reason of the whole blood. This does not extend beyond the sixth degree. If there are no relatives to inherit, the property reverts to the People of Porto Rico, who are obliged to devote it to works of charity and education. The escheat can only be accomplished by a judicial proceeding.

A certain portion of the estate called the legal portion cannot be disposed of by will, and the heirs who are entitled to this are called forced heirs. It is composed of two thirds of the estate of the father and mother, the remaining third being at the free disposal of the testator. Legitimate children and descendants of legitimate children are forced heirs with relation to their legitimate parents or ascendants. Recognized illegitimate children take half the share of their legitimate brothers or sisters. If acknowledged illegitimate children are the only descendants they take the full legal portion. Legitimate parents and ascendants are forced heirs with regard to their legitimate children and descendants. The widower or widow may also be a forced heir, if there are no descendants or ascendants. If there are only ascendants, the surviving spouse has the right to one third of the estate in usufruct. If there are legitimate descendants, the surviving spouse has the right to a legal portion equal to that corresponding by way of legal portion to each of the legitimate children or descendants who have not received any additional portion in usufruct. The legal portion is divided equally between ascendants in the same degree. Renunciations or compromises with regard to a future legal portion between the persons owing it are void. Gifts made to children which are not betterments are considered as part of their legal portion.

The legal portion of the ascendants is one half of the estate. One of the two thirds designated as the legal portion for children may be disposed of in the will by the parent in favor of one or more of the children, which is known as an additional portion or betterment.

A legacy to a child is not considered as an additional portion, unless expressly so declared. A parent is also the forced heir of his natural child who leaves no descendants.

Divorce. — Divorce is granted on the grounds of adultery, conviction of felony involving the loss of civil rights, habitual drunkenness, or continued and excessive use of narcotics, cruelty, abandonment for more than a year, incurable impotency occurring after marriage. One year's residence is necessary before action can be brought, unless the act on which the suit was based was committed in Porto Rico, or while one of the parties to the marriage was a resident of Porto Rico. Freedom from collusion must be proved; children are placed under the custody of the wife while suit is pending, but this is in the discretion of the court. Alimony may be granted. Reconciliation bars the action. The decree of divorce results in the complete dissolution of the marriage and division of the property of the husband and wife. The losing party forfeits to the other all gifts which the other party may have conferred upon him or her during the marriage. Children are placed under the care of the successful party. The divorced spouse has the right to interview and continue family relations with the children, who inherit as if no divorce had taken place. Permanent alimony may not exceed one third of the husband's income, and is revoked if it becomes unnecessary, or if the divorced wife contracts a second marriage. A marriage can be annulled if not legally contracted or if violence or intimidation is used, in which case the right can be exercised only by the innocent party.

Evidence. — The law of evidence was passed in 1905. The seals of the various states, official acts of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of Porto Rico and the United States and seals of notaries public are taken judicial notice of by the courts. Insane people and children under ten years who do not prove capacity cannot be witnesses. A husband cannot be examined as a witness against his wife or vice versa, neither can they be examined as to any communication made to each other during the marriage. This does not apply to a criminal action instituted by the one against the other. Communications by clients to attorneys are privileged, as are communications to a clergyman or priest made to them in their professional character. Communications to physicians and surgeons by their patients are privileged. These privileges, however, may be waived. Copies of judicial records are considered to be sufficiently proved if exemplified. Letter-press copies are deemed originals upon proof of due mailing. Writings over thirty years old are presumed genuine. See, also, Depositions; Witnesses.

Executions. — See Judgments.

Executors and Administrators. — See Succession.

Exemptions. — Every householder having a family is entitled to a homestead estate in a farm, plantation, or lot and building to the value of five hundred dollars. This must be occupied by him as a residence, and is exempt from levy, judgment, or execution, except for its purchase price, or liability for improvements, or taxes. Such exemption continues after the death of the householder for the benefit of the husband or wife surviving and after the death of both for the benefit of the children until the youngest is twenty-one years old. Release of homestead right must be expressly stated in the instrument of conveyance. The following are exempt from execution. Furniture and books to the extent of one hundred dollars, necessary house, table, and kitchen furniture, including sewing-machine, stove, furniture, beds, etc., not exceeding two hundred dollars, wearing apparel, hanging pictures, oil paintings and drawings, drawn or painted by any member of the family, family portraits, one cow with her calf, one hog with her sucking pigs, farm utensils not exceeding one hundred dollars, two oxen, two horses, or two mules with their harness, with food for such animals for a month. Also water rights not to exceed the amount of water used for the irrigation of lands actually under cultivation, and such grain and vegetables actually reserved for planting within the next six months, not to exceed two hundred dollars, tools of mechanics, etc., not to exceed three hundred dollars, instruments of a physician, surveyor, dentist, with their professional libraries, the professional libraries of attorneys, judges, and ministers. The dwelling of a miner not exceeding the value of two hundred dollars, with sluices and machinery not to exceed two hundred dollars, one saddle animal and one pack animal not to exceed in value one hundred dollars. For a cartman, drayman, hackman, teamster, or laborer, two oxen, two horses, or two mules and their harness, one cart or truck, etc. For a physician, surgeon, or minister, one horse with vehicle and harness and fodder for a month. Earnings of a judgment debtor for thirty days next preceding levy, when it appears that such earnings are necessary for the use of his family. Insurance on the life of the debtor represented by an annual premium not exceeding fifty dollars. Fire-engines and apparatus, one gun, court-house, jails, schoolhouses with property appertaining thereto, public schools, markets, buildings hired for the use of fire departments and military organisations, except on a judgment recovered for their purchase price or on a mortgage thereon.

Inheritance Taxes. — Property subject to an inheritance tax comprises all real property within Porto Rico and any interest therein, whether belonging to inhabitants of Porto Rico or not, and all personal property belonging to inhabitants of Porto Rico passing by will, intestacy, inheritance, or by any grant made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor; but no tax is collected upon property passing to any one person when the value of the same shall be two hundred dollars or less, and, if the value exceeds two hundred dollars the said two hundred dollars shall be deducted in fixing the tax, and this exemption is increased to five thousand dollars in case of a wife, child, or grandchild. The rate of taxation is one per cent. up to five thousand dollars in value; one and one half per cent. on the next fifteen thousand dollars; two per cent. on the next thirty thousand dollars; and three per cent. on the next fifty thousand and four per cent. on all in excess of one hundred thousand dollars, where the party taking is a husband, wife, or a lineal descendant. The rate of taxation for all other relatives and all other persons, associations, institutions, or corporations is three per cent. on the first five thousand dollars in value; four and one half per cent. on the next fifteen thousand dollars; six per cent. on the next thirty thousand dollars; and nine per cent. on the next fifty thousand dollars and twelve per cent. on all in excess of one hundred thousand dollars. The commissions, compensation, or allowance of any administrator, executor, or trustee are subject to the tax as if the commissions, compensation, or allowance were a bequest or legacy, and the percentage depends upon the degree of relationship of the administrator, executor, or trustee to the decedent.

Within sixty days after the death of the decedent the administrator, executor, or trustee authorised to administer on the estate in Porto Rico must transmit to the treasurer of Porto Rico, who has charge of all matters connected with the collection of inheritance taxes, a sworn notification of the death of the decedent, giving the name and residence of the decedent, the date of his death, whether he died testate or intestate, the name of the notary with whom the will was recorded, the amount, valuation, description, and location of the estate, and the names and degrees of relationship of the parties interested and the share accruing to each, the names of the administrators, executors, or trustees; and the notification must be accompanied by a receipt, showing that the property taxes upon the estate of the decedent have been fully paid. Failure to file such notification is a misdemeanor with a penalty of from one hundred dollars to one thousand dollars.

Whenever possible, the estates of decedents are appraised by internal revenue agents connected with the treasury department, and the result of the appraisal must be made known to the treasurer and to the administrators, executors, or trustees of the estate. Within thirty days after the appraisal and assessment of the taxes by the treasurer any person affected thereby may appeal to the district court within which the estate is located by paying or giving security for all costs and the tax that may have been assessed.

The taxes must be paid into the treasury of Porto Rico by the administrators, executors, or trustees or other persons administering, and such persons are liable for such taxes with interest until payment. The taxes are due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent and become a lien upon his estate. If not paid within ten days from the presentation of the tax bill, the treasurer must require a bond in twice the amount of the taxes, and the treasurer may attach the property subject to the tax until the bond is given. If the taxes are not paid within one year from the date of death, interest at the rate of ten per cent. is charged, and if not paid within eighteen months, the treasurer must notify the district attorney of the district wherein the property is situated to collect by suit. The administrator, executor, trustee, or other person administering any estate subject to the tax must deduct the tax from any portion of the estate to be paid to the beneficiary in money, and for any portion not in money he must demand payment of the tax and cannot pay or deliver any specific legacy or property until he has collected the tax thereon. In case the beneficiary refuses to pay the tax, the specific legacy or property must be sold at public sale by the administrator after due notice to the beneficiary.

The treasurer must issue upon payment of the tax special tax receipts in triplicate. No judge can approve the partition or distribution of the estate of the decedent or allow any final settlement of the accounts thereof unless the special tax receipts of the treasurer are produced and exhibited, and no notary can make a deed of partition, distribution, allowances, or mortgage of the property except upon presentation of such receipts, nor can the registrar record in the register of property any instrument in connection with the property unless the treasurer's receipt is presented. Persons violating the law in this respect are liable for all taxes uncollected.

Porto Rico does not impose an inheritance tax on non-residents owning stock in corporations chartered under its laws. The treasurer of Porto Rico is the official to be addressed relative to the assessment and collection of inheritance taxes.

Insolvency. — See Bankruptcy.

Insurance. — Foreign life insurance companies, not on the assessment plan, can do business in Porto Rico after complying with the act of 1911 covering foreign corporations in general. See Corporations. Domestic insurance companies cannot be incorporated under the general act, but have to procure a special franchise from the legislature. Section 354 of the Political Code provides that it shall be the duty of the treasurer of Porto Rico to examine the condition and financial standing of insurance companies doing business in Porto Rico, and they are required at their own expense to furnish any sworn information required by the treasurer. The treasurer of Porto Rico may revoke the licenses granted if he is of the opinion that their assets are insufficient, if their condition is unsound, or if they refuse to furnish the information required. Foreign insurance companies doing business in Porto Rico must pay a franchise tax in addition to other taxes, an annual stamp tax of three per cent. of the gross amount of all premiums or dues collected in Porto Rico. Every surety and insurance company must pay, in addition to their other taxes, one half of one per cent. on each dollar of premium on every bond underwritten by them; eight cents on every one hundred dollars of all life insurance policies issued by them, and one half of one per cent. on every dollar of premium on property, accident, sickness, and personal injury insurance.

By the act of March 7, 1912, all foreign insurance companies then doing business in Porto Rico were required to deposit with the treasurer of Porto Rico, on or before July 1, 1912, specified securities to the actual cash value of fifty thousand dollars, and if considered insufficient by the treasurer, the executive council might require from life and casualty companies up to a maximum of one hundred thousand dollars more, and from fire or marine companies up to a maximum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars more. No other foreign insurance company is authorized to do business in Porto Rico until it has, if a fire or marine company, deposited with the treasurer specified securities to the actual cash value of one hundred thousand dollars, and if a life, health, or casualty company, to the actual cash value of fifty thousand dollars; further securities to the amount of one hundred thousand dollars may be exacted by the executive council.

All domestic or foreign insurance companies whose total liabilities outstanding in Porto Rico exceed the value of their deposited securities, shall, in case of contest upon any contract, deposit with the treasurer upon request of any claimant an amount in cash or securities sufficient to cover the controverted liability.

Any agent representing in Porto Rico any foreign insurance company, which has not been legally authorized to do business, shall be punished by a fine not less than the total amount of premiums paid through him, or by imprisonment from thirty days to two years, or both. Rebates are punishable by fine.

Interest. — If rate of interest is not mentioned, six per cent. is considered the legal rate. Interest up to twelve per cent. may be stipulated by contract. This does not apply to licensed pawnbrokers and bottomry and respondentia bonds. If a greater rate than the legal rate is contracted for, the contract is void so far as the entire interest is concerned, and in a suit to recover the principal sum twenty-five per cent. is awarded to the People of Porto Rico and seventy-five per cent. to the creditor. Excess interest may be recovered if the action is brought within one year.

Injunctions. — Injunctions may be issued by the judges of the supreme court and of the district courts. In the federal court the ordinary United States practice is followed. They may be granted to restrain the commission or continuance of an act claimed to be illegal, where it would produce waste, great or irreparable injury to the plaintiff, where financial compensation would not afford adequate relief, or could not be ascertained, to prevent multiplicity of suits and to fulfill trust obligations. Temporary injunctions may be granted during the pendency of the action. Except where the action is by the People or by a municipal corporation, or by a wife against her husband, an undertaking to pay all damages must be given. Temporary restraining orders may be made during the pendency of a hearing for an injunction.

Judgments. — If no defense is made judgment is entered on the expiration of the time allowed for the defendant to answer for the relief demanded in the complaint. In actions for unliquidated amounts and the like, judgment is entered after the plaintiff appears in court and gives proof of the damages or other relief to which he is entitled. If summons is served by publication, the plaintiff must be examined before judgment is given touching any payments which defendant may have given. Executions on judgments may be issued at any time within five years after entry, and the marshal must first attempt to satisfy it out of the personal property and then out of the judgment debtor's real property. Execution is returnable within sixty days. If returned wholly or partially unsatisfied, the judgment debtor may be examined as to his property. This may also be done while execution is issued and outstanding, if the judgment creditor proves to the satisfaction of the judge that the judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment. Persons indebted to the judgment debtor may pay the amount to the marshal, and his receipt acts as a discharge of the indebtedness to the extent of the amount paid. On proof by affidavit of a judgment creditor that a third person has money or property of a judgment debtor, or is indebted to him for more than fifty dollars, the judge may require such person to be examined. A reasonable attorney's fee may be taxed in the judgment when applied for in certain cases. See, also, Limitations.

Language. — In the federal court, English is the official language. In the insular courts, English and Spanish may be used; but if English is used it must always be accompanied by Spanish translation.

In the construction of statutes, in case of discrepancies between the English and Spanish texts, the text in which the statute originated in either house of the legislature prevails except (a) if a statute is a translation or adaptation of a statute of the United States or of any State or Territory thereof, the English text is given preference over the Spanish; (b) if the statute is of Spanish origin, the Spanish text is preferred to the English; (c) if the matter of preference cannot be decided under the foregoing rules, the Spanish text prevails.

Libel and Slander. — Libel is described in the statute as a malicious defamation of a person made public by writing, printing, picture, representation, effigy, or other mechanical mode of publication, tending to subject him to public hatred or contempt, or to deprive him of the benefit of public confidence and social intercourse, or to injure him in his business, or in any other way through discredit or dishonor upon him. An action for libel may also be had for a malicious public libeling of a dead person. Slander is defined as a false and unprivileged publication, other than libel, imputing the commission of a crime, or which tends to injure the person and cause him actual damage. Legislative and judicial proceedings are privileged, and publications are not presumed to be malicious if made in the proper discharge of an official duty in the report of a judicial, legislative, or other official proceeding, or a communication to an official upon proper cause with the intention of serving the public interest. The judgment may include an attorney's fee. The civil action is independent of the criminal prosecution. Libel is also made a crime punishable by a fine of not exceeding five thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both. By the act of 1911, slander, in charging the commission of a crime, or spreading a tale or report maliciously made tending to injure the honor or worthiness of a person or corporation, is made a crime punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars or less [than one hundred dollars or imprisonment for not less than sixty days or not more than six months.

Licenses. — Licenses must be obtained for all businesses not engaged wholly in interstate commerce.

Limitations. — An action is considered commenced when the complaint is filed. If defendant is out of Porto Rico when the cause of action accrues, time does not begin to run until his return to the island, and if he leaves the island after the time of action accrues, the time of absence is excluded. If the plaintiff in an action for the recovery of real property is under twenty-one, insane, or imprisoned on a criminal charge, or under sentence for less than life, or a married woman in an action in which her husband is a necessary party at the time the cause of action accrues, the period of limitation does not commence to run until the disability is removed. If a person dies before the period of limitation expires, action may be commenced by his representative after the time and within one year from his death. An action against the representative of a deceased defendant may be commenced within one year after the issuance of letters testamentary or of administration. There is also the usual exception in case of war. If an action is stayed, the time of the continuance of the stay is excepted. Actions against directors or stockholders of a corporation to recover a penalty or to enforce a liability are excepted from those previous, and must be brought within three years. An acknowledgment of an existing debt or new promise, to remove the case from the statute of limitations, must be in writing and signed by the party to be charged. There is no limitation for the crime of murder, embezzlement of public funds, or falsification of public accounts. Limitation for felony, three years; misdemeanor, one year; adultery, one year from time of discovery. Under the Code of Commerce, possession of a vessel in good faith after recorded title passes title in three years, otherwise in ten years. This time does not run in favor of the captain. Merchants are required to preserve their books for five years. Actions against partners barred in three years. Actions on notes, bills, checks, dividends, drafts, three years. Actions for fraud, etc., six months. Actions for passage money, six months. On bottomry and respondentia bonds, three years. In the general statutes possession of personal property in good faith passes title in three years, otherwise in six years. Real property, where parties are in possession, title passes in ten years on possession and good faith, twenty years as to absent persons, and irrespective of good faith, in thirty years. Actions on mortgages expire in twenty years. Personal actions in fifteen years. No prescription runs between co-owners; libel and slander three years; negligence, one year; rescission of contract, six months; nullity of contracts, four years. Actions on account of service, etc., against lawyers, notaries, agents, clerks, servants expire in three years.

Lost Instruments. — A lost promissory note may be sued upon on giving a bond fixed by the court.

Liens. — Hotel-keepers have a lien on goods left in their charge. There is no general lien given for services. See Mortgages; Pledge and Pawn.

Married Women. — All property belonging to either husband or wife before marriage remains the personal property of the original owner. Property acquired during the marriage, and improvements on property acquired before the marriage, belong to the conjugal partnership and constitute community property, which can only be alienated by both spouses in the case of real property. The husband is the head of the community and administers the community property. Before marriage a contract may be executed stipulating conditions for the conjugal partnership with regard to present and future property as they please. For a minor to execute a marriage contract, his tutor or guardian must take part therein, and the contract must be made in a public instrument. In foreign marriages, if the husband is a Porto Rican, the Porto Rican law relating to conjugal partnership is binding. If not, the partnership shall be construed under the system of laws of the husband's country as binding. Ante-nuptial gifts are valid, even without acceptance, if given in consideration of marriage. This is limited to one tenth part of the actual property, and they are limited with regard to future property by the laws of intestate succession. Gifts between spouses after marriage are void. Parents are bound to give a dowry to their legitimate daughters, which consists of a moiety of her prospective legal portion and may be given either in its entirety or an annual income. The parents are obliged to furnish this dowry only when the daughter does not have property in her own right equivalent thereto; and when she has separate property the amount of the dowry is limited to the difference between the amount of this property and the amount of the legal portion. Property acquired by gift, devise, or descent by either spouse during the marriage is not included within the partnership property, neither is that acquired by right of redemption or by exchange for other separate property, or for property purchased with money belonging to the wife or to the husband. There always exists the presumption that property of the marriage is partnership property. The wife can sue and be sued apart from her husband in matters relating to her separate property solely, otherwise her husband must be a party, except in an action between herself and her husband, and when she is living separate and apart from her husband by reason of his desertion of her. The husband can mortgage the real estate of the partnership without the express consent of the wife. He may dispose by will of only his half of the community property. Upon dissolution, after inventory taken, and deductions made for the debts, charges, obligations, etc., the husband and wife share equally. The wife can lawfully contract for necessities. The property of the spouses may be separated in case of divorce, and the conjugal partnership dissolved and liquidated; but the husband and wife must mutually attend to the support of the children in proportion to their respective shares. In the incapacity or absence of the husband the wife is the administrator of the property.

Master and Servant. — The master is in general responsible for the acts of the servants in his employ and for the damage done by apprentices. Under the Employers' Liability Act the master is liable for injury to his employees only when the injury was received within the scope of his employment, when there was a defect in the ways, works, or machinery, or when the injury was caused by the negligence of himself or of his superintendent, and in such cases the damages are limited to two thousand dollars in the case of injury and three thousand in the case of death. Contributory negligence is a defense, the burden resting on the defendant except in cases under the Employers' Liability Act, and cases covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Mechanics' Liens. — These do not exist in Porto Rico.

Minors. — The age of majority is twenty-one years. A minor over the age of eighteen may be emancipated by his father by a declaration before a notary for the purpose of administering his property, or if his parents be dead, by the district court. Minors may make marriage contracts and are emancipated of right by marriage. The emancipated minor cannot make a contract exceeding the amount of his income for more than one year, or sell his real estate without the consent of his father or tutor, or appear in an action without their appearance until majority. Parents are liable for the acts of their minor children and may be obliged to pay for their support. Minors may acquire possession, but to perfect title the assistance of their parents or guardians is required. Contracts with minors are voidable, but may be ratified when becoming of age. Property acquired by the child by consent, or for valuable consideration, belongs to him; but the usufruct belongs to the parents, if he lives with them.

Mortgages. — Mortgages can be made only of real property or alienable rights therein. Mortgages include the yearly accessions, improvements, growing fruits, uncollected rents of the property pledged, and may be assigned wholly or partially. It must be in a public instrument, and to bind third parties must be recorded in the registry of property. Before rights of foreclosure can be had, even between the original parties, the mortgage must be recorded. By the mortgage law a summary sale of the property can be had when the mortgage becomes due, unless the owner of the property proves within twenty days from the time of the application that it has been paid.

Notaries. — Notaries must keep the various protocols containing the originals of all public instruments drawn by them, notes of all affidavits taken and their other official acts. They must also keep separate protocols for wills. For instruments that are to be registered they deliver a first certified copy to the parties. The protocol after the notary's death is open to public inspection at the office of the dean of the College of Notaries. Fees of notaries are fixed by law.

Notes, Bills, and Checks. — These are governed by the Code of Commerce. The address of the maker, drawer, and payee must always be given, together with the place of execution. It is safer to have a note witnessed or executed before a notary, as if sued on in such a case an attachment can be had without giving any bond. Indorsements should be dated and the place of indorsement added. No days of grace are allowed. The time and place of payment and the manner and form in which the drawer has received the consideration must also be stated. The amount should be written out in words, and to be negotiable must be money only. The words "to order of," if absent, are implied.

Partnerships. — Partnerships are either general, limited, or commercial. Commercial partnerships must be executed in the manner specified in the Commercial Code and recorded in the commercial register. Such partnerships may sue or be sued under the partnership name. Creditors of the partnership must exhaust partnership property before endeavoring to levy on the personal property of the partners, and are preferred to the personal creditors of each partner with respect to the property of the partnership. All the general partners are agents of the partnership.

Patents. — The United States statutes covering patents are in force in Porto Rico. Patents and trade-marks may be registered in the office of the secretary of Porto Rico on the payment of a small fee. There is a local trade-mark law which is broader in scope than the federal statute.

Powers of Attorney. — A general power of attorney only covers the power to administer property, and any other power, the object of which is to transfer or affect any rights in real property must be drafted in a public instrument. A general power of attorney only gives the right to acts of administration. Power to sell, mortgage, and incumber does not give the right to receive the mortgage when due and accept the instrument of cancellation or to borrow money secured by mortgage. It is always best under the law to make the power as detailed and specific as possible. Foreign powers to affect real estate must be by a public instrument, and powers of attorney executed in accordance with the law of the place of execution and properly certified are valid in Porto Rico.

Prescriptions. — See Limitations.

Proof of Claims. — In sending claims for collection, not only the full name should be given, but an itemized account giving the date and amount of each transaction, with a description of the goods sold, etc., and terms of credit should be given. If the claim is on a written contract an exact copy should be sent.

Pledge and Pawn. — To constitute a pledge, the property to be pledged must be placed in the possession of the pledgee, and may be made of personal property capable of possession, and which may be the object of commerce. A later debt contracted by the pledgor to the pledgee extends the pledge so as to cover both debts, even though not so stipulated. The pledgor is bound to use due care, and may recover the expenses incurred for attention and preservation. Interest received on any pledge is charged first to interest on the debt and the balance to principal. While the pledgor remains the owner, the creditor can exercise any of the actions to reclaim or defend it against third parties which the owner could. The pledgee has no right to make use of the pledge without authorization. Sale of property pledged upon default must be made at public auction, and on notice to the debtor and the owner of the pledge. If not sold it must be put up a second time with the same formalities, and if not sold then the creditor may become the owner of the thing pledged. If he elects so to do, the debt is discharged. Securities quoted on the exchange must be sold as prescribed in the Code of Commerce. A pledge is indivisible and no part of it can be partially demanded back until the whole debt is paid.

Receivers. — Receivers may be appointed in an action to cancel a fraudulent sale, and where the property or funds is in danger of being lost, removed, or injured; to carry a judgment into effect or to preserve the property during the pendency of an appeal; to hold the property of a corporation when the corporation has been dissolved, or is insolvent or is in imminent danger of insolvency, or has forfeited its corporate rights. A court of equity has also the general right to appoint a receiver in proper cases. No party or attorney, or person interested in an action may be appointed a receiver without the written and filed consent of the parties, and the receiver must give a bond in an amount to be fixed by the court. He has the power to bring and defend actions relating to the property in his own name as receiver, to keep possession of it, to receive rents and profits, collect and compound for debts, to make such transfers and to do such other acts respecting the property as the court may authorize.

Redemption. — If a co-owner of an inheritance of real property sells his share his co-owners have the legal right of redemption by tendering to the purchaser the amount paid by him within nine days after the deed is recorded in the register of property. Where an inheritance has not been divided, legal redemption may be had at any time within a year.

Replevin. — The plaintiff in an action for replevin, upon affidavit showing that he is the owner or is entitled to its possession, and that the property is wrongfully detained by the defendant, giving the cause thereof, and that it has not been taken for a tax, assessment, or fine, or seized under an execution or judgment, or if it is so seized it is exempt by statute therefrom, and its value, and bond given, may at the time of issuing the summons, or at any time before answer, claim the delivery of the property to him. A bond with sufficient sureties, approved by the marshal, for double the full value of the property of the defendant, and for its return to the defendant, if its return be adjudged, must be given. The marshal must take the property and retain it, unless the defendant gives a written undertaking in double the value of the property for its return within five days after taking and notice. If this is not done the property must be delivered to the plaintiff. Parties have two days to accept the sureties, and until then the marshal is responsible for them. A third person claiming the property may also take it upon giving a similar undertaking.

Reports. — There are two series of judicial reports. The reports of the decisions of the federal courts of Porto Rico, which are privately published, and the reports of the decisions of the supreme court of Porto Rico, which are published by the secretary of Porto Rico. These run from the establishment of the judicial system by the United States.

Service. — The service of summons on a Porto Rico corporation is made by delivery of a copy on the president, secretary, cashier, or managing agent; against a foreign corporation or non-resident joint-stock company doing business and having a managing or business agent or secretary within the island, to such person or to the person designated by it as one upon whom the process can be served. If no such person is within the district, then upon any agent of the corporation within the district. Service on a minor under fourteen, by service on the minor personally and also on his father, mother, or guardian. To a person judicially adjudged incompetent, on such person and his guardian. In other cases, to the defendant personally. See, also, Actions.

Sales. — A contract of sale is perfected and binding when the thing to be sold and the price are agreed upon, though neither have been delivered. The delivery of the thing sold can be compelled if it is specified. If the thing sold is destroyed before the time specified for delivery, without the fault of the vendor, the obligation is nullified. Where earnest money has been paid, the damages for rescission of the contract by the vendee may not be more than that amount, or double the amount if the vendor. Unless special agreement is made, the vendor is charged with the execution of the instrument of sale. Husband and wife cannot sell property to each other except when judicially separated. A guardian cannot purchase the property of his ward, or agents that of their principals, or lawyers the property or rights which may be the objects of litigation in which they take part. Cost of delivery in the absence of stipulation is on the vendor. By contract of sale the vendor guarantees peaceable possession, and that there are no hidden faults or defects. The damages which may be claimed under this warranty by the vendee losing possession by reason of an official judgment on a prior title include the restitution of the price of the thing sold at the time of its loss by the vendee, the costs of the suits, the expenses of the contract if paid by the vendee and interest. Sales of property of a co-owner are subject to legal redemption (q. v.).

Seal. — A seal is usual and in some cases a necessity in corporate contracts. In contracts between individuals there is no distinction, whether they are simple or under seal.

Supplementary Proceedings. — See Judgments.

Statutes. — The act of Congress under which the government of Porto Rico is at present organized is the Act of March 2, 1917, known as the Organic Act or the Jones Act, which superseded the act of April 12, 1900, known as the Foraker Act. It provides in general for the government of the Island. By the Act of April 12, 1900, the laws then in force in Porto Rico, as modified by the military orders of the provisional government, were continued until changed by legislative enactment. By the Act of March 2, 1917, the laws then in force not in conflict with its provisions were continued in force. The other acts of Congress covering Porto Rico are Resolution No. 23 of May 1, 1900; Act of March 2, 1901, ch. 912; Act of July 1, ch. 1383; Act of June 11, 1906, ch. 3075; Act of June 25, 1906, ch. 3452. The legislature meets every two years and the senate meets annually. In 1902 a revised civil code, very similar to the civil code of Spain which was then in existence, was enacted; a political code, a penal code, and a code of criminal procedure were also enacted and various special laws passed in the sessions of 1900, 1901, and 1902 were collated. The publication of the Session Laws since then has been annual.

The printed copies of these statutes furnished by the executive secretary of Porto Rico are competent evidence of their contents. Congress has reserved the right to legislate regarding Porto Rico and to annul any statute passed by the legislature.

Successions — Include not only the property and obligations in the condition in which they existed at the time of death, but also the property and obligations of the succession when it is opened. Minors cannot be executors. If one or more executors are appointed the majority must concur in any act. The executor must decline to act within six days or he is deemed to have accepted the appointment, and then may not renounce it except for cause. If he renounces otherwise, he renounces what is expressly left to him by the testator. If a term is not fixed, the executor is required to close out the estate within a year; but the testator can fix a longer term in the will. The executor must submit an account of his administration to the heirs, and in certain cases to the district court. Heirs may accept the estate with the benefit of inventory; that is, by having an inventory made they are not liable for any debts beyond the amount shown by it. Minors must accept with inventory. If they accept without inventory, the estate must be turned over by the administrator and they are personally liable to fulfill all the decedent's obligations. See, also, Decedents' Estates.

Taxes. — Taxes are assessed as soon as practical after January 15 of each year and are payable in two instalments, on July 1 and January 1, succeeding. Taxes not paid within sixty days after they become due become delinquent, and thereafter a penalty of one half of one per cent. for each month during which they remain unpaid is added. Taxes which are not paid within thirty days after they become delinquent are enforced by attachment of the personal property by the collector of the district in which the property is located. If the personal property is insufficient to cover the amount of the tax, expenses, etc., the real property is attached and sold, the attachment having the force of an execution. Annotation must be made in the office of the registrars of property before the sale. Corporations are assessed in a similar manner as are individuals, except banks and insurance companies (q. v.).

Tutor. — The property of unemancipated minors, insane people, prodigals, or habitual drunkards so declared by judgment of the court, is administered by a tutor, whose appointment must be recorded. A father or mother may appoint a tutor for his minor children and for those who are incapacitated by will. Any person leaving an inheritance to minors or incapacitated persons may appoint a tutor for the administration thereof. In default of a testamentary tutor, the paternal grandfather, after him the maternal grandfather, then the paternal and maternal grandmothers, the eldest brother or sister of the full blood are tutors by force of law. By decrees of the district court on the application of his relatives a tutor may be appointed for the property of an incapacitated person, after a hearing. The tutor must give a bond of twice the appraised valuation of the property which must be approved by the court. The security may be by a recorded mortgage, or by depositing goods or negotiable securities as a pledge in the public institutions designated for that purpose. A testamentary tutor can be relieved of giving a bond by provision in the will. A tutor is required to maintain and educate his ward, make an inventory of the property, which shall be presented to and approved by the district court, which shall order an appraisal thereof if not fixed by the instrument creating the tutorship. Remuneration of not less than four per cent. or more than ten per cent. is fixed by the district court. The tutor must render yearly accounts.

Warehouse Receipts. — At the last session of the legislature, the Uniform Warehouse Receipts Law was enacted, providing for the issuance of negotiable warehouse receipts and providing that the purchaser in good faith of such a receipt shall take title to the goods covered thereby.

Wills. — Persons of fourteen years and over of sound mind may make a will. A lunatic may make a valid will during a lucid interval if examined by two physicians called by the notary, and they answer for his capacity, including their opinion in the will. A will is a personal act, and a general power of appointment is invalid, but testator may leave sums in trust for distribution to specified devisees, such as relations, charitable institutions, and the like. Wills are divided into four principal classes: (1) holographic; (2) open; (3) closed; (4) military and maritime and those executed in foreign countries known as special wills. A holographic will is one written out in its entirety and signed by the testator, who must be of full age. It must state the year, month, and day of execution, and contain under the signature of the testator and in his own handwriting a statement of all erasures, corrections, and interlineations. They may be executed by residents or foreigners in any place in or out of Porto Rico and in the language of the testator. They must be protocolized by presentation to the district court of the last domicile of the testator and to the district court of the district in which he dies, if his death occurred in Porto Rico, and within five years from his death, in order to be valid; and unless the person with whom the will is deposited presents it within ten days from the time that he heard of the death of the testator he is liable for all of the damage caused by the delay. It is proved in open court by three witnesses to the handwriting of the testator. Handwriting experts may be employed.

Open wills are executed before a notary and three witnesses who must be of full age, residents of the locality, knowing the language of the testator and not related to the notary within the fourth degree of consanguinity or second of affinity, and his clerks and servants. Heirs and legatees and their relatives within the same degrees are also incompetent to be witnesses unless the legacy is of personal property of small importance.

A closed will is signed by the testator on all the sheets placed in a sealed envelope and authenticated by the testator as his will in the presence of a notary and five witnesses. There are many formalities too detailed to be mentioned here. Blind people or persons who cannot read or write cannot execute a closed will.

For wills executed in any other language than Spanish or English there must be two interpreters, and the will must be written out in the language of the testator and either in Spanish or English. Wills made abroad by citizens of Porto Rico may be made according to the forms established by the laws of the country in which executed, except that mutual wills are prohibited. Subsequent wills revoke prior wills, and a will cannot be revoked without the formalities necessary to make a will. Revocation of a subsequent will containing a statement of the desire to reinstate a former perfect will is sufficient to revive it.

A bequest to the relatives of the testator generally is understood to be made in favor of those nearest in degree. A ward cannot make a bequest in favor of his guardian unless the final accounts of the latter have been approved, unless the guardian is her ascendant, descendant, brother, sister, or spouse. The notary and his relatives, the witnesses to an open will and of a special will, cannot take a bequest in a will. If an heir dies before the testator his share lapses unless he is a descendant of the testator, in which case his descendants represent him.

Substitutions in trust are valid provided they do not go beyond the second degree, or provided they are made in favor of persons living at the time of the death of the testator. They cannot affect the legal portion and must be expressly made. Perpetuities are invalid. There may be a perpetual bequest in trust to a charitable institution, but in such cases the heir has the right to capitalise the bequest with the approval of the attorney-general and governor of Porto Rico.

A spouse may be disinherited for grounds which afford cause for divorce if the spouses are separated. Subsequent reconciliation renders the disinheritance already made of no effect.

Workmen's Compensation. — The legislature in 1918 passed a new law known as the Workmen's Accident Compensation Act, which is compulsory in its provisions and allows no election to the employer. It covers every employer who regularly employs three or more laborers and excludes any laborer whose wages exceed the sum of twelve hundred dollars annually, and also excludes farm laborers who are not employed to work with machinery operated by steam, gas, electricity, animal, or other mechanical power, and domestic servants and employees engaged in clerical work in offices and commercial establishments where machinery is not used. Every employer within the provisions of the act must furnish to the Workmen's Relief Commission copies of his pay-rolls and is assessed thereon a certain percentage thereof annually as a premium for the support of the Workmen's Relief Fund. The rate varies from one half of one per cent. of the total annual pay-roll to four per cent., according to the risk of accident in various kinds of employments. The assessment is made and collected in the same manner as taxes. Any laborer who is injured is entitled to receive certain stated amounts from the Workmen's Relief Fund, and in case of the death of the workman, payment is made to his heirs. The workman is also entitled to medical attendance, medicines, and hospital attention.

RHODE ISLAND LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Tillinghast & Collins, of Providence.

The General Assembly convenes the first Tuesday of January in each year.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — All actions and suits at law and in equity relating to realty, if in the superior court, must be brought in the court for the county, and, if in the district court, in the court for the district, in which the land lies; all other actions and suits either in the court for the county or district where the plaintiff or defendant, or some one of the parties plaintiff or defendant, shall dwell, or in the county in which defendant, or some one of the parties defendant shall be found.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits — May be taken before any magistrate within the State, and before any commissioner appointed by the governor within the State or county described in the commission. No particular form is provided or adopted. Proof of the official character of the officer before whom an affidavit or acknowledgment is taken out of the State is seldom called for, and never without notice.

The courts have usually received affidavits made out of Rhode Island before magistrates authorized to take depositions. The official seal of the magistrate, when affidavit is taken out of the State, should be used.

Aliens — May take, hold, and transmit title to real estate in same way and to same effect as native born citizens, "and no title to real estate shall be invalid on account of the alienage of a former owner."

Appeals. — Appeals may be taken from a final decree of the superior court in equity to the supreme court within thirty days after entry thereof, and from decrees and orders of a court of probate or town council to the superior court within forty days after the decree or order; and from any district court to the superior court in any criminal case within five days after sentence, and in any civil case by claim of jury trial within two days after decision; except that in cases for possession of tenements, etc., the claim must be made within six hours after decision. Appeals from interlocutory decrees granting an injunction or appointing a receiver are specially provided for.

Arrests. — In any action founded upon any cause of action, except for the recovery of debt, or of state or town taxes, the writ may be made to run against the body of the defendant in the first instance, and after judgment the execution is issued as of course, running against the goods and chattels and real estate of the defendant, and, for want thereof, against his body. Also, in actions for debts contracted prior to July 1, 1870.

No person can be arrested or imprisoned in any other action for the recovery of debt, or of state or town taxes, except in the mode and subject to the conditions following: The plaintiff, or his agent or attorney, shall make affidavit, duly certified on such writ, that the plaintiff has a just claim against the defendant that is due, upon which the plaintiff expects to recover in the action commenced by such writ a sum sufficient to give jurisdiction to the court to which such writ is returnable, and that the defendant to be arrested is about to depart from the State without leaving therein real or personal estate whereon the execution that may be obtained in such action can be served, and where the defendant is a non-resident of the State, that one at least of the plaintiffs is a resident, or that the defendant to be arrested has committed fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, either in contracting the debt upon which the action is founded, or in the concealment or disposition of his property; but no female shall be arrested in any civil action founded on contract by virtue of any original writ whatever.

If it shall be made to appear to any court which shall have rendered judgment in any action or to any justice of such court, that the defendant is about to depart from this State, without leaving therein real or personal estate to satisfy said judgment, or has been guilty of fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, either in contracting said debt, or in the concealment, detention, or disposition of his property, such court or justice may order an execution running against the body of the defendant.

The law requires no bond from plaintiff. One is sometimes given to sheriff for his protection in doubtful cases. There are no rules as to number or qualifications of sureties.

Attachments. — An original writ, or a writ of mesne process, commanding the attachment of the real or personal estate of the defendant, including his personal estate in the hands or possession of another person as his trustee, and his stock or shares in any banking association or other incorporated company, may be issued whenever the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, shall make affidavit to be indorsed upon the writ, or to be annexed thereto, setting forth that the plaintiff has a just claim against the defendant that is due, and upon which he expects to recover in said action a sum sufficient to give jurisdiction thereof to the court to which said writ is made returnable. Attachments cannot issue upon a debt not matured. Before making attachments, bond with satisfactory surety for the protection of the officer serving is sometimes required in double the value of the property attached. See Proof of Claims.

Each attachment is for the sole benefit of the creditor making it. If set aside by proceedings under the insolvent law, the costs of making the attachment are to be paid by the assignee, if assets are sufficient. If attaching creditor is required to give bond to the sheriff before making attachment, in case the suit fails, or the property does not belong to the debtor, the liability is for return of the property (or payment of its value) and damages thereto, if any, with interest; in other words, full indemnity must be made.

All executions run against the goods and chattels and real estate of the defendant, and in cases mentioned under the title of Arrests may run also against "the body of the defendant." See Service.

Bills of Lading. — The Uniform Bills of Lading Act was enacted April 14, 1914 (Public Laws, ch. 1029).

Chattel Mortgages. — Chattel mortgages may, like mortgages of real estate, be foreclosed or redeemed in equity as well as at law. Record is necessary in office of clerk of town where mortgagor resides, if in this State, otherwise where the property is, unless possession is taken of the property and retained by the mortgagee, such recording or possession to be made or taken within five days from the date of the signing thereof. If the mortgage embraces future acquired property, it may be enforced as an equitable lien upon it. No mortgage is good against any other person except the mortgagor, his executors or administrators, unless recorded, or the mortgagee is in possession.

Foreclosure is usually by sale under powers in the mortgage, but may be effected by possession for sixty days after breach of condition. See Mortgages.

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — All persons having claims, including pending suits, preferred claims, and claims of the executor or administrator, against the estate of a deceased person shall file statements of their claims in the office of the clerk of the probate court. Claims filed within six months from the said first publication of notice of his qualification by the first executor or administrator shall be preferred in payment over all claims subsequently filed. Claims not filed within one year from said publication shall be barred: provided, that a creditor who by reason of accident, mistake, or unforeseen cause has failed to file his claim may at any time before distribution of the estate file his claim, and shall forthwith give notice thereof in writing to the executor or administrator, which claim, if allowed, shall be paid out of assets remaining in the hands of the executor or administrator. If the executor or administrator's address is registered in the probate clerk's office, a copy of the claim must be sent him by registered mail, or delivered to him or his attorney. Every creditor shall file with his claim, in the office of the probate clerk, his post-office address, and shall thereafter give notice to the clerk of any change of his address during the administration of the estate. All notices to which the creditor is entitled may be sent to his address so filed. A claimant shall, if requested by the executor or administrator, also file in the office of the clerk of the probate court an affidavit in support of his claim, stating to the best of his knowledge and belief that he has given credit to the estate for all payments and offsets to which it is entitled, and that the balance claimed is justly due, and what security, if any, he holds for his claim, and if the claim is not upon a negotiable instrument, that no such instrument has been given. Any claim filed within six months from said first publication may be disallowed within six months and thirty days from said first publication by the executor or administrator, or by any person interested, by filing in the probate clerk's office a statement disallowing such claim, and giving notice in writing, either personally or by registered mail, to the claimant; any claim filed within a year may be similarly disallowed within a year and thirty days; and if filed after a year, within thirty days after notice of filing. Furthermore, the probate court may, on petition, notice, and hearing, grant additional time for disallowing any claim on such terms as the court may prescribe. After the expiration of said one year and filing a statement of claims disallowed, if any there be, as provided in the preceding section, the executor or administrator, if he have sufficient assets to pay in full all creditors who have filed their claims, shall pay claims not disallowed, preferring those filed within six months, if assets are not sufficient for all claims, and shall pay claims so filed and disallowed when proved. If the estate is solvent, the executor or administrator may within ten days after disallowance of a claim file a request that claims disallowed be proved before commissioners. The court may thereupon appoint one or three commissioners, who shall examine and determine said claims. All claims disallowed shall be heard and decided by the commissioners, and no suit shall be brought upon any such claim. The commissioners shall give such notice to creditors whose claims are referred to them, of the time when and place where their claims will be examined, as the court may direct. They shall report to the court within thirty days after the expiration of the time limited for proving claims, unless further time for cause shown shall be allowed by the court. Suit may be brought on a disallowed claim within six months after notice of disallowance is given to the claimant, unless the estate has been theretofore represented as insolvent or request for proof of the claim before commissioners has been filed; and suit on the claim or proof before commissioners is thereafter barred.

An executor or administrator at any time during administration may represent the estate insolvent to the probate court, and apply for the appointment of commissioners to examine and determine claims. If the probate court finds the estate is probably insolvent, and there are claims which have been disallowed, it shall appoint one or three commissioners; and all claims against an insolvent estate which are disallowed shall be heard and decided by the commissioners. And if any creditor whose claim has been disallowed or objected to shall not prove his claim before the commissioners within the time originally fixed, or thereafter extended as aforesaid, he shall, unless otherwise provided by law, be forever barred of his action therefor against the executor or administrator. If a claim against a solvent or insolvent estate shall be disallowed in whole or in part by the commissioners, the probate clerk shall mail a written notice thereof to the claimant or to his attorney within seven days after the filing of the commissioners' report; and any person whose claim is not allowed in full by the commissioners on either a solvent or insolvent estate may appeal to the superior court from the decree of the probate court confirming the report of the commissioners; and in like manner an executor or administrator, or creditor, or party interested, may appeal with respect to any claim allowed.

A person who has a contingent claim against a deceased person which cannot be proved as a debt within the time allowed for filing claims may file his claim in the office of the clerk of the probate court within the time allowed for filing claims. If upon examination it appears to the court that such claim may become justly due from the estate, the probate court shall order the executor or administrator to deposit in the registry of the court assets sufficient to satisfy such claim, or its proportionate share in case of insolvency of the estate.

If the personal property of the deceased person is insufficient to pay debts, funeral expenses, etc., probate court may authorize the executor or administrator to sell or mortgage the real estate of the deceased person upon satisfactory bond being given.

If the estate of a decedent is insufficient to pay his debts, the same, after deducting the charges of administration and such property as is set off and allowed to the widow and family, shall be applied to the payment of his debts and charges in the following order: 1. The necessary funeral charges of the deceased. 2. The necessary expenses of his last sickness. 3. Debts due to the United States. 4. Debts due to this State, and all state and town taxes. 5. Wages of labor performed within six months next prior to the death of such deceased person, not exceeding one hundred dollars to any one person. 6. Other debts filed within six months of said first notice. 7. Other debts filed within one year of such notice. 8. Other debts presented before distribution of the estate. If there is not sufficient property to pay all the debts of any class, the creditors of that class shall be paid ratably upon their respective claims; and no payment shall be made to creditors of any class until all of those of the preceding class or classes have been paid in full.

As to limitations of actions against solvent estates, see Limitations.

In grants of administration the husband, if resident, is preferred; next, the widow or one or more of the next of kin, if resident; and the court may appoint them, if non-resident, if circumstances make it proper; and bond, usually in double the amount of the personal estate, with resident sureties, or a surety company, is required.

Executors, unless, as authorized by the will or as being also residuary legatees, they have given bond to pay funeral charges, debts and legacies, and administrators are required within thirty days after appointment to give bond to return inventory and to account, and the estate should be settled within two years from the grant of administration.

The court of probate, whether the estate is solvent or insolvent, may allow to the widow her apparel, and that of her children, and such bedding and other household goods, supplies on hand, and other property of the husband exempt from all attachment by law, as it shall judge necessary; and, if there are no children, may set off to her such part of the real estate, not required for the payment of debts, as may be suitable for her situation and support, and be in accordance with the circumstances of the estate, to hold, in addition to her dower, upon the same terms and conditions, and for the same period, that she holds her estate of dower.

Conditional Sales. — No statute other than those respecting mortgages, and the "act to make uniform the law relating to the sale of goods." (Ch. 1598, passed April 30, 1908, now Title XXVII. of Gen. Laws of 1909.)

Consignments. — "The consignee of merchandise shipped shall have a lien thereon for any money or negotiable security by him advanced upon the faith of such shipment to or for the use of the person in whose name the shipment shall have been made, in the same manner and to the same extent as if such person were the true owner thereof: provided, at the time of the advance the consignee shall have had no notice or knowledge that the shipper was not the true owner of such merchandise." And see Sale of Goods Act.

Corporations. — Chapter 212 of the General Laws of 1909 provides: Section 2. Any three or more persons of lawful age, who shall associate by written articles which shall express — 1. Their agreement to constitute a corporation. 2. The name by which it shall be known, which shall be one which cannot be mistaken for that of a partnership, and which name is not then in use by any existing corporation in the State. 3. The business for which it is constituted. 4. The town or city in which it is to be located. 5. If it have a capital stock, the amount of the capital stock, and whether common or preferred and how much of each, and the par value of each share; and, if preferred, the advantages thereof over the common stock — shall, upon complying with the requirements hereinafter provided, be and become a corporation for the transaction of the business named in said articles of agreement, excepting the business of any railroad company, turnpike company, or any other company which shall need to possess the right to take or condemn lands or other property under the power of eminent domain, or to acquire franchises in the streets or highways of towns or cities, and also excepting the business of insurance, of banks and banking corporations, savings banks, trust companies, or any other corporation trading in bonds, notes, or other evidences of indebtedness; and by section 21 of chapter 213 it is provided that "every corporation created under the authority of this State shall have a place of business within the State, and shall have a clerk, treasurer, or other agent who shall reside therein." Sec. 3. Such agreement shall be signed by all the corporators therein named, who shall also state their residences against their names, and shall be acknowledged in the same manner as deeds of real estate within this State are required to be acknowledged, and shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, together with a certificate of the general treasurer that the corporators have paid into the treasury for the use of the State one hundred dollars, or, if the capital stock is to be over one hundred thousand dollars, a sum equal to one tenth of one per cent. of said capital stock; and the secretary of state is thereupon authorized to issue a certificate of the fact of such filing. Upon compliance with the foregoing requirements, such association shall be authorized to transact business as a corporation, with the powers and subject to the duties and obligations provided by chapters 213 and 214. Sec. 10. Every corporation to carry on the business of insurance shall be created only by the general assembly on petition thereto.

The statutes contain general provisions respecting corporations, defining their powers, and providing for their organization, etc. (see Gen. Laws, ch. 213); but each corporation is left free to adopt such by-laws and regulations, consistent with law, for its government and for the management of its affairs and property, as it sees fit.

There are no statutory provisions concerning the number of directors or the amount of capital stock to be paid in at the time of organization. Real estate and tangible personal property is taxed same as if owned by an individual. See Taxes.

All manufacturing, and some other business, corporations are, however, subject to certain statutory provisions, among the most important of which is that all the members shall be jointly and severally liable (but which liability "is limited to the shares of such members in such corporations paid up to the par value thereof") for all the debts and contracts of the corporation until the whole amount of the capital stock shall have been paid in and a certificate thereof, signed and sworn to by the president, treasurer, and clerk, and by a majority of the directors, shall have been made and recorded in the office of the town clerk of the town in which the manufactory of the corporation is established (and in case of the increase of the capital stock like proceedings shall be had as to the amount added and paid in).

If any of the officers neglect or refuse to make and record the first return of the capital paid in, within ten days after it is paid in, they shall be jointly and severally liable for all debts contracted after said ten days and before the certificate is recorded.

There are also provisions making the officers and stockholders liable if any part of the capital is withdrawn or refunded before the debts are paid, or if a dividend is paid when the corporation is insolvent. (Gen. Laws, ch. 214.)

All corporations doing business in Rhode Island are subject to the Tax Act of 1912 and the amendment of 1916. (See Tax Law.) Sales of shares of investment, real estate, or mining companies, or coöperative organizations other than building and loan associations, are prohibited until certain information is filed in the office of the secretary of state. (This act requires to be interpreted by the courts.) There is no other restriction upon foreign corporations doing business in this State, except upon foreign insurance companies, surety companies, and building loan associations; and except that every foreign corporation doing business here, except national banks and other corporations existing under the authority of the United States, is required to appoint some competent person resident in this State as its attorney, upon whom all process against it may be served, and to file a copy of such power of attorney, duly certified and authenticated, with our secretary of state. A foreign corporation may hold lands in this State. The act for the transfer of shares of stock proposed by the committee of the American Bar Association to make such transfers uniform in the several States was passed by the general assembly in February, 1912.

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for Rhode Island.

Deeds. — Seals upon deeds are abolished. No estate of inheritance or freehold, or for a term exceeding one year, in lands or tenements, can be conveyed from one to another by deed, unless the same be in writing, signed and delivered by the grantor, and acknowledged before a state senator, judge, justice of the peace, mayor, notary public, town clerk, or recorder of deeds, and recorded or lodged to be recorded in the office of the town clerk of the town where the land lies. Although such conveyances, as well as all deeds of trust and mortgages of real estate, are declared void unless acknowledged and recorded as aforesaid, yet a proviso enacts that the same between the parties and their heirs and those taking

A conveyance of lands within this State, or instrument relating thereto executed without the limits of this State and within the United States, may be acknowledged before any judge, justice of the peace, mayor, or notary public of the State, District of Columbia, or Territory where the same is executed, or before any commissioner appointed by the governor of this State and duly qualified thereunto; provided, however, that if the instrument is acknowledged or proved "in the manner prescribed by the law of the State, Territory, or District of Columbia where executed it shall be deemed to be legally executed, and shall have the same effect as if executed in the mode above prescribed;" and if without the limits of the United States, before any ambassador, minister, chargé d'affaires, consul-general, vice-consul-general, consul, vice-consul, consular agent, or commercial agent of the United States, or before any commissioner appointed by the governor of this State, in the country in which such acknowledgment is made. Such acknowledgment may also be made within or without this State by any person actually engaged in the military or naval service of the United States, before any colonel, lieutenant-colonel, or major in the army, or before any officer in the navy not below the grade and rank of lieutenant-commander. It is preferable to have the magistrate's certificate under his official seal.

No special form of executing deeds, etc., by corporations is prescribed. The president or treasurer, duly authorized by vote, usually affixes the corporate seal, etc., signs the corporate name (by adding his official designation), and acknowledges the instrument as the deed of the corporation.

STATE OF } ss.
COUNTY OF }

In witness whereof, I have set my hand and seal, at _____ the day and year above written.
[Seal.] _____ (Signature and title.)

The secretary of state is the proper officer to certify to the official character of the magistrate, though the clerks of court more frequently do.

Every magistrate and officer, previous to the taking of any deposition within this State, shall cause the adverse party or his attorney of record to be notified of the time and place appointed for taking the same, that he may attend and put interrogatories to the deponent if he thinks fit.

The deposition so taken shall be retained by such justice, notary, or commissioner until he deliver the same, with his own hand, to the court for which it was taken, or shall, together with a certificate of its having been duly taken, be by said justice, notary, or commissioner sealed up and directed to such court, and remain so sealed up until opened in court, or by order of the court, or with the consent of the parties.

No deposition used in a jury trial of any cause in any court in this State shall be taken during the progress of such trial unless the same shall have been taken by order of such court.

Instructions for taking Depositions. — A commissioner or magistrate authorized to take depositions will issue a notification to the adverse party, stating the time and place appointed, and the names of witnesses to be examined, which must be served by a sheriff, or by any impartial and disinterested person, who must take oath to his return. The depositions, when taken, will be returned under seal to the court in which the suit is pending, with a certificate indorsed by the magistrate, of the contents and name of the case. The following form of caption may be appended to each deposition, or to the whole when more than one is taken: —

COUNTY OF } ss.

Be it remembered, that in on the day of personally appeared before me who being by me first sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, gave the foregoing deposition which was by me reduced to writing in his presence (or by him reduced to writing in my presence), and by him signed in my presence.

Taken at the request of (by virtue of annexed commission, as case may be), to be used in the trial of an action pending in the court to be holden in within and for the county of in the State of Rhode Island, on the Monday in .

The adverse party was duly notified, as appears by return of the notification hereto annexed, and was present (or was not present).

I further certify that I am not attorney or of counsel for either of said parties, nor interested in the result of said suit.

The law makes no provision for adjournments. The magistrate adjourns, in his discretion, according to circumstances, convenience of parties and witnesses.

Fees. — Forty cents for each hour necessarily employed; thirty cents for each page of two hundred words; and ten cents for each mile's travel to place of caption.

Descent and Distribution. — Real estate of an intestate descends in the following order, on failure of persons in previous classes: 1. To children or their descendants. 2. To parents in equal shares or to the surviving parent. 3. To brothers and sisters, and their descendants. In default of these, in equal moieties to paternal and maternal kindred: 1. To grandparents. 2. To uncles, and aunts, or their descendants. 3. To great-grandparents. 4. To the brothers and sisters of grandfathers and grandmothers, and their descendants; and so on in other cases without end.

But if the title of the intestate came by descent, gift, or devise from the parent or other kindred of the intestate, and such intestate die without children, such estate shall go to the kin next to the intestate (ascertained according to the foregoing canons) of the blood of the person from whom such estate last came or descended, if any there be.

Rights of dower and curtesy are fully preserved.

Personal estate, not bequeathed, is distributed as follows: 1. One half to widow of person dying without issue. 2. One third to widow when there is issue living. 3. The remainder in the mode provided for descent of real estate, but without any respect to the blood of the person from whom such personal estate came or descended. But if the deceased was a married woman, the whole to her surviving husband.

Divorce. — The jurisdiction over divorce is in the superior court. Under the act of April 2, 1902, which took effect July 1, 1902, full divorce from the bond of matrimony may be granted "when the marriage was originally void or voidable by law; or in case either party is for crime deemed to be or treated as if civilly dead, or from absence or other circumstances may be presumed to be actually dead;" also for "impotency, adultery, extreme cruelty, willful desertion for five years of either of the parties, or for such desertion for a shorter period of time in the discretion of the court, for continued drunkenness, for the habitual, excessive, and intemperate use of opium, morphine, or chloral, and for neglect and refusal, for the period of at least one year before the filing of the petition, on the part of the husband to provide necessaries for the subsistence of his wife, the husband being of sufficient ability; and for any other gross misbehavior and wickedness, in either of the parties, repugnant to and in violation of the marriage covenant;" or, in the discretion of the court, "when the parties have lived separate and apart for the space of at least ten years."

And "divorces from bed, board, and future cohabitation, until the parties be reconciled, may be granted for any of the causes for which by law a divorce from the bond of marriage may be decreed, and for such other causes as may seem to require the same: provided, the petitioner shall be domiciled inhabitant in this State and shall have resided in this State such length of time as to the court in its discretion shall seem to warrant the exercise of the powers in this section conferred. In case of such divorce the court may assign to the petitioner a separate maintenance out of the estate or property of the husband or wife, as the case may be, in such manner and of such amount as it may think necessary or proper."

But "every petition shall be signed and sworn to by the petitioner, if of sound mind and of legal age to consent to marriage; otherwise, upon application to the court and after notice to the party in whose name the petition shall be filed, the court may allow such petition to be signed and sworn to by a resident guardian or next friend."

And "no petition for divorce from the bond of marriage shall be granted unless the petitioner shall have been a domiciled inhabitant of this State and have resided therein for the period of two years next before the preferring of such petition; provided, that if the defendant shall have been a domiciled inhabitant of this State and shall have resided in this State for the period of two years next before the preferring of such petition, and shall be actually served with process, the above requirement as to domicile and residence on the part of petitioner shall be deemed to have been satisfied and fulfilled."

And "no divorce from the bond of marriage shall be granted solely upon default, nor solely upon admissions by the pleadings, nor except upon trial before the court in open session; nor shall such divorce be granted where the court is satisfied that there has been any collusion or corrupt conduct by the parties, or either of them, in regard to the proceedings to obtain the same."

And "after final decree for divorce from the bond of marriage either party may marry again; but no decree for such divorce shall become final and operative until six months after the trial and decision."

Notice is regulated by rules of the superior court, personal notice being required when possible. The court has full powers to control the custody of children, and to allow the wife obtaining a divorce alimony not exceeding one half the husband's personal estate, and the use of one half of his real estate. The wife, if divorced upon her petition, may also have the use of her separate estate, freed from any control of the husband.

Dower. — See Descent and Distribution.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Executions. — Execution issues twenty-four hours after judgment, unless otherwise ordered; returnable in three months at district court, and in six months at the superior court. See Attachment, Redemption, and Stay of Execution.

Exemptions. — The following are exempt from attachment and execution: The necessary wearing apparel of a debtor and his family; his necessary working tools, not exceeding two hundred dollars in value; and the professional library of any professional man in actual practice; his household furniture and family stores, if a housekeeper, not exceeding three hundred dollars in value; the bibles, school, and other books in use in his family not exceeding three hundred dollars in value; one cow and one and a half tons of hay, of a housekeeper; one hog and one pig, and the pork of the same, of a housekeeper; arms, equipments, etc., of a militiaman, and of any person which are kept for use and not for sale; one pew in church; a burial lot; wages due or accruing to any seaman; debts secured by bills of exchange or negotiable promissory notes; and ten dollars due as the wages of labor except when action is for necessities furnished to defendant; the salary and wages of the wife and of the minor children of any debtor; and such other property, real or personal, as is or shall be exempted from attachment and execution, either permanently or temporarily, by general or special acts, charters of incorporation, or by the policy of the law.

Garnishee Process. — All writs of attachment may be served on debtors of the defendant, who become liable to pay the judgment creditor the amount of their debts up to the amount of the damages laid in the writ in case they shall file affidavits setting forth the same; otherwise to pay the judgment.

Inheritance Taxes. — An extensive inheritance tax act was passed in 1916, which provides for a graduated tax upon the net value of the estate above certain exemptions, and also a further graduated tax upon legacies exceeding certain amounts. Non-residents, however, are not subject to these taxes except as to real estate and tangible property located within the State.

Interest. — The legal rate of interest, in the absence of any agreement, is six per cent. per annum, and rate on judgments is six per cent.; and by chapter 434, enacted May 7, 1909, and to go into effect October 1, 1909, "No person, partnership, or corporation hereafter loaning money to another, except duly licensed pawnbrokers, shall, directly or indirectly, reserve, charge, or take interest on such loan, whether before or after maturity, at such a rate, or reserve, charge, or take compensation for services or expenses incidental to the making, negotiation, or collection of such loan, in such an amount that the total of one year's interest, reckoned at the rate so reserved, charged, or taken, and of all such compensation for services and expenses, shall exceed thirty per centum of the amount actually received by the borrower, on all amounts exceeding fifty dollars, whether in one or more loans; and all amounts not exceeding fifty dollars, for a period not exceeding three months, five per centum per month of the amount actually received by the borrower. Every contract hereafter made in violation of any of the provisions of this act, and every mortgage, pledge, deposit, or assignment made or given as security for the performance of such contract, shall be usurious and void: provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall affect the rights of an indorsee or transferee of a negotiable instrument who purchases the same before maturity, for value, and without notice of its usurious character;" but leaving the lender amenable to refund, and also to criminal prosecution.

Judgments. — A judgment is not a lien upon real estate except under levy of execution.

In defaulted cases, judgment is rendered one week after the return day of writ in district court. If no defense, judgment may be recovered in district court in about fifteen days, and in the other courts in about one month. There is no power by statute to tax counsel fees except in partition suits and in suits against railroad companies for overcharges, damage to merchandise, injury to persons, and some other special cases.

Licenses. — Licenses are not required to be taken out by commercial travelers selling or taking orders for sales of goods (except liquors) to be afterwards delivered, whether with or without samples. Hawkers and peddlers, itinerant venders, pawnbrokers, insurance brokers not connected with any company, and hunters of wild birds or animals, must be licensed. And the statute defines itinerant vender to "mean and include all persons, both principals and agents, who engage in a temporary or transient business in this State, either in one locality or in traveling from place to place selling goods, wares, and merchandise, and who, for the purpose of carrying on such business, hire, lease, or occupy any building or structure for the exhibition and sale of such goods, wares, and merchandise."

Limitations. — Actions on the case for words spoken must be commenced within one year next after the words spoken. Actions for injuries to the person within two years after the action accrues, all other actions of trespass must be commenced within four years after the cause of action shall accrue. All actions of account, except such accounts as concern trade or merchandise between merchant and merchant, their factors and servants; all actions on the case, except for words spoken, and for negligence involving injuries to the person; all actions of debt founded on any contract without specialty, or brought for arrearages of rent, and all actions of detinue and replevin, must be commenced within six years next after the cause of such action shall accrue. Other actions of debt and of covenant must be commenced within twenty years. If any person against whom there is, or shall be, cause for any action hereinbefore enumerated in favor of a resident therein, shall at the time such cause accrues be without the limits of this State, or, being within this State at the time such cause accrues, shall go out of said State before said action shall be barred by the foregoing provisions, and shall not have or leave property or estate therein that can by the common and ordinary process of law be attached, then the person entitled to such action may commence the same within the time before limited, after such person shall return into this State in such manner that an action may, with reasonable diligence, be commenced against him by the person entitled to the same: "provided, however, that no action shall be brought by any person upon a cause of action accruing without this State which was barred by limitation or otherwise in the State, Territory, or country in which such cause of action arose while he resided therein."

No action with special exceptions can be sustained against any executor or administrator if commenced within six months from the date of the first publication of notice of the qualification of the first executor or administrator, or such longer period as may be fixed for the presentation of claims, and all such actions must be brought within two years next after such publication. See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons, supra.

No action can be brought against an heir or devisee of a deceased person for the payment of the debts of the ancestor or testator within two years next after such publication, and then only upon claims upon which the right of action did not accrue within the two years, and certain other exceptional claims. Limitations of actions on foreign judgments, twenty years.

Actions for recovery of real property are practically limited to a period of ten years; that term of quiet uninterrupted adverse possession, ending at any time after February 1, 1896, being sufficient evidence of title.

There is no statutory provision as to what revives a debt, it being left to common law rules.

Married Women. — The real and personal estate which are the property of any woman before marriage, or which may become the property of any woman after marriage, or which may be acquired by her own industry, including damages recovered in suits or proceedings for her benefit, and compensation for her property taken for public use, and the proceeds of all such property, shall be and remain her sole and separate property, free from control of her husband. She may make any contract whatsoever the same as if she were single and unmarried, and with the same rights and liabilities. Any separate property left to her by will before or after marriage is not bound for her husband's debts unless by act of hers. Property held for her benefit under express trusts may in equity be subjected to her contracts generally.

A woman, whether married or unmarried, becomes of age at twenty-one. See Wills.

Mechanics' Liens. — The real estate built upon, repaired, or improved, at the request of the owner thereof (or of the husband of such owner, his wife assenting in writing), is pledged for the payment of work done and materials furnished for such building, repairing, or improving, subject only to such incumbrances as were outstanding at the time the work commenced.

The interest of any one owning any interest in the real estate less than a freehold is pledged in like manner for repairs, etc., done at his request.

Persons doing work at the request of such contractor may acquire a lien in like manner out of the estate improved, provided they give the owner written notice of their claim to a lien within forty days after commencing work, and persons furnishing materials must give such notice to the owner (unless he be also the purchaser), and record the same in the town clerk's office where the land lies, within sixty days after such materials are placed upon the land.

To enforce the lien the claimant must file his claim with the town clerk of the town wherein the estate lies, sub-contractors or workmen within ten days after such notice, and others, within four months after default in any payment under a written contract, and within six months after commencing work under verbal contract with the owner, and within twenty days thereafter proceed by petition in equity, to which mortgagees as well as owners must be made parties.

Mortgages. — Real estate mortgages are to be executed in the same manner as other deeds, and recorded in the town clerk's office of the town wherein the estate is situated. Personal or chattel mortgages are usually, although not necessarily, executed in like manner, and must be recorded in the town clerk's office of the town where the mortgagor resides, within five days after their date, unless the mortgagee takes and holds possession of the property.

Foreclosure is usually enforced by sale under power in the mortgage, which usually enables the mortgagee to sell after ten days' notice in case of chattels or twenty-one days' notice in case of real estate, such notice to be given by advertisement in public newspapers, after default. The mortgagee may also foreclose in equity, usually within a year, and at small expense, or he may obtain possession of real estate by suit at law in six to nine months, in which case the mortgagor, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, may redeem within three years. Possession of real estate may also be taken by the mortgagee by peaceable and open entry, in presence of two witnesses, whose certificate thereof, acknowledged by the person delivering possession, is to be recorded, the mortgagor having the right to redeem within three years.

Mortgages are discharged by release on the face of the record, or upon the mortgage, by the mortgagee, or by separate deed of release.

Mortgages are almost always given to secure promissory note of mortgagor to mortgagee's order described in the mortgage. They are seldom given to secure bonds.

Notaries Public. — The governor shall, from time to time, in June, 1911, and every third year thereafter, appoint as many notaries public for the State as he may deem expedient, who, although not reappointed, may continue to officiate for the space of thirty days after the 1st day of July. They may, throughout the State, protest negotiable paper, administer oaths, and take depositions and acknowledgments of deeds and other instruments. They may but are not required to use a seal. Clerks of the superior courts in the several counties certify to the qualifications of notaries public.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The Negotiable Instruments Law is now the law of this State; but the usual three days' grace are allowed on bills drawn at sight due and payable in this State, in which there is not a provision to the contrary. If the third day of grace be Sunday or a holiday, payment must be made on the next business day. Instruments falling due or becoming payable on Saturday are to be presented for payment on the next succeeding business day, except that instruments payable on demand may at the option of the holder be presented before twelve o'clock noon on Saturday when the entire day is not a holiday.

Legal holidays are the 1st day of January, the 4th of July, Christmas, 22d of February, the 30th of May (as Memorial Day), or if either falls on Sunday the day following in each year, the first Monday in September (as Labor Day), and the second Friday in May (as Arbor Day), the 12th of October (as Columbus Day), the Tuesday after the first Monday in November in each year in which a general election of state officers is held, viz. even years (as state election day), Sunday in each week, and such other days as the governor or general assembly of this State, or the President or the Congress of the United States shall appoint as holidays for any purpose, days of thanksgiving or days of solemn fast.

Practice. — The common law system is in force, modified in various particulars by statute, and the general tendency to simplicity of procedure is encouraged by the courts.

Proof of Claims. — The proof of claims by affidavit is not required in any case, except in insolvency. An affidavit drawn in compliance with the law as stated under title Attachments, or Arrests, should be sent with claim when a suit is to be brought.

Claims must be filed with assignees within six months from the date of the published notice of the assignment. If disallowed the assignee gives notice in writing to the creditor, who must then sue within sixty days.

Non-resident plaintiffs may always be required to give security for costs after a suit is entered in court, and other plaintiffs in the discretion of the court.

Records. — Town and city clerks are custodians of land records, and recorders of deeds, etc., except in the city of Providence, which has an officer for this purpose known as recorder of deeds.

Redemption. — None in case of sale on execution. See Mortgages; Tax Law.

Replevin. — Any personal estate may be replevied by a party claiming to be its owner, unless he be defendant in a suit in which such property has been attached, such party first giving bond in double the value of the property, with two or more sufficient sureties.

Reports. — The decisions of the supreme court have been reported since 1846 by a reporter elected by the general assembly, but since August 22, 1893, he is to be appointed by the supreme court. The thirty-ninth volume was published in 1917. They are cited as Rhode Island Reports.

Revision. — The entire statute laws of this State have been revised by three commissioners under special legislative authority. Their report, adopted by the general assembly, is embodied in one volume entitled "General Laws of Rhode Island, Revision of 1909," with index in a separate volume, to take effect January 1, 1910. The "Court and Practice Act," reorganizing and revising the judicial and probate system of the State under the recent constitutional amendment, went into effect June 17, 1905. The previous revisions were that of 1896, entitled "General Laws," that of 1882, entitled "Public Statutes," that of 1872, entitled "General Statutes," that of 1857, entitled "Revised Statutes," and those of 1844, 1822, and 1798, entitled "Public Laws." "Public Laws" of each session are also issued; the last for January session, 1918.

Sales. — The Uniform Sales Act was enacted in 1908.

Sales in Bulk. — A law has been passed (ch. 387, Acts of 1909), but there has been no decision as to its constitutionality.

Service. — All writs issued out of the superior court shall be served not less than ten nor more than sixty days before the return day thereof. All writs issued by district courts are returnable in not less than six nor more than twenty days from the time they are served.

Service by publication is not required. When a party whose property is attached has no residence within the State, the sheriff mails a notice to him at his last-known address. Publication is made under statutes and orders of court in equity, divorce, and other proceedings.

Stay of Execution. — Any justice of the supreme court or superior court may, upon motion, and for cause shown, stay execution upon any judgment or decree rendered therein until further order.

Supplementary Proceedings. — These are provided after judgment and return of execution nulla bona. (P. L. 1915, c. 1228; amended 1916.)

Tax Law. — All corporations doing business in Rhode Island are made subject in some way to the Tax Act of 1912 and amendments; public service corporations, by taxes upon gross earnings at varying rates according to the character of their business; and manufacturing and other corporations upon their "corporate excess," which is in substance the value of their capitalization as measured by the aggregate value of their shares of stock, etc., less the assessed value of their real estate and tangible personal property. By the amendment of 1916 domestic corporations are made liable to a franchise tax of which the effect is an annual aggregate tax at the rate of two dollars and fifty cents for each ten thousand dollars, or fractional part thereof, of their authorized capital, but there is no franchise tax if the corporate excess tax paid is, itself, more than this amount. Failure to pay this franchise tax for three years is a ground for forfeiture of charter. The taxes upon gross earnings and corporate excess and the franchise tax are paid to the State, and real estate and tangible personal property of corporations are continued to be assessed locally as heretofore. In case of manufacturing and other corporations doing business both in Rhode Island and elsewhere (whether they are domestic or foreign), provisions are made for an apportionment of the corporate excess between Rhode Island and other States. The franchise tax is imposed only upon corporations, joint-stock companies, and associations incorporated in Rhode Island. All shares and other securities of corporations paying taxes to the State are exempt from taxation in the hands of the holder.

Shares in banks and trust companies, including shares in national banks, are taxed by the State and are paid by the corporations with a lien upon the shares for their repayment. The assessed value is determined by deducting real estate and exempt securities from the market value of the shares. The rate is fixed at forty cents per hundred of valuation, which is also the rate upon all intangible property in the State, and for the taxation of the corporate excess.

Taxes upon real estate and tangible personal property, and upon all other property not exempt from taxation, are assessed annually by boards of assessors in the several cities and towns, the times of assessment and of payment being fixed by the city or town ordinance ordering the assessment, which also fixes the penalty, not exceeding twelve per cent. per annum, for not paying at the appointed time. Tangible personal property is taxed in the city or town where it is situated. If the owner is unknown to the assessors, but an agent, assignee, or other representative is in possession, it is taxed to such representative, who acquires a lien on the property for the tax. Manufactured property owned by non-residents and brought into the State temporarily to be finished and returned to the owner is not taxable. Resident owners of tangible personal property located and taxed in any other State are not taxable therefor in Rhode Island.

The rate of taxation upon intangible property is fixed at forty cents per hundred of the assessed value. The rate upon real estate and tangible personal property is fixed by each city and town and varies considerably. The statute provides that "before assessing any tax, the assessors shall post up printed notices of the time and place of their meeting in three public places in the town, for three weeks next preceding the time of such meeting, and advertise in some newspaper published in the town, if any there be, for the same space of time. Such notices shall require every person and body corporate liable to taxation to bring in to the assessors a true and exact account of all his ratable estate, describing and specifying the value of every parcel of his real and personal estate, at such time as they may prescribe. And every person bringing in any such account shall make oath before some one of the assessors that the account by him exhibited contains to the best of his knowledge and belief a true and full account and valuation of all his ratable estate; and whoever neglects or refuses to bring in such account, if over-taxed, shall have no remedy therefor." All taxes assessed against any person in any town, for either personal or real estate, shall constitute a lien on his real estate therein for two years, and if the estate be not aliened, until collected.

In all cases when any parcel of real estate is liable for payment of taxes, so much thereof as is necessary to pay the tax, interest, cost, and expenses shall be sold by the collector, at public auction, to the highest bidder, after notice has been given of the levy, and of the time and place of sale, in some newspaper published in the town, if there be one, and if there be no newspaper published in the town, then in some newspaper published in the county, for the space of three weeks; and the collector shall also post up notices in two or more public places of the town for the same period. The deed of any real estate, or of any interest therein, sold for the payment of taxes, made and executed by the collector who shall sell the same, shall vest in the purchaser, subject to the right of redemption, hereinafter mentioned, all the estate, right, and title the owner thereof had in and to such real estate at the time said tax was assessed, free from any interest or incumbrance of any person notified, and the recitals in such deed shall be prima facie evidence of the facts stated. The person who owned any real estate sold for taxes, at the time of the assessment, or any interest therein, his heirs, assigns, or devisees, may redeem the same upon repaying to the purchaser the amount paid therefor, with twenty per cent. in addition, within one year after the sale, or within six months after final judgment has been rendered in any suit in which the validity of the sale is in question, provided said suit be commenced within one year after such sale. (Gen. Laws, ch. 60.)

Testimony. — No person shall be disqualified from testifying in any action at law, suit in equity, or other proceeding at law or in equity, by reason of his being interested therein or being a party thereto. In the trial of every civil cause the husband or wife of either party shall be deemed a competent witness: provided that neither shall be permitted to give any testimony tending to criminate the other, or to disclose any communication made to him or her by the other during their marriage, except on trials of petitions for divorce between them, and trials between them involving their respective property rights. In all divorce cases the testimony shall be given visa voce in court, unless (1) the witness shall be unable to attend by reason of physical disability, in which case certificate to that effect from a physician shall be filed with the deposition of such witness, or (2) unless the witness reside and be out of the State, or (3) unless the deposition be taken before a standing master in chancery, whose fees for taking the same shall be those prescribed by law for the taking of depositions by notaries public. No person shall be deemed an incompetent witness because of his conviction of any crime, or sentence to imprisonment therefor, but shall be admitted to testify like any other witness, except that conviction or sentence for any crime or misdemeanor may be shown to affect his credibility. No respondent in a criminal prosecution, offering himself as a witness, shall be excluded from testifying because he is such respondent; and neglect or refusal so to testify shall create no presumption nor be used in argument against him. The husband or wife of any respondent in a criminal prosecution, offering himself or herself as a witness, shall not be excluded from testifying therein because he or she is the husband or wife of such respondent. In any action brought against an executor or administrator or any person claiming title under a decedent for the recovery of money, supported by oral testimony of a promise or statement made by the decedent, evidence of his written or oral statements, memoranda and entries, acts and habits of dealing, tending to disprove such promise or statement, are admissible.

Trust Deeds — Are to be executed as other deeds, and are in common use, but not usual as security for loans, the mortgage with power of sale being more effectual. See Mortgages.

Warehouse Receipts. — The Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act was enacted in 1908.

Wills. — All wills and bequests of any lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and of personal estate, within or without the State, shall be in writing (which includes "printing, engraving, lithographing, and photo-lithographing, and all other representations of words in letters of usual form"), and signed by the party devising the same, or by some person in his presence, and by his express direction; and shall be attested and subscribed in the presence of the testator, by two or more witnesses, or else shall be utterly void and of no effect. No form of proof is provided. Both subscribing witnesses must usually be produced in probate court, if within the State. The evidence of an absent witness, if required, may be taken by deposition.

Any will in writing and subscribed by the testator is valid if executed in the mode prescribed by the law either of the place where executed or of the testator's domicile.

Non-residents may be executors of wills, and also administrators, though the latter is considered against the policy but not the letter of the statute, and is not a matter of right.

Every person being upwards of eighteen years of age may dispose of personal property, and every person upwards of twenty-one years of age may dispose of real estate, by will.

The will of a married woman shall not impair the rights of her husband upon her death, as tenant by the curtesy.

There is no restriction as to the amount that a testator may give in charity, and he may, if he chooses, give all his estate away from his family, but, of course, subject to dower, or in the case of married women to curtesy.

But "unless it appears that the omission was intentional and not occasioned by accident or mistake," a child, or issue of deceased child, not provided for takes the same share that he would have taken had the parent died intestate, and also a posthumous child where no provision is made for him in the will "or otherwise."

Wills are recorded in the town clerk's office of the town where the testator lived, and also in the records of deeds of every town where any land devised by the will lies. In Providence, Newport, Pawtucket, Woonsocket, Central Falls, Bristol, Cranston, East Providence, Lincoln, North Providence, Johnston, Warren, Warwick, and Westerly probate courts are established, with clerks who record wills, etc.

Work or Flight Law. — It is now and until the termination of the war a misdemeanor for any able-bodied male citizen, between the ages of eighteen and fifty years inclusive, to fail or refuse to engage in some lawful, useful, and recognized business, profession, or occupation for at least thirty-six hours per week.

SOUTH CAROLINA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by Messrs. Buist & Buist, of Charleston.

The next legislature convenes on the second Tuesday in January, 1919.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions — Are generally to be tried in the county where the subject-matter is situated, as for recovery of, or partition of real property, or foreclosure of a mortgage of real property, or for recovery of personal property distrained for any cause, etc. For the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture imposed by statute, and against a public officer for an act done in virtue of his office, must be tried in the county where the cause arose. In all other cases the action must be tried in the county in which the defendant, or if more than one in which one or more of them shall reside. If the defendant resides out of this State, the case may be tried in any county the plaintiff may select. In all cases, however, the court has power to change place of trial, as provided by statute. Provided, that any administrator or administratrix, heretofore or hereafter appointed by any probate court of this State, may be sued in the county where such administration has or shall be granted; any executor or executrix may likewise be sued in the county where the testator's will is proved or admitted to probate; and any guardian may likewise be sued in the county in which the letters of guardianship may be issued. (Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 172-175.) Provided, "that nothing in this section contained shall be so construed as to prevent the hearing of any of the said actions by consent of the parties or their attorneys and of the guardian ad litem of any infant party to said action, in a county other than that in which said action may have been brought and may be pending, or other than that in which the property is situated." Code of Civil Procedure, § 175, provides "that all suits brought against any and all fire, life, or other insurance companies doing business in this State may be brought in the county where the loss occurs: provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to prevent the court from changing the place of trial for any of the causes provided for in section 176 of the (Civil) Code of Laws of this State, vol. 2." Code of Laws, vol. 1, 1912, § 2576, provides that "any action to recover a penalty for the loss, delay, or damage to freight against any common carrier may be brought in any county in this State where the cause of action for the damage in such case may be brought, before any court of competent jurisdiction." See, also, Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2572, relating to the liability of initial, intermediate, and terminal carriers in failing to inform upon notification as to loss, damage, or destruction of property, and to fix a penalty. Actions must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, save in the case of an administrator, executor, or trustee of an express trust. When a married woman is a party, her husband must be joined with her, except that when the action concerns her separate property she may sue or be sued alone; and when between herself and her husband she may sue or be sued alone. An action is deemed to be commenced, as to a defendant, when the summons is delivered to the sheriff with the intent that it shall be actually served. The first pleading on the part of the plaintiff is the complaint; it may be served with the summons or filed with the clerk. The only pleading on the part of the defendant is either a demurrer or an answer. It must be served within twenty days after the service of the complaint. The plaintiff may reply or demur to an answer, as the case may be. If the defendant fail to answer the complaint in twenty days after service of the summons, he loses his right to demur or answer. Unless the court shall for cause on motion restore such right, the plaintiff can at the term next succeeding such default enter final judgment; if the demand be liquidated and the complaint be verified, the judgment goes of course; if the demand be unliquidated, then judgment is rendered on proof, or the court grants the relief required; and by Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3833, in default cases of foreclosure the judges of the court of common pleas shall have power at chambers to render judgment as in open court.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates.

Affidavits — Must be made before a commissioner of deeds for South Carolina, or before a notary public, who shall use his official seal, if they are to be used in the state courts. If they are to be used in the United States courts, they may be made before a United States commissioner or before a notary public. The affidavit to prove the execution of deeds, if taken out of the State and within the United States, must be made before a commissioner of deeds of this State, or before commissioners appointed under dedimus issued by the clerk of the court of the county in which deed is to be recorded, or before the clerk of a court of record, who must use his official seal, or before a notary public, who must use his official seal. If taken without the United States, before a minister, ambassador, consul-general, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of the United States of America. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 1385, provides "that the masters in this State while in office are authorized to administer oaths and take depositions, affidavits, renunciation of dower, probate deeds and other instruments, and take testimony by commission as fully and effectually as if done by clerks of courts and notaries public, and their fees therefor shall be the same as allowed by law to other officers for similar services." See Deeds. It would not be safe to prove deeds or take affidavits in any other way.

Aliens. — No alien or corporation controlled by aliens, either in his or its own right, or as trustee, cestui que trust, or agent, shall own or control, within the limits of this State, more than five hundred acres of land; provided, that this act shall not apply to land purchased under proceedings, either by action or power of sale, to foreclose any mortgage hereafter acquired by any alien or corporation controlled by aliens purchasing the same, but in such case such alien or corporation controlled by aliens shall not be entitled to hold said excess of land more than five years without sale of same, unless the comptroller-general shall certify that a sale during that time would be materially detrimental to the interest of such alien or corporation controlled by aliens, in which case the said alien or corporation controlled by aliens may hold the land for five years longer upon the same conditions. Nothing in this act shall apply to lands already owned or controlled by the persons or corporations referred to in this act, nor to lands already mortgaged to such persons or corporations. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2689, and Constitution, 1895.)

Appeals. — An appeal lies from the magistrate court to the circuit court, on matters of law as well as of fact. The appeal shall be heard by the court on all the papers in the case, including the testimony on the trial, which shall be taken down in writing and signed by the witnesses and the grounds of exception made, without the further examination of witnesses in the appellate court. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 398.) The appeal must be taken within five days from the rendition of the magistrate's decision. Notice of the appeal must be served personally on the magistrate, if he be living and within the county, or on his clerk, and upon the attorney for the respondent, or on the respondent personally, or by leaving it at his residence with some person of suitable age and discretion. If neither the attorney nor respondent can be found, then service on the clerk of the circuit court will suffice.

An appeal lies from the probate court to the circuit court from any final order, sentence, or decree of the probate court. Grounds of appeal shall be filed in the office of the judge of probate, and copy thereof served on adverse party within fifteen days after notice of the decision appealed from, and copy of record filed in circuit court.

The supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction to review upon appeal: —

1. Final judgments in actions commenced in the circuit courts, brought there by original process or removed there from any inferior court or jurisdiction; and, upon the appeal from such judgment, to review any intermediate order involving the merits and necessarily affecting the judgment.

2. An order affecting a substantial right made in action, when such order in effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which an appeal might be taken, or discontinues the action, and when such order grants or refuses a new trial; but no appeal to the supreme court from an order granting a new trial, on a case made or bill of exceptions, shall be effectual for any purpose unless the notice of appeal contain an assent on the part of the appellant that, if the order be affirmed, judgment absolute shall be rendered against the appellant. Upon every appeal from an order granting a new trial, on a case made or exceptions taken, if the supreme court shall determine that no error was committed in granting the new trial, they shall render judgment absolute upon the right of the appellant; and after the proceedings are admitted to the court from which the appeal was taken, an assessment of damages or other proceedings, to render judgment effectual, may be then and there had in cases where such subsequent proceedings are requisite.

3. A final order affecting a substantial right made in a special proceeding, or upon a summary application in an action after judgment, and upon such appeal to review any intermediate order involving the merits, and necessarily affecting the order appealed from.

4. An interlocutory order or decree in the court of common pleas, granting or continuing or modifying or refusing an injunction, or else granting or continuing or modifying or refusing the appointment of a receiver hereafter granted in any action, provided that the notice of appeal must be given within ten days from written notice of the filing of such interlocutory order or decree; and such appeal shall take precedence in the supreme court, and the proceedings in other respects in the court below shall not be stayed during the pendency of such appeal unless otherwise ordered by the court below. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 11.)

Arrests. — The defendant may be arrested in the following cases: 1: In an action for money received, or property embezzled or fraudulently misapplied by a public officer, or by an attorney, solicitor, or counselor, or by an officer or agent of a corporation or banking association, in the course of his employment as such, or by any factor, agent, broker, or other person in a fiduciary capacity, or for any misconduct or neglect in office, or in a professional employment. 2. In an action to recover the possession of personal property fraudulently detained, or where the property, or any part thereof, has been fraudulently concealed, removed, or disposed of so that it cannot be found or taken by the sheriff or constable, and with the intent that it should not be so found or taken, or with the intent to deprive the plaintiff of the benefit thereof. 3. When the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in contracting the debt, or incurring the obligation for which the action is brought, or in concealing or disposing of the property for the taking, detention, or conversion of which the action is brought, or when the action is brought to recover damages for fraud or deceit. 4. When the defendant has removed or disposed of his property, or is about to do so with intent to defraud his creditors. But no female shall be arrested in any action except for a willful injury to persons, character, or property. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 1173.) 5. Whenever a person domiciled in this State, indebted by bond, note, or otherwise, is about to remove or abscond from the limits of this State, and the said debt is not yet due but payable at some future day, it shall and may be lawful for the obligee, payee, or holder of said demand, or his assignee or indorsee, as the case may be, upon swearing that such a person is indebted to him, and that the demand is just and owing but not yet due, and that the debtor is about to remove or abscond from the limits of this State, and that such a creditor was not aware that the debtor had any intention to remove from the State at the time when the original contract was made, or at the time of such assignment or indorsement, as the case may be, to commence an action by issuing a summons or complaint, and he shall have power to arrest and hold to bail in such manner as is prescribed in cases of debts actually due. An order for the arrest of the defendant must be obtained from the court in which the action is brought, or from a judge thereof. Before warrant for arrest can issue, the plaintiff must be required to enter into a written undertaking, with or without sureties, that if defendant recover judgment plaintiff will pay all costs awarded to defendant and all damages, not exceeding sum stated, which shall not be less than one hundred dollars. If no sureties be required, plaintiff must file an affidavit that he is a resident and householder or freeholder within the State, and worth double the sum specified in the undertaking. Nothing is said about the character of the sureties, but it would seem that they should take the same affidavit as the plaintiff does in cases in which no surety is required. The order can be made if plaintiff, or any other person, shows by affidavit that a sufficient cause of action exists, and showing facts from which the officer issuing the warrant can decide if the requirement of the code is met. Crim. Code, § 208, declares it a misdemeanor to draw and utter any check, draft, or order where the drawer has not at the time sufficient funds to meet the same, and provides punishment therefor by fine or imprisonment in the discretion of the court: provided, that if such person shall deposit with the drawee of such paper within thirty days thereafter funds sufficient to meet the same, with all costs and interest which may have accrued, the prosecution under this act shall be discontinued.

Assignments. — The national bankruptcy act of 1898 has suspended the operation of this law. If the said act should be repealed, our state statutes on this subject would again become of force, in which event consult the thirtieth volume (1900) of this Directory. See "an act to prevent merchants or corporations engaged in buying and selling merchandise, while indebted, from selling their entire stock of merchandise in bulk, or selling the major portion thereof otherwise than in the ordinary course of trade" (Crim. Code, § 448), which provides that such sale shall prima facie be presumed to be fraudulent and void as against creditors of such seller unless certain requirements as to inventory, schedule of creditors, and notice to creditors are complied with.

Attachments. — At the time of the issuing of the summons, or at any time afterwards, an attachment may issue in the following cases, to wit: In any action arising for the recovery of money, or for the recovery of property, whether real or personal, and damages for the wrongful conversion and detention of personal property, or in actions for the recovery of damages for injuries done either to person or property (Code of Civil Procedure, § 279), against a corporation created by or under the laws of any other State, government, or country, or against a defendant who is not a resident of this State, or against the master, captain, or agent of any sailing vessel entering any of the ports of this State for pilotage services rendered such vessel, or against a defendant who has absconded or concealed himself, or whenever any person or corporation is about to remove any of his or its property from this State, or has assigned, disposed of, or secreted, or is about to assign, dispose of, or secrete any of his or its property, with intent to defraud creditors. The proceedings in cases of attachment are prescribed by the code. Before the attachment can issue the plaintiff must be required to put in an undertaking of at least two hundred and fifty dollars in the court of common pleas, or twenty-five dollars in courts of magistrates, with sufficient surety, to pay all costs which may be awarded to defendant, and all damages he may sustain by reason of the attachment. Sureties need not be freeholders, but can be made to justify. Code of Civil Procedure, § 486, provides for bond of indemnity or policy of assurance or insurance written by any surety or indemnity company duly incorporated and authorized to do business in this State, in lieu of sureties. The code does not require an affidavit of the plaintiff; it only requires an affidavit. Plaintiff or his authorized agent must make it. (Bank v. Stehling, 9 S. E. R. 1028.) The affidavit must show a cause of action, the amount of claim, and the proceeds thereof, and that defendant is either a foreign corporation or a non-resident, or has departed from the State, or conceals himself with intent to defraud his creditors, or to avoid service of summons, or has removed, or is about to remove, or has assigned, disposed of, or secreted, or is about to assign, dispose of, or secrete his property with intent to defraud his creditors. The facts which sustain the belief expressed in the affidavit must be stated clearly, so that the officer granting the attachment can say whether or not they support the charge. Plaintiff procuring warrant of attachment must have affidavits filed in proper office within forty-eight hours after issuance of attachment. As to attachments by non-residents, there has been but one decision in this State, relating to a foreign corporation: Section 461 of the code provides that an action against a foreign corporation may be brought in the circuit court: "2. By a plaintiff not a resident of this State, when the cause of action shall have arisen, or the subject of the action shall be situated, within this State." It is decided that this is a limitation to actions by non-residents, and that, as an attachment is only a provisional remedy, it does not lie unless the non-resident can maintain his action within the prescribed limitations. See Central R. & B. Co. v. The Georgia C. & I. Co. 11 S. E. R. 201. But Gibson v. Everett, 41 S. C. 22, decides that our state courts have jurisdiction upon a claim for money-demand between a non-resident plaintiff and non-resident defendant where property in this State is attached. Attachment will lie for a debt not due if fraud can be shown in evading the debt. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 288.) An attachment is a lien subject to all prior liens, and binds the real estate attached from the date of lodgment. Successive attachments take rank according to day of lodgment; provided that all attachments lodged upon the same day shall take rank together. An attachment will not lose its lien if the debtor makes a general assignment, or an assignment under our insolvent laws after it be levied.

Under section 2326, Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, the State may attach fertilizers, fertilising material, and cotton-seed meal, to enforce its lien thereon for fines and penalties and costs and expenses of an action against vendors or owners thereof who have violated the law as to sale and shipment of such articles.

Section 298, Code of Civil Procedure, provides that in an action arising for the recovery of the purchase-money which is past due, for any real or personal property, it shall be lawful for the plaintiff, at the time of the issuing of the summons or any time afterwards, to cause the property of the defendant for which the purchase-money is payable to be attached in the manner therein prescribed as a security for the satisfaction of such judgment as the plaintiff may recover.

Chattel Mortgages. — When the subject-matter of a chattel mortgage is a stock of goods, it has been doubted whether the possession of the goods by the mortgagor would not be a badge of fraud, especially if he continued to carry on business. This question has been settled in Hirskhind v. Israel, 18 S. C. 157, and a mortgage of a stock of goods covering as well the stock on hand as all goods purchased to replace sales has been sustained. The possession by mortgagor in other cases is not a badge of fraud. "The mortgagor of any chattel shall have the right to redeem the property mortgaged by him at any time before sale by the mortgagee by paying the mortgage debt and any costs incurred in attempting to enforce its payment, and a tender made by the mortgagor of an amount sufficient to pay said debt and costs, if not accepted, shall render the mortgage null and void." (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 4107.) No chattel mortgage, except mortgages or deeds of trust covering the whole or any part of the real or personal property of a railroad company or manufacturing company, shall be valid or good to convey any interest or right whatever to the mortgagee, unless the property mortgaged shall be described in writing or typewriting, but not printing, on the face of the mortgage, nor shall any prosecution lie for selling any property under the lien of such mortgage unless the property mortgaged shall be described in writing or typewriting, but not printing, on the face of such mortgage. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 4103.) The giving of security for loans under twenty-five dollars and the charges to be made therefor are regulated by section 4109, Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1. See, also, Mortgages; Trust Deeds; Records; Replevin.

Claims against Estates. — In this State it is the duty of the executor or administrator of a person deceased to advertise as soon as he shall have qualified, calling upon all persons having claims to prove them before him. Proof of claim is made by affidavit stating the character of the debt, the amount actually due, and that no part thereof has been paid by discount or otherwise. In case the executor or administrator has reason to dispute the claim, he can require suit to be brought upon it. Suits against such representatives of deceased persons are brought in the ordinary courts. Executors and administrators are allowed twelve months from the date of the grant of their letters to ascertain the debts of decedents. If the executor or administrator neglect to pay, he can of course be sued in these courts. If the administrator neglect to pay, or if he fail to account, suit also can be brought on his bond. Executors resident within this State give no bond. Administrators and non-resident executors do, in double the value of the personal estate. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3591.) Surety company can be bondsman, and the premium can be included as a part of expenses, if approved by the probate court and does not amount to more than one per cent. of the penalty of the bond. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 667 and 3597.) They must account annually before the probate court, and if they fail to account a decree can be had against them in the probate court out of which their letters issued. Judgments against an executor or administrator can be levied on the real estate of the person deceased, if the lands be not partitioned or sold, or put in the exclusive possession of the heir or devisee. Executors and administrators can obtain a final discharge as such by a decree of the judge of probate, entered after notice by publication in a county newspaper for one month of the intention to apply for such discharge; after such discharge they are free of suit. All claims presented to an executor or administrator must be verified.

and the verification must state that the claim has not been paid and that there is no discount against it. The executor or administrator may refuse or neglect to pay the claim, whereupon the holder can sue in the court of common pleas, or may call the executor or administrator to account in the court of probate. The verification must be before a magistrate or notary public, if within the State, and if without the State, before a commissioner for South Carolina, or before a notary public, who shall use his official seal. There is no difference in any other respect between a resident and non-resident creditor. In granting letters of administration, preference is given in the order following, to wit: 1. To the husband or wife of the deceased: provided, always, that if any widow, after having obtained letters of administration, shall marry again, the judge of probate shall have power to revoke the administration before granted, or join one or more of the next of kin in the administration with her. 2. If there be no husband or wife of the deceased, or they do not apply, then to the child or children, or their legal representatives. 3. In default of them, then to the father or mother. 4. In default of them, to the brothers and sisters. 5. In default of them, to such of the next of kin of the deceased, at the discretion of the judge of probate, as shall be entitled to a distributive share of the intestate's estate. 6. In default of such, to the greatest creditor or creditors, or such other persons as the court shall appoint. Burkhim v. Pinkhussohn, 36 S. E. R. 908, decides a non-resident cannot be appointed as an administrator; but Ex parte Peele, 85 S. C. 140, decides that he can.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3591, provides that a non-resident may act as executor upon entering into bond in same manner as required by law with regard to an administrator with the will annexed, and filing with the probate judge of the county where such will is admitted to probate his consent, by written instrument, that service may be made upon him of the summons or other process in suits or actions concerning the administration of the estate in his charge, in this State, by service of the same upon such resident of said county as may be appointed by said non-resident executor in such instrument; and in the case of the death or absence from the State of the person so appointed, or any successor named by similar instrument, filed with the probate judge, then upon the probate judge of said county. After lapse of twelve months from date of admission to probate of any will in this State, if a non-resident executor has failed to qualify thereon, the probate judge must cite such executor to qualify before him on a day named in the citation, which shall not be less than sixty days from the date thereof; if he fails to qualify, such failure shall be received as a formal renunciation by him of his appointment or nomination as executor under the terms of said will. By A. A. 1903, certain banking corporations or trust companies may be appointed trustees, executors, administrators, guardians, receivers, or assignees.

Debts are to be paid in the following order: 1. Funeral and other expenses of the last sickness, charges of probate, or letters of administration. 2. Debts due to the public. 3. Judgments, mortgages, and executions — the oldest first. 4. Rent. 5. Bonds, debts by specialty, and debts by civil contract.

Mortgages, however, not to be entitled to priority over rents and debts by specialty or by simple contract, except as to the particular parts of the estate affected by the liens of such mortgages. No preference shall be given among the creditors in equal degree, where there is a deficiency of assets, except according to legal priorities.

The widow is entitled to dower in all the real estate owned by her husband during their marriage, to the extent of one third for life, or one sixth absolutely, at her discretion. On all assessments of dower against a purchaser, in behalf of a widow of a former owner, the value of the land at the time of the alienation by the husband, with interest from the accrual of the right of dower, shall be taken and received by the courts of this State as the true value on which to assess the said dower: provided that in all cases, whether the alienation be prior or subsequent to the death of the husband, the value of the land, without reference to improvements put upon it, shall be taken and received as the true value on which to assess the said dower. When a husband dies intestate, and his widow accepts her distributive share in his estate, she shall be barred of her dower in the lands of which her husband died seized, and of all such as he had aliened. She is also entitled to exemption. See Exemptions.

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims.

Conditional Sales. — No special statute. The decisions of the courts give them the rank of a mortgage as between the parties, but they are void as to third parties unless recorded. (Perkins v. Bank, 20 S. E. R. 759.) See Deeds; Assignments.

Consignments. — There is no law in this State which punishes criminally a consignee of goods for a conversion of the same, or their proceeds, unless such conversion amounts to a breach of trust with fraudulent intention; and in order to convict the intention to convert the goods must be proved to be contemporaneous with their receipt; but "any factor, agent, broker, or other person in a fiduciary capacity" may be arrested in a civil action "for money received, or property embezzled or fraudulently misapplied."

Corporations. — (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, ch. xlvii.) The charter for any and every corporation except railroad, railway, turnpike, and canal corporations shall be issued by the secretary of state. Two or more persons desiring to form a corporation for any purpose or purposes whatsoever, or two or more combined (except for municipal purposes, and except also for railroad, railway, turnpike, and canal corporations), may file with the secretary of state a written petition signed by themselves, setting forth: 1. The names and residences of the petitioners. 2. The name of the proposed corporation. 3. The place at which it proposes to have its principal place of business, if any, or to be located. 4. The general nature of the business, if any, which it proposes to do. 5. The amount of capital stock, if any, and how and when payable. 6. The number of shares into which the capital stock, if any, is to be divided, and the par value, if such there be, of each share. 7. Any other matter which it may be desirable to set forth.

Upon the filing of the petition as above, and upon the payment of a fee of two dollars and fifty cents (foreign corporations five dollars) for recording said petition, the secretary of state shall issue to the parties, or to any two or more of them, a commission constituting them a board of corporators, and (where there is to be capital stock) giving them authority to open books of subscription, etc.

Organisation cannot be effected until fifty per cent. of the proposed capital stock has been subscribed by bona fide subscribers. Upon the completion of the organisation of the company by the election from the stockholders of a board of directors, trustees, or managers, not to exceed nine in number, — except in the case of banking, insurance, ship-building, and trust companies, which may have an unlimited number of directors, and may divide them into two classes, active and advisory, and may prescribe distinct duties for each class (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2854), — (none of whom need be residents), which board shall elect from their number a president, and may also elect such person or persons as they see fit as secretary and treasurer, the latter of whom shall give such bond as they may require, and payment to the treasurer of at least twenty per cent. of the capital subscribed, with security for the remainder of the subscription, the board of corporators, or a majority of them, in writing over their signatures, must certify the same to the secretary of state, who then issues certificate of incorporation, upon the payment of two dollars and fifty cents (foreign corporations five dollars), for recording the return, and a charter fee in proportion to the capital stock, a copy of which certificate shall be recorded in the office of the register of mesne conveyance or clerk of court for each county where such company shall have a business office; and Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2800–2804, regulates the issue of preferred stock by corporations: provided, that when by the terms of the declaration the capital stock is to be paid in installments, the certificate herein provided for may be issued when fifty per cent. of the first installment of such capital stock shall have been paid in, and the provisions of the act in other respects complied with: “ provided, that in the case of continuing building and loan associations and other corporations of a like nature issuing stock in monthly series, the declaration may name an amount as the initial capital stock, and a larger amount as the ultimate capital stock, to which the issue of the monthly series may extend, according to the by-laws of said corporation; and when not less than fifty per cent. of the initial capital stock shall have been subscribed by bona fide subscribers, the meeting of the stockholders and other proceedings provided for may be had: provided, further, that the stockholders of such corporations shall have the power at their first meeting to adopt a by-law providing for the issuing of preferred stock, having such special privileges and to be issued in such amounts and in such manner as they shall establish by their said by-laws.” (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2837.) The charter fee is graded as follows: Upon each charter issued or renewed to any corporation, payable when the said charter is issued or renewed, the sum of one mill upon each dollar of the capital stock authorized up to and including one hundred thousand dollars; the sum of one half of a mill upon each dollar of the capital stock exceeding one hundred thousand dollars and up to and including one million dollars; and the sum of one fourth of a mill upon each dollar of the capital stock exceeding one million dollars; for recording each declaration, petition, or return precedent to the granting of any commission of corporators, charter, amendment of charter, or increase or decrease of capital stock, or renewal of charter, required by law to be recorded in said office, the sum of two dollars and fifty cents for each paper so recorded; for filing each declaration or other paper, by any foreign corporation, five dollars; for filing each charter granted in another State and by-laws adopted thereunder, or either required by law to be filed, five dollars: provided that, nothing herein contained shall be construed to apply to municipal charters; provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to increase the fees for churches, lodges, colleges, schools, or other eleemosynary organizations. By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2845, the fees to be charged by the secretary of state for the issue of a charter to building and loan associations organized within this State shall be twenty-five dollars; and no commissions shall be charged on any increase of the capital stock of such association. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2843, provides that “ the secretary of state shall collect and receive at least five dollars for every charter issued by him, in addition to the recording fee as provided for by law. The provisions of this act shall not apply to eleemosynary corporations.” Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2844, provides that the fees to be charged by the secretary of state for the issuing of a charter to cotton holding and storage associations, organized within this State, shall be twenty-five dollars; and, further, that no commissions shall be charged on any increase of the capital stock of such association.

Upon the consolidation of any railroad company there shall be paid to the secretary of state a fee upon the capital stock of the combined company, as in the organisation of a new company: provided, that credit shall be given thereon for any charter fees paid by companies forming the consolidated company. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2842.) Any charter issued hereunder may wind up the affairs of the corporation by resolution of the stockholders representing a majority of the capital stock, said resolution to be signed by the president and secretary, or other officers of the corporation, and forwarded to the secretary of state, to be filed and recorded as hereinbefore provided for declaration and return; provided, that such resolution shall not bar an action for two years thereafter against the corporation or any of its members for any liability incurred during the existence of the corporation. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 373, provides, that every domestic corporation in case of dissolution, revocation of charter, or abandonment of its corporate purposes shall file with the secretary of state a certificate of such dissolution, revocation of charter, or abandonment. In case of dissolution or abandonment by voluntary action of the corporation, such certificate shall be signed by the president, secretary, and a majority of the board of directors of the corporation. In case of dissolution or revocation of charter by action of a competent court, such certificate shall be signed by the clerk of the court entering the decree of dissolution or revocation. The fees for making or filing of such certificate with the secretary of state shall be taxed in the costs in favor of the party paying the same. Every foreign corporation, when it shall retire from business in this State, is thereby required to file with the secretary of state a certificate to that effect, signed by the president and secretary of the corporation. The fee for filing certificates of dissolution, revocation of charter, abandonment or retirement of corporations shall be five dollars: provided, that the charter of a corporation which is shown to have been no longer in active existence at the time of this act may be surrendered on the payment of one dollar. All charters granted under the provisions of this act shall continue of force perpetually unless limited by the terms of the petition: provided, that all corporations shall always have the right to go into liquidation and to wind up their affairs, upon a stockholder's vote, representing a majority of capital stock, had after thirty days' notice. Provision is made for an increase or reduction of capital stock (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2795, 2796); and for renewal and extension of charters, whether incorporated under general laws or heretofore by special acts. At least one meeting of stockholders of all corporations now chartered or hereafter to be chartered in this State shall be held annually in this State, at such time and place and upon such notice as the by-laws may provide.

At all stockholders' meetings each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote for each share of stock held or owned, and in the election of directors, trustees, or managers of each and every such corporation each stockholder shall be allowed to cast in person or by proxy as many votes as the number of shares he owns, multiplied by the number of directors, trustees, or managers to be elected; the same to be cast for any one candidate or to be distributed among two or more candidates. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2787, and Constitution, 1895.) Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3112, provides that no proxy shall be valid unless executed and dated within six months previous to the meeting at which it is issued.

Any corporation organized under the provisions of the general law shall cease to exist by a non-user of its franchises for five years at any one time; provided, that this shall not relieve any stockholder of any liability incurred during the existence of said corporation. If any corporation fails to organize within two years from the date of the commission appointing the board of corporators, the commission shall be null and void. Every corporation chartered under this act shall have the following powers, to wit: 1. To have perpetual succession. 2. To sue and be sued by the corporate name. 3. To have a common seal and to alter the same at pleasure. 4. To prescribe the mode of transferring the shares of the corporation. 5. To make contracts, to loan money, to acquire and to transfer property, both real and personal, including shares of stock in other corporations, possessing the same powers in such respects as individuals now enjoy. 6. To make by-laws and all rules and regulations deemed expedient for the management of its affairs, not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of this State or of the United States. 7. To have a lien upon the shares of its stockholders, to enforce the payment of installments due upon the capital stock, to provide and to enforce the collection of such fines and penalties for delinquency in payments of its installments upon the capital stock as its by-laws may fix, not to exceed ten per cent. on account due. 8. To borrow money for the purpose of carrying out the objects of its charter, to make notes, bonds, or other evidences of debt, and upon a vote of the stockholders, had after at least thirty days' notice of the time, place, and purpose of said meeting, by the mailing of written notice to each stockholder and by publication in some newspaper published in the county where the corporation has its principal place of business, or (if no paper be published in the county) by written or printed notice posted up on the court-house door, to secure the payments of its obligations by mortgage or deed of trust on all or any of its property and franchises, both real and personal. Provided, that no such notice or vote shall be required to enable the proper officers of any corporation to secure the payment of any temporary loan on promissory note or otherwise by pledge of hypothecation of any chose in action held or owned by such corporation, or of the products, goods, wares, or merchandise produced or manufactured by such corporation, unless such notice and vote be required by the by-laws or rules of such corporation. Provided, further, that nothing herein contained shall prevent a corporation, when so authorized by resolution of its board of directors or managing board, from executing and delivering a valid mortgage on property to secure a bond (or note) given solely for the unpaid portion of the purchase-money of property bona fide purchased and mortgaged, where the conveyance or grant to the corporation and such bond (or note) and mortgage bear the same date, are interchangeably delivered at the same time, and the mortgage covers no more property than that which has been so purchased, such mortgage being hereby authorized. By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2806, claims against corporations shall bear legal interest from the expiration of thirty days after the day on which such claims may be due and payable, unless interest runs by agreement or contract from any earlier day, in which case the claim or claims shall bear interest from such earlier day; and further, unless a rate of interest (not usurious) different from the legal rate be agreed upon or contracted for, in which case the claim or claims shall bear the rate of interest agreed upon or contracted for. See, also, Interest.

By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2860, 2861, each and every manufacturing corporation of this State, whether incorporated under the provisions of any special or general act of the general assembly of this State, shall, in addition to all the rights, powers, and franchises which they and each of them now severally possess, have full power and authority to become a member of or effect insurance of their several property, in whole or in part, in any mutual protective association or associations, or mutual insurance company or companies of any kind, and to severally subscribe and subject themselves to all the provisions of the several constitutions or by-laws of such associations or companies; also to become a member of any mutual company or association, and to severally subscribe and subject themselves to the constitution and by-laws thereof, which shall be or may have been formed or incorporated, with a view of affording to the members thereof insurance against or indemnity for any accident or mishap, or which shall be or may have been formed or incorporated with a view of issuing warehouse or other receipts, or warehouse or other certificates, for the whole or any part of any product thereof, or for any raw product to be used by them, or with the purpose of guaranteeing such receipts or certificates, and the validity thereof.

The employment of children in factories, mines, and manufacturing establishments is regulated by Criminal Code, 1912, § 423, and the hours of labor in cotton and woolen mills by Criminal Code, 1912, § 421. See, also, "An act to enlarge the powers and duties of the commissioner of agriculture, commerce, and immigration; to prescribe the duties of persons, firms, and corporations subject to his supervision; to prescribe penalties for failure to perform the same." (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 851-874.)

Art. IX. § 18 of the Constitution of 1895 reads as follows: "The stockholders of all insolvent corporations shall be individually liable to the creditors thereof only to the extent of the amount remaining due to the corporation upon the stock owned by them: provided, that stockholders in banks or banking institutions shall be liable to depositors therein in a sum equal in amount to their stock over and above the face value of the same." Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2660-2784, carry into effect the said provisions of the Constitution. Express and telegraph companies owning, controlling, or operating a line or lines of express or telegraph in whole or in part in this State, and all persons, firms, and corporations owning or operating any telephone line, station, or exchange for the transmission of intelligence for hire in this State, are under the control of the railroad commissioners, who have power to regulate prices, etc.; and said companies are assessed for their pro rata part of the salaries and expenses of said commissioners based on their gross earnings. Corporations pay the same taxes upon their property as individuals, but Constitution, 1895, art. X. § 5, provides: All shares of the stockholders in any bank or banking association located in this State, whether now or hereafter incorporated, or organized under the laws of this State or of the United States, shall be listed at their true value in money, and taxed for municipal purposes in the city, ward, town, or incorporated village where such bank is located, and not elsewhere: provided, that the words "true value in money" as used shall be so construed as to mean and include all surplus or extra moneys, capital, and every species of personal property of value owned or in possession of any such bank: provided a like rule of taxation shall apply to the stockholders of all corporations other than banking institutions. Stocks representing shares in manufacturing corporations chartered under the laws of this State shall be deemed and are declared to be realty, but the stock representing such shares may be transferred from one person to another, for any purpose whatsoever, by the same means as are or may be allowed by law for the transfer of shares in other corporations: provided, the same shall not be subject to any claim of dower, shall be subject to debts in execution, or upon attachment as shares of stock in other corporations, and to the laws of distribution of deceased intestate's estate, as if the same were personal property: provided, further, that such stocks shall be exempt, in the hands of the holder, from taxation when the corporation is taxed on the value of said stocks. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2806.)

Railroad, steamboat, street railway, and canal corporations may be incorporated through the secretary of state under provisions of a special act. They may organize, in the case of railroad corporations, when not less than five hundred dollars per mile, and in that of canal, steamboat, and street railway companies when not less than fifty per cent. of the capital stock shall have been subscribed by bona fide subscribers, and at least twenty per cent. of the amount subscribed has been paid or secured. They shall elect not less than three nor more than twelve directors, all of whom must be stockholders, but none need be residents of this State; but at least one of the corporators must be a resident of this State. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2876.) Art. IX. § 18 of Constitution of 1895 as to stockholders' liability and above remarks as to taxes apply to said companies. The charter fee for such corporations is the same as above set forth. And by Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2880, street railway companies may be authorized and empowered, upon proper application, to make, produce, generate, and supply light, power, and heat by the means of electricity and gas, or either of them, both for their corporate purposes and for sale to the public, subject to the restrictions and limitations that may be imposed by the municipalities in which they may seek to do business.

Religious, educational, social, fraternal, or charitable churches, lodges, societies, associations, or companies may be incorporated through secretary of state, under provisions of Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2862-2871. The declaration of incorporation must be approved by the clerk of court, sheriff, probate judge, county treasurer, and county auditor. If located within an incorporated town it must be indorsed by at least fifty freehold electors; if without an incorporated town, by at least twenty-five. (A. A. 1914, 496.) See "An act for the protection of labels and seals of labor organizations, associations, and societies in the State of South Carolina," Criminal Code, 1912, § 289. Mutual protection associations, for insuring members (residents of this State) against loss by fire and lightning, cyclones, tornadoes, or windstorms, are provided for under Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2771-2780.

Fire insurance companies or partnerships are prohibited from combining to control rates charged for insurance. (Code of Laws, 1902, vol. 1, § 1819.) The insurance commissioner can investigate incendiary fires and complaint of unreasonable rates and order remedy. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2733-2739.) Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2741, requires payment of certain premiums to the fire department of incorporated cities and towns by fire insurance companies doing business in the State, for the purpose of creating a fund for the benefit of the members of the fire departments of such cities and towns, and provides for the collection and distribution of same. Telegraph, telephone, and electric lighting and power companies, under certain conditions, can condemn rights of way and operate their lines thereon. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 3317-3326.) By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3305, the right and power to condemn a right of way provided in article X. chapter xlix. of the Code of Laws, vol. 1, 1912, for railroads operated by steam, are extended to and vested in all railroads, whether operated by steam, electricity, or other motive power. See Trusts and Combinations; Actions.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 361-370, requires reports to the comptroller-general and payment of annual license fees by corporations doing business for profit in this State, whether organized under the laws of this State or any other State, Territory, or country. Amount of such annual license fee to be paid by railroad, express, street-railway, navigation, water-works, power, light, telephone, telegraph, and parlor, dining, and sleeping car companies, respectively, is three mills on the gross income of such company for business done within South Carolina for the preceding fiscal year, which shall be paid by such corporation on or before the first day of May in every year. Every corporation organized under the laws of this State to do business for profit, other than those above enumerated, shall pay to the comptroller-general, on or before the first day of April in each year, an annual license fee of one half of one mill upon each dollar paid into the capital stock of said corporations, said license fee not to be less than five dollars in any case. The state treasurer shall charge and collect from foreign corporations, in addition to the initial fees provided for in the Code of Laws, 1912, and acts amendatory thereto, an annual license fee of one half of one mill upon each dollar of the value of the property of such corporation used within this State in the conduct of its business. Heavy penalties follow failure to comply with the terms of said act. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2807, makes all debts due and to become due by corporations doing business in this State for labor or services rendered within this State by persons residing within this State, due or payable within this State. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2808, also fixes and declares the liabilities of any corporation, firm, or individual operating a relief department to employees, and regulates the operation of the same; among other things providing that the acceptance of the amount agreed to be paid to employee, his heirs or other beneficiary, shall not operate to estop, or in any way bar the right of such employee or his personal representative from recovering damages of such corporation, firm, or individual for personal injury or death caused by the negligence of such corporation, firm, or individual, their servants or agents, as are now provided by law; and any contract or agreement to the contrary, or any receipt or release given in consideration of the payment of such sum, is and shall be null and void. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2642-2663, provides for the appointment of a bank examiner. Criminal Code, 1912, § 211, makes it unlawful to pay dividends on stock in any corporation, unless the same are actually earned on the capital stock of such company, and for any officer of such company to make any false statement in regard to such company; and provides punishment by fine of not less than five hundred dollars or imprisonment for not less than six months.

Criminal Code, 1912, § 210, provides "that an officer, agent, clerk, or servant of a corporation which is organized or doing business in this State, who willfully uses the name of such corporation, or his own name as such officer, agent, clerk, or servant, to obtain money, or anything of value or credit upon the credit of such corporation for his own use or benefit, without authority from such corporation, or who fraudulently lends, invests, or appropriates the money or disposes of the property of such corporation, or fraudulently converts it, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years."

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2828, requires the president and such other officer as shall have the custody and control of the funds of any corporation organized and doing business under the laws of this State to make an annual itemized report, under oath, on or before the thirtieth day of December of each year, to all of the stockholders of said corporation who may make request therefor in writing, showing the actual assets and liabilities of the said corporation; and provides a punishment for non-compliance with the terms of the act; but said act does not apply to railroad corporations, nor to any banking institution which is now required by law to make an annual report to stockholders, nor to building and loan associations.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2789-2791, provides for issue of new certificates of stock for lost ones.

See "An act to establish a public service commission, to fix and establish in all cities of this State rates and charges for the supply of water, gas, or electricity furnished by any person, firm, or corporation to such city and the inhabitants thereof, and to prescribe penalties," Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 922-925. The provisions of that act do not apply to the cities of Marion, Spartanburg, Sumter, and Union, or to the town of Conway.

Bank examiner may take control of bank for thirty days upon request of directors. (A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 791.) The words "Bank" or "Banking" in business can be used only by an incorporated bank.

Loans to bank directors regulated. A. A. 1918, p. 880.

Regulation and supervision of investment companies provided for in A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 912.

Foreign Corporations. — Foreign corporations can hold title to land, provided it does not conflict with the law as set out under the head of Aliens. As to license fee, see paragraph above concerning corporation fees. By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2710, foreign insurance companies of all classes, such as fire, life, marine, surety, security, guarantee, hailstorm, live-stock, accident, plate glass, and other like insurance companies, foreign land loan associations, foreign building and loan associations, foreign banking associations, and all other like classes of like business, not incorporated under the laws of South Carolina, except national banks and except benevolent institutions organized under the grand lodge system, shall each, before transacting any business in this State, pay a license fee of one hundred dollars to the insurance commissioner, and the license shall be so granted as to expire on the 31st of March of each year: provided, that the provisions of this act shall in no way apply to societies, lodges, and associations which, under the supervision of a grand or supreme lodge, secure membership through the lodge system exclusively and provide insurance to its members, nor to insurance associations of a purely benevolent character which pay no commission, nor employ any paid agent, organized under the laws of this or any other State; and by Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2702, in addition to the annual license fees now provided by law, the commissioner shall require each foreign company of any class licensed by him not incorporated under the laws of the State of South Carolina, except benevolent institutions operating under the grand lodge system, to pay semiannually to the insurance commissioner, as an additional and graduated license fee for a license to be delivered by him to such company or corporation, an amount equal to two per centum on the total premiums, i. e., total income or total receipts from this State, less any dividend credits thereon, as the case may be, with such company, as collected from citizens or of residents in this State, during the six months immediately preceding the 30th day of June and 31st day of December of each year. The returns of the premiums collected shall be made within thirty days after the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December, and if the returns are not so made, the insurance commissioner may suspend the license of the company until such returns are made. Such returns shall be made under oath by an executive officer and shall be in lieu of all returns hitherto required: provided, that if the executive officer of the company shall file with the insurance commissioner a sworn statement showing that at least one fourth of the reserve on all policies issued in South Carolina are maintained in and invested in any or all of the following securities, or property, to wit: Bonds of this State, or of any county, city, or town of this State, or first mortgage bonds on real estate in this State, or first mortgage bonds of solvent domestic corporations whose property is situated entirely within this State, or any property situated in this State and taxable therein, then the additional license fee shall be one and three fourths per centum upon the receipts; if the investment be one half of said reserve, the additional license fee shall be one and one half per centum; if the investment therein be three fourths of said reserve, the additional license fee shall be one and one fourth per centum; and if the entire reserve be so invested, then the additional license fee shall be one per centum: provided, further, that the one half of the said additional license fee under the terms of said section allotted to the counties, respectively, shall be and is hereby appropriated to ordinary county purposes, and no additional county tax or license fee shall be levied on such companies. At the close of the semiannual period, or as soon thereafter as possible, the insurance commissioner shall furnish the state treasurer a statement showing the amount of gross premiums collected by each company in each of the several counties of the State, and the amount of additional license fees collected thereon; and the state treasurer shall pay into the county treasury of each county one half of the additional license fee collected as aforesaid on the gross premiums collected by each insurance company in that county: provided, that nothing in this act or any other act shall be construed as preventing any municipality from levying and collecting license fees or taxes in accordance with its ordinances. It shall be unlawful for any one of such foreign companies as are required to obtain license or pay license fees to transact any business in this State until they shall have and keep some duly appointed resident agent in this State, on whom legal process may be served, so as to bind the company he represents, and service of process upon his agent at his main office shall be sufficient to give jurisdiction to the court issuing the same in any county in this State. And every resident agent shall return to the county auditor of each county his gross receipts from said counties for taxation as other property is returned for taxation. Certain statutory penalties follow the failure to comply with the provisions of said act. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2728, makes the payment of taxes by every foreign insurance company of any class, and all other classes of like business not incorporated under the laws of the State of South Carolina, except benevolent institutions operating under the grand lodge system, a condition precedent to doing business in this State.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2690-2739, establishes the insurance department of South Carolina, and provides for the conduct of same, including the election and duties of the insurance commissioner, upon whom shall devolve all the duties theretofore required or devolving upon the state treasurer and comptroller-general touching or relating to matters pertaining to insurance of any and all kinds, "and he shall collect, in addition to all other license fees and taxes as now provided by law, from each insurance company now doing business in this State, or which may hereafter do business in this State, the following sums, to wit: from each life insurance company doing business on a legal reserve basis, the sum of fifty dollars per annum; from each fire insurance company, the sum of forty dollars; from each accident and casualty and surety company, the sum of forty dollars; from each mutual assessment company doing business in more than one county, twenty-five dollars; from each assessment company not doing business in more than one county, ten dollars." Said insurance commissioner shall issue the license required by law to be obtained by insurance companies doing business in the State; and shall have power to revoke and annul any license of any company, individual, association, or order which, in his judgment, has violated any of the laws of this State, or which, in his opinion, is insolvent, or not affording proper protection to its policy-holders.

A. A. 1908 (25 Stats. 1109) provides: "That from and after the passage of this act all insurance companies incorporated under the laws of this State, whether fire, life, live-stock, or any other form of insurance, except fraternal orders or lodges and county and township mutual, fire, assessment, and industrial life insurance companies, wind and lighting associations: provided, that said companies do not write any insurance outside of the county in which organized, and one adjoining county, before doing any business in this State, shall deposit with the state treasurer of South Carolina valid securities, aggregating ten thousand dollars ($10,000), or a bond for said amount made by a solvent security company; said treasurer to be the judge of the validity of such security and bond, which bond shall be conditioned to pay any judgment entered up in any court of competent jurisdiction in this State upon policy of insurance issued to any person by any such company, and said judgment shall be a lien upon such securities or bond, and, in case a bond is given, the judgment creditor shall have the right to bring suit on said bond for the satisfaction of the said judgment in the county in which the judgment is recovered: provided, that the cash may be deposited with the state treasurer, in lieu of said securities or bond: provided, further, that in case securities or cash is deposited the judgment creditor shall have the right to have his execution levied upon said securities or cash so deposited with the state treasurer to an amount sufficient to satisfy said execution." See, also, "An act relating to the regulation of life insurance companies in this State," A. A. 1908, 25 Stats. 1110; also, "An act to regulate bond, investment, dividend, debenture, registry, guaranty, loan, and fidelity and other such like companies," A. A. 1910, 26 Stats. 546; also "An act to provide for the organization and regulation of mutual protection associations," A. A. 1910, 26 Stats. 548; also "An act to provide penalties for violation of the insurance laws of this State," Criminal Code, §§ 879-882; also, "An act for the regulation and control of fraternal benefit associations," Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2749; also "An act providing that collectors of premiums, dues, assessments, fines, and other payments for any fraternal, insurance, or beneficiary society, order, or association, whether foreign or within this State, and now or hereafter operating within this State, shall be deemed agents of such society, order, or association," Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2270.

Foreign fire insurance companies who contemplate doing business in this State should also consult Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2713-2717; and also A. A. 1910, 26 Stats. 776; A. A. 1916, p. 673.

Unlicensed insurance companies should consult A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 534.

By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2664-2668, each foreign corporation, within sixty days after commencing to do business in this State, shall file with the secretary of state a written declaration of its principal place of business in this State at which all legal papers may be served by delivery to any of its agents or employees. It shall also file with secretary of state a copy of its charter and by-laws, with all amendments thereof; also annually, on or before January 31, a sworn statement showing residence and post-office address of such corporation, amount of capital stock actually paid, and names, residence, and post-office addresses of the president and secretary and board of directors. Penalty is provided for failure to observe these requirements.

Foreign companies proposing to do exclusively a business of lending money on real estate mortgages must be licensed, etc. See A. A. 1913, p. 145.

Railroads incorporated in other States must be incorporated in this State before doing business therein. See Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2676, 2677, 2679, and 2688. Penalty is provided for owning or operating competing lines. The liability of connecting roads for loss, damage, or injury is regulated by Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2571-2575.

Insurance companies unable to produce a certificate of a deposit of one hundred thousand dollars in another State are required to deposit ten thousand dollars of securities with the treasurer of this State, or a bond for said amount, made by a solvent security company except fire insurance companies incorporated under the laws of this State, with a capital stock of twenty-five thousand dollars, or more, provided said company shall procure and file with the comptroller-general the certificates of the county auditors where stockholders reside that the majority of the stockholders are freeholders and reside within the State and are worth the amount of their stock subscribed to the capital of said corporation over all their debts and liabilities, and exclusive of property exempt by law from execution. A. A. 1905, p. 840, provided "that all live-stock insurance companies incorporated under the laws of this State with a paid up capital stock of five thousand dollars, or more, shall not be compelled to deposit said valid securities or bonds as above required: provided such company files with the comptroller-general of this State, on or before the first day of July each year after its incorporation, a sworn statement showing the amount of outstanding insurance, assets, and liabilities of said company."

An action against a foreign corporation may be brought in the circuit court: 1. By any resident of this State, for any cause of action. 2. By a plaintiff not a resident of this State when the cause of action shall have arisen, or the subject of the action shall be situated, within this State. Natl. Ex. Bank v. Stelling, 9 S. E. Rep. 1028; Central, etc., Co. v. Georgia, etc., Co. 11 S. E. Rep. 192. See Attachment; Service.

By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2669-2673, it shall be a further condition precedent to the right of any corporation created by or under the laws of any State of the American Union or of the District of Columbia, or of any foreign government, to do business in this State, that all actions or suits arising out of the business or dealings of such foreign corporation with any citizen or corporation of this State, or pertaining thereto, commenced in the courts of this State, shall be tried therein, any usage or law to the contrary notwithstanding, and submission to the jurisdiction of the state courts shall be a condition precedent to do business in the State, and shall be taken and deemed to be a part of all contracts. See Mortgages; Taxes.

Provision is made for regulating the sale of stock of corporations, both domestic and foreign, under the so-called "Blue Sky Law." (A. A. 1915, p. 251.)

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for South Carolina.

Deeds. — See, also, Records. It is necessary that all deeds for the conveyance of real estate must be signed and sealed by the grantor in the presence of two subscribing witnesses, which deed, only if recorded within ten days in the office of the register of mesne conveyance in the counties of Charleston, Greenville, and Spartanburg, and of the clerk of court of the other counties in which the land lies, affects from the time of the delivery or execution thereof the rights of subsequent creditors (whether lien creditors or simple contract creditors) or purchasers for valuable consideration without notice. If recorded after ten days, it is notice from the date of record to all who may subsequently thereto become creditors or purchasers. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3542.) Deeds of conveyances, leases, mortgages, or other conditional sales of, and all other instruments in writing relating to, railroad beds, tracks and right of way, cars, locomotive engines, rolling stock, and other railway equipment, must be recorded with the secretary of state within forty days from the execution and delivery thereof; and railroad mortgages or deeds of trust must also be recorded within six months, in the books provided for recording of mortgages on real estate in the office of the clerk of court or register of mesne conveyance of each county in which any part of the real property affected thereby is situated. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 705.)

Any instrument in writing, however, whose attestation clause, or other part thereof, shows that it was the intention of the parties thereto that it should be a sealed instrument, shall be construed as a sealed instrument, although no seal be actually attached thereto. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2535.)

By act 1873 (15 Stats. 324), all former provisions of the law for the release of the inheritance of a feme covert are abolished, and she can convey her property by deed. See Married Women.

If the grantor have a wife, she must, on the deed or in some separate instrument, renounce her dower, according to the form attached. If such renunciation is taken out of the State it should be done before the proper officer. See Dower.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3783 provides: "The father of any child, or children, under the age of twenty-one years, and not married, if the mother be dead, or the mother of any such child, or children, the father being dead, whether such father or mother be under the age of twenty-one years, or of full age, may, by his or her deed, executed and recorded according to law, or by his or her last will and testament, made and probated according to law, dispose of the custody and tuition of such child, or children, for and during such time as he, she, or they, respectively, remain under the age of twenty-one years, to any person, or persons, in possession or remainder. But no such deed shall be valid unless signed by both father and mother, if both be living: provided, that nothing herein shall be construed to abrogate, lessen, or interfere with the right and duty of a court of competent jurisdiction at any time, as heretofore, to transfer and assign the custody of a child for its best interest."

Before any deed or instrument in writing can be recorded in the proper office within this State, the execution thereof shall first be proved by the affidavit, in writing, of a subscribing witness to such instrument, taken before some officer, within this State, competent to administer an oath; or if taken without the limits of this State, before a commissioner or commissioners appointed by dedimus issued by the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county in which the instrument is to be recorded; or before a commissioner of deeds of this State, or before a clerk of a court of record, who shall certify the same under his official seal; or before a justice of the peace, who must append to the certificate his official seal, or before a notary public, who shall affix thereto his official seal within the State of his appointment, which seal shall be a sufficient authentication of his or her signature, residence, and official character; or before a minister, ambassador, consul-general, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of the United States of America. Where the affidavit of a subscribing witness cannot be had by reason of the death, insanity, or absence from the State of such witness, then upon proof of such fact, and of the handwriting of the parties who signed the instrument, and of the subscribing witnesses, by proper affidavit, the proof in every case to be recorded with the instrument. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 1352.) By § 1353 any and all deeds or other instruments in writing which may have heretofore been probated by either a minister, ambassador, or consul-general or notary public are validated and their probate confirmed. (See supra, Affidavits.) Witness must make affidavit that he saw grantor sign, seal, and as his act and deed deliver that deed, and that he with the other subscribing witness (naming him) witnessed the execution thereof. He must sign the affidavit, and the magistrate, notary, commissioners, or above named officer must certify it. It is not certain that any other mode of proof will be sufficient.

There is no special form for a certificate of acknowledgment by husband and wife, and no such acknowledgment is necessary.

Every notary public "shall have a seal of office, which shall be affixed to his instruments of publication and to his protestations, but the absence of such seal shall not render his acts invalid, provided his official title be affixed." (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 735.)

Depositions. — The testimony of witnesses residing out of the State may be taken by commission issuing from the clerk of the court of common pleas and under the seal of the court, directed to three or more commissioners, authorizing them or any two of them to take the deposition of the witness.

Notice is to be given to the commissioners on the other side, of the time and place of examination, and if they do not attend, the examination may proceed in their absence.

The commissioners must first take and sign the following oath: —

"You shall, according to the best of your knowledge, truly, faithfully, and without partiality to any or either of the parties in this cause, take the examination and deposition of all and every witness and witnesses, produced and examined, by virtue of the commission hereunto annexed, upon the interrogatories now produced and left with you. And you shall not publish, disclose, or make known to any person or persons whomsoever, except the clerk or clerks by you employed, and sworn to secrecy in the execution of this commission, the contents of all, or any of the depositions of the witnesses, or any of them, to be taken by you and the other commissioners, in the commission named, or any of them, by virtue of the said commission, until publication shall pass by rule or order of the said court. So help you God."

(Signed) C. D., Commissioner.

Any one of the commissioners is authorized and empowered to administer the oath to the other or others. They are also authorized and required, jointly or separately, to administer the clerk's oath to any clerk employed in taking the deposition of witnesses, before such clerk is permitted to act or be present at such examination. The following is the clerk's oath, which must be signed by him: —

"You shall truly, faithfully, and without partiality to any or either of the parties in this cause, take and write down, transcribe and engross the depositions of all and every witness and witnesses, produced before and examined by the commissioners, or any of them, named in the commission hereunto annexed, as far forth as you are directed and employed by the said commissioners, or any of them, to take and write down and engross the said depositions, or any of them. And you shall not publish, disclose, or make known to any person or persons whomsoever the contents of all or any of the depositions of the witnesses, or any of them, to be taken or written down, transcribed, or engrossed by you, or whereto you shall have recourse, or be any ways privy, until publication shall pass by rule or order of the said court. So help you God." (Signed by clerk.) Jurat by one commissioner. But see Williams v. Richardson, 12 S. C. 584.

After swearing the witnesses, they will then proceed to examine each witness apart on the interrogatories accompanying the commission.

When the examination of the witness is completed his depositions are to be signed by him and attested by the commissioners.

When the examination of all the witnesses is closed, the interrogatories and depositions are to be annexed to the commission, and the whole inclosed in a large paper under seal. The commissioners will indorse on one corner of the outside of it the name of the cause, and seal the packet with their seals, and write their names across the seals, and direct it to the clerk or register by whom the commission is signed.

If the commission is returned by post, one of the commissioners will sign a memorandum on the outside to certify that the inclosed was lodged by him in the post-office.

In civil actions depending in any court of common pleas in this State testimony can be taken under depositions de bene esse, the formalities for which are the same as those required under the act of Congress relating to such depositions. Such depositions must be reduced to writing by the officer taking the deposition, or by deponent himself in the officer's presence, and by no other person, and shall, after it has been reduced to writing, be subscribed by the deponent: provided, that this shall not be construed to prevent the use of stenographers for the purpose of taking such testimony, but the testimony so taken by such stenographers shall be reduced to writing or typewritten and read over to such witnesses. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3986.)

"All original pleadings and other proceedings shall be written on legal cap paper or printed in accordance with the requirements of rule 6 of the supreme court. Typewriting will be permitted only when black indelible ink is used with ordinary spacing upon linen paper weighing not less than four pounds to five hundred single cap sheets, eight by thirteen inches in size, and each page of typewriting shall be numbered and initialed by the attorney or officer or persons signing such paper. It shall be the duty of the clerk of the court to see that papers are numbered and initialed as herein prescribed before filing. Papers in handwriting or in typewriting must have a blank margin of an inch and a half on the left. If more than two pages of typewriting or handwriting be used they shall be fastened at the top so as to read continuously." This applies to testimony taken by commission as well as de bene esse. (Rule xii, of Circuit Courts.)

Descent of Real and Personal Property. — Personal property is distributed through the administrator, while real estate descends to and vests in the heirs immediately upon the death of the intestate, subject, however, to the payment of debts in the event that the personal property is insufficient for that purpose. When one dies intestate, his property, real and personal, after paying his debts, is distributed as follows: —

1. If he leave a wife and a child or children, to the wife one third in fee, to the child or children the remaining two thirds in fee. If the widow take under the statute she waives her dower. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3581.) A posthumous child takes as well as one living at the death of the intestate. The lineal descendants of an intestate represent their parents respectively, and take among them the share the parent would have taken.

2. If he leave a wife and no child, but leaves a father or mother, and brothers and sisters of the whole blood, the wife will take one half in fee, and the father or mother, and the brothers and sisters of the whole blood the other half, among them in fee, the child or children of a predeceased brother or sister of the whole blood representing his, her, or their parent. If he leave no child nor other lineal descendant, nor brothers or sisters, nor brother or sister of the whole blood (sic), or their lineal descendants, but shall leave a widow and a father or mother, the widow shall have one moiety, and the father, or, if he be dead, the mother, shall have the other moiety. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3555.)

3. If he leave a wife and no parent, or no brother or sister of the whole blood, but brothers and sisters of the half blood, and children of a predeceased brother or sister of the whole blood, the wife takes one half in fee, and the other half is divided among the half blood and the children of the whole blood, the latter taking among them the share of a brother or sister of the half blood.

4. If the intestate shall leave no child, or other lineal descendant, father, mother, brother, or sister of the whole blood, or their children, or brother or sister of the half blood, then the widow shall take one moiety, and the lineal ancestor, if any there be, the other moiety.

5. If he die leaving a wife and relatives more remote than parents, brothers, or sisters, of the whole or half blood, or children of brethren of the whole blood or lineal ancestor, the wife takes two thirds in fee, and the remaining third is divided among the relatives nearest in blood to the intestate. If there be no wife the whole property is divided amongst the others according to the rules above stated. If a married person die leaving no lineal descendant nor lineal ancestor, father, mother, brother, or sister of the whole blood, or their children, nor brother or sister of the half blood, or next of kin, then the husband or the wife, as the case may be, shall take the whole. A married woman's property is divided according to the same rules as a married man's. The marital rights do not attach in personalty.

The wife is included in the term "heirs of her husband," and vice versa. There is no distinction in the descent of property between citizens and aliens, unless limited by the provisions under the title Aliens.

No distribution of the goods of any person dying intestate shall be made until after one year be fully expired after the death of such intestate.

No inheritance tax in this State. By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3562, an illegitimate child and its mother are allowed to inherit property from each other. See § 3796 of Civil Code as to adoption of children and property rights flowing therefrom.

Divorce. — All laws permitting divorce for any cause are repealed. (16 Statutes, 719.)

Dower and Curtesy. — When any femme covert shall relinquish her right of dower in any real estate and acknowledge the same in writing, if she be within this State, in open court, or before any judge of the court of common pleas, justice of the supreme court, judge of probate, clerk of the court of common pleas, or master, magistrate, or notary public; or, if she be without this State, before a commissioner of deeds of this State, or before a commissioner duly appointed by dedimus, or before any minister, ambassador, consul-general, consul, vice-consul, deputy consular agent, commercial agent of the United States, or any other officer appointed by the United States in foreign countries with the power to administer oaths and having an official seal, or a clerk of a court of record or before a notary public, or justice of the peace, who must each append to the certificate the official seal used by him, and such acknowledgment shall be recorded, the same shall be effectual in law to convey and pass away the right of such femme covert, although she has not executed or acknowledged any deed of conveyance for that purpose: provided, that if the notary public or justice of the peace do not append to the certificate the official seal used by him, his official character must be attested by a clerk of the court of record of the county in which he may reside and append to the certificate of such officer. Any and all certificates of renunciation of dower which may have heretofore been taken before a notary public without this State, who has signed the same and affixed thereto his official seal, but whose official character has not been attested by a clerk of the court of record of the county in which he may reside, are hereby validated and their certificate affirmed. (A. A. 1918, p. 807.) Renunciations of dower taken from a married minor shall have the same legal force and effect as renunciations of dower taken from married women of lawful age. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 3469, 3470.) If the wife be insane, provision is made for the release of her dower by institution of proceedings in probate court. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3479.) See Claims against Estates; Records.

Tenancy by the curtesy was abolished by A. A. 1883. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3763.)

Estates. — See Claims against Estates.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Execution. — See Judgments; Stay of Execution.

Exemptions. — Article III, § 28 of the Constitution, ratified in December, 1895, reads as follows (and an act was passed carrying it into effect): "The General Assembly shall enact such laws as will exempt from attachment, levy, and sale under any meane or final process issued from any court, to the head of any family residing in this State, a homestead in lands, whether held in fee or any lesser estate, to the value of one thousand dollars, or so much thereof as the property is worth if its value is less than one thousand dollars, with the yearly products thereof, and to every head of a family residing in this State, whether entitled to a homestead exemption in lands or not, personal property to the value of five hundred dollars, or so much thereof as the property is worth if its value is less than five hundred dollars. The title to the homestead to be set off and assigned shall be absolute and be forever discharged from all debts of the said debtor then existing or thereafter contracted except as hereinafter provided: provided, that in case any woman having a separate estate shall be married to the head of a family who has not of his own sufficient property to constitute a homestead as hereinbefore provided, said married woman shall be entitled to a like exemption as provided for the head of a family; provided, further, that there shall not be an allowance of more than one thousand dollars' worth of real estate and more than five hundred dollars' worth of personal property to the husband and wife jointly; provided, further, that no property shall be exempt from attachment, levy, or sale for taxes, or for payment of obligations contracted for the purchase of said homestead or personal property exemption or the erection or making of improvements or repairs thereon; provided, further, that the yearly products of said homestead shall not be exempt from attachment, levy, or sale for the payment of obligations contracted in the production of the same; provided, further, that no waiver shall defeat the right of homestead before assignment except it be by deed of conveyance, or by mortgage, and only as against the mortgage debt; and no judgment creditor or other creditor whose lien does not bind the homestead shall have any right or equity to require that a lien which embraces the homestead and other property shall first exhaust the homestead; provided, further, that after a homestead in lands has been set off and recorded the same shall not be waived by deed of conveyance, mortgage, or otherwise, unless the same be executed by both husband and wife, if both be living; provided, further, that any person not the head of a family shall be entitled to a like exemption as provided for the head of a family in all necessary wearing apparel and tools and implements of trade not to exceed in value the sum of three hundred dollars."

Inheritance Taxes. — There is no such tax in this State.

Insolvent Laws. — An insolvent under arrest in any civil action may be released from arrest under these circumstances: He must file a petition to this effect to the court of common pleas of the county in which he is confined, containing a full statement of his estate, real and personal, particularly set forth, and also stating the cause of his imprisonment. Upon hearing the petition the court will order the prisoner to be brought before it, and all of his creditors to be summoned by public notice in some newspaper of the county, or, if there be none, in some newspaper circulated in the county, said notice to be published for three months, to appear at some day certain after the expiration of said three months, to show cause, if any, against the discharge of such prisoner. On the day so fixed an examination is made into the truth of the facts of the petition, and the petitioner is examined on oath touching the matters therein contained, and of the disposition he has made of his property, and an oath provided in the statutes is administered to him.

If the court be satisfied, the debtor is allowed, from the articles in his petition stated, his necessary bedding, wearing apparel, working tools, and arms for muster; and, if he be the head of a family, his homestead; and the other property is assigned by him to the suing creditors or to such person as the court may order. Thereupon, and upon the delivery of the property set forth in the petition, the debtor is discharged from arrest and is also released from the claims of all creditors who accept a dividend out of the estate assigned by him. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, title V. ch. c.)

There is no provision of law whereby a creditor can be compelled to accept a part of the estate of an insolvent debtor in full of his debt. A debtor may make a voluntary assignment of all his estate for the benefit of such of his creditors as may choose to accept it, on the terms presented. See Assignments. Or a debtor under arrest, in the exceptional cases allowed by the Code, may, if he desire it, obtain his release from arrest by a surrender of his effects. But only those creditors who voluntarily come in and share in the dividends are affected by these proceedings. But no system has been devised, and the proceedings are as simple as possible. The debtor is the actor. He files his petition for release, and accompanies it with his schedule. Thirty days are given to the creditors to come in and resist the application for the discharge if they choose. On the day fixed the court hears the case in a summary way, and if it favors the application, reserves certain property for the debtor and appoints the creditor plaintiff or some other person assignee, who takes the remainder of the property and the debtor gets the qualified release. The penalties of perjury follow a false schedule; the debtor is subject to re-arrest, and is forever deprived of the benefits of the act. If fraud in the schedule be charged, the judge or justice shall order an issue to be made up and tried before a jury. See, also, Assignments.

Interest. — No greater rate of interest than seven per cent. per annum shall be charged, taken, agreed upon, or allowed upon any contract arising in this State for the hiring, lending, or use of money or other commodity, either by way of straight interest, discount, or otherwise, except upon written contracts, wherein by express agreement a rate of interest not exceeding eight per cent. may be charged. Any person or corporation who shall receive, or contract to receive, as interest, any greater amount shall forfeit all interest and the costs of the action, and such portion of the original debt as shall be due shall be recovered, without interest or costs, and where any amount so charged or contracted for has been actually received by such person or corporation, he shall also forfeit double the total amount received in respect of interest, to be collected by a separate action or allowed as a counter-claim in any action brought to recover the principal sum. The borrower, and his heirs, devisees, legatees, or personal representative, or any creditor or any person having a legal or equitable interest in the estate or assets of such borrower, may plead the benefit of the provisions of this act, as plaintiff or defendant, and the same shall be effectual at any suit at law or in equity, and any person offending against the same shall be compelled to answer, on oath, any complaint that may be exhibited against him for the discovery of any sum of money or things in action, so charged, agreed upon, reserved, or taken, in violation

3. If he leave a wife and no parent, or no brother or sister of the whole blood, but brothers and sisters of the half blood, and children of a predeceased brother or sister of the whole blood, the wife takes one half in fee, and the other half is divided among the half blood and the children of the whole blood, the latter taking among them the share of a brother or sister of the half blood.

4. If the intestate shall leave no child, or other lineal descendant, father, mother, brother, or sister of the whole blood, or their children, or brother or sister of the half blood, then the widow shall take one moiety, and the lineal ancestor, if any there be, the other moiety.

5. If he die leaving a wife and relatives more remote than parents, brothers, or sisters, of the whole or half blood, or children of brethren of the whole blood or lineal ancestor, the wife takes two thirds in fee, and the remaining third is divided among the relatives nearest in blood to the intestate. If there be no wife the whole property is divided amongst the others according to the rules above stated. If a married person die leaving no lineal descendant nor lineal ancestor, father, mother, brother, or sister of the whole blood, or their children, nor brother or sister of the half blood, or next of kin, then the husband or the wife, as the case may be, shall take the whole. A married woman's property is divided according to the same rules as a married man's. The marital rights do not attach in personalty.

The wife is included in the term "heirs of her husband," and vice versa. There is no distinction in the descent of property between citizens and aliens, unless limited by the provisions under the title Aliens.

No distribution of the goods of any person dying intestate shall be made until after one year be fully expired after the death of such intestate.

No inheritance tax in this State. By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3562, an illegitimate child and its mother are allowed to inherit property from each other. See § 3798 of Civil Code as to adoption of children and property rights flowing therefrom.

Divorce. — All laws permitting divorce for any cause are repealed. (16 Statutes, 719.)

Dower and Curtesy. — When any femme covert shall relinquish her right of dower in any real estate and acknowledge the same in writing, if she be within this State, in open court, or before any judge of the court of common pleas, justice of the supreme court, judge of probate, clerk of the court of common pleas, or master, magistrate, or notary public; or, if she be without this State, before a commissioner of deeds of this State, or before a commissioner duly appointed by dedimus, or before any minister, ambassador, consul-general, consul, vice-consul, deputy consular agent, commercial agent of the United States, or any other officer appointed by the United States in foreign countries with the power to administer oaths and having an official seal, or a clerk of a court of record or before a notary public, or justice of the peace, who must each append to the certificate the official seal used by him, and such acknowledgment shall be recorded, the same shall be effectual in law to convey and pass away the right of such femme covert, although she has not executed or acknowledged any deed of conveyance for that purpose: provided, that if the notary public or justice of the peace do not append to the certificate the official seal used by him, his official character must be attested by a clerk of the court of record of the county in which he may reside and append to the certificate of such officer. Any and all certificates of renunciation of dower which may have heretofore been taken before a notary public without this State, who has signed the same and affixed thereto his official seal, but whose official character has not been attested by a clerk of the court of record of the county in which he may reside, are hereby validated and their certificate affirmed. (A. A. 1918, p. 807.) Renunciations of dower taken from a married minor shall have the same legal force and effect as renunciations of dower taken from married women of lawful age. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 3469, 3470.) If the wife be insane, provision is made for the release of her dower by institution of proceedings in probate court. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3479.) See Claims against Estates; Records.

Tenancy by the curtesy was abolished by A. A. 1883. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3763.)

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Execution. — See Judgments; Stay of Execution.

Exemptions. — Article III, § 28 of the Constitution, ratified in December, 1895, reads as follows (and an act was passed carrying it into effect): "The General Assembly shall enact such laws as will exempt from attachment, levy, and sale under any meane or final process issued from any court, to the head of any family residing in this State, a homestead in lands, whether held in fee or any lesser estate, to the value of one thousand dollars, or so much thereof as the property is worth if its value is less than one thousand dollars, with the yearly products thereof, and to every head of a family residing in this State, whether entitled to a homestead exemption in lands or not, personal property to the value of five hundred dollars, or so much thereof as the property is worth if its value is less than five hundred dollars. The title to the homestead to be set off and assigned shall be absolute and be forever discharged from all debts of the said debtor then existing or thereafter contracted except as hereinafter provided: provided, that in case any woman having a separate estate shall be married to the head of a family who has not of his own sufficient property to constitute a homestead as hereinbefore provided, said married woman shall be entitled to a like exemption as provided for the head of a family; provided, further, that there shall not be an allowance of more than one thousand dollars' worth of real estate and more than five hundred dollars' worth of personal property to the husband and wife jointly; provided, further, that no property shall be exempt from attachment, levy, or sale for taxes, or for payment of obligations contracted for the purchase of said homestead or personal property exemption or the erection or making of improvements or repairs thereon; provided, further, that the yearly products of said homestead shall not be exempt from attachment, levy, or sale for the payment of obligations contracted in the production of the same; provided, further, that no waiver shall defeat the right of homestead before assignment except it be by deed of conveyance, or by mortgage, and only as against the mortgage debt; and no judgment creditor or other creditor whose lien does not bind the homestead shall have any right or equity to require that a lien which embraces the homestead and other property shall first exhaust the homestead; provided, further, that after a homestead in lands has been set off and recorded the same shall not be waived by deed of conveyance, mortgage, or otherwise, unless the same be executed by both husband and wife, if both be living; provided, further, that any person not the head of a family shall be entitled to a like exemption as provided for the head of a family in all necessary wearing apparel and tools and implements of trade not to exceed in value the sum of three hundred dollars."

Inheritance Taxes. — There is no such tax in this State.

Insolvent Laws. — An insolvent under arrest in any civil action may be released from arrest under these circumstances: He must file a petition to this effect to the court of common pleas of the county in which he is confined, containing a full statement of his estate, real and personal, particularly set forth, and also stating the cause of his imprisonment. Upon hearing the petition the court will order the prisoner to be brought before it, and all of his creditors to be summoned by public notice in some newspaper of the county, or, if there be none, in some newspaper circulated in the county, said notice to be published for three months, to appear at some day certain after the expiration of said three months, to show cause, if any, against the discharge of such prisoner. On the day so fixed an examination is made into the truth of the facts of the petition, and the petitioner is examined on oath touching the matters therein contained, and of the disposition he has made of his property, and an oath provided in the statutes is administered to him.

If the court be satisfied, the debtor is allowed, from the articles in his petition stated, his necessary bedding, wearing apparel, working tools, and arms for muster; and, if he be the head of a family, his homestead; and the other property is assigned by him to the suing creditors or to such person as the court may order. Thereupon, and upon the delivery of the property set forth in the petition, the debtor is discharged from arrest and is also released from the claims of all creditors who accept a dividend out of the estate assigned by him. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, title V. ch. c.)

There is no provision of law whereby a creditor can be compelled to accept a part of the estate of an insolvent debtor in full of his debt. A debtor may make a voluntary assignment of all his estate for the benefit of such of his creditors as may choose to accept it, on the terms presented. See Assignments. Or a debtor under arrest, in the exceptional cases allowed by the Code, may, if he desire it, obtain his release from arrest by a surrender of his effects. But only those creditors who voluntarily come in and share in the dividends are affected by these proceedings. But no system has been devised, and the proceedings are as simple as possible. The debtor is the actor. He files his petition for release, and accompanies it with his schedule. Thirty days are given to the creditors to come in and resist the application for the discharge if they choose. On the day fixed the court hears the case in a summary way, and if it favors the application, reserves certain property for the debtor and appoints the creditor plaintiff or some other person assignee, who takes the remainder of the property and the debtor gets the qualified release. The penalties of perjury follow a false schedule; the debtor is subject to re-arrest, and is forever deprived of the benefits of the act. If fraud in the schedule be charged, the judge or justice shall order an issue to be made up and tried before a jury. See, also, Assignments.

Interest. — No greater rate of interest than seven per cent. per annum shall be charged, taken, agreed upon, or allowed upon any contract arising in this State for the hiring, lending, or use of money or other commodity, either by way of straight interest, discount, or otherwise, except upon written contracts, wherein by express agreement a rate of interest not exceeding eight per cent. may be charged. Any person or corporation who shall receive, or contract to receive, as interest, any greater amount shall forfeit all interest and the costs of the action, and such portion of the original debt as shall be due shall be recovered, without interest or costs, and where any amount so charged or contracted for has been actually received by such person or corporation, he shall also forfeit double the total amount received in respect of interest, to be collected by a separate action or allowed as a counter-claim in any action brought to recover the principal sum. The borrower, and his heirs, devisees, legatees, or personal representative, or any creditor or any person having a legal or equitable interest in the estate or assets of such borrower, may plead the benefit of the provisions of this act, as plaintiff or defendant, and the same shall be effectual at any suit at law or in equity, and any person offending against the same shall be compelled to answer, on oath, any complaint that may be exhibited against him for the discovery of any sum of money or things in action, so charged, agreed upon, reserved, or taken, in violation of the foregoing provisions, or either of them. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2518-2520.) But "no corporation shall, by way of defense, or otherwise, avail itself of any of the provisions of the preceding sections of said act, to avoid or defeat the payment of any interest which it has agreed upon, allowed, or contracted to pay, in any issue or sale of its coupon or registered bonds, heretofore or hereafter made by it." (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2521.) All contracts secured by mortgage of real estate situate within this State shall be subject to and construed by the laws of this State regulating the rate of interest allowed, and in all other respects without regard to the place named for the performance of the same. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2517.) Judgments bear interest at seven per cent. No interest allowed on open accounts, except on claims against corporations. See Corporations.

Judgments and Executions. — Judgments are made a lien on lands, by Code of Civil Procedure, § 348, for a period of ten years from the date of entry. A final judgment may be renewed at any time before the expiration of the ten years by service of summons, and the lien will be extended for ten years from entry of decree thereon. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 348.) Code of Civil Procedure, § 348, provides for reindexing all renewals of judgments. If the cause of action provides for the payment of attorney's fees, they must be made a part of the verdict or decree, and cannot be taken as a part of the costs.

Executions issue at once on entry of the judgment, and are made returnable within sixty days.

The lodgment of the executions with the sheriff does not bind the personal property of the debtor; it is only bound by actual attachment or levy.

Under the third rule of court the clerk shall not, without special leave of the court, enter any judgment until the expiration of five days after the court has adjourned for the term. The lien of a judgment begins from the date of its entry. Code of Civil Procedure, § 348, provides "that the verdict of a jury, where rendered for an amount of money, and the order of the court, in a cause tried or determined by the court, upon a money demand, shall be a lien upon all the real estate of the person against whom the same is rendered, from the rendition of such verdict or order until the expiration of five days from the rising of the court at which the same was rendered: provided, that all such verdicts and orders rendered and issued at the same term of court shall have no priority one over another, notwithstanding they may be rendered and issued on different days of said court."

Judgment notes are unknown. By A. A. 1894, transcripts of judgments in United States circuit and district courts within this State may be filed and docketed in offices of the clerks of courts of common pleas in the several counties of the State, for the purpose of creating liens upon property within the county where so filed. (See Replevin; Actions.) By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3466, clerks of courts are required to enter the word "Canceled," together with the signature of such officer, upon the margin of the indexes of judgments, when they are duly canceled of record by the judgment creditor or his assignee; such cancellation and signature to be entered in the margin opposite the names of the judgment debtor and judgment creditor.

License. — Commercial travelers are not required to take out a license. See Corporations. Emigrant agents are required to pay a license of two thousand dollars in each county in which they operate or solicit emigrants or hiring of laborers for each year so engaged. Heavy penalty provided for doing business without such license. (Criminal Code, § 895.) See, also, "An act to preserve game, fish, shell-fish, and terrapin in and on public lands and waters of the State, and to provide license." (Criminal Code, §§ 753-778; Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 903, 904.) See, also, Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 919-921; Criminal Code, § 733. As to traffic in seed cotton and unpacked lint cotton, see Criminal Code, § 454. As to practice of medicine, see Code of Laws, vol. 1, §§ 1618-1622. See, also, as to physicians, apothecaries, and dentists, Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 1618-1636; and as to attorneys, see Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 3911-3916. See Corporations.

Liens. — Liens are mortgages of real or personal property.

Special liens are created by statute, and are —

1. Liens for agricultural purposes. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 4162-4171.) A landlord and his assigns (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 4162), have a lien upon the crops of his tenant for his rent in preference to all other liens. Laborers who assist in making any crop have a lien thereon to the extent of the amount due them for such labor next in priority to the landlord, and as between such laborers there shall be no preference. All other liens for agricultural supplies shall be paid next after the satisfaction of the liens of the landlord, and laborers, and shall rank in other respects as they did under existing laws. No writing or recording is necessary to create the liens of the landlord; but such lien shall exist from the date of the contract, whether the same be in writing or verbal. A. A. 1909 (26 Stats. 178) repeals section 3059, relating to liens for advances; said act to take effect on January 1, 1910; "provided, that all liens taken before this act takes effect shall be valid, and may be enforced."

2. Liens in favor of mechanics furnishing labor and material on the buildings, and lands improved thereby, on vessels and for persons furnishing supplies and materials to vessels, and (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 4161; A. A. 1916, p. 686) on railroads for labor and materials furnished in their construction.

3. Executions have liens when levied on personal property, and on real estate when lodged in the sheriff's office.

4. By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2778, "All buildings insured by any mutual company shall be pledged to such company, together with the right and title of the assured in the lands upon which they are situate, to the amount of the premium note or contingent liability, and the company shall have a lien thereon to the amount of such note or liability, but the lien of the company shall not take effect as against third parties without notice until the company files with the register of mesne conveyance or clerk of the court of the county in which the property insured is situate a certificate, stating the date, number, and amount of premium note or contingent liability, and such a description of the property insured as will enable any person readily to identify the same. The recorder shall record and index the certificate in his book of mortgage liens, for which he shall receive the sum of twenty-five cents; and all liens heretofore acquired by any such company shall continue in force under this article."

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2716 provides, " That any fire insurance company doing business in this State, claiming a lien upon the property insured for the premium for such insurance, shall, upon an action being brought upon such lien, or to collect such premium, establish that protection had been had by the insured and that such company during the period of insurance was solvent."

5. Liens to all employees of mines, distilleries, and every kind of manufacturing establishment on all the output of the same ahead of all other liens, except taxes. See, also, Taxes. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2617, provides for sale of baggage or property by hotel, inn, and boarding-house keepers under certain conditions. See Judgments and Executions.

6. Lien for owners and operators of lumber mills and saw mills on the product is provided. (A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 712.)

7. Lien on motor vehicle for damage done other vehicles is provided by A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 737.

Limitations. — The State will not sue any person for, or in respect to, any real property, or the issues or profits thereof, by reason of the right or title of the State to the same after the lapse of twenty years.

Persons claiming under the State are barred in like manner as the State.

Actions for the recovery of real property must be commenced within ten years. (Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 123-127.) But see Taxes. Actions upon a judgment or decree of any court of the United States, or of any State or Territory, or upon a sealed instrument, other than sealed notes and personal bonds for the payment of money only which are not secured by mortgage, must be brought within twenty years. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 136.)

The following actions within six years: 1. An action upon a contract, obligation, or liability, express or implied, not under seal, and upon sealed notes or personal bonds for the payment of money only which are not secured by mortgage. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 137.) 2. Upon a liability created by a statute, other than a penalty or forfeiture. 3. For trespass upon real property. 4. For taking, detaining, or injuring any goods or chattels and for specific recovery of personal property. 5. For criminal conversation, or for any other injury to the person or rights of another not arising on contract. 6. For relief, on the ground of fraud, in cases heretofore only cognisable in the court of chancery, the cause of action not deemed to have accrued until discovery of the facts constituting the fraud. 7. Action may be brought in any of the courts of this State properly having jurisdiction thereof on any policies of insurance, either fire or life, whereby any person or property resident or situate in this State may be or may have been insured, or for or on account of any loss arising thereunder, from the date of such loss, or from the accrual of the cause or action under said policy, any clause or condition in the said policies or limitations therein contained to the contrary notwithstanding. Also civil actions for wrongful acts causing death. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3957.)

Within three years, must be brought, 1. An action against a sheriff, coroner, or constable, upon a liability incurred by the commission of an act in his official capacity, or by omission of official duty, including the non-payment of money collected on an execution. 2. An action upon a statute for a penalty or forfeiture, where the action is given to the party aggrieved.

Within two years, for libel, slander, assault, battery, or false imprisonment, and upon a statute for a forfeiture or penalty to the State.

Within one year, against a sheriff or other officer, for the escape of a prisoner arrested or imprisoned on civil process.

All actions for other relief within ten years.

An action for the balance due on mutual, open, current accounts accrues from the date of the last item proved in the account on either side.

If the person entitled to commence any action for the recovery of real property, or to make a defense thereto, be under the age of twenty-one years, or insane, or imprisoned on a criminal charge for a term less than for life, such action may be commenced or defense made after the period of ten years and within five years after the disability shall cease.

If a person entitled to bring any action other than for real property, except for a penalty or forfeiture or against a sheriff or other officer for an escape, shall at the time of the accrual of the right of action be under twenty-one years, or insane, or imprisoned on a criminal charge, or under sentence for a term less than life; the time of such disability is not a part of the time limited for commencement of the action, except that the time within which the action must be brought cannot be extended more than five years by any such disability except infancy, nor in any case beyond one year after the disability shall cease. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 148.)

If when the cause of action shall accrue the defendant shall be without the State, the action may be brought against him within the times limited after his return to the State. If he depart the State after right of action accrued, and remain away continually one year or more, the period of his absence is not counted. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 147.)

Code of Civil Procedure, § 144, annuls any clause in a contract providing for a less time in which suit may be brought on such contract other than the statute of limitations as to such causes of action.

Married Women. — Since the Constitution of 1895, married women have exactly the same rights as to property that men have; can make a will, convey or mortgage their property, or dispose of it in any way they please, without the consent of their husbands. By art. 17, § 9, Constitution of 1895, "The real and personal property of a woman held at the time of her marriage, or that which she may thereafter acquire, either by gift, grant, inheritance, devise, or otherwise, shall be her separate property, and she shall have all the rights incident to the same to which an unmarried woman or a man is entitled. She shall have the power to contract and be contracted with in the same manner as if she were unmarried."

She, however, is not bound to support her family if her husband be alive, and her separate property is not bound by the contracts of her husband, made for the support of the family or any other purpose, without her consent. See, also, Dower. Females become of age at twenty-one.

All the earnings and income of a married woman shall be her own separate estate and shall be governed by the same provisions of law as apply to her other separate estate. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3759.) The husband shall not be liable for the debts of the wife contracted prior to or after their marriage, except for necessary support and that of their minor children residing with her. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3761.) Criminal Code, § 697, provides: "That from and after the passage of this act, any able-bodied man who shall, without just cause or excuse, abandon or fail to supply the actual necessities of life to his wife or to his minor unmarried child or children dependent upon him, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be imprisoned for a term not exceeding one year, or be liable to a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars: provided, that if he, either before or after conviction, shall give bond, with one or more sureties, approved by the clerk of the court, in the sum of not less than three hundred dollars, conditioned upon his supporting and maintaining his said wife or said minor unmarried child or children, he shall not be imprisoned or the fine imposed until the condition of said bond is broken."

"Section 2. This act shall not be construed as repealing any rights or remedies now of force, under existing laws."

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 3744-3751, provides for marriage licenses.

Mechanics' Liens. — See Liens.

Mortgages and Trust Deeds. — Mortgages of realty, and deeds of trust in the nature of mortgages, are governed by the same rules as deeds, and all mortgages, or deeds in the nature of mortgages, whether of real estate or chattels, should be recorded within ten days after the execution thereof. Mortgages and leases relating to railroads must be recorded with the secretary of state. See Deeds. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3535, provides that no mortgage or deed having the effect of a mortgage, except mortgages or deeds of trust covering the whole or any part of the real or personal property of a railroad company, no judgment, decree, or other lien on real estate, shall constitute a lien upon any real estate after the lapse of twenty years from the date of the creation of the same: provided, that if during the continuance of such lien, the holder thereof cause to be recorded upon the record of such mortgage, or deed having the effect of a mortgage, or file with record of such judgment, decree, or other lien, a note of some payment on account, or some written acknowledgment of the debts secured thereby, with the date of such payment or acknowledgment, such mortgage or other lien shall be, and continue to be, a lien for twenty years from the date of record of any such payment on account or acknowledgment. It would be unsafe to assume that this gives judgments longer liens than provided in Code, § 348. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3535, provides that said section shall not apply to mortgages securing coupon bonds of corporations.

Mortgages of real property are usually accompanied by bonds. This, however, is not essential. See, also, Records; Interest.

Under Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3111, no railroad corporation which has previously issued bonds shall subsequently make or execute any mortgage upon its road equipment and franchises, or any of its property, real or personal, without including in and securing by such mortgage all bonds previously issued, and all preëxisting debts and liabilities of the corporation: provided that nothing in this section contained shall apply to a mortgage for the purchase-money of any such road equipment, franchise, or property, real or personal, or to a mortgage made or executed for the purpose, in whole or in part, of building, extending, improving, or equipping such railroad, or any part thereof, or any other railroad, the greater part of whose stock is held by it, or to any pledge or hypothecation of any choses in action or other securities held or owned by it; nor shall this section require that a mortgage executed by a corporation shall secure the payment of previously issued bonds or preëxisting debts and liabilities of the corporation, where the bonds to be issued under said mortgage are intended, in whole or in part, to take up, by funding or otherwise, such previously issued bonds or pre-existing debts and liabilities, or where such previously issued bonds or preëxisting debts and liabilities are secured by a preëxisting mortgage or other lien.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 4106, provides that mortgage of a crop shall be valid only for the year.

Personal property passes by mere delivery. If, however, a title be made by deed, but one witness is necessary. Every agreement between vendor and vendee, bailor and bailee, of personal property, whereby the vendor or bailor shall reserve to himself an interest in the property, must be in writing and recorded as mortgages are, or be null and void as to subsequent creditors (whether lien creditors or simple contract creditors) or purchasers for valuable consideration without notice; but this does not apply to livery stable keepers, innkeepers, or any person letting or hiring property for agricultural purposes, or a temporary use, or depositing such property for the purpose of having repairs or work or labor done thereon or depositing any personal property as a pledge or collateral to a loan. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3740.) See Chattel Mortgages.

Mortgages of realty are foreclosed by ordinary suit of complaint and summons. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3833, provides that judgment by default in cases of foreclosure may be rendered by the judges of the court of common pleas at chambers as in open court. Chattel mortgages are enforced by the mortgagee taking possession of the chattels and selling them. Mortgages by corporations, see Corporations.

Mortgages are discharged by a written satisfaction indorsed thereon by the mortgagee, executed with the same formalities as a deed, and recorded across the face of the original record of the mortgage.

[Form of Satisfaction.]

The State of South Carolina.

The bond which the within mortgage was executed to secure having been paid in full, I hereby declare the said mortgage satisfied and the lien thereof discharged.

Witness my hand and seal this day of 19

Signed, sealed, and delivered in the presence of

[Seal.]

By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3466, registers of mesne conveyances and clerks of court are required to enter the word "Canceled," together with the signatures of such officer, upon the margin of the indexes of real estate mortgages and chattel mortgages, respectively, when they are duly canceled of record by the mortgagee or his assignee; such cancellation and signature to be entered in the margin opposite the names of the mortgagor and mortgagee.

Mortgages on lands sold by order of court shall be marked satisfied by the clerk of court in the following form: "Lien released by sale under foreclosure the day of A. D. 19 . See judgment roll No. ." and signed by the clerk. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 1340, 1341.)

Notaries Public. — The governor is authorized to appoint as many notaries public throughout the State as the public good shall require, to hold their offices during the pleasure of the governor, and whose jurisdiction shall extend throughout the State. Every notary public shall have a seal of office, which shall be affixed to his instruments of publication and to his protestations; but the absence of such seal shall not render his acts invalid, provided his official title be affixed. He shall have power to administer oaths, take depositions and affidavits, protests for non-payment of bonds, notes, drafts, and bills of exchange, take acknowledgments and proofs of deeds and other instruments required by law to be acknowledged, and take renunciation of dower. He shall exercise no power or jurisdiction in criminal cases. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 732-737.) The clerk of court of common pleas and general sessions is the officer who certifies the official character of a notary public, when such certificate is required as to a notary in this State. See, also, Deeds and Dower as to notaries in other States.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law was adopted in this State by A. A. 1914, 668. The legal holidays are January 1, January 19, February 22, May 10, June 3, July 4, December 25, first Monday in September, national Thanksgiving Day, and all general election days; and in Charleston and Richland counties from 12 m. every Saturday. By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 4202, Thursday of Fair week in each and every year is constituted a legal holiday in all the counties in the State wheresoever the State Agricultural and Mechanical Society holds an annual fair.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 4207, provides that each first Monday in any month shall be a legal day for judicial sales or the transaction of any other legal business.

On all bills of exchange drawn on persons resident within the United States and without this State, and returned protested, the damages on such protested bill shall be ten per cent. on the sum drawn for. On all bills drawn on persons resident in any other part of North America, or in the West India Islands, and protested, the damages shall be twelve and one half per cent. On all bills drawn on persons in any other part of the world, and protested, the damages shall be fifteen per cent. If bills be payable in any other country and sued here, the jury can find the difference of exchange.

Practice. — A Code of Procedure was adopted which was almost an exact copy of the old New York Code, but it has been gradually subjected to alterations that conform in some measure to the former practice. See Revision.

The several courts established under the Code are: A court for trial of impeachment; a supreme court; two circuit courts — 1st, the court of common pleas, 2d, the court of general sessions; probate courts; courts of magistrates; special and municipal courts; and by Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, ch. LXXXVII., county courts may be established in certain counties. See Court Calendar for South Carolina.

The appointment of receivers is regulated by Code of Civil Procedure, § 303.

Proof of Claims. — There is no difference in the form or character of proofs of claims held by parties out of the State and those held by parties in the State. In a suit upon a money demand the plaintiff is entitled to the categorical answer of the defendant, admitting or denying the claim. If the claim be denied it must be proved. An open account is proved either by the production of the books of original entry, or by proof of the sale and delivery of the goods, or by the admission of the parties charged. A written instrument is established by the proof of the handwriting, and the production (without further or other proof) of the original of any and every instrument in writing (other than wills) required by law to be recorded shall always and everywhere be prima facie evidence of the execution and recording of such instrument: provided, that such instrument shall have been recorded in the manner and place and within the time prescribed by law for recording the same, and the recording thereof shall have been certified by the clerk of court or register of mesne conveyances; and provided, further, that any party or his attorney so producing any such recorded instrument shall have given at least ten days' previous notice in writing to the opposite party or his attorney of the intention so to produce any such recorded instrument with a description of the same. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 4001.) Absent witnesses residing without the county, or more than one hundred miles from the court-house, may be examined by deposition de bene esse or by commission, and so may infirm witnesses who cannot attend.

Security for costs can in every instance be required from a non-resident plaintiff before the defendant can be required to put in his defense. See, also, Claims against Estates.

Records. — All deeds affecting real estate, whether absolute or in the nature of mortgages, must be recorded in the county in which the land lies. All deeds of trust of personalty and chattel mortgages must be recorded in the county in which the maker of the deed resides. All instruments of similar character must also be so recorded. All instruments relating to railroads must be recorded with the secretary of state. See Deeds.

The place of record in every county but Charleston, Greenville, and Spartanburg is the office of the clerk of the court of common pleas. In Charleston, Greenville, and Spartanburg the proper office is that of register of mesne conveyances.

Third persons without actual notice are not affected by deeds and mortgages, unless recorded as required by law.

All deeds of conveyance of lands, tenements, and hereditaments, either in fee or for life; all deeds of trust or instruments in writing, conveying either real or personal estate, and creating a trust or trusts in regard to such property, or charging or incumbering the same; all mortgages or instruments in writing in the nature of a mortgage of any property, real or personal; all marriage settlements or instruments in the nature of a settlement of marriage; all leases or contracts in writing made between landlord and tenant for a longer period than twelve months; all statutory liens on buildings and lands for labor furnished or performed on them; all statutory liens on ships and vessels; all certificates of renunciation of dower; and generally all instruments in writing now required by law to be recorded in the office of the register of mesne conveyances, or clerk of court in those counties where the office of register of mesne conveyances has been abolished, or in the office of the secretary of state, delivered or executed on and after the first day of May, 1909, shall be valid so as to affect from the time of such delivery or execution the rights of subsequent creditors (whether lien creditors or simple contract creditors) or purchasers for valuable consideration without notice; only when recorded within ten days from the time of such delivery or execution in the office of the register of mesne conveyances (or clerk of court) of the county where the property affected thereby is situated, in the case of real estate; and in the case of personal property, of the county where the owner of such personal property resides, if he resides within the State, or, if he resides without the State, of the county where such personal property is situated at the time of the delivery or execution of such deeds or instruments. Provided, nevertheless, that recording and record of the above-mentioned deeds and instruments of writing subsequent to the expiration of said ten days shall from the date of such record have the same effect, as to the rights of all creditors and purchasers without notice, as if the said deeds or instruments of writing had been executed and delivered on the date of the record thereof. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3542; A. A. 1914, 482.) See Mortgages. Criminal Code, 1912, § 492, provides for record of contracts of personal service and advances thereunder. Property may be recorded under the Torrens System. (A. A. 1916, p. 942.)

Redemption. — There is no redemption of property sold under mortgage. See Taxes.

Replevin. — This action is unknown in this State. The action for claim and delivery of personal property has been substituted for it. In an action to recover the possession of personal property, the plaintiff may, at the time of issuing the summons, or at any time before answer, claim its immediate delivery to him. He or some one in his behalf must make an affidavit, showing that plaintiff is owner or lawfully entitled to the possession, stating the facts in respect to it, showing this: that the property is wrongfully detained by defendant; the cause of detention as far as known; that it has not been taken for a tax, assessment, or fine, or seized under execution or attachment, or, if so seized, that it is exempt; its value. The plaintiff must indorse on this affidavit a written order to the sheriff to take the property from defendant and deliver it to plaintiff. The sheriff with this affidavit and notice must also recover from plaintiff a written undertaking executed by one or more sureties to be approved by him, in double the value of the property, for the return of the property if such return be adjudged, and for the payment of such sum as shall be recovered from plaintiff. He shall then take the property and give it to plaintiff. "In an action to recover the possession of personal property, judgment for the plaintiff may be for the possession, or for the recovery of possession, or the value thereof, in case a delivery cannot be had, and of damages, both punitive and actual, for the detention. If the property has been delivered to the plaintiff, and the defendant claims a return thereof, judgment for the defendant may be for a return of the property, or the value thereof, in case return cannot be had, and damages, both actual and punitive, for taking and withholding the same; provided, that where either party gives bond for said property, as provided by law, no punitive damages shall be allowed for anything occurring after the giving of the bond." (Code of Civil Procedure, § 338.) Code of Civil Procedure, § 321, provides: "In every action for the recovery of personal property which has been pledged in any way to secure credit or debt, the defendant may plead his counter-claim arising out of the same transaction, and the jury in such case may find, in addition to the verdicts now provided by law, the amount due to the plaintiff, if any; and in such case the defendant shall have the right to pay said amount and costs, and the property shall thereafter be free from the incumbrance." Code of Procedure, § 321, provides for both actual and punitive damages. Code of Civil Procedure, § 486, provides for bond of indemnity or policy of assurance written by any surety or indemnity company duly incorporated and authorized to do business in this State, in lieu of sureties.

Revision. — The whole system of the law as heretofore existing in this State was changed by the act of the legislature of 1869-70. All forms of actions and pleadings at common law have been abolished, and distinction in form between actions at law and suits in equity no longer exist. A new revision was had in 1881-82, and another in 1893; and a new Constitution passed in 1895. By act 1912 a "Code of Laws of South Carolina, 1912" was declared to be the only general statutory law of the State on the 9th day of January, 1912.

Sale of Goods in Bulk. — See Assignments.

Service. — All civil actions in the courts of record are commenced by service of a summons. The form of summons is the same in all actions. The service must be, 1st, if against a corporation, upon the president or other head of the corporation, secretary, cashier, treasurer, a director or managing agent thereof; but such service can be made in respect to a foreign corporation only when it has property within the State, or the cause of action arose therein, or where such service shall be made in this State, personally upon the president, cashier, treasurer, attorney, or secretary, or any agent thereof (Code of Civil Procedure, § 184); 2d, if against a minor under the age of fourteen years, to such minor personally, and also to his father, mother, or guardian; or, if there be none within the State, then to any person having the care and control of such minor, or with whom he shall reside, or in whose service he shall be employed; 3d, if against a person judicially declared to be of unsound mind, or incapable of conducting his own affairs in consequence of habitual drunkenness, and for whom a committee or guardian has been appointed, to such committee or guardian, and to the defendant personally; 4th, in all other cases when the defendant is within the State, upon him personally. If the defendant be temporarily absent, service may be effected by leaving a copy of the summons with any one of the age of discretion at his place of residence or place of business; if he be permanently absent he must be served by publication under order of the court or judge thereof.

Service by Publication. — If the defendant cannot be found within the State, and that fact be made to appear by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court, or of a judge thereof, or of the clerk of the court of common pleas, master, or of the probate judge of the county in which the trial is to be had, and if it also appear by affidavit that a cause of action exists against such defendant, or that he is a proper party to the suit, such court or judge may grant an order that the service be made by publication of the summons in either of the following cases: 1. When the defendant is a foreign corporation and has property within the State, or the cause of action arose therein. 2. When the defendant, a resident of this State, has departed therefrom with intent to defraud his creditors, or to avoid service of the summons, or keeps himself concealed with like intent. 3. When, being a non-resident, he has property within the State, and the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter. 4. When the subject of the action is real or personal estate in which defendant claims a lien or interest, or when the relief demanded is in whole or part the exclusion of the defendant from any interest therein. The order directs the publication to be made in at least one newspaper most likely to give the defendant notice, for a period not less than three weeks. A copy of the summons must also be mailed to his place of residence, unless it can be made to appear that such place of residence cannot by due diligence be known. After the order for publication, personal service on the defendant is equivalent to the advertisement and deposit in the post-office. The defendant can defend at any time before judgment; and can come in at any time within one year's notice of and within seven years after rendition of judgment, and put in a defense on such terms as may be just. By Code of Civil Procedure, § 185, magistrates are empowered to grant orders of publication against absent defendants in actions brought in their courts, in the same manner and to the same extent as authorized to be done by the circuit court, etc., as above stated; provided, that the time of the publication of summons in magistrates' courts shall be once a week for not less than three weeks. (See A. A. 1913, p. 40; A. A. 1914, 534.)

Service may be made at any time without regard to terms of court; defendant must answer in twenty days, or judgment will go by default.

Stay of Execution. — A notice of appeal from a judgment directing the payment of money does not stay the execution unless the judge before whom the judgment was obtained grants a stay of execution. But the plaintiff, after notice of appeal, cannot enforce his execution without giving bond to the defendant, with sureties in double the value of the property levied on, or double the amount of the judgment, to pay all damages sustained by the defendant in case such judgment is reversed. Nor can he proceed after giving such bond if the defendant enter into bond with good sureties to pay plaintiff the debt, costs, and damages in case the judgment be sustained. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 385.) Code of Civil Procedure, § 391, provides that if judgment appealed from directs the sale or delivery of possession of real property, execution shall not be stayed unless a written undertaking be executed on the part of the appellant, with two sureties, to secure against waste; and when the judgment directs the sale of land to satisfy a mortgage or other lien, the undertaking shall provide also for rents; and if unimproved lands, for taxes and interest. Code of Civil Procedure, § 486, provides for bond of indemnity or policy of assurance or insurance written by any surety or indemnity company duly incorporated and authorized to do business in this State, in lieu of sureties.

Supplementary Proceedings. — Whenever an execution against a judgment debtor has been returned unsatisfied, or when after execution issued and before its return an affidavit is made that the judgment debtor has property which he will not apply to the judgment, the judge may require the debtor to appear and answer concerning the same. On such examination the debtor may be examined, and either party may call witnesses. The attendance of the defendant may be enforced by the sheriff in case it be made to appear by affidavit that the defendant is about to leave the State or conceals himself. And if upon the examination it appears to the judge that there is danger that he is about to leave the State, and that he has property, the defendant can be required to give bond with sureties that he will attend such examination; that he will not dispose of his property pending these proceedings, and in default of such an undertaking he may be committed to prison. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 351.) The judge may order any property of the judgment debtor in his own hands, or in those of any other person, to be paid on the judgment, except such property as is exempt from levy and sale and the earnings of the debtor for his personal service at any time within sixty days pending the order. (Code of Civil Procedure, § 355.) Code of Civil Procedure, § 486, provides for bond of indemnity or policy of assurance or insurance written by any surety or indemnity company duly incorporated and authorized to do business in this State, in lieu of sureties.

Tax Law. — Returns for assessment and taxation of property are made, by corporations as well as individuals, between January 1 and February 20 of each year, for property owned on January 1, to the county auditor and city assessor respectively, setting forth all property owned at that date. Assessments of real estate are made by the county board of assessors every four years. The next period for reassessment of real estate will be January, 1918. Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 430, authorizes board of equalization of the city of Charleston to order returns and assessments of real estate to be made in any year; and Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 300, provides: "That in cities having a population of fifty thousand inhabitants or over, such returns of real estate shall also be made between the 1st day of January and the 20th day of February in any intermediate year upon the order of the special board of equalization for such cities." Said returns are passed upon and corrected by the auditor and board of equalization, and if no return is made of personalty by the owner or his agent, the auditor makes it out and adds fifty per cent. penalty. The returns are afterwards submitted by the auditor to township boards of equalization and special boards of equalization for cities and towns. Special acts make some changes with regard to several counties of the State. All state and county taxes, and all taxes collected when state and county taxes are collected, are due and payable from October 15 to December 31, and if not paid on or before said time, a penalty of one per cent. thereon shall be added by the county auditor on the county duplicate and collected by the county treasurer; and if said taxes and assessments and penalties are not paid on or before February 1 next thereafter, an additional penalty of one per cent. thereon shall be added and collected; and if said taxes, assessments, and penalties are not paid on or before March 1 next thereafter, an additional penalty of five per cent. thereon shall be added and collected; and if said taxes, assessments, and penalties are not paid on or before March 15 next thereafter, the county treasurer shall issue his tax execution for the said taxes and assessments and penalties against the property of the defaulting tax-payer according to law. Provisions of this act do not apply to railroad taxes and assessments of any townships of this State that have heretofore issued bonds and coupons in aid of railroads which have not been completed through said township or townships. (A. A. 1902.) Each city and town regulates the time or times for payment of city and town taxes. Railroad, express, telegraph, and telephone companies are also required to make returns at the same time to the comptroller-general of the State. By Code of Laws, 1902, vol. 1, §§ 337-340, all returns of individuals, firms, or corporations engaged, or that may be hereafter engaged in this State, in the manufacture of textile fabrics of any kind, and canals providing power for rent or hire, and cotton-seed oil companies and fertiliser companies, and by Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 353, banks incorporated in this State which have branches in more than one county, after being passed on by the township and county boards of equalisation, shall be forwarded by the auditor, with such comments and suggestions as he shall see fit, to the comptroller-general as soon as the time for making returns has expired; and the comptroller-general shall submit the same to the state board of equalisation with his comments and suggestions, and said state board shall equalize the same in order to obtain uniformity of taxation upon property of such industries; and to that end may adopt and promulgate such rules and regulations as may be just and equitable. In case any return so laid before said state board is raised by it, then and in such case an adjourned meeting must be fixed by the board for hearing the party or corporation whose return is raised, and due notice thereof by mail must be given of said meeting to said party or corporation. When said state board shall have finally acted on said returns their action shall be certified to the comptroller-general, who shall transmit the same in so far as it affects the property of any county to the auditor of said county, who shall enter the same according to law on the tax books of his county. The state board of equalisation also equalizes taxes between the various counties, cities, towns, etc. Taxes for state purposes are a lien from 1st January in each year. Immediately upon the expiration of the time allowed by law for payment of taxes in any year, the county treasurer of each county issues in the name of the State a warrant or execution in duplicate against each defaulting tax-payer in his county, signed by him in his official capacity, directed to the sheriff of his county or his lawful deputy, requiring and commanding him to levy the same by distress and sale of so much of the defaulting tax-payer's estate, real or personal, or both, as may be sufficient to satisfy the taxes, state, school, county, and special, of such defaulter, specifying therein the aggregate amount of all his taxes, as well as the amount to each fund, and the sheriff takes from such defaulter certain fees in the execution of his office. Under and by virtue of said warrant or execution the sheriff seizes and takes exclusive possession of so much of the defaulting tax-payer's estate, real or personal, or both, as may be necessary to raise a sum of money named therein and said charges thereon, and after due advertisement sells the same before the court-house door of the county on a regular sales day and within the usual hours for public sales for cash; gives to the purchaser (upon his complying with terms of sale) a receipt for the purchase-money, but does not make title to the purchaser until the expiration of six months from the day of sale, if the property sold be not redeemed as hereinafter provided, and annexes said receipt to the duplicate warrant with the indorsement thereon of his action thereunder, and, after deducting from the proceeds of sale the costs and expenses of said sale, pays over to the county treasurer the taxes, charges, and penalties due and incurred by said defaulting tax-payer; and upon written notice given or information ascertained from the records, of any mortgage or other lien on said premises so sold for taxes, shall hold the excess, if any, until authorized or directed by proper judicial authority as to mode of disposition, or by the written consent of the defaulting tax-payer that the said excess be paid over to the mortgage or lien creditor, and according to priority if more than one: provided, that the owner or grantee, or any mortgage creditors, may within six months from the day of such sale redeem such property by paying to the sheriff the taxes, penalties, costs, and expenses of said sale, together with eight per cent. interest on the whole amount of the purchase-price of said lands so sold, and thereupon the sheriff shall pay back and refund to the said purchaser the amount paid on his bid, with interest as above stated, and the bid by said purchaser shall be then canceled and revoked, the owner or grantee remaining in possession of his said lands: provided, further, should any mortgagee redeem said land as above permitted, then the amount so paid by him for taxes, charges, costs, and penalties shall be added to the mortgage debt or other lien, with same incidents as to priority and the same rate of interest and collectible in the same way as the original mortgage debt. Upon failure of defaulting tax-payer or other party interested to redeem said land so sold for taxes within six months as stated, then the sheriff shall make title to the purchaser and put the purchaser in possession of the property sold and conveyed: provided, further, that in case of threatened waste or damage to the premises by the owner or any other party, during the six months allowed for redemption, the purchaser at said tax sale shall have the right to apply to the court of common pleas or a judge thereof for injunction against such waste and for a receiver to take charge of the property until the end of the six months for redemption unless sooner redeemed: provided, further, that in any case where the sheriff of any county shall have made a deed under the act approved the 20th day of February, 1901, and said land has been or shall be redeemed under the provisions of said act, it shall be the duty of the sheriff upon demand of the owner of said land to execute to said owner a deed of the land so redeemed, citing the proceedings under which said land was sold, and upon said deed being executed and delivered the title to said land shall revert to the owner as though said tax sale had never been made. (A. A. 1902.) And in case there be no bid equal in amount to the taxes named in said warrant or execution, the county auditor shall buy the land for the sinking fund commission as the actual purchaser thereof for the amount of said taxes and penalties, costs and charges, and the sheriff thereupon executes title to said sinking fund commission as to any other purchaser, and in the manner above provided, and puts them or their authorized agent in possession of the premises. The land so sold and purchased and delivered to said commission shall be treated by them as assets of the State in their charge, and be sold at such times and in such manner as by them shall be deemed most advantageous to the State. In all cases of sale the sheriff's deed of conveyance, whether executed to a private person, a corporation, or the sinking fund commission, shall be held and taken as prima facie evidence of a good title in the holder, and that all proceedings have been regular, and all requirements of the law have been duly and fully complied with. No action for the recovery of said land sold by the sheriff, or for the recovery of the possession thereof, shall be maintained unless brought within two years from the date of said sale. Provision is made for tax-payer who disputes the debt, and if he does not so proceed, all errors are waived. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 461-465, also 474, 475.)

Notice by the sheriff must be given a mortgagee in case of sale of real estate for taxes. (A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 699.)

A mortgagee may pay any delinquent taxes upon any property owned by a mortgagor, whether included in the mortgage or not, if lien attaches to mortgaged property, with all costs and penalties, and include the same, with interest thereon, in the debt secured by the mortgage. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 455. See, also, § 471.)

The city of Charleston can sell and make title to property for delinquent taxes, similarly to above provisions for State and county.

All taxes heretofore or hereafter levied or becoming due under the laws of this State after March 31, 1899, shall be conclusively presumed paid after ten years from the last date said taxes could have been paid without penalty, provided State does not institute judicial proceedings within the time limited above. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 478.)

Taxes upon property are in addition to the license fees mentioned as to foreign corporations. (See Corporations.) Taxes for township, school, municipal, and other purposes provided for or allowed by law shall be levied on the same assessment, which shall be that made for state taxes.

A. A. 1904 (p. 399) provides for special township road tax, not exceeding two mills, to supplement any special or other funds for like purposes, if desired; and Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 301, imposes a capitation tax of fifty cents annually on each dog, except in Horry County, where it is one dollar (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 1790), the proceeds of which shall be expended for school purposes in the several counties in which it is collected, said tax constituting a first lien in favor of the State on all property owned by any person who owes any such capitation tax.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3013 provides (A. A. 1909, 26 Stats. 124) "that whenever a municipal corporation shall levy and collect a tax for any specific purpose, it shall be unlawful for the officers or agents of any such municipal corporations to apply any of the proceeds of such tax levy to any other purpose than that for which it was collected until the same shall have been discharged or fulfilled or abandoned. Any municipal officer or agent violating the provisions of this act shall be fined in a sum of not less than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not less than six months, or both, in the discretion of the judge."

All bonds hereafter issued by any city, county, or school district shall be exempt from all taxes to the State, county, or other municipality. (A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 682.)

Testimony — Is either oral in presence of the court, the master, or referee, or by commission issued to commissioners by the clerk under seal of a court having jurisdiction of the cause, after ten days' notice to adverse party, or by deposition de bene esse.

Trust Deeds. — See Mortgages.

Trusts and Combinations — Made with a view to lessen, or which tend to lessen, full and free competition in the importation, sale, or manufacture of articles, or that may lessen or affect in any manner full and free competition in any tariff, rates, tolls, premiums, or prices, or seek to control them in any way in any branch of trade, business, or commerce, are prohibited, under penalties. (See Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 2437.)

Wills. — All wills and testaments of real and personal property shall be in writing, and signed by the party so devising the same, or by some other person in his presence and by his express directions, and shall be attested and subscribed in the presence of the said devisor, and of each other, by three or more credible witnesses, or else they shall be utterly void and of none effect.

Wills are recorded and letters testamentary issued in the office of the probate court of the county in which the deceased had his domicile.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3563, provides that "any person having right or title to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments whatsoever (persons of unsound mind and infants excepted) may dispose thereof by will, in writing, at his or her own free will and pleasure, except as hereinafter provided; but all wills or testaments made of any lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, by any person within the age of twenty-one years, idiot, or by any person de non sane memory, shall not be taken to be good and effectual in law." It has been decided that this section only relates to real estate and that males of fourteen and females of twelve can make wills of personalty.

Sec. 3570 provides: "If any person making a will shall afterwards marry, and die, leaving his widow or leaving issue of such marriage, unless the will shall have been made in contemplation of marriage expressed on its face, and shall contain a provision for future wife and children, if any, it shall be deemed and taken to be a revocation to all intents and purposes."

Sec. 3572 says: "If no provision shall be made by the will of the testator for any child or children that may be born after his death, such child or children shall be entitled to an equal share of all real and personal estates given to the other child or children, who shall contribute to make up such share or shares according to their respective interests or portions deriving to them under such will."

Sec. 3573. "Any child or children of any person, who may be born after the making and executing the last will and testament, but previous to the decease of such person, shall be provided for as by the preceding section."

Sec. 3574. "If any child should die in the lifetime of the father or mother, leaving issue, any legacy of personalty or devise of real estate given in the last will of such father or mother shall go to such issue, unless such deceased child was equally portioned with the other children by the father or mother when living."

Sec. 3575. "If any person who is an inhabitant of this State, or who has any estate therein, shall beget any bastard child, or shall live in adultery with a woman, the said person having a wife or lawful children of his own living, and shall give, by legacy or devise, for the use and benefit of the said woman with whom he lives in adultery, or of his bastard child or children, any larger or greater proportion of the real clear value of his estate, real or personal, after paying off his debts, than one fourth part thereof, such legacy or devise shall be null and void for so much of the amount or value thereof as shall or may exceed such fourth part of his real and personal estate."

Subject to above limitations, any one can leave the whole or any part of his or her property to charity, or otherwise, and can disinherit any or all children; but a man cannot by his will defeat his wife's claim of dower in his real estate. (See Married Women; Dower.)

No nuncupative will shall be good where the estate thereby bequeathed shall exceed the value of fifty dollars, that is not proved by the oaths of three witnesses, at the least, who were present at the making thereof, and bid by the testator to bear witness that such was his will, or words to that effect; nor unless such will was made in the last sickness of the deceased, in the house or place where he or she shall die. No testimony shall be admitted to prove any nuncupative will if six months shall have elapsed after speaking the pretended testamentary words, except such testimony or the substance thereof were committed to writing within six days after the making of the said will, and then twelve months shall be allowed, and no more, for the probate of such will. Kindred must be cited that they may contest. Any soldier being in actual military service, or any mariner or seaman being at sea, may dispose of his movables, wages, and personal estate, as he or they might have done at common law.

Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, § 3589, provides: "Wherever the word 'writing' is used in this title and chapter" (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, title v, chapter lxvii, §§ 3563-3589), "it shall be construed to include typewriting; and any and all wills and testaments heretofore or hereafter admitted to probate which may have been, or may be, in typewriting, are hereby validated and confirmed, and declared to be as effectual as they would have been had they been written by hand."

Wills must be delivered to the probate judge by person in possession within thirty days after knowledge of testator's death. (A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 765.)

SOUTH DAKOTA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by Messrs. Bailey & Voorhees, of Sioux Falls.

The next legislature convenes January 7, 1919.

The abbreviations used are as follows: P. C., Political Code; C. C., Civil Code; C. C. P., Code of Civil Procedure; Prob. C., Probate Code; J. C., Justice's Code; the same being the Revised Codes, edition of 1903.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — All civil actions must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest (C. C. P. § 80), except that an executor or administrator, a trustee of an express trust, or a person expressly authorized by statute, may sue without joining with him the person for whose benefit the action is prosecuted. (C. C. P. § 82.)

Things in action not arising out of contract are not assignable. Action by the assignee of a thing in action is without prejudice to any set-off or other defense existing at the time of, or before notice of, the assignment, except as to negotiable promissory note or bill of exchange, transferred in good faith, and upon good consideration, before due. (C. C. P. § 81.)

In the courts of record an action is commenced by serving a summons on the defendant personally, requiring him to answer within thirty days, (in municipal courts within ten days), and notifying him that if he fails to answer judgment will be taken against him; and if the defendant cannot conveniently be found, by leaving a copy thereof at his dwelling-house, in the presence of one or more of the members of his family over the age of fourteen years; or, if the defendant resides in the family of another, with one of the members of the family in which he resides over the age of fourteen years. (C. C. P. §§ 103, 104, 110.)

Service of summons may be made by publication, when it appears by affidavit, 1st, that the defendant is a foreign corporation, and has property within the State, or the cause of action arose therein; 2d, where the defendant, being a resident of this State, has departed therefrom, with intent to defraud his creditors, to avoid the service of a summons, or keeps himself concealed therein with the like intent; 3d, when he is not a resident of this State, but has property therein, and the court has jurisdiction of the subject of the action; 4th, when the subject of the action is real or personal property in this State, and the defendant has or claims a lien or interest, actual or contingent, therein, or the relief demanded consists wholly or partially in excluding the defendant from any interest or lien therein; 5th, where the action is for divorce, or for a decree annulling a marriage. The order must direct the publication to be made in some newspaper to be designated as most likely to give notice to the person to be served, and for such length of time as may be deemed reasonable, not less than once a week for six weeks. When publication has been ordered, personal service out of the State is equivalent to publication. Personal service of summons may be made upon a non-resident defendant out of the State without first obtaining an order for publication. Except in actions for divorce, the defendant against whom publication is ordered, or his representatives, may, upon good cause shown, be allowed to defend, after judgment, or at any time within one year after notice thereof, and within seven years after its rendition. (C. C. P. § 112.)

Accounts. — A pleading need not set forth items of account therein alleged; an itemized account, verified, if pleading is verified, must be served within ten days after written demand.

No actions shall be brought on a judgment of any court in this State, except a justice's court, between the same parties, without leave of the court, on a notice to the adverse party. (C. C. P. § 37.)

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits. — An affidavit may be made in and out of this State before any person authorized to administer an oath, and must be authenticated in the same way. (C. C. P. § 508.) See Depositions.

Allens. — Any person, whether citizen or alien, may take, hold, and dispose of property, real or personal, within this State. (C. C. § 193.)

Appeals. — Appeals may be taken from a judgment of a justice's court, to the circuit court, and in counties having a population of ten thousand or over to the county court, within thirty days; from a judgment, decree, or order of the county court, in probate proceedings, to the circuit court, within ten days, when the person interested is present, and within thirty days when not present; and from a final decision of the circuit or county court to the supreme court, within one year.

Arrest. — The defendant in a civil action may be arrested in the following cases: In an action for damages on a cause of action not arising out of contract, where the defendant is not a resident of the State, or is about to remove therefrom, or where the action is for an injury to person or character, or for injury to, or wrongfully taking, detaining, or converting property; in an action for a fine or penalty, or on a promise to marry, or for money received, or property embezzled or fraudulently misapplied, by a public officer, or attorney, or other person in a fiduciary capacity, or for any misconduct or neglect in office, or in a professional employment; in an action for the recovery of the possession of personal property, where the same is disposed of, or concealed, to prevent the same being found or taken by the sheriff; also, where the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in contracting the debt or incurring the obligation for which the action is brought, or has removed or disposed of his property, or is about to do so, with intent to defraud his creditors. But no female can be arrested, except for a willful injury to person, character, or property. Imprisonment for debt is abolished. An order of arrest may be granted by a judge of the court in which the action is brought, at the time of issuing the summons, or before judgment, when it appears by affidavit that the case is one of those above mentioned. The affidavit may be made by the plaintiff or some other person, and must be either positive or upon information and belief; and when upon information and belief, it must state the facts upon which the information and belief are founded. Security must be given in an amount fixed by the judge, not less than one hundred dollars, with an undertaking with or without sureties, duly proved or acknowledged, as a deed of real estate, which need not be signed by the plaintiff, and only by one surety. Sureties must justify as being residents and householders or freeholders within the State, and worth double the sum specified in the undertaking, over all their debts and liabilities and exclusive of all property exempt from execution by the laws of this State. (C. C. P. §§ 156-160.)

Assignments. — The national bankruptcy act of 1898 has practically suspended the operation of this law. For the statute law on this subject, however, see this Directory for 1900, or C. C. §§ 2372-2392.

Attachment — May issue in all actions against a foreign corporation which has not complied with the laws of this State relative to the appointment of agents upon whom service of process may be made (see Corporations); or against a defendant who is not a resident of this State, or against a defendant who has absconded or concealed himself; or whenever the defendant is about to remove any of his or its property from the State; or has assigned, disposed of, or secreted, or is about to assign, dispose of, or secrete, any of his or its property, with intent to defraud his creditors. The plaintiff, at the time of the issuing of the summons, or at any time afterwards, may have the property of the defendant attached as a security for the satisfaction of such judgment as he may recover. The warrant is granted by the clerk of the court in which the action is brought, upon affidavit made by the plaintiff, or other person having knowledge of the facts, specifying the amount of the claim and the grounds thereof; and stating, in the words of the statute, that the defendant is either a foreign corporation or not a resident of this State, or has departed therefrom, with intent to defraud his creditors, or to avoid the service of a summons, or keeps himself concealed therein with the like intent; or that the debt was incurred for property obtained under false pretenses; or that such corporation or person has removed, or is about to remove, any of his or its property from the State with intent to defraud his or its creditors; or has assigned, disposed of, or secreted, or is about to assign, dispose of, or secrete, any of his or its property with the like intent, whether such defendant be a resident of this State or not. Plaintiff must give security in an amount not less than two hundred and fifty dollars, and equal to the amount of the claim specified in the affidavit by undertaking, with sufficient surety to be approved by the clerk of the court. (C. C. P. §§ 205-210.)

A non-resident can obtain an attachment against a non-resident, on the ground of the latter's non-residency.

Real and personal property may be attached, including debts, credits, money, and bank-notes, except property exempt from execution. (C. C. P. § 210.)

Attachment may issue, in an action on a claim, before it is due, when the debtor has or is about to dispose of his property, or is about to remove his property, or a material part thereof, with the fraudulent intent to cheat or defraud his creditors, or to hinder or delay them in the collection of their claims, or when the debt was incurred for property obtained under false pretenses. (C. C. P. § 226.)

The execution of the attachment upon any such rights, shares, or any debts or other property incapable of manual delivery to the sheriff, must be made by leaving a certified copy of the warrant of attachment with the president or other head of the association or corporation, or the secretary, cashier, or managing agent thereof, or with the debtor or individual holding or occupying such property, with a notice showing the property levied on. (C. C. P. § 216.)

The responsibility of principal and surety on undertaking, when the attachment is vacated, is the damages actually sustained in consequence of the attachment. The undertaking, also, covers all costs in the main action. (C. C. P. § 208.)

Attachment liens on the same property have priority in the order in which the attachments are delivered to the officer for execution.

Blue Sky Law. — See Sales of Securities.

Bulk Sales. — See Sales in Bulk.

Chattel Mortgages. — A mortgage of personal property can be created only by a writing subscribed by a mortgagor. A mortgage of personal property is void as against creditors of the mortgagor and subsequent purchasers and incumbrancers of the property in good faith and for value, unless it is filed by depositing the original, or an authenticated copy thereof, in the office of the register of deeds of the county where the property mortgaged or any part thereof is at such time situated; and it ceases to be valid, as against creditors of the mortgagor and subsequent purchasers or incumbrancers in good faith, after the expiration of three years from the filing thereof, unless within thirty days next preceding the expiration of such term a copy of the mortgage, and a statement of the amount of the existing debt for which the mortgagee or his assigns claims a lien, sworn to and subscribed by him, his agent, or attorney, are filed anew; this renews for three years more.

A mortgage of personal property must be signed by the mortgagor in the presence of two persons, who must sign the same as witnesses thereto, and no further proof or acknowledgment is required.

Chattel mortgages may provide to cover property to be acquired; provided, however, that in case of crops they must be grown within one year.

Chattel mortgages are foreclosed by public sale of the property, on six days' notice, by publication in newspaper nearest the place of sale, or by action in the circuit court.

Personal property mortgaged may be taken under attachment or execution issued at the suit of a creditor of mortgagor; before the property is so taken, the officer must pay or tender to the mortgagee the amount of the mortgage debt and interest, or must deposit the amount thereof with the county treasurer, payable to the order of the mortgagee. (C. C. §§ 2072-2102.)

It is made a felony for any mortgagor, or his legal representatives, when his mortgage remains in force, to willfully destroy, remove, conceal, sell, or in any manner dispose of, or materially injure, the property, or any part thereof, without the written consent of the then holder of the mortgage, and he may be imprisoned for a period not to exceed three years and fined not to exceed five hundred dollars.

Provisions in chattel mortgages to create liens on real estate are void. (C. C. § 2103.)

Whenever any chattel mortgage has been satisfied, the mortgagee, or his assignee, must, within thirty days thereafter, file in the office of the register of deeds of the county in which said mortgage is filed a release and satisfaction thereof in full, which satisfaction must bear the names of two witnesses; if the mortgagee, or his assignee, shall fail to file a release and satisfaction as aforesaid, when a chattel mortgage has been satisfied, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars. (C. C. § 2094.)

The mortgagee of each chattel mortgage at the time of the making and delivery of the mortgage must prepare and give to the mortgagor a true copy of the mortgage without additional charge. Every chattel mortgage shall be void unless it appears upon the mortgage over the signature of the mortgagor that a true copy of the mortgage has been delivered to and received by him; and unless such delivery and receipt of a copy of the mortgage appears over the mortgagor's signature the mortgage cannot be filed. (C. C. §§ 2091-2092.)

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims.

Claims against the Estates of Deceased Persons. — Every executor or administrator must, immediately after his appointment, cause to be published in some newspaper of the county where the estate is probated, if there be one, if not, then in such newspaper as may be designated by the court, a notice to the creditors of the decedent, requiring all persons having claims against him to exhibit them, with the necessary vouchers, to the executor or administrator, at the place of his residence or business, to be specified in the notice. Such notice must be published as often as the judge shall direct, but not less than once a week for four weeks. The time expressed in the notice must be six months after its first publication, when the estate exceeds in value the sum of five thousand dollars, and four months when it does not.

All claims except mortgage claims on real property must be presented within the time limited in the notice; and any claim not so presented is barred forever. If a claimant had no notice by reason of being out of the State, the claim may be presented at any time before a decree of distribution is entered.

Every claim that is due when presented to the administrator must be supported by the affidavit of the claimant, or some one in his behalf, that the amount is justly due, that no payments have been made thereon which are not credited, and that there are no offsets to the same, to the knowledge of the claimant or affiant.

If the claim be not due when presented, or be contingent, the particulars of such claim must be stated. When the affidavit is made by a person other than the claimant, he must set forth in the affidavit the reason why it is not made by the claimant. If the claim is founded on a bond, bill, note, or any other instrument, a copy of such instrument must accompany the claim, and the original instrument must be exhibited if demanded, unless it is lost or destroyed, in which case the claimant must accompany his claim by his affidavit, containing a copy or particular description of such instrument, and stating its loss or destruction. If the claim or any part thereof is secured by a mortgage or other lien which has been recorded or filed, it is sufficient to describe it, and refer to the date of its filing, and volume and page of its record.

When a claim is presented to the executor or administrator, he is within ten days to indorse thereon his approval if he is satisfied that it is a valid claim against the estate, and present it to the county judge for his approval. If it is also approved by the county judge, it is filed as an acknowledged indebtedness of the estate. If the executor or administrator or the judge fail or refuse to approve the claim, it is to be filed as a contested claim against the estate. After the expiration of the time designated in the published notice to creditors for the presentation of claims, the executor or administrator makes a report of contested claims. The county court thereupon appoints a time for hearing upon such contested claims, of which notice is given by posting and also by mailing to the claimants. At the hearing the court takes the evidence and either allows or rejects the claim or allows it in part and rejects the remainder.

When a claim is rejected by the court, the claimant can bring suit thereon within three months after such rejection, and if not due, within three months after it becomes due. (Prob. C. §§ 167-176.)

Both residents and non-residents may act as administrators of estates, but a married woman cannot act. Aliens can act as administrators and executors.

Administration must be granted to some one or more of the persons hereinafter mentioned, and they are respectively entitled thereto in the following order: 1, the surviving husband or wife, or some competent person whom he or she may request to have appointed; 2, the children; 3, the father or mother; 4, the brother; 5, the sister; 6, the grandchildren; 7, the next of kin entitled to share in the distribution of the estate; 8, the creditors; 9, any person legally competent. Of several persons claiming and equally entitled to administration, males must be preferred to females, and relatives of the whole blood to those of the half blood. If any person entitled to administration is a minor, letters must be granted to his or her guardian, or to any person entitled to letters of administration, in the discretion of the court.

Administrators and executors, when the bond is not waived by the will, must, before letters are issued, execute a bond with two or more resident sureties, of not less than twice the value of the personal property, and of the probable value of the annual rents, profits, and issues of the real property belonging to the estate.

In all estates, whether solvent or insolvent, when the deceased was a resident, exempt property or money to the amount of seven hundred and fifty dollars must be set apart to the surviving wife or husband, or the minor child or children of the deceased. An additional allowance may be set apart for the support of the family, in the discretion of the court.

Personal representatives must make a full account and report of their administration, at the expiration of one year from their appointment.

The debts of the estate must be paid in the following order: 1, funeral expenses; 2, expenses of the last sickness; 3, expenses of administration; 4, debts due by decedent personally to servants and employees for services rendered within sixty days next preceding his death; 5, debts having preference by the laws of the United States; 6, all other demands against the estate, except that liens for demands existing by mortgage, pledge, attachment, judgment or execution levy shall have preference, according to their respective priorities, to the extent of such demand on any specific property on which such lien shall have attached. See Homestead.

Consignments. — No penal statute relating to consignees.

Corporations. — Corporations are formed under general laws, or a special law for a particular class of corporations, by filing certificate and doing certain other acts. (C. C. § 397.) The fees of secretary of state for filing and recording articles of incorporation and issuing charter vary from ten to one hundred and fifty dollars, according to amount of capitalization. (Laws, 1907, ch. 149.) Each stockholder is individually and personally liable for the debts of the corporation only to the extent of the amount that is unpaid upon the stock held by him, for which joint and several actions lie. (C. C. § 441.)

Stockholders of banking corporations are individually liable, equally and ratably, not one for another, for the benefit of creditors of the bank to the amount of their stock at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in their stock. Such liability continues for one year after any transfer of stock, as to the affairs of the bank at the time and prior to the date of the transfer. (L. 1909, ch. 222.)

Corporations may be formed for mining, manufacturing, and other industrial pursuits, and for any other lawful business, railroads, wagon-roads, irrigating ditches, colonization and improvement of lands, colleges, seminaries, churches, libraries, and for benevolent, charitable, scientific, insurance, banking, building-loan, trust, and guaranty purposes. The board of directors consists of not less than three nor more than eleven directors, chosen from the stockholders or members. One of the directors or officers must be a resident of the State. Mining, manufacturing, and other industrial corporations are limited to twenty-five years. Religious and charitable corporations cannot acquire or hold real estate to exceed fifty thousand dollars in value. The stock of corporations may be transferred by indorsement, but such transfer is not valid, except between the parties thereto, until so entered upon the books of the corporation. Stock may be assessed, after one fourth of the capital stock has been subscribed. Married women may hold and transfer stock. The stock of a corporation may be increased or diminished. There is no provision as to the amount of capital stock which must be paid in at the time of organisation.

No foreign corporation (except railroad corporations, corporations or associations created solely for religious or charitable purposes, insurance companies and fraternal or beneficiary corporations, societies, orders and associations furnishing life or casualty insurance or indemnity upon the mutual or assessment plan, or a corporation whose business in the State consists exclusively in loaning money on real estate security) shall transact any business, or acquire, hold, or dispose of property in the State, or sue or maintain any action at law or otherwise in any of the courts of the State, until it has filed in the office of the secretary of state a duly authenticated copy of its articles of incorporation, a statement of its organisation and condition, and an appointment of the secretary of state as its agent, authorised to accept service of process, and upon whom service of process may be made in any action in which said corporation is interested. Such foreign corporation is required to pay (besides the fee for filing its articles of incorporation) one dollar for every one thousand dollars of its capital stock exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars employed in the State. An annual statement is to be filed in January. There are special provisions relating to railroads, insurance companies, and other classes of corporations. A foreign corporation which has so complied with the foreign corporation laws of the State can hold title to land in the State, and it is probable that a foreign corporation which has not so complied with the foreign corporation laws of the State can hold title to land in the State unless the State itself sees fit to question the title. The supreme court of the State has held that compliance with the foreign corporation law is not necessary in the case of a corporation engaged in interstate commerce, so far as interstate commerce contracts are concerned, and the United States Supreme Court has held that the corporation can maintain an action in the courts of the State on such contracts without complying with the foreign corporation law.

Every grant of corporate power is subject to alteration, suspension, and repeal. (C. C. § 398.)

Corporations for educational, benevolent, charitable, or scientific purposes may elect such number of trustees or directors, not less than three, as they may in their articles of incorporation provide. (C. C. § 753.)

There is no annual state tax. The property of the corporation is taxed as if it were owned by an individual. No reports are required to be made to any public official for purposes of assessment and taxation, except the statement to the assessor as in the case of an individual. There are no provisions for the taxation of foreign corporations transacting business in or having property within the State, except in the case of railroad, telegraph, telephone, sleeping-car, and express companies, which are assessed by the state tax commission, and insurance companies, which are assessed upon their premium receipts. Other foreign corporations are not required to make any report of their business, and so far as their property in this State is concerned, the same is assessed in the same manner as the property of domestic corporations and individuals, — that is to say, in the taxing district or districts in which the property is located. Such foreign corporations do not have to pay a license tax and the tax is not based upon a proportion of the capital stock or a percentage on receipts, but only the property of the corporation within the taxing districts where the same may be assessed. The assessment is made by the assessor of the taxing district the same as in the case of domestic corporations and individuals. As to time for payment of taxes, penalty, etc., see Tax Law. See also Inheritance Tax.

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for South Dakota.

Curtesy. — See Dower.

Deeds. — Conveyance may be made by husband to wife, or wife to husband; all rights of dower or curtesy are abolished. The wife need not join in a conveyance of land belonging to her husband, nor is it necessary that the husband shall join in conveyance of land belonging to his wife, except homesteads, in which case, if the owner is married, and both husband and wife are residents of the State, both must convey. It is quite customary, however, for husband and wife to join in a conveyance, as it avoids the necessity of proving that the land conveyed is not a homestead, and creates less confusion without the State where dower and curtesy are general.

An estate in real property, other than an estate at will, or for a term not exceeding one year, can be transferred only by operation of law, or by an instrument in writing, subscribed by the party disposing of the same, or by his agent thereunto authorized by writing. The execution of a grant of such estate in real property, if it is not duly acknowledged, must, to entitle the grant to be recorded, be proved by a subscribing witness or as otherwise provided by law.

A written instrument is presumptive evidence of consideration.

Witnesses or seals are not necessary to the validity of a deed or other instrument affecting title to real property, except wills. (C. C. §§ 938 and 1006.)

A quitclaim deed, unless restricted by express terms therein, is in effect a special warranty deed. (L. 1909, ch. 179.)

Deeds which do not contain the post-office address of the grantee are not entitled to record. (L. 1911, ch. 257.)

The proof or acknowledgment of an instrument may be made at any place within this State before a justice, clerk of the supreme court, or notary public. The proof or acknowledgment of an instrument may be made in the judicial circuit, county, subdivision, or city for which the officer was elected or appointed, before either a judge or clerk of a court of record, a mayor of a city, a register of deeds, or a justice of the peace, or a United States district court commissioner, or county auditor.

The proof or acknowledgment of an instrument may be made without the State but within the United States, and within the jurisdiction of the officer, before either a justice, judge, or clerk of any court of record of the United States, or of any State or Territory; a notary public, or any other officer of the State or Territory where the acknowledgment is made, authorized by its laws, to take such proof or acknowledgment; or by a commissioner appointed for the purpose by the governor of this State, pursuant to the Political Code.

The proof or acknowledgment of an instrument may be made without the United States before either an ambassador, a minister, commissioner, or chargé d'affaires of the United States, resident and accredited in the country where the proof or acknowledgment is made; a consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of the United States resident in the country where the proof or acknowledgment is made; a judge, clerk, register, or commissioner of a court of record of the country where such proof or acknowledgment is made; or a notary public of such country; an officer authorized by the laws of the country where the proof or acknowledgment is taken. When any of the officers above mentioned are authorized by law to appoint a deputy, the acknowledgment or proof may be taken before such deputy.

Proof of the execution of an instrument, when not acknowledged, may be made either by the party executing it, or either of them, or by a subscribing witness, or by other witnesses in certain cases.

Officers taking and certifying acknowledgments or proof of instruments for record must authenticate their certificates by affixing thereto their signatures, followed by the names of their offices; also their seals of office, if by the laws of the Territory, State, or country where the acknowledgment or proof is taken, or by authority of which they are acting, they are required to have official seals. Judges and clerks of courts of record must authenticate their certificates as aforesaid, by affixing thereto the seal of their proper court; and mayors of cities by the seal thereof. No certificate of the official character of the officer is needed when the acknowledgment is taken out of the State. When an acknowledgment is taken in foreign country before a notary or other officer, it is not necessary for the United States consul to certify the official character of such officer. Notaries public should have seals.

[Seal.] (C. C. §§ 970-983.)

For an acknowledgment by an attorney in fact, use the general form to the words "described in," then add, "and whose name is subscribed to the within instrument as the attorney in fact of and acknowledged to me that he subscribed the name of thereto as principal, and his own name as attorney in fact." (C. C. § 981.) Acknowledgments may be either written, printed, or typewritten, and may be pasted on the instrument.

Depositions. — The deposition of any witness may be used only in the following cases: 1. When the witness does not reside in the county where the action or proceeding is pending or is sent for trial by change of venue or is absent therefrom. 2. When from age, infirmity, or imprisonment, the witness is unable to attend court, or is dead. 3. When the testimony is required upon a motion, or in any other case where the oral examination of the witness is not required. Either party may commence taking testimony by depositions at any time after service upon the defendants.

Depositions may be taken in this State before a judge or clerk of the supreme court, or circuit court, or before a justice of the peace, notary public, United States district court commissioner, or any person empowered by a special commission. If out of the State, by any judge, justice, or chancellor, or clerk of any court of record, justice of the peace, notary public, mayor, or chief magistrate of any city or town corporate, a commissioner appointed by the governor of this State to take depositions, or any person authorized by a special commission from any court of this State.

The officer before whom depositions are taken must not be a relative or attorney of either party, or otherwise interested in the event of the action or proceeding.

Prior to taking of any depositions, unless taken under a special commission, a written notice, specifying the action or proceeding, the name of the court or tribunal in which it is to be used, and the time and place of taking the same, shall be served upon the adverse party, his agent or attorney of record, or left at his usual place of abode. The notice shall be served so as to allow the adverse party sufficient time, by the usual route of travel, to attend, and one day for preparation, exclusive of Sunday and the day of service, and the examination may, if so stated in the notice, be adjourned from day to day. When the party against whom the deposition is to be read is absent from or a non-resident of the State, and has no agent or attorney of record therein, he may be notified of the taking of the deposition by publication or by personal service outside of the State. The deposition must be written by the officer, or in his presence by the witness, or some disinterested person, and must be subscribed by the witness. The deposition so taken shall be sealed up and indorsed with the title of the cause and the name of the officer taking the same, and by him addressed and transmitted to the clerk of the court where the action or proceeding is pending. It shall remain under seal until opened by the clerk by order of the court, or at the request of a party to the action or proceeding or his attorney.

Depositions taken in pursuance of this chapter by any judicial or other officer authorized to take depositions, having a seal of office, whether resident in this State or elsewhere, shall be admitted in evidence upon the certificate and signature of such officer, under seal of the court of which he is an officer, or his official seal; and no other or further act or authentication shall be required. If the officer taking the same have no seal, the deposition, if not taken in this State, shall be certified and signed by such officer, and shall be further authenticated, either by parol proof, adduced in court, or by the official certificate and seal of any secretary or other officer of state keeping the great seal thereof, or of the clerk or prothonotary of any court having a seal, attesting that such judicial or other officer was at the time of taking the same authorized to take the same. But if the deposition be taken within or without this State under a special commission, it shall be sufficiently authenticated by the official signature of the officer or commissioner taking the same.

The officer taking the deposition shall annex thereto a certificate showing the following facts: that the witness was first sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; that the deposition was reduced to writing by some proper person (naming him); that the deposition was written and subscribed in the presence of the officer certifying thereto; that the deposition was taken at the time and place specified in the notice, and that the officer taking the same is not an attorney for or relative of any party to the suit or in any way interested therein.

Any court of record of this State, or any judge thereof, is authorized to grant a commission to take depositions within or without this State. The commission must be issued to a person or persons therein named, by the clerk, under the seal of the court, granting the same, and depositions under it must be taken upon written interrogations, unless the parties otherwise agree. Depositions that are not taken under a commission are not to be taken upon written interrogations.

Every deposition intended to be read in evidence on the trial must be filed at least one day before the trial. (C. C. P. §§ 509-523.)

When the adverse party appears at the taking of a deposition, exceptions other than for incompetency or irrelevancy should be stated and a memorandum thereof made in the record by the officer taking the deposition.

Depositions should not be taken stenographically and afterwards typewritten without consent of parties.

Descent. — When any person dies intestate, his property, except the homestead and certain personal property, after payment of debts and expenses of administration, unless limited by marriage contract, is distributed as follows: 1. If the decedent leave a surviving husband or wife, and only one child, or the lawful issue of one child, in equal shares to the surviving husband or wife and child, or issue of such child. If the decedent leave a surviving husband or wife, and more than one child living, or one child living, and the lawful issue of one or more deceased children, one third to the surviving husband or wife and the remainder in equal shares to his children and to the lawful issue of any deceased child, by right of representation; but if there be no child of the decedent living at his death, the remainder goes to all of his lineal descendants; and if all the descendants are in the same degree of kindred to the decedent, they share equally, otherwise they take according to the right of representation. If the decedent leave no surviving husband or wife, but leave issue, the whole estate goes to such issue, and if such issue consists of more than one child living, or one child living and the lawful issue of one or more deceased children, then the estate goes in equal shares to the children living, or to the child living and the issue of the deceased child or children, by right of representation. 2. If the decedent leave no issue and the estate does not exceed in value the sum of five thousand dollars, all the estate goes to the surviving husband or wife; if the estate exceeds five thousand dollars, then the first five thousand dollars to the survivor, and of all property in excess of five thousand dollars in value, one half goes to the surviving husband or wife, and the other half goes to the decedent's father and mother in equal shares, and if either is dead the whole goes to the other, but if neither survive then such portion goes in equal shares to the brothers and sisters of the decedent and to the children or grandchildren of any deceased brother and sister, by right of representation. If the decedent leave no issue, nor husband nor wife, the estate must go to his father and mother in equal shares, or, if either is dead, then to the other. 3. If there be no issue, nor husband, nor wife, nor father, nor mother, then in equal share to the brothers and sisters of the decedent, and to the children of any deceased brother or sister by right of representation. 4. If the decedent leave a surviving husband or wife, and no issue, and no father nor mother nor brother nor sister, the whole estate goes to the surviving husband or wife. 5. If the decedent leave no issue, nor husband nor wife, and no father nor mother nor brother nor sister, the estate must go to the next of kin, in equal degree, excepting that when there are two or more collateral kindred in equal degree, but claiming through different ancestors, those claiming through the nearest ancestors must be preferred to those claiming through an ancestor more remote. However, 6. If the decedent leave several children, or one child and the issue of one or more children, and any such surviving child dies under age and not having been married, all the estate that came to the deceased child by inheritance from such decedent descends in equal shares to the other children of the same parent, and to the issue of any such other children who are dead, by right of representation. 7. If, at the death of such child who dies under age, not having been married, all the other children of his parents are also dead, and any of them have left issue, the estate that came to such child by inheritance from his parent descends to the issue of all other children of the same parent; and if all the issue are in the same degree of kindred to the child they share the estate equally; otherwise, they take according to the right of representation. 8. If the decedent leave no husband, wife, or kindred, the estate escheats to the State, for the support of the common schools. (L. 1913, ch. 333.) The degree of kindred is established by the number of generations, and each generation is called a degree. Kindred of the half blood inherit equally with those of the whole blood, unless the inheritance came to the intestate by descent, devise, or gift of some one of his ancestors, when those of the half blood are excluded. (C. C. §§ 1092-1103.)

When the homestead ceases to be used as a homestead, it is distributed as other property.

An inheritance tax law has been in force since July 1, 1905. See Inheritance Taxes.

Divorce. — There are two statutes regulating divorces, one covering the "annulment" of marriages, the other the "dissolution" of marriages.

Marriages can be annulled: 1. When the party in whose behalf the annulment is sought was under the age of legal consent and such marriage was contracted without the consent of parents or guardian. 2. When a former husband or wife of either party was living and the marriage with such former husband or wife was in force. 3. When either party was of unsound mind. 4. When the consent of either party was obtained by fraud. 5. When the consent of either party was obtained by force. 6. When either party was at the time of the marriage physically incapable of entering into the marriage state, and such incapacity continues and appears to be incurable. Voluntary cohabitation after the removal of the cause for annulment is a bar to such an action. Actions for annulment for causes 1, 4, 5, and 6 must be commenced within four years after the marriage, or after arriving at an age at which a legal marriage could be contracted. Where a marriage is annulled upon the ground that a former husband or wife is living, or upon the ground of insanity, children begotten before the judgment of annulment are legitimate, and succeed to the estate of both parents. The custody of the children of a marriage annulled on the ground of fraud or force is awarded to the innocent parent, and the court may provide for their education and maintenance out of the property of the guilty party. A judgment of nullity of marriage is conclusive as against the parties to the marriage and those claiming under them. No specified length of residence in the State is required before an action to annul a marriage can be instituted. An actual residence is sufficient.

Marriages may be dissolved for any of the following causes: 1. Adultery. 2. Extreme cruelty. 3. Willful desertion. 4. Willful neglect. 5. Habitual intemperance. 6. Conviction for felony. Willful desertion is defined as "the voluntary separation of one of the parties to the marriage from the other, with intent to desert." Willful neglect is the "neglect of the husband to provide for his wife the common necessities of life, he having the ability to do so, or it is the failure to do so by reason of idleness, profligacy, or dissipation." Extreme cruelty is defined to be "the infliction of grievous bodily injury or grievous mental suffering upon the other by one party to the marriage." Habitual intemperance is defined to be "that degree of intemperance from the use of intoxicating drinks which disqualifies the person a great portion of the time from properly attending to business, or which would inflict a course of great mental anguish upon the innocent party." Willful neglect, willful desertion, and habitual intemperance must continue for one year before either is a ground for divorce.

An action for the dissolution of a marriage can be instituted only after the plaintiff shall have been an actual resident in good faith of this State for one year and of the county wherein such action is commenced for three months next preceding the commencement of the action, provided, however, that if the cause of action arises in this State the action may be commenced at any time after the plaintiff shall have resided in the State for a period of six months, and provided further that if the parties were married in this State and the plaintiff shall have resided therein from the time of marriage until the commencement of the action, such action may be commenced at any time after the cause of action has arisen. In case personal service is obtained upon the defendant, either within the State or without the State, the defendant is in default at the expiration of thirty days from the date of service if no appearance be made, and the action can then be tried and a decree entered forthwith. All trials upon the merits in contested actions must be had at a regular term of court, but this provision does not apply to default cases. If service is by publication only, without personal service either within or without the State, the defendant is not in default until the expiration of seventy-two days from the date of the first publication, and in such case no decree can be granted until after the plaintiff shall have been a resident of this State for one year.

Actions for dissolution of marriages must be brought in the county of which the plaintiff is a resident, but this provision does not apply to actions for annulment of marriages, which, when brought against a non-resident, can be brought in any county of the State the plaintiff may elect regardless of the place of residence of the plaintiff. If the defendant, after being served, defaults, the action can be tried either in term time or before the judge in chambers.

No decree can be entered upon the mere default of the defendant, or upon the uncorroborated statement, admissions, or testimony of the parties. Corroborating evidence may be given by witnesses present in court or may be by depositions.

Dower. — Dower and curtesy are abolished.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Executions. — Executions issue of course at any time within five years after judgment; after five years leave of the court must be obtained, unless an execution issued within the five years has been returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, in which event another execution can be issued without leave.

Land levied upon need not be appraised. Lands cannot be sold until the officer causes public notice to be given of the time and place of sale once a week for at least thirty days before the day of sale, by advertisement in some newspaper printed in the county.

Execution must be returned within sixty days after its receipt by the officer. Lands sold on execution may be redeemed at any time within one year from time of sale. (C. C. P. §§ 328-335.)

Executions issued by a justice of the peace must be returned within thirty days, and may be issued at any time within five years of entry of judgment. (J. C. § 81.)

Exemptions. — The following property is absolutely exempt from attachment or mesne process, and from levy and sale on execution, and from any other final process issued from any court: All family pictures; a pew or other sitting in any house of worship; a lot or lots in any burial ground; the family bible, and all school-books used by the family, and all other books used as a part of the family library not exceeding in value two hundred dollars; all wearing apparel and clothing of the debtor and his family; the provisions for the debtor and his family necessary for one year's supply, either provided or growing, or both, and fuel necessary for one year; the homestead as created, defined, and limited by law. In addition to the above-mentioned property, the debtor, if the head of a family, may, by himself or his agent, select from all other of his personal property, not absolutely exempt, goods, chattels, merchandise, money, or other personal property, not to exceed in the aggregate seven hundred and fifty dollars in value, and if a single person, not the head of a family, three hundred dollars in value, which is also exempt.

Instead of the seven hundred and fifty dollar exemption, the debtor, if the head of a family, may select and choose the following property, which shall then be exempt, namely: All miscellaneous books and musical instruments for the use of the family, not exceeding two hundred dollars in value; all household and kitchen furniture, including beds, bedsteads, and bedding, used by the debtor and his family, not exceeding two hundred dollars in value; and in case the debtor shall own more than two hundred dollars' worth of such property, he must select therefrom such articles to the value of two hundred dollars, leaving the remainder subject to legal process; two cows, five swine, two yoke of oxen or one span of horses or mules, twenty-five sheep and their lambs under six months old, and all wool of the same, and all cloth or yarn manufactured therefrom, the necessary food for the animals hereinbefore mentioned for one year, either provided or growing or both, as the debtor may choose; also, one wagon, one sleigh, two plows, one harrow, and farming machinery and utensils, including tackle for teams, not exceeding twelve hundred and fifty dollars in value; the tools and implements of any mechanic, whether a minor or of age, used and kept for the purpose of carrying on his trade or business, and, in addition thereto, stock in trade not exceeding two hundred dollars in value. The library and instruments of any professional person, not exceeding three hundred dollars in value.

The avails of life insurance policies issued payable to the order, assigns, or estate of the insured, and not assigned, are to the extent of five thousand dollars absolutely exempt to the surviving husband, or wife or children of the insured, free of all claim by creditors of the insured. (C. C. § 728.)

No personal property is exempt, except that absolutely exempt from execution for laborer's or mechanic's wages, or physician's bills, or for necessities of life (including only food, clothing, and fuel), or for debt incurred for property obtained under false pretenses, except that in the case of physician's bills and necessities of life, household and kitchen furniture not exceeding in value four hundred dollars and two cows are also exempt.

Except those made absolute, the exemptions do not apply: To a corporation for profit; to a non-resident; to a debtor who is with his family removing from the State, or who has absconded, taking with him his family. A partnership firm can claim but one exemption of seven hundred and fifty dollars in value, or the alternative property when so applicable, instead thereof, out of the partnership, and not a several exemption for each partner. (C. C. P. § 363.) After the debtor's death, such exempt property is set apart for the benefit of the surviving wife or husband, or the minor children, and is not liable for any prior debts or claims against the decedent, except when there are no assets available for the payment of the necessary expenses of his last illness, funeral charges, and expenses of administration. (Prob. C. §§ 153-154.)

No property is exempt from execution for the purchase-money of the same property. (C. C. P. § 362.)

Garnishment. — At the time of the issuance of a summons, or at any time thereafter before final judgment, in any action to recover damages founded upon contract, express or implied, or upon judgment or decree, or at any time after the issuing in any case of an execution against property and before the time when it is returnable, the plaintiff may institute garnishment proceedings in any court having jurisdiction of the subject of the action, against any person, including a public corporation, who shall be indebted to or have any property whatever, real or personal, in his possession or under his control, belonging to the defendant. In order properly to protect his interests the garnishee must answer and give such attention as may be necessary to the proceedings. (L. 1909, ch. 156.)

Homestead. — The homestead of the head of every family resident in this State, whether owned by the husband or wife, so long as it remains a homestead, is absolutely exempt, except for taxes and debts created for the purchase thereof. If within a town plat it must not exceed one acre in extent, and if not within a town plat it must not embrace in the aggregate more than one hundred and sixty acres, with the house and buildings appurtenant thereon; and is limited to five thousand dollars in value. (C. C. P. § 345.) If the homestead is claimed upon land, the title or right of possession to which was acquired or is claimed under the laws of the United States relating to mineral lands, the area of the homestead, if within a town plat, must not exceed one acre, and if without a town plat must not exceed forty acres. If the title to the homestead has been acquired as a placer claim but has been acquired under the laws of Congress as a lode mining claim, the area of the homestead must not exceed five acres. (L. 1909, ch. 136.) Such exemption continues after the debtor's death, for the benefit of the surviving husband or wife and children; and if both husband and wife be dead, till the youngest child becomes of age. (Prob. C. § 153.)

Inheritance Taxes. — An inheritance tax is imposed upon any transfer of property, real, personal, or mixed, or any interest therein or income therefrom in trust or otherwise, to any person, association, or corporation, except county, town, or municipal corporations within the State, for strictly county, town, or municipal purposes: (1) When the transfer is by will or by intestate laws of this State from any person dying possessed of the property while a resident of this State; (2) when the transfer is by will or intestate laws of property within this State or within its jurisdiction, and the decedent was a non-resident of this State at the time of his death; (3) when the transfer is of property made by a resident or by a non-resident when such non-resident's property is within this State or within its jurisdiction, by deed, grant, bargain, sale, or gift made in contemplation of the death of the grantor, vendor, or donor, or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after such death. The tax is imposed when any such person or corporation becomes beneficially entitled in possession or expectancy to any property or the income thereof. The amount of the tax depends upon the value of the property and the degree of relationship.

The county court of the county having jurisdiction to grant letters testamentary or other administration upon the estate of the decedent whose property is chargeable with a tax under the Inheritance Tax Law, or to give ancillary letters thereof, has jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions relating to inheritance taxes.

The state tax commission, whose office is maintained at the State Capitol at Pierre, South Dakota, has general charge and supervision over the collection of the inheritance taxes. The county treasurers are collectors of inheritance taxes for their respective counties.

Personal property in this State owned by a non-resident at the time of his death can be transferred by the personal representative of the decedent only after procuring from the tax commission a certificate consenting to the transfer, which certificate is issued only in case there is no inheritance tax due, or, in case there is such tax, when the same has been paid to the county treasurer.

No assignment or transfer by foreign executor or administrator of any stock or obligation in this State standing in the name of the decedent or in trust for the decedent, which is liable to the inheritance tax, shall be valid until the tax is paid. No South Dakota corporation shall transfer on its books shares of its capital stock standing in the name of a non-resident decedent or in trust for a non-resident decedent without the consent of the tax commission first procured.

The tax commission is authorized to stipulate as to the value of property subject to an inheritance tax.

Insolvent Law. — See Assignments.

Interest. — The legal rate of interest is seven per cent. Parties may contract for a higher rate, not to exceed twelve per cent. In real estate loans, however, the rate, including commissions, must not exceed ten per cent. A person taking, receiving, retaining, or contracting for any higher rate of interest than at the rate of twelve per cent. shall forfeit all the interest so taken, received, retained, or contracted for. Usury is a misdemeanor, punishable with a fine of five hundred dollars, or six months' imprisonment, or both. Interest on open accounts commences from time of last item charged, either debit or credit.

Interest is payable on judgments recovered in the courts of this State at the rate of seven per cent. per annum. (C. C. §§ 1416-1420.)

Judgments. — A judgment of a court of record, or of a justice's or municipal court, if transcribed to the circuit court, is a lien on real estate of the defendant except the homestead, in the county where the same is docketed, for ten years from the time of docketing the judgment in the county where it was rendered. (C. C. P. § 321.) Judgments recovered in other States and Territories are proved by an exemplification of the record, attested by the clerk, and the seal of the court annexed, if there be a seal, together with a certificate of the judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate that the attestation is in due form.

Judgments may be obtained in thirty days after service of summons in actions in a court of record, but in ten days after such service in the municipal court, and in four days after service of summons in actions in a justice's court, if there be no defense interposed.

Attorney's fees, in accordance with a scale of fees prescribed by statute, can be taxed up in judgment when provided for in mortgages, but not in notes or other obligations. Judgments can only be rendered in open court, but all courts are always open for the entry of judgments.

Judgments without regard to when rendered have priority according to docketing.

License. — No license is required of a commercial traveler.

Liens. — Mechanic's Lien. — No person is entitled to a mechanic's lien who takes collateral security on the same contract.

Whoever contributes to the improvement of real estate by performing labor or furnishing skill, material, or machinery for the erection, alteration, repair, or removal of any buildings, fixtures, bridge, fence or other structure thereon or for grading, filling in or excavating the same or for digging or repairing any ditch, drain, well, cistern, reservoir, or vault thereon, or for laying, altering, or repairing any sidewalk, curb, gutter, paving, sewer, pipe, or conduit, in or upon the same, or in or upon the adjoining half of any highway, street, or alley, upon which the same abuts, has a lien upon said improvement and upon the land on which it is situated, or to which it may be removed for the price or value of such contribution. The lien shall cease at the end of ninety days after doing the last of such work or furnishing the last item of such skill, material, or machinery, unless within such period a statement of the claim therefor is filed with the clerk of the circuit court of the county in which the improved premises are situated. (If, however, the claim is made against certain classes of public service corporations, the statement of the claim under some circumstances is to be filed for record with the secretary of state.) The lien cannot be enforced in any case unless the holder thereof asserts the same within six years after the date of the last item of the claim as set forth in the recorded lien statement, either by complaint in an action brought to foreclose the lien or by answer in some appropriate action.

Limitations. — An action by the State of South Dakota respecting real property must be commenced within forty years. An action for the recovery of real property or the possession thereof must be commenced within twenty years. (C. C. P. §§ 40, 43.) Actions other than for the recovery of real property can only be commenced within the following periods after the cause of action shall have accrued. Within twenty years: an action upon a judgment or decree of this State, and upon a sealed instrument. (C. C. P. § 58.) Within fifteen years: an action to foreclose a real estate mortgage, whether it is a sealed or an unsealed instrument, and whether it contains a power of sale or not. (L. 1909, ch. 293.) Within ten years: an action upon a judgment or decree of any court of the United States, or of any State or Territory within the United States, other than this State. (C. C. P. § 59.) Within six years: actions upon a contract, obligation, or liability, express or implied, excepting those mentioned in §§ 58 and 59, C. C. P.; actions upon a liability created by statute other than a penalty or forfeiture; for trespass on real property, for taking, detaining, or injuring any goods or chattels, including actions for specific recovery of personal property; an action for criminal conversation, or for any other injury to the person or rights of another, not arising on contract, and not hereinafter enumerated; for relief, on the ground of fraud, in cases which heretofore were solely cognisable by the court of chancery, the cause of action in such case not to be deemed to have accrued until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud. Within three years: an action against the sheriff, coroner, or constable, upon a liability incurred by the doing of an act in his official capacity and by virtue of his office, or by the omission of an official duty, including the non-payment of money collected upon an execution; and upon a statute for a penalty or forfeiture, when the action is given to the party aggrieved, or to such party and the people of this State, except where the statute imposing it prescribes a different limitation. (But this section does not apply to an action for an escape.) Within two years: an action of slander, libel, assault, battery, or false imprisonment; actions upon the statute for a forfeiture or penalty to the people of this State. Within one year: all actions against a sheriff or other officer for the escape of a prisoner arrested or imprisoned on civil process. (C. C. P. §§ 60-63.)

These limitations do not affect actions to enforce the payment of bills, notes, or other evidences of debt issued by moneyed corporations, or issued or put in circulation as money. (C. C. P. § 78.) No acknowledgment or promise shall be sufficient evidence of a new or continuing contract, whereby to take the case out of the operation of the statute of limitation, unless the same be in writing, signed by the party to be charged thereby; but this does not alter the effect of any payment of principal or interest. A payment of principal or interest, or acknowledgment in writing signed by the party to be charged, will revive a debt or claim.

An action is commenced, as to each defendant, when the summons is served on him, or on a co-defendant who is a joint contractor or otherwise united with him. An attempt to commence an action is deemed equivalent to the commencement thereof, when the summons is delivered, with the intent that it shall be actually served, to the sheriff or other officer of the county in which the defendants, or one of them, usually or last resided. (C. C. P. § 68.) If when the cause of action accrued against any person he is out of the State, the limitation does not begin to run until his return; and if when the cause of action has accrued such person shall depart from and reside out of the State, the time of his absence shall not be deemed or taken as any part of the time limited for the commencement of such action. (C. C. P. § 69.) If a person die before the expiration of the limitation, an action may be commenced by his representatives, after such expiration, and within one year from his death; or an action may be commenced against his representatives after such expiration, and within one year after the issuing of letters testamentary or of administration. (C. C. P. § 71.)

Married Women. — A married woman may own, in her own right, real and personal property, acquired by descent, gift, or purchase, and manage, sell, convey, and devise the same to the same extent and in same manner as if she was unmarried. Contracts may be made by a married woman, and liabilities incurred, and the same enforced by or against her, to the same extent and in the same manner as if unmarried. Neither husband nor wife has any interest in the property of the other, but neither can be excluded from the other's dwelling. Either husband or wife may enter into any engagement or transaction with the other, or with any other person, respecting property, which either might enter into if unmarried; subject, in transaction between themselves, to the general rules which control the actions of persons occupying confidential relations with each other as defined by the law of trusts. A husband and wife may hold real or personal property together jointly, or in common. Neither husband nor wife, as such, is answerable for the acts of the other.

The earnings of the wife are not liable for the debts of the husband; and the earnings and accumulations of the wife, and of her minor children living with her or in her custody, while she is living separate from her husband, are the separate property of the wife. The separate property of the husband is not liable for the debts of the wife contracted before the marriage. The separate property of the wife is not liable for the debts of her husband, but is liable for her own debts, contracted before or after marriage.

The husband and wife are jointly and severally liable for the agreed purchase price or the reasonable value, as the case may be, of all necessities of life, consisting of food, clothing and fuel purchased by either of them for their family while they are living together as husband and wife.

A married woman may buy and sell goods, give notes or other obligations, and sue and be sued, same as if unmarried. (C. C. §§ 94-104.) See, also Dower.

Women attain their majority at eighteen. (C. C. § 10.)

Moratorium. — A State Moratorium Act is in effect which supplements and in some respects is more liberal than the National Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act.

Mortgages. — A mortgage of real property can be created, renewed, or extended only by writing, with the formalities required in the case of grant of real estate; the wife need not join, only in mortgage of homestead. Mortgages containing power of sale may be foreclosed, by advertisement, without the intervention of the court, and the premises sold at public auction to satisfy the mortgage debt. Provided, however, that such foreclosure must be commenced within fifteen years after the cause of action shall have accrued. (L. 1909, ch. 293.) Mortgages may be foreclosed by action and a personal decree obtained in the same action against the mortgagor for any deficiency from the debt and costs arising on the sale of the mortgaged premises. A recorded mortgage may be discharged by an entry in the margin of the record thereof, signed by the mortgagee, or his personal representative or assignee, acknowledging the satisfaction of the mortgage in the presence of the register of deeds, or upon the record by a certificate stating the names of the mortgagor and mortgagee, the date of the mortgage, the date of recording the mortgage, the county, State, book, and page where recorded, and a full description of the premises sought to be released, duly executed, acknowledged, or proved and certified and recorded, same as the mortgage. The mortgagor has possession of the premises during the year of redemption after the sale. A mortgage of a homestead shall be of no validity unless the husband and wife, if the owner is married and both husband and wife are residents of this State, concur in and sign the same joint instrument. In case of foreclosure the same right of redemption exists as in the case of sale under execution, and also the further right that if, at the expiration of one year from the date of sale, the mortgagor or his successor in interest shall pay all the taxes due on the land, and all interest due under the provisions of the mortgage, and interest for one year in advance, then the time of redemption shall be extended for one year. See Redemption.

Mortgages and assignments thereof are not entitled to record unless they contain the post-office address of the mortgagee or the assignee, as the case may be. (L. 1911, ch. 257.)

Mortgages are not usually accompanied by bonds to secure payment of deficiency on foreclosure, but personal judgment may be entered for deficiency on confirmation of sale.

A mortgagee must state in the mortgage his post-office address before recording the mortgage; and every assignee or other owner or holder of any real estate mortgage must, within thirty days after becoming the owner thereof, file with the register of deeds of the county where such mortgage is recorded a statement showing the page and volume where such mortgage is recorded and his name and post-office address, and no interest shall become due and collectible by the mortgagee or owner of any mortgage upon any real estate in South Dakota until these provisions have been complied with.

An assignment and a satisfaction of a real estate mortgage must describe the mortgaged premises.

A party foreclosing a mortgage by advertisement shall be allowed an attorney's fee of not exceeding twenty-five dollars if foreclosed by a resident attorney, and not to exceed twenty-five dollars if foreclosed by action, unless issue be joined in the action, in which case the court can fix a reasonable fee. (C. C. P. § 413.)

Notaries Public. — Are appointed by the governor for a term of four years, upon application made to the secretary of state. A bond in the sum of five hundred dollars is required. Seals are required. Their jurisdiction extends throughout the State.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The uniform negotiable instruments law has been in effect since July 1, 1913. (L. 1913, ch. 279.)

Days of grace are abolished.

Every Sunday, January 1st, February 12th, February 22d, May 30th, July 4th, the first Monday in September, December 25th, every day of a general election throughout the State, and every day appointed by the President of the United States or the governor of this State as a day of Thanksgiving or fasting, are holidays for all purposes relating to the presentation for payment or acceptance and the protest and giving of notice of dishonor of bills of exchange, drafts, checks, orders and promissory notes. Bank or mercantile paper falling due on any of the said days is payable on the next succeeding business day. Instruments falling due on Saturday are to be presented for payment on the next succeeding business day, except that instruments payable on demand may at the option of the holder be presented for payment before twelve o'clock noon on Saturday when that entire day is not a holiday.

Non-negotiable instruments are assignable by indorsement thereon or by other writing, and the action by the assignee shall be without prejudice to any set-off or other defense existing at the time of or before notice of the assignment.

Notes, the consideration of which is in whole or in part medical treatment or medicine, must bear thereon an indorsement stating that the note was given for medical treatment or medicine and also that it is non-negotiable. To dispose of or sell such a note until all of the medical treatment or all of the medicine for which it is given has been furnished is a misdemeanor. Notes given for premiums or assessments for mutual hail insurance, for patent rights, or for lightning rods are non-negotiable and must bear an indorsement across the face in red ink showing the express nature of the consideration.

Judgment notes are not allowed. Time instead of demand notes are recommended. Any provision contained in any note, bond, mortgage, or other evidence of debt for the payment of an attorney's fee is declared to be against public policy and void.

Practice. — The civil practice of the State is regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure, the Criminal Practice by the Code of Criminal Procedure, and the probate practice by the Probate Code.

Proof of Claims. — Sent for collection may be made by deposition or by oral examination in court. See also Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Persons sending claims to South Dakota for collection should be careful to furnish their attorney with the full name, christian and surname, and residence of the party in whose name the suit is to be brought. If the claim belongs to a partnership, the full name, christian and surname, and residence of each member of the firm, should be furnished. The attorney should be furnished with the names of the witness or witnesses by whom the claim can be established, and the sale and delivery of the goods proved. The affidavit of the party is not admissible evidence to prove the value, sale, and delivery of goods. If the claim is disputed, it must be proved and established by the testimony of witnesses taken upon deposition after notice, or by oral examination of witnesses in court.

Records. — Every conveyance of real property, other than a lease for a term not exceeding one year, is void as against any subsequent purchaser or incumbrancer, including an assignee of a mortgage, lease, or other conditional sale of the same property, or any part thereof, in good faith and for a valuable consideration, whose conveyance is first duly recorded. All instruments of conveyance of real property must be recorded with the register of deeds of the county in which the real property affected thereby is situated. (C. C. §§ 985, 986.)

Redemption. — All real property sold on execution, foreclosure of mortgage, or under decree, or any part sold separately, is subject to redemption and may be redeemed by the following persons or their successors in interest: 1. The judgment debtor or mortgagor, or his successor in interest, in the whole or any part of the property. 2. A creditor having a lien by judgment or mortgage on the property sold, or on some share or part thereof, subsequent to that on which the property was sold. The creditors mentioned in the second subdivision are termed redemptioners.

The judgment debtor, mortgagor, or redemptioner may redeem the property from the purchaser within one year after the sale, on paying the purchaser the amount of his purchase with seven per cent. interest thereon, together with the amount of any assessment or taxes which the purchaser may have paid thereon after the purchase, and interest at the same rate on such amount; and if the purchaser be also a creditor having a prior lien to that of the redemptioner, other than the judgment or mortgage under which such purchase was made, the amount of such lien, with interest. In case of mortgage foreclosure the purchaser may, during the period allowed for redemption, pay instalments of interest or principal upon any prior or superior mortgage and insurance premiums which shall become due during such period and any amounts so paid are added to the sum necessary to be paid for the redemption from the sale. If property be so redeemed by a redemptioner, another redemptioner may, within sixty days after the last redemption, again redeem it from the last redemptioner, on paying the sum paid on such last redemption, with the like interest thereon in addition, and the amount of any assessment or taxes which the last redemptioner may have paid thereon after the redemption by him, with like interest on such amount, and in addition the amount of any liens held by said last redemptioner prior to his own, with interest; but the judgment on which the property was sold need not be so paid as a lien. The property may be again, and as often as a redemptioner is so disposed, redeemed from any previous redemptioner, within same time after the last redemption, and on the same terms. (§§ 375-377.) Provided that if, at the expiration of one year from the date of sale under foreclosure by advertisement, order, judgment, or decree of court, the mortgagor or his successor in interest shall pay all the taxes due on the land, and all interest due under the provisions of the mortgage, at the rate of interest originally provided for in the mortgage and interest for one year in advance, then the time of redemption from such sale shall be extended for one year. (C. C. P. § 646.) See Tax Law.

Replevin. — Personal property may be replevied at the time the summons is issued, or at any time before answer, upon plaintiff, or some one in his behalf, making an affidavit stating that the plaintiff is the owner of the property (describing it), or is entitled to the possession thereof; that it is wrongfully detained; the alleged cause of detention according to his best knowledge or information and belief; and that it has not been taken for a tax, assessment, or fine pursuant to a statute, or seized under execution or attachment against the plaintiff; or, if so seized, that it is exempt from such seizure, and also stating the actual value of the property. An undertaking must be given in double the value of the property, executed by one or more sufficient sureties. At any time before the delivery of the property to the plaintiff, the defendant may require the return thereof, upon giving security in double the value of the property. (C. C. P. §§ 184-189.)

Reports, Judicial. — Territory of Dakota, vols. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6. South Dakota, 39 volumes.

Revision. — The laws of the Territory of Dakota were revised and codified by a commission appointed by the legislative assembly of Dakota Territory in 1875-76, and adopted by the legislative assembly of said Territory in 1877, and they are principally embraced within the Political Code, the Civil Code, the Code of Civil Procedure, the Probate Code, the Justices' Code, the Penal Code, and the Code of Criminal Procedure of said Territory, which were compiled in 1887, and the compilation, where not in conflict with Revised Codes 1877 and subsequent Session Laws, made admissible in evidence in 1889. All laws of the Territory of Dakota, not inconsistent with the Constitution, were adopted by this State. (Laws 1890, ch. 105.) Since the compilation of 1887 the Session Laws which have been in force in the State of South Dakota are the following: those of the session of the Territory of Dakota of 1889 and those of the sessions of the State of South Dakota of 1890, 1891, 1893, 1895, 1897, 1899, 1901, 1903, 1905, 1907, 1909, 1911, 1913, 1915, and 1917, and the special war session of 1918. The legislature of 1901 authorized a general revision by a commission appointed at that session. The commission reported and submitted to the legislature of 1903 a set of Revised Codes which were adopted and went into effect July 1, 1903. The statute law of the State is now embraced in said Revised Codes of 1903 and in the Session Laws of 1903, 1905, 1907, 1909, 1911, 1913, 1915, and 1917, and the special session of 1918.

Sales in Bulk. — The purchaser of a stock of merchandise in bulk or otherwise than in the ordinary course of trade must notify each creditor named in a list to be given by the seller to the purchaser before the seller accepts any consideration on account of the sale. Such notification of the creditor by the purchaser must be given not less than seven days before the purchaser pays the seller the consideration for the sale. The consideration or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the claims of creditors must be held by the purchaser in trust for the use of the creditors. Creditors share pro rata in the distribution of the consideration where the aggregate amount of their claims exceeds the amount of the consideration. Such a purchaser who fails to comply with the provisions above described is liable to any creditors of the seller for the pro rata share of the proceeds of the sale to which such creditor is entitled. A creditor whose name is omitted by the seller from the list so to be given the purchaser may notify the purchaser of his claim and thereby places himself on parity with other creditors as to such part of the proceeds of the sale as are held by the purchaser at the time he receives such notice. It is a misdemeanor for a seller knowingly or willfully to omit from such list of creditors the name of a creditor. The law does not apply to sales by executors, administrators, receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, or any public officer under judicial process or in an official capacity. (L. 1913, ch. 116.)

Sales of Securities. — A so-called Blue Sky Law has been in force since July 1, 1913 (L. 1913, ch. 319). It is stringent in its provisions and applies to persons, firms, corporations, associations, and organisations in the sale or the negotiating for the sale of stocks, bonds, or other evidences of property in any firm, corporation, association, copartnership, or organisation for profit. Application for a license must be made to the state securities commission which was created by the law and is composed of the attorney-general, the commissioner of insurance, and the public examiner. As the law is comprehensive and penalties are provided for its violation, it should be carefully examined before attempting to comply with it and before selling such securities in the State. Except in some specified cases the law does not apply to domestic corporations or national or domestic state banks unless they actually engage in the business of selling such securities.

Service of Summons. — See Actions.

Stay of Execution. — There are no stay laws; but an execution may be stayed by order of the court, for irregularity, or by injunction or pending the determination of a motion for a new trial or the perfecting of an appeal, or by appeal with security given.

Supplementary Proceedings. — When an execution has been returned unsatisfied, plaintiff is entitled to an order for the appearance and examination of debtor; or it may be obtained at any time after the issuing of execution, upon proof, by the affidavit of plaintiff or otherwise, that any judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply toward the satisfaction of the judgment. If any property is thus discovered, it may be levied upon, and if in the hands of others the court may order it delivered up and applied toward the satisfaction of the judgment; and may also appoint a receiver of debtor's property, forbid the transfer or other disposition of the same, and may order equitable interests in real estate to be sold. (C. C. P. § 398.)

Tax Law. — All taxable property shall be listed and assessed each year at its true and full value in money at the place of listing, on or as of the first day of May. The assessor completes the assessment roll on or before the fourth Monday in June, whereupon the roll is filed in the office of the town, township, or city clerk of the taxing district, where it remains open to inspection for one week. During this week the board of equalization of the taxing district perfects, corrects, and equalizes the assessment. On or before the first Monday in July the assessment roll is filed with the auditor of the county and on the first Tuesday in July the board of equalization of the county meets to pass upon the assessment. The assessment rolls or lists must be filed with the auditor of the State on or before the fourth Monday in July, and on the first Monday in August the state tax commission meets to equalize the assessments. The taxes become due and payable on the first day of January, and delinquent on the first day of April following, and draw interest at the rate of one per cent. per month thereafter. On the second Monday in December after taxes become delinquent, the treasurer offers the lands for sale, after publishing a notice of sale once in each week for three consecutive weeks, next preceding the sale, in a newspaper in his county, if there be one; if not, after posting notice of sale for three weeks previous to the same. The owner or occupant of any land sold for taxes, or any other person, may redeem the same at any time within two years after the day of such sale, or at any time before the execution of the deed of conveyance thereof by the county treasurer, by paying the county treasurer, for the use of the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, the sum mentioned in the certificate, and the interest thereon at a rate up to twelve per cent. per annum, depending on the terms of sale, from the date of purchase, together with all other taxes subsequently paid, whether for any year or years previous or subsequent to said sale, and interest thereon at the same rate from the date of such payment. If no person shall redeem such lands within two years, at any time after the expiration thereof, and after sixty days' notice to the owner and person in possession, and on production of the certificate of purchase and proof of said notice, and after having purchased all prior tax certificates held by the county on said land, the treasurer of the county shall execute to the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, in the name of the State, a deed of the land remaining unredeemed, subject, however, to all the claims which the State may have thereon for taxes, liens, or incumbrances. Such deed shall be conclusive evidence of the truth of all the facts therein recited, and prima facie evidence of the regularity of all the proceedings, from the valuation of the land by the assessor up to the execution of the deed. Proceedings to secure a tax deed must be commenced within six years after the date of the tax sale certificate on which the proceedings are based. The sale of lands for taxes shall not be invalid on account of such lands having been listed or charged on the duplicate in any other name than that of the rightful owner.

Taxes upon real property are made a perpetual lien thereupon against all persons and bodies corporate, and taxes due from any person upon personal property shall be a lien upon any real property owned by such person, or to which he may acquire a title. All taxes for preceding years shall, as between vendor and purchaser, become a lien upon real property on and after the first day of January in each year.

Testimony or Evidence. — A party to an action is a competent witness, both in his own behalf and at the instance of the adverse party.

A husband or wife cannot be examined for or against the other without his or her consent; nor can either, during the marriage or afterwards, be, without the consent of the other, examined as to any communication made by one to the other during the marriage; but this section does not apply to a civil action or proceeding by one against the other, nor to a criminal action or proceeding for a crime committed by one against the other, nor to any action brought by the husband or wife against any person to recover damages for criminal conversation with the other, or for the alienation of the affection of the other, or for any cause that involves the moral reputation of the other.

In civil actions or proceedings by or against executors, administrators, heirs at law, or next of kin, in which judgment may be rendered, or order entered, for or against them, neither party shall be allowed to testify against the other, as to any transaction whatever with, or statement by, the testator or intestate, unless called to testify thereto by the opposite party. (C. C. P. § 486.)

Torrens Law. — A so-called Torrens Land Registration and Title Act has been in effect since July 1, 1917. The owner is not required to register his land under the act and the act is optional in character.

Trust Deeds — Are not in general use in this State.

Trusts. — Express trusts may be created for any of the following purposes: To sell real property and apply or dispose of the proceeds in accordance with the instrument creating the trust; to mortgage or lease real property for the benefit of annuitants or other legatees, or for the purpose of satisfying any charge thereon; to receive the rents and profits of real property, and pay them to or apply them to the use of any person, whether ascertained at the time of the creation of the trust or not, for himself or for his family, during the life of such person, or for any shorter term, subject to the rules of title 2 of part 2 of the Civil Code; or to receive the rents and profits of real property, and to accumulate the same for the purposes and within the limits prescribed by the same title. (C. C. § 305.)

Warehouse Receipts. — The Uniform Warehouse Receipts Law has been in force since July 1, 1913. (L. 1913, ch. 364.)

Wills. — Every person over the age of eighteen years, of sound mind, may, by last will, dispose of all his estate, real and personal. A holographic will is one entirely written, dated, and signed by the hand of the testator himself. It is subject to no other form, and may be made in or out of this State, and need not be witnessed. Every will other than a nuncupative will must be in writing; and every will other than a holographic will and a nuncupative will must be executed and attested as follows: It must be subscribed at the end thereof by the testator himself, or some person in his presence and by his direction must subscribe his name thereto; the subscription must be made in the presence of the attesting witnesses, or be acknowledged by the testator to them to have been made by him or by his authority; the testator must, at the time of subscribing or acknowledging the same, declare to the attesting witnesses that the instrument is his will; and there must be two attesting witnesses, each of whom must sign his name as a witness at the end of the will, at the testator's request and in his presence.

A witness to a written will must write, with his name, his place of residence, and a person who subscribes the testator's name, by his direction, must write his own name as a witness to the will. But a violation of this section does not affect the validity of the will.

A will of real or personal property, or both, or a revocation thereof, made out of this State by a person not having his domicile in this State, is as valid, when executed according to the law of the place in which the same was made, or in which the testator was at the time domiciled, as if it were made in this State, and according to the provisions of this chapter.

No provisions made for proof of wills made out of the State different from those made within.

A married woman may dispose of all her separate estate by will, without the consent of her husband, and may alter or revoke the will in like manner as if she were single. Her will must be executed and proved in like manner as other wills. A will executed by an unmarried woman is revoked by her subsequent marriage, and is not revived by the death of her husband. (C. C. §§ 998-1024.)

A foreign will may be admitted to probate, upon the production of a copy of the same; and the probate thereof duly authenticated with a petition for letters, by the executor, or any other person interested in the will, to the county judge.

Wills are recorded in the office of the county judge. (Prob. C. C. § 51.)

If after making a will the testator marries and the wife survives him, the will is revoked, unless provision has been made for her by marriage contract, or in the will, or it is apparent therefrom that it was not his intention to make provision for her. If a child be born to the testator after making of his will, and is not mentioned in his will or provided for therein or by any settlement, or if the testator omits to provide for any of his children, or for the issue of any deceased child, unless it appears that such omission was intentional, such child or the issue of such child succeeds to the same portion of the testator's property that he would have succeeded to if the testator had died intestate. (C. C. §§ 1023, 1030.)

Except as to the use of the homestead (see Homestead, ante) and certain personal property practically equivalent to the exemptions allowed by law under execution (see Exemptions, ante) for the support of the surviving husband or wife and minor children, children can be disinherited if the will expressly so provides, and there are no restrictions upon the amount which one may leave to charity or will away from his family.

There are no laws or decisions in relation to typewritten wills.

TENNESSEE LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by Walter Stokes, Esq., of Nashville.

The next legislature convenes January, 1919.

Following references are made to Milliken & Vertrees' edition of the Code, unless otherwise specified. Also see Shannon's Code (S. C.) and Supplement (Sup.).

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — Actions are begun by summons issued by the clerk of the court. Personal service must be generally had on the defendants. The forms and modes of pleading as at common law may be generally practiced, but the Code authorizes the short and simple modes and forms of pleading latterly in vogue. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3649, 3650.)

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits, Verifications, etc. — What Officers in other States to verify Instruments for use in Tennessee. 1st. Answers and other pleadings in chancery may be sworn to before a commissioner of Tennessee, notary public, judge, justice of the peace, court of record, or clerk of such court, or special commissioner appointed by the court of Tennessee, or its clerk, wherein it is to be used. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 5141, 5142.) The certificate of the commissioner, notary, and clerk must be under seal of office; the certificate of the judge and justice of the peace must be authenticated by the certificate of the clerk of the court wherein "the judge or justice presides."

2d. Deeds and other registrable instruments, by commissioner of Tennessee, notary public, court of record, clerk of such court, consul, minister or ambassador of the United States in the country where the probate, etc., is made. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 2854, 2856.) The certificate of the commissioner of Tennessee and notary public, clerk of court, consul, minister and ambassador, must be under seal of office. (Code (M. & V.), § 2856.) And the certificate of the clerk of court of record must be verified by the judge of the court certifying the official character of the clerk. (Code (M. & V.), § 2859.) And if made in a court of record, a copy of the entry must be indorsed on the instrument and verified by the clerk, under seal of office, and by the judge, as to the official character of the clerk. (Code (M. & V.), § 2858.) And if made by the judge, his certificate shall be "under his hand," and verified by the clerk, under seal of office. If made by a notary public outside of Tennessee, he must state in his certificate when his commission expires.

Aliens. — In respect of the capacity to take, hold, and dispose of lands, or personalty, by purchase, conveyance, will, or descent, aliens stand the same as citizens; and as to property, real or personal, heretofore (February 11, 1875) acquired by aliens, in a lawful manner, the said aliens, their assigns, heirs, devisees, or representatives, shall hold and dispose of the same in the same manner as native citizens. (Act of February 11, 1875.) The laws for enforcing escheats against property of aliens are abolished by the same act.

Appeals. — Appeals lie in all civil cases, from the judgment of a justice of the peace within two days to the circuit court, and if this court be then in session the justice of the peace shall, within five days after the appeal has been perfected, deliver the papers in the cause to the clerk of the circuit court, and if the circuit court shall continue in session ten days after the papers have been filed the cause shall be placed on the trial docket and stand for trial at that term. Either party may demand a trial by jury within seven days after the right of appeal has accrued. All law cases, with a few exceptions, are appealable to the court of civil appeals regardless of amount involved. All equity cases involving one thousand dollars or less must be appealed to the court of civil appeals, and all equity cases involving more than one thousand dollars must be appealed to the supreme court. Certiorari lies from the court of civil appeals to the supreme court (the one of last resort) in all cases tried by the court of civil appeals. Upon judgment on bond, note, bill, or accounts, the defendant, if appellant, is required to give bond with surety to perform the judgment or decree of the appellate court. On appeal from decree in chancery for a specific sum of money against the party in his own right, the appellant is required to give bond with surety to perform the decree of the appellate court, unless the decree orders sale of land to pay the amount. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3876-3881.) In other cases, generally the appellant is required to give bond with surety for payment of the costs. But except for false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, and slanderous words, any resident citizen who will make oath that he is unable to bear the expenses of the action, owing to his poverty, may have an appeal without bond or security. (Code (M. & V.), § 3912.)

Arrest. — No imprisonment for debt in this State

Assignments. — See Insolvent Laws and Assignments for Benefit of Creditors.

Attachment. — The proceeding of attachment original and ancillary, as practiced in the courts of law and equity, is a remedy of great vigor and efficacy for the enforcement of debts or contracts.

When cause exists, the property of the debtor, of every description, may be seized by attachment at the beginning of the suit, or at any time in its progress, by ancillary attachment, and held to answer the final judgment or decree.

Subsequent attaching creditors do not share pro rata with the first attaching creditors.

Property of the debtor of every kind, legal or equitable, choses in action, stocks, etc., may be attached by bill in chancery and held to abide the result of the suit.

Property wherein the debtor has the legal title, and which is corporeal or tangible, may be seized by attachment in the courts of law and held to abide the result of the suit.

Demands (viz., any proper or just cause of action) on which attachments may be prosecuted: Any person having any debt or demand due at the commencement of an action, or a plaintiff, after action for any cause has been brought, may sue out an attachment. (Code (M. & V.), § 4192.) But cause for such attachment must exist, and be laid as the foundation of the proceeding.

Causes of Attachment are: 1. Where the debtor resides out of the State. 2. Where he is about to remove or has removed his property out of the State. 3. Where he has removed or is removing himself out of the county privately. 4. Where he conceals himself so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served on him. 5. Where he absconds or is absconding, or concealing himself or property. 6. Where he has fraudulently disposed of or is about fraudulently to dispose of his property. 7. Where any person liable for any debt or demand, residing out of the State, dies, leaving property in the State. (Code (M. & V.), § 4192.) 8. And against a defendant residing in the county as to whom the summons has been returned, "not to be found in my county." (Code (M. & V.), § 4207.) When any cause or ground exists other than the non-residence of the debtor, the attachment may be had though the debt or demand be not due (Code (M. & V.), § 4194); and may be had by an accommodation indorser or surety of the debtor on paper due or not due, as well as by a creditor. (Code (M. & V.), § 4195.)

Preliminary to the issuance of the writ the existence of the cause of the attachment must be shown by the oath of the creditor or his attorney or agent; and he must give bond, with one or more solvent sureties, in double the amount of the debt; or he must take the oath prescribed for poor persons. The sureties need not own real estate; but the clerk or other officer taking the bond must be satisfied that the sureties have ample property, unincumbered, out of which the amount of the penalty of the bond could be made by writ of fi. fa. The defendant may abate the writ and discharge the attachment by proper pleading, and proof traversing the existence of the cause, or the ownership by the defendant of the property attached. A non-resident creditor may sue out an attachment against the estate of his non-resident debtor, and even for the cause that his debtor is a non-resident; provided that where they are residents of the same State the creditor must swear that the property of the debtor has been fraudulently removed to this State to evade the process of law in the State of their domicile or residence. If the attaching creditor does not prosecute his attachment successfully, he is liable for damages as follows: 1. Loss to debtor by injuring, detaining, or converting the property attached. 2. Loss by injury to debtor's business reputation, etc. 3. Punitive damages for wanton abuse of process, or malice in swearing out the attachment. See Garnishment.

By an act of the general assembly of February 16, 1889, the remedy by attachment has been amplified to cover all liens given by statute on personal property where no method of enforcing same has been heretofore prescribed by statute law, to be levied on the property on which the lien exists.

Chattel Mortgages. — Chattel mortgages are good between the parties without registration. Registration is only necessary as against purchasers without actual notice and creditors whether with or without notice. A mortgage, chattel or real, is not valid against creditors of mortgagor until registered; nor against purchasers from the mortgagor until registered, unless the purchaser had actual notice of the prior mortgage. The mortgagor may remain in possession of the mortgaged chattels, if they are not necessarily consumable in their use, and it will be no badge of fraud until after the maturity of the debt. However, if the property consists of merchandise, stock in trade, and the mortgagor remains in possession, carrying on business, selling and replenishing his stock, it will be fraudulent. A chattel mortgage on merchandise will not cover future acquisitions. See Mortgages; Records.

Under ch. 106, Acts 1915, it is made a misdemeanor for any person to give a second or subsequent mortgage on personal property upon which there is a previous mortgage without first making known to the mortgagee that there is a previous mortgage and to whom the same was made; and the mortgagor shall state in the face thereof how many, to whom, and the amount, of each prior mortgage. For a violation of this act the offending party should be fined not less than fifty dollars and imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than six months.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — No action can be brought against an executor, etc., until after the lapse of six months from his qualification in court; and execution cannot be had against an executor or administrator on judgment against him (except upon a revivor of a judgment against the decedent in his lifetime) until after lapse of twelve months from the qualification. (Code (M. & V.), § 3116; S. C. § 4011.)

The executor or administrator shall within two months after qualification advertise at the court-house of the county where the deceased usually dwelt at the time of his death, and other public places in the county, for all persons to bring to him their accounts and demands. (Code (M. & V.), § 3087.)

The creditors of deceased persons, if they reside within the State, shall within two years, and if without, shall within three years from the qualification of the executor or administrator, exhibit to them their accounts, debts, and claims, and make demand and bring suit for the recovery thereof or be forever barred. (Code (M. & V.), § 3117.)

If the personalty of an estate is insufficient to pay the indebtedness, the administrator or executor should suggest the insolvency of the estate to the clerk of the county court. Thereupon the clerk makes an order on the executor or administrator to give notice by advertisement in a newspaper published in the State, and also at the court-house door of the county for all persons having claims against the estate to file same with the administrator or executor authenticated in the manner prescribed by law, on or against a day fixed in such notice, not less than three nor more than six months after the day of notice; and any claim not filed on or before the day fixed, or before appropriation of the funds of the estate is made, shall be forever barred in law and equity. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3173-3175.)

An account against the estate of a deceased person may be proven like any other account upon oath made before a commissioner for the State, a notary public under seal, or before any other officer or person authorized to probate accounts to be used in this State.

The executor or administrator has two years within which to wind up and settle a decedent's estate, after which time he must make distribution of the same, or suit may be brought by any distributee or legatee to enforce the same. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3152, 3153.)

All of the property of a person, real or personal, at the time of his death, is assets for the payment of his debts, except what is exempt by law (such as homestead, divers articles of furniture, etc.). (Code (M. & V.), § 3090.)

A life insurance effected by a husband on his own life goes to the widow and next of kin free from the claims of creditors. (Code (M. & V.), § 3135.)

A non-resident of Tennessee, qualifying as executor or administrator in Tennessee for purposes of suing and being sued, shall be treated as a citizen of Tennessee. And in case an officer having process in his hands against such executor or administrator cannot find him, notice of such process can be served on the clerk of the county court where such non-resident qualified, and shall be sufficient notice to bring him into court, provided said clerk notify said executor or administrator of such notice on him by United States mail. (Acts 1903, ch. 501, p. 1344.)

One appointed by will executor is without power (generally) to act as such until qualification by oath, etc., in the probate court. (Code (M. & V.), § 3041.)

Claims against insolvent decedents' estates are required to be paid ratably and without any priority. An executor or administrator who pays a debt before the lapse of six months from his qualification does so at his peril. Insolvent estates of decedents are required to be administered by proceedings in the courts, — in the county court, if a small estate; in the chancery court, if it exceeds one thousand dollars in value. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3169, 3243.)

A non-resident as well as a resident may be an executor or administrator. In either case no person can act as such without qualification in the probate court (Code (M. & V.), § 3041) of the county of the domicile of the decedent if he were a resident at the time of his death (Code (M. & V.), § 3042); or, if he were a non-resident, in any county where assets exist. (Code (M. & V.), § 3043.) In any case the applicant must give bond with sureties in double the value of the assets (Code (M. & V.), § 3063), except when the will designates the executor and excuses him from giving bond and security. (Code (M. & V.), § 3066.)

For allowance to widow, see Married Women.

The widow has preference to be appointed administratrix of her deceased husband; if no widow, the next of kin of the decedent are preferred. (Code (M. & V.), § 3047; Acts 1860, ch. 311.) If the person entitled to administer refuse to act after legal notice, and the interest of the estate requires it, the public administrator may qualify and act as such.

Clerks of courts and masters in chancery shall keep a cash book showing all receipts and disbursements; the dates and amounts, and on what account received or disbursed, which shall be at all times open to the inspection of the public. (Ch. 26, p. 122, Acts of 1897.) All clerks of courts are required to keep a judgment index showing full name of defendants, the date, number of the cause, and amount of such judgment. (Ch. 27, p. 153, Acts of 1897.)

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims.

Conditional Sales. — A contract by which one sells to another a personal chattel, retaining the legal title until the consideration is paid, is a conditional sale, and not a mortgage, and need not be registered. Parol evidence is not admissible at law to show the contract was intended to be a mortgage. (Meigs' Milliken's Digest, p. 2130.) But where the title and possession both pass to the purchaser, and he holds the legal title subject to a lien in favor of the seller for the payment of the purchase money, and upon his failure to the price a trustee named in the contract is to sell same to satisfy the lien, this constitutes a mortgage, and not a conditional sale, and must be registered. (Ibid.) It is often exceedingly difficult to distinguish between a mortgage and a conditional sale. When the contract is in writing, if the real intention of the parties can be gathered from the face of the paper, that will determine the true character of the transaction. (Ibid., p. 2131.)

By act of the general assembly, approved March 20, 1889, ch. 81, p. 117, if any personal property is sold upon condition, and not paid as contracted for, and the seller regain possession, he shall within ten days advertise and sell the property to the highest bidder for cash, and if he realizes more than the amount of the remaining indebtedness, after paying all legitimate costs and charges, the balance shall be paid the debtor, but if less, it remains a valid legal claim against such debtor to the amount unpaid. Practically, this act makes all conditional sales of the character named, in effect, chattel mortgages.

Hereafter in all conditional sales of personal property wherein the title to property sold is retained in the vendor as security, such retention of title shall be invalid, unless evidenced by a written contract executed at the time of sale. (Act approved February 24, 1899, S. C. § 3666, and Sup. p. 638.)

If the purchaser of personal property under a written or printed contract of conditional sale — the consideration in whole or in part remaining unpaid — shall, without consent of the vendor, sell, give away, or otherwise dispose of or conceal such property, so that the vendor cannot by due process of law recover the same under the terms of the contract, such purchaser shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be confined in the county jail not more than six months, or be fined not more than fifty dollars, or both. But if full reparation be made before arraignment for trial, and the costs are paid, he shall not suffer the penalties of this act. (Act approved March 3, 1899, Ibid.)

It shall be unlawful for any person to remove beyond the limits of the State of Tennessee any personal property, the title to which has been retained at the time of the sale thereof, unless the consent of the seller of such article be obtained in writing prior to the time that such removal of such article is made beyond the limits of the State of Tennessee. (Ch. 557, Acts of 1909.)

Corporations. — Since the adoption of the Constitution of 1870, corporations are organized under general laws. The statute does not state amount of capital stock which must be paid in at the time of organization. By the act of March 19, 1875, forms are given for charters of corporations organized for various purposes; and any five or more persons, over the age of twenty-one years, desiring to become incorporated, may subscribe their names to any particular charter, and to a certificate, reciting that they apply to the State of Tennessee, by virtue of the laws of the land, for a charter of incorporation, for the purposes and with the powers declared in the foregoing instrument. The instrument must be acknowledged by the incorporators, before the clerk of the county court, and the certificate of that officer to such acknowledgment, attached thereto; which instrument and certificate shall be recorded in the register's office of the county where the main business of the corporation is to be conducted; the fact of such registration is to be indorsed on the instrument by the register; the instrument and all the certificates are to be recorded in the office of the secretary of state; and that officer shall certify on the instrument that it has been so recorded, and to it shall be affixed the great seal of the State; and upon the registration of this certificate of the secretary of state, and of the facsimile of said seal, in the said register's office, the formation of the corporation is complete. Religious, charitable, literary, and such like corporations cannot be organized for individual profit. Section 5 of the act of March 19, 1875, sets out the general powers of all corporations organized for individual profit, the principal of which are as follows: To sue and be sued; hold any real estate necessary for the transaction of the corporate business; and purchase or accept any real estate in payment of any debt due the corporation; establish by-laws, and make all rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the laws and the Constitution, deemed necessary for the management of the corporate affairs; and appoint such subordinate officers and agents as the business of the corporation shall require. This "Charter Act" has been amended by acts of the general assembly passed at the sessions of 1877 and 1881. Amendments, enacted March 19, 1877, and April 4, 1881, declare the terms on which foreign corporations may carry on business within this State.

The act of March 29, 1881, provides for the organization of corporations for educational purposes, for individual profit. And the act of April 6, 1889, enlarges the powers of such corporations in regard to purchase, holding, and sale of real estate acquired for educational purposes.

When the whole capital of a private corporation has not been paid in, and the capital paid and properly belonging to such corporation is not sufficient to satisfy the claims of creditors, every stockholder is bound to pay on each share held by him the sum necessary to complete the amount of such share, or such proportion of that sum as is necessary to satisfy the debts of the corporation. (Code (M. & V.), § 1708.) Otherwise the liabilities of shareholders stand as at common law.

Applicants for charters for corporations must fix the amount of the corporate stock of the corporation, and state the total capital stock in the charter and pay a privilege tax graded by the amount of capital stock. (Ch. 82, p. 158, Acts of 1897.)

Corporations not organized for individual profit may execute mortgages and deeds of trust upon property owned by them. (Ch. 88, p. 234, Acts of 1897.)

The cost of organization except for railroads, street-car lines, banks, building and loan associations, trust companies, coal or coke companies, iron or steel companies, is ten dollars. For recording in the secretary of state's and county register's office, three dollars each.

All property is assessed by an assessor elected either for the county or for the civil district every four years, at its actual cash value for state, county, and municipal purposes; personal property, privileges, and polls to be assessed annually and real estate every two years. State and county taxes must be paid annually to the county trustee, and municipal taxes are paid to the comptroller of the city as provided by ordinance thereof. (Act approved April 24, 1899, Code, §§ 761, 771.) No corporation can be chartered with less than one thousand dollars of capital stock. (Acts 1913, ch. 53.)

Foreign Corporations. — By ch. 504, Acts of 1909, it is enacted that the coming into this State of any corporation, association, or joint stock company chartered or incorporated under the laws of any other State or country for the purpose of doing business here is made a privilege. That every corporation, association, or joint stock company chartered or incorporated under the laws of any State or country, other than this State, and having a capital stock, shall pay into the office of secretary of state for the use of the State, upon filing a copy of its charter or articles of incorporation as required by ch. 31, Acts of 1877, ch. 122, Acts of 1891, ch. 81, Acts of 1895, a tax upon its authorized capital stock as follows, to wit: companies of fifty thousand dollars and less, fifty dollars; companies of over fifty thousand dollars and less than one hundred thousand dollars, one hundred dollars; companies of one hundred thousand dollars and less than two hundred thousand dollars, one hundred and fifty dollars; companies of two hundred thousand dollars and less than three hundred thousand dollars, two hundred dollars; companies of three hundred thousand dollars and less than four hundred thousand dollars, two hundred and fifty dollars; companies of four hundred thousand dollars and less than five hundred thousand dollars, three hundred dollars; companies of five hundred thousand dollars and less than seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, four hundred dollars; companies of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars and less than one million dollars, five hundred dollars; companies of one million dollars and less than two million dollars, seven hundred and fifty dollars; companies of two million dollars and less than five million dollars, one thousand dollars. Companies of five million dollars authorized capital stock and over shall pay fifteen hundred dollars; provided, that if any company chartered under the laws of another State desires to locate its principal office and do all of its business in and from Tennessee and have all of its main property holdings in Tennessee, it shall then pay a privilege tax of one tenth of one per centum on the authorized capital stock, just as domestic corporations are now required to do; provided, also, that insurance companies shall be credited by the amount of fees paid to the insurance commissioner upon entering the State to do business.

They can hold title to lands the same as a domestic corporation, under the conditions and restrictions as set forth in Shannon's Code, §§ 2045 to 2561 inclusive and notes thereunder.

The contracts of any foreign corporation, organized by any State or government other than of this State, having engaged in business, made contracts, or purchased property in this State after chapters 95 and 122 of Acts of 1891, without first complying with the provisions of the same, shall be as binding as if they had fully complied with the provisions of said act. Provided that this section shall apply only to such foreign corporations as have already in good faith complied with the provisions of said Acts of 1891 and chapter 31 of Acts of 1877, by filing a copy of its charter with the secretary of state, and recording abstracts thereof in each county in which such corporation carried on business or made contracts, or shall within four months after passage of this act so file such charter and abstracts of same. Provided, however, that no mortgage or deed of trust executed to a foreign corporation or to a trustee to secure indebtedness to a foreign corporation upon real estate in this State, where such foreign corporation had not complied with the laws of this State at the time such mortgage or deed of trust was executed, shall be foreclosed, either under a power of sale or judicial decree, until two years after the passage of this act, but no alien corporation owning land in the State shall have the benefit of this stay of foreclosure proceedings. (Acts of Tenn. ch. 119, app. May 10, 1895. Also S. C. § 2545 et seq.; Sup. pp. 403-406.) See Taxes.

A uniform law exists as to the transfer of shares of stock in private corporations, chartered, organized and existing under the Laws of Tennessee uniform with the Laws of other States. (Acts 1917, ch. 113.)

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for Tennessee.

Deeds. — Their Probate and Acknowledgment. Probate is by not less than two subscribing witnesses. Acknowledgment is by maker himself, in which case there is no need of subscribing witnesses. Such probate or acknowledgment is evidence prima facie only in the courts of the execution of the instrument. In the absence properly accounted for of the original instrument, a copy from the office of registry, with the certificates of probate or acknowledgment, is prima facie evidence of the contents and execution of the original. (Code (M. & V.), § 2886.)

The essential substance of the certificate of probate is the oath of the two subscribing witnesses that they are acquainted with the maker or grantor, and that in their presence he acknowledged the deed, etc., to be his act and deed on the day it bears date or some designated time; the essential substance of a certificate of acknowledgment is that the officer before whom it is taken is personally acquainted with the maker, and that he (the grantor) acknowledged the execution of the instrument for the purposes contained. Practical clerk or other officer in or out of the State, if not personally acquainted with the ac edger, is made so at the time by any means which will satisfy him to certify that he is personally acquainted, or rather, which will make the officer personally acquainted. The essential substance of the certificate of the execution of the deed by a wife is that she appeared before the officer privately and apart from her husband, and acknowledged the execution of the deed to have been done by her freely, voluntarily, understandingly, without compulsion or constraint from her husband, etc.

Husband must join in deed of wife's land, generally; but if the wife has a separate estate with full power to convey, she may execute the deed alone and must acknowledge same before a judge, chancellor, or clerk of the county court. She cannot acknowledge such deed before a notary public; the husband, though, may claim his tenancy by the curtesy, unless he join with her, or his right thereto is excluded by the terms of the conveyance to the wife. (S. C. § 2446 and notes 16 et seq.)

In the matter of deeds executed by sheriffs to lands sold under judgments and execution thereon, all the proceedings of the court, and the sheriff thereunder, shall be presumed to have been regular, legal, and valid, but any party in interest to such action shall not be prevented from proving by affirmative evidence that such proceedings were irregular, untrue, or void. (Ch. 34, pp. 160, 161, Acts of 1897.)

If a deed or other instrument, requiring acknowledgment, be signed by the maker before a clerk of the county court and certificate of acknowledgment be added thereto under seal of said court, no certificate of the official character of such clerk is required, if done in Tennessee; if outside the State, the judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate of the court shall certify to the official character of the clerk. If acknowledgment of the maker be taken before a notary public, in or outside the State, but in the Union, under his seal of office, no certificate is needed as to the qualification of the notary public. An acknowledgment before a commissioner for Tennessee in another State, under seal, has the same effect. If taken outside the United States, it may be (1) before a commissioner for Tennessee, appointed in the country where the acknowledgment is made; (2) before a notary public of such country; (3) before a consul, minister, or ambassador of the United States in the country where the acknowledgment is made. No certificate of the official character of such officer is required.

Acknowledgments may be written or printed, or partly written and partly printed, but the signature of the clerk of the court, notary public, or commissioner must be in writing and the seal of such officer duly appended. The acknowledgment may be pasted to the deed by the officer taking the same, or written or printed on the instrument itself.

Certificates of probate, etc., made by commissioners, notaries, consuls, ministers, or ambassadors shall be under their official seals. (Code (M. & V.), § 2856.) Notaries public have power to administer oaths, take depositions, acknowledgments of deeds, qualify to bills in chancery, and take affidavits; but the notary's seal must always be affixed. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 2464, 2852.) If made by a court of record, the copy of the entry on the record shall be verified by the certificate of the clerk of the court under his seal of office; if made before a clerk of a court of record, his certificate shall be under seal of office, and the official character of the clerk shall be verified by the certificate of the presiding judge of the court. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 2858, 2859.)

The register of deeds receives one mill on the dollar for foreign deeds sent him to register, besides the register fees. (Act May 26, 1866.)

Depositions. — Notice must be given to the opposite party, or his attorney if a non-resident, of the time and place of taking and of the names of the proposed witnesses; to the party, if resident in the county where the court sits; if not so resident, to his attorney. Presence or cross-examination by opposite party or attorney at the taking dispenses with notice.

When witnesses reside out of the State or more than one hundred and fifty miles from the place of trial, either party may take deposition or interrogatories filed with the clerk, and notice of the same to the attorney of the opposite party not less than ten days wherein to file cross-interrogatories; after which the deposition may be taken on copy of the chief and cross-interrogatories, issued and certified by the clerk. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 4609-4611; Acts 1859-60, ch. 53, § 2.)

They may be taken by any judge, justice of the peace, mayor, clerk of any court, commissioner of Tennessee, notary public in Tennessee, or other person appointed and commissioned by the court or clerk, not being interested, of counsel, or related to either of the parties. (Code (M. & V.), § 4622; Acts 1859-60, ch. 94, and 1866-67, ch. 46.) Depositions can be taken before a notary public in another State, his certificate showing the date of the commencement and expiration of his commission. But such notary public must be authorized, by law of the State in which he resides and acts, to take depositions to be used in that State, otherwise he is not eligible to take them to be used in Tennessee. (Acts 1885, ch. 11, p. 54.)

No commission is necessary where the officer who takes the deposition is one designated by the statute as judge, justice, clerk, mayor, or commissioner. If taken by a commissioner, he shall put his official seal to his certificate. When the depositions are taken in the county where the suit is pending, five days' notice is required; when out of the county, as follows: fifty miles or under, five days; fifty to one hundred, ten days; one hundred to two hundred and fifty, fifteen days; two hundred and fifty to five hundred, twenty days; over five hundred, thirty days; in foreign countries, such time as the court or clerk may order. The court will appoint commissioners to take depositions in other States.

The return of a sheriff or constable, that he has served a copy of the notice, is the only evidence of service that is required, or it may be proved by a witness or by affidavit at the trial.

The depositions must be written by the deponent or by the officer taking the same, or by some one by consent of parties to the suit, or by a stenographer selected by either party, who can take the evidence by shorthand and transcribe it on the typewriter, and such stenographer should attach a certificate as to correctness of transcription, etc.

Depositions may be taken in shorthand and reduced to manuscript or typewriting afterward, or taken direct on typewriter. If taken in shorthand, the person taking it must certify as follows: "I certify that, being a stenographer, I took the foregoing deposition in the exact language of the witness, and reduced it to typewriting (or manuscript), that it was then read over by the witness in my presence (or was read over by me to the witness), and was approved and signed by him; and I also certify, that I am not in any capacity in the regular employ of the party in whose behalf this deposition is taken, nor in the regular employ of his attorney; and I certify that I am not interested in the case, nor of kin or counsel to either of the parties, and that I sealed up said deposition, and delivered it to (or delivered it to the express office, or put it in the post-office) without its being out of my possession, or altered after it was taken." "No deposition taken under this act shall be signed by the witness until it shall have been reduced to manuscript or typewriting." "Nothing herein shall prevent the taking of depositions by stenographers in the regular employ of the litigant taking the deposition, or his attorney, when the opposite party consents thereto." (Act of April 22, 1899, ch. 276, p. 658.)

Depositions should be sent under envelope addressed to the clerk of the court in which the suit is pending, by mail, express, or private hand. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 4116-4118; Act of June 14, 1870, ch. 16.) If sent by express, the commissioner must so certify. (Act of June 14, 1870.)

After a deposition has been taken without cross-examination at the time, the witness may subsequently be cross-examined, upon notice to that effect. (Code (M. & V.), § 4597 S. C. Sup. p. 760.)

Descent and Distribution. — The land of an intestate owner deceased shall be inherited in the following manner by his lineal descendants, collateral kindred, or ascendants: —

1. Without reference to the source of the intestate's title: By all the sons and daughters of the deceased, to be divided amongst them equally. And if any child of said intestate shall have died in his lifetime, his lineal descendants shall represent their parent and be entitled to the same portion of the estate of the deceased as their parent would have been entitled to if living. If there be no issue, nor brothers or sisters, or their issue, and either parent be living, then by such parent. See Homestead.

2. If the estate was acquired by the intestate and he died without issue, his land shall be inherited by his brothers and sisters of the whole and half blood, born before his death or afterwards, to be divided amongst them equally. And if any such brother or sister died in the intestate's lifetime, leaving issue, such issue shall represent their deceased parent, and be entitled to the same part of the estate of the uncle or aunt as their father or mother would have been entitled to if living. In default of brothers and sisters and their issue, the land shall be inherited by the father and mother of the intestate as tenants in common. If both be dead, in equal moieties by the heirs of the father and mother in equal degree, or representing those in equal degree of relationship to the intestate; but if such heirs or those they represent do not stand in equal degree of relationship to the intestate, then the heirs nearest in blood, or representing those who are nearest in blood to the intestate, shall take in preference to others more remote.

3. Where the land came to the intestate by gift, devise, or descent from a parent or the ancestor of a parent, and he die without issue: If he have brothers or sisters of the paternal line of the half blood, and brothers or sisters of the maternal line also of the half blood, then the land shall be inherited by such brothers and sisters on part of the parent from whom the estate came, in the same manner as by brothers and sisters of the whole blood, until the line of such parent is exhausted of the half blood to the exclusion of the other line. If he have no brothers or sisters, then it shall be inherited by the parent, if living, from whom or whose ancestors it came, in preference to the other parent. If both parents be dead, then by the heirs of the parent from whom or whose ancestor it came. (Code (M. & V.), § 4597.)

The same rules of descent shall be observed in lineal descendants and collaterals respectively, when the lineal descendants are farther removed from their ancestor than grandchildren, and when the collaterals shall be farther removed than children of brothers and sisters. (Code (M. & V.), § 3271.)

If the intestate died leaving no heirs at law capable of inheriting the real estate, it shall be inherited by the husband or wife in fee-simple. (Code (M. & V.), § 3272.)

When an illegitimate child dies intestate without child or children, husband or wife, his real and personal estate shall go to his mother, and if there be no mother living, then equally to his brothers and sisters by his mother, or descendants of such brothers and sisters; and if there are none such, then to such persons as would have been his heirs on the mother's side if he had been legitimate.

Where any woman shall die intestate, leaving a natural born child or children, whether she also leave a legitimate child or children or otherwise, such natural born child or children shall take, by the general rules of descent and distribution, equally with the other child or children, the estate, real and personal, of his, her, and their mother; and should either of such children die intestate, without child, his or her brothers and sisters shall, in like manner, take his or her estate. (Acts 1866-67, ch. 36, § 10; Code (M. & V.), § 3274.)

A posthumous child of a testator born within ten calendar months after his death, not provided for in his will, takes by descent such share of his estate as would have fallen to it in case of intestacy; to be contributed by the devisees and legatees in the proportion of their several bequests and legacies to the whole estate. (Code (M. & V.), § 3275.)

Where any person to whom an estate, real or personal, is devised or bequeathed, dies before the testator, leaving issue that shall be living at the death of the testator, the devise or legacy shall not lapse, but shall take effect as if the death of the devisee or legatee had happened immediately after the death of the testator; and the real estate devised, in such case, shall be vested in the issue of such deceased devisee, in the same manner as it would have vested in the original devisee, unless a contrary intention shall appear in the will. (Code (M. & V.), § 3276.)

Distribution. — The personal estate as to which any person dies intestate, after the payment of the debts and charges against the estate, shall be distributed as follows: 1. To the widow and children, or the descendants of children representing them, equally; the widow taking a child's share. 2. To the widow altogether, if there are no children nor the descendants of children. 3. To the children or their descendants, in equal parts, if there is no widow; the descendants taking in equal parts the share of their deceased parent. 4. If no children, to the father. 5. If no father, to the mother and brothers and sisters, or the children of such brothers and sisters representing them, equally; the mother taking an equal share with each brother and sister. 6. If no brothers and sisters, or their children, exclusively to the mother; if no mother, exclusively to the brothers and sisters, or their children representing them. 7. If no mother, brother, or sister or their children, to every of the next of kin of the intestate, who are in equal degree, equally. There is no representation among collaterals, after brothers' and sisters' children. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3278, 3279.)

Advancements. — Absolute equality shall be observed in the division of the estates of deceased persons, except where a will has been made, and its provisions render equality impossible. (Code (M. & V.), § 3280.) All advancements, whether by settlement or otherwise, in the lifetime of the deceased, or by testamentary provision, shall be collated and brought into contribution in the partition and distribution of the real and personal estate of the deceased; those in real estate, first in the partition of real estate, and those in personal estate in the distribution of the personal estate. (Code (M. & V.), § 3281.) And should the value of the advancements in real estate exceed the child's share, the overplus shall be collated and brought into contribution in the distribution of the personal estate; and should the value of such advancements in personal estate exceed the share of such child in the personal estate, then the excess shall be brought into contribution in the partition of the real estate. (Code (M. & V.), § 3282.)

All free persons of color who were living together as husband and wife in this State while in a state of slavery are hereby declared to be man and wife, and their children legitimately entitled to an inheritance in any property heretofore acquired, or that hereafter may be acquired by said parents, to as full an extent as the children of white citizens are now entitled by the existing laws of this State. (Acts 1865-66, ch. 40, § 5; Code (M. & V.), § 3285.) The administrators or executors of free persons of color who may have heretofore died, leaving children that were slaves and incapable of inheriting their estates, and whose estates have not been paid out, are hereby authorized and required to pay the proceeds of such estate to the children, legatees, or devisees, or administrators of said free persons of color, pursuant to the laws now in force regulating the distribution of estates. (Acts 1865-66, ch. 59, § 2; Code (M. & V.), § 3286.) In all cases of free persons of color or slaves owning real or personal estate, and having, while slavery existed, departed this life, possessed of or having legal or equitable estate, the same shall descend and be distributed between the widow and their children or descendants or next of kin, whether they were slaves or not at the death of the decedent, agreeably to the laws of descent and distribution provided for free persons. (Acts 1869-70, ch. 75, § 1; Code (M. & V.), § 3287.) The second section of the act of 1865-66, chapter 59, shall embrace and apply to real as well as personal estate; and the children or their descendants or next of kin shall inherit the estate of the decedent as provided for free persons. (Acts 1869-70, ch. 75, § 2; Code (M. & V.), § 3288.) Acts 1887, ch. 151, amends above sections of the Code so as to include in its provisions persons of color who have been living as man and wife in other States, and who have moved to this State. Intermarriage between white and colored persons, or living together as husband and wife, prohibited. (S. C. § 4186.)

Divorce. — Under the Acts of 1915, ch. 121, there was created the office of divorce proctor and deputy for each county having a population of one hundred thousand or over, by the present or any federal census, having the following provisions: 1. The proctor must be a lawyer licensed to practice before the supreme court, residing and being a qualified voter in the county for which he is elected, and neither he nor his deputy is permitted to appear in any divorce sought in their county. 2. The divorce proctor must acknowledge service upon him of a copy of every bill for divorce and his indorsement thereon to that effect must be made before said bill is filed, but this does not dispense with the necessity of the service of process upon the defendant as is required by existing laws. 3. He is required, when a divorce bill is filed, to investigate the charges and be prepared to advise the court as to the merits of the case. 4. He has power to have witnesses subpoenaed to testify respecting any charge in the bill or answer and he has a right to examine such witnesses at the trial. 5. He is elected by the county court and his term of office lasts four years. 6. He is allowed a fee of five dollars in each divorce case filed in his county, which must be taxed as part of the costs. 7. He has the right to appoint a deputy who can acknowledge process and in case of the absence of the proctor, or at his request, can exercise all the powers of the proctor. 8. It is well to mention that some of the courts having jurisdiction of divorce do not recognize the validity of this act and disregard it entirely.

The following shall be causes of divorce from the bonds of matrimony: 1. That either party at the time of the contract was and still is naturally impotent and incapable of procreation. 2. That either party has knowingly entered into a second marriage, in violation of a previous marriage still subsisting. 3. That either party has committed adultery. 4. Willful or malicious desertion or absence of either party, without a rea-cause, for two whole years. 5. Being convicted of any crime, which, by the laws of the State, renders the party infamous. 6. Being convicted of a crime which, by the laws of the State, is declared to be a felony, and sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary. 7. That either party has attempted the life of the other, by poison or any other means showing malice. 8. Refusal, on part of a wife, to remove with her husband to this State, without a reasonable cause, and willfully absenting herself from him for two years. 9. That the woman was pregnant at the time of the marriage, by another person, without the knowledge of the husband. (Code (M. & V.), § 3306.)

Habitual drunkenness of either party shall be a cause of divorce from the bonds of matrimony, when the husband or wife have contracted the habit of drunkenness after marriage. (Acts 1867-68, ch. 68.)

The following shall be causes of divorce from bed and board or from the bonds of matrimony, at the discretion of the court: 1. That the husband is guilty of such cruel and inhuman treatment or conduct towards his wife as renders it unsafe and improper for her to cohabit with him and be under his dominion and control. 2. That he has offered such indignities to her person as to render her condition intolerable and thereby forced her to withdraw. 3. That he has abandoned her, or turned her out of doors, and refused or neglected to provide for her. A divorce may be granted for any of the aforesaid causes, though the acts complained of were committed out of the State, or the petitioner resided out of the State at the time, no matter where the other part resided, if the petitioner has resided in this State two years next preceding the filing of the petition. (Code (M. & V.), § 3308.) For other causes see S. C. § 4202, notes 1-10.

The bill may be filed in the proper person and name of the complainant, in the circuit or chancery court of the county or district in which the defendant resides or is found, if a resident; but if a non-resident or convict, then in the county where the applicant resides. (Code (M. & V.), § 3309.) Persons filing a bill for divorce may file the same in the county where said parties resided at the time of their separation. (Acts 1859-60, ch. 88, § 1; Code (M. & V.), § 3309.)

Dower. — See Married Women.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Execution. — The ordinary writ of execution to enforce judgments or decrees for money is the writ of fieri facias, which is leviable on the lands of the defendant wherein he has the legal title, and on personal chattels wherein he has the legal title. Shares of stock in corporate bodies are also subject to levy and sale by execution. Upon tangible and legal personalty, the execution has a lien which binds the property from the teste to the return day, if the property be actually seized by levy between the teste and the return day. Unless levied within that time the lien of that execution is gone. The teste is the first day of the term of the court preceding the day of the issuance of the execution; and the return day is the first day of the succeeding term. The lien, however, does not reach farther back than the day of the rendition of the judgment.

Generally, equitable personalty, choses in action, etc., are not subject to levy and sale on execution. Nor has the execution any lien on such personalty, or on shares of stock or choses in action, etc., unless a certified memorandum of the judgment or decree be, within sixty days after the rendition, registered in the county where the debtor resides, or in the county where the property is, if the debtor reside out of the State; nor unless a bill in equity be filed to subject the property within thirty days after the return of the execution unsatisfied. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3699, 3700.) Thus, real and personal estate, legal and equitable, may be subjected to the satisfaction of debts whereon judgment or decree has been rendered; if tangible and legal, by levy and sale on execution; if equitable or not corporeal or tangible, by bill in equity; and all kinds of property are so bound by lien of judgment or execution that disposition of the property made by the debtor after the judgment will be ineffectual to defeat the creditor, if his judgment or decree be rendered or registered in the proper county, and he be reasonably vigilant and prompt to make levy and sale or to file bill in equity. Also see Garnishment.

Stay of Execution. — On all judgments before justices of the peace, the defendant is entitled to a stay of execution for eight months, upon entering good and sufficient personal security on the justice's docket for debt, interest, and costs, within two entire days, Sundays excepted, after the rendition of judgment. (Code (M. & V.), § 3771.)

Execution cannot issue immediately upon the rendition of judgment, without affidavit of the plaintiff that defendant is fraudulently disposing of his property, or other good cause shown. See Redemption.

Exemptions. — Ninety per cent. of salary, income, or wages of every person earning a salary, or wages, or drawing an income of forty dollars, or less, per month, who is eighteen years of age, or upward, or is the head of the family and is a resident of the State of Tennessee, and the lien created by the service of garnishment, execution, or attachment shall only affect ten per cent. of said salary, wages, or income earned at the time of service of process; and there shall be exempt from execution, attachment, or garnishment thirty-six dollars of the salary, wages, or income of every person earning a salary or wages or income, in excess of forty dollars per month, who is eighteen years of age or upward, or who is the head of the family and who is a resident of the State of Tennessee. Also there shall be exempt from execution, attachment, and garnishment ninety per cent. of the salary, income, or wages of every person earning a salary, or wages, or drawing an income of forty dollars, or less, per month and who is eighteen years of age, or upward, or who is the head of the family and is a resident of the State of Tennessee, provided that the lien created by the service of garnishment, execution, or attachment shall only affect ten per cent. of such salary, wages, or income earned at the time of the service of process, and there shall be exempt from execution, attachment, or garnishment thirty-six dollars of the salary, wages, or income of every person earning a salary, wages, or income in excess of forty dollars per month, who is eighteen years of age or upwards, or who is the head of the family and who is a resident of the State of Tennessee, and further, that the debtor should only pay the costs of one garnishment of each debt on which suit is brought.

The following personal property is exempt from execution, seizure, or attachment in the hands of heads of families: Two beds, bedsteads, and necessary clothing for each, and for each three children of any one family, one additional bed, bedstead, and necessary bed-clothing, the value of such bedsteads in no case to exceed twenty-five dollars; two cows and calves, and if the family consists of six or more persons, three cows or cows and calves; one dozen knives and forks, one dozen plates, half dozen dishes, one set of tablespoons, one set of teaspoons, one bread-tray, two pitchers, one waiter, one coffee-pot, one teapot, one canister, one cream-jug, one dozen cups and saucers, one dining-table and two tablecloths, one dozen chairs, one bureau, not to exceed forty dollars in value, one safe or press, one wash-basin, one bowl and pitcher, one washing-kettle, two washing-tubs, one churn, one looking-glass, one chopping-axe, one spinning-wheel, one loom and gear, one pair cotton cards, one pair wool cards, one cooking-stove and utensils, or one set of ordinary cooking utensils, one meal sieve and one wheat sieve, one cradle, one Bible and hymn-book, and all books used in school, two horses, or two mules, or one horse and mule, or one horse or mule and one yoke of oxen, one ox-cart, yoke, ring, staple and log-chain, one two or one-horse wagon, not to exceed seventy-five dollars in value, and harness, one man's saddle, one woman's saddle, two riding bridles, twenty-five barrels of corn, twenty bushels of wheat, five hundred bundles of oats, five hundred bundles of fodder, one stack of hay, not to exceed twenty dollars in value, and, if the family consists of less than six persons, one thousand pounds of pork, slaughtered or on foot, six hundred pounds of bacon, or, if the family consists of more than six persons, then twelve hundred pounds of pork or nine hundred pounds of bacon, and all the poultry on hand and fowls to the value of twenty-five dollars; six cords of wood, or one hundred bushels of coal, fifty head of sheep, and the fleece that may be shorn from the same; and twenty-five stands of bees and the product of the same; and to heads of families, or any single female who uses the same for a livelihood, one sewing-machine; one hundred gallons of sorghum molasses, one hundred pounds of soap, fifty pounds of lard, one hundred pounds of flour, fifty pounds of salt, one hundred pounds of beef or mutton, one pound of black pepper, one pound of spice, one pound of ginger, twenty pounds of coffee, fifty pounds of sugar, three bushels of meal, one bushel of dried beans, one bushel of dried peas, fifty bushels of Irish potatoes, fifty bushels of sweet potatoes (provided they be kept for family use, and not for sale or merchandise), ten bushels of turnips, one pair of andirons, one clock, all the canned fruit put up for the use of the family, not to exceed twenty dollars in value, twenty bushels of peanuts, three strings of red peppers, two gourds, two punger gourds, a carpet in actual use by the family, not exceeding in value twenty-five dollars, and two hundred bushels of cotton seed.

If the head of the family is engaged in agriculture there is further exempt in his hands the following property: Two plows, two hoes, one grubbing-hoe, one cutting-knife, one harvest cradle, one set of plow gears, one pitchfork, one rake, three iron wedges, five head of sheep, and ten head of stock hogs. There is exempt in the hands of each mechanic in the State who is engaged in the pursuit of his trade or occupation, one set of mechanic's tools, such as are usual and necessary to the pursuit of his trade; and if he is the head of a family, two hundred dollars' worth of lumber or material, or products of his labor; also one gun in the hands of every male citizen of the age of eighteen years and upward, and every female who is the head of a family; to the heads of families, fifty pounds of picked cotton and twenty-five pounds of wool, and a sufficient quantity of upper and sole leather to provide winter shoes for the family; also, three hundred pounds of tobacco in the hands of the actual producer; also, thirty-five dollars' worth of roughness, to consist of oats, fodder, and hay, or either of them. (Act approved February 15, 1895.)

All of said personal property and homestead shall be exempt from seizure in criminal as well as in civil cases, but not exempt from distress or sale for taxes, or on a judgment for failure or refusal to work on public roads, or for fines and costs for voting out of the civil district or ward in which the voter lives, or for carrying deadly or concealed weapons contrary to law, or for giving away or selling intoxicating liquors on election days. (Code (M. & V.), § 2933.)

When a debtor absconds or leaves his family, the exempted property shall be set apart for the use of the wife and family, and shall be exempt in the hands of the wife or children; and such property, on the death of the owner, shall be exempt in the hands of the widow, and if there be no widow, such property shall be exempt for the benefit of the minor children under fifteen.

Homestead. — A homestead or real estate in the possession of or belonging to each head of a family, and the improvements thereon to the value in all of one thousand dollars, shall be exempt from sale under legal process during the life of such head of a family, and shall inure to the benefit of his widow and be exempt from sale in any way at the in-

of any creditor or creditors during the minority of the children occupying the same and until the youngest child reaches the age of twenty-one years; provided that said real estate shall not be alienated without the joint consent of the husband and wife, where that relation exists, to be evidenced by conveyance duly executed, as required by law for married women; and provided, further, that such real estate shall not be exempt from sale for the payment of public taxes legally assessed upon it, or from sale for the satisfaction of any debt or liability contracted for its purchase, or legally incurred for improvements made thereon. (Acts 1870, 2d Sess. ch. 80, § 1; Code (M. & V.), § 2935.) Each head of a family owning real estate shall have the right to elect where the homestead, or said exemption, shall be set apart, whether living on the same or not. These provisions apply as well to equitable as legal estates. (Ibid. § 2; Code (M. & V.), § 2937.)

The homestead exempt in the possession of a husband shall, upon his death, go to his widow during her natural life, with the products thereof, for her own use and benefit, and that of her family who reside with her, and upon her death it shall go to the minor children of the deceased husband, free from the debts of the father, mother, or said children; and upon the death of said minor children, or their arrival of age, the same may be sold, and the proceeds distributed amongst all the heirs at law of the deceased head of a family, according to the laws of descent and distribution in this State. (Ibid. § 6; Code (M. & V.), § 2943.)

Upon the death of the head of a family, without widow or minor children, said land shall be sold for the payment of the debts legally established against his estate, and the remainder distributed amongst his heirs, according to the rules of descent in force at the time in this State. (Ibid. § 7; Code (M. & V.), § 2945.)

Garnishment. — In Aid of Attachments. — Attachments may be founded on and sustained by garnishment of property, debts, and effects belonging to the debtor and in the hands of the garnishee or owing by the garnishee, or discovered and seized by means of the answer of the garnishee. Proceedings substantially similar to those in cases in aid of execution may be had to obtain the answer and fix the liability of the garnishee, and to reach property, debts, or effects disclosed by the answer of the garnishee, in the hands or control of or owing by other persons, belonging to the debtor in the attachment. And generally the same kinds of property may be reached and subjected by garnishment in aid of attachment as in aid of execution. Property or debts belonging to the attachment debtor, and in the hands or control of or owing by the garnishee, may, to an extent not exceeding the attachment debt, be delivered over or paid by the garnishee to the officer, before the return of the writ of attachment; after the return, to the court or justice to whom it is returnable. Judgment against the garnishee, condemning the property or debt in his hands and to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand, is conclusive as between the garnishee and the defendant in the attachment.

The sections of the Code which relate to the garnishment in aid of attachment are 4219 to 4236, inclusive.

Debts due or not due owing to the defendant, property of any kind belonging to the defendant in the hands or control of a third person, may be subjected to the attachment by process of garnishment. (Code (M. & V.), § 4219.) An order by court may be had on the garnishee or third person to deliver the property, if corporeal, to the officer; and judgment may be had against the garnishee debtor of the defendant in attachment. The defendant may obtain release or discharge of the property attached by giving bond, with good security, to pay the debt or the value of the property attached, in the event he shall be cast in the suit. (Code (M. & V.), § 4250; Sup. pp. 646, 719 and notes.)

In Aid of Execution. — Where sheriff or other officer has a writ of execution and cannot find sufficient property of the defendant to satisfy the same, he may summon any person whom he has cause to believe has any property of or is indebted to the defendant in the execution, to appear before the court or justice of peace to which the execution is returnable and answer on oath to those points. The answer of the garnishee is conclusive for or against himself, except where the sum in controversy is less than one thousand dollars, in which case his answer may be controverted by proof. (Code (M. & V.), § 3816.) He may be examined on these points as a witness is examined. If he denies having property or being indebted, or knowing any person that has property or is indebted, he is discharged. If it appears by his answers that he has property, he is required to deliver it up to the officer for levy and sale. If it appear by his answer that he is indebted, judgment goes against him to the extent of his indebtedness, not exceeding, however, the debt in the execution. If he gives information of other persons being indebted to the defendant in the execution, or having property of the defendant, the summons issues to such persons, against whom the like proceedings are had as in regard to the original garnishee. If the garnishee fails to appear and answer, the judgment is for the debt in the execution, at first conditional, but becoming final if he does not appear and answer on second summons.

The property subject to garnishment is property real and personal, debts due or not due, effects, money, shares of stock or any interest in a corporation, and judgments before justices of the peace, belonging to the defendant in the execution. (Code (M. & V.), § 3816.) The garnishment process embraces and binds property, debts, and effects of the defendant in the hands and control of the garnishee from the service of the summons to the putting in of his answer. Choses in action, if not due, may be sold by order of the court or justice, or collection of the same may be postponed until they become due. (Code (M. & V.), § 3811.) See Exemptions.

Inheritance Taxes. — All estates, real, personal, and mixed, of every kind whatsoever, situated within this State, whether the person or persons dying seized thereof be domiciled within or out of this State, passing from any person who may die seized or possessed of such estates, either by will or under the intestate laws of this State, or any part of such estate or estates, or interest therein, transferred by deed, grant, bargain, gift, or sale, made in contemplation of death, or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor or bargainor to any person or persons, or to bodies corporate or politic, in trust or otherwise, other than to or for the use of the father, mother, brother, sister, the wife or widow of a son, or husband of a daughter, or any child or children adopted as such in conformity with the laws of the State of Tennessee, husband, wife, children, and lineal descendants born in lawful wedlock of the person dying seized and possessed thereof, a corporation, institution, association, agency, person or persons, for purposes purely religious or charitable, shall be subject to a duty or tax of five dollars on every hundred dollars of the clear value of such estate or estates so passing, and at and after the same rate for any less amount, to be paid to the use of the State; and all owners of such estates and all executors and administrators and their sureties shall only be discharged from liability for the amount of such taxes or duties, the settlement of which they may be charged with, by having paid the same over for the use of the State as hereinafter directed; but no estate which may be valued at a less sum than two hundred and fifty dollars shall be subject to this duty or tax.

This tax is payable one year after the death of the decedent.

In all cases where there shall be a devise, bequest, or descent of an estate, real or personal, to collateral relatives or strangers liable to the collateral inheritance and succession tax, to take effect in possession or to come into actual enjoyment after the expiration of one or more life estates, or a period of years, the tax on such estate shall not be payable, nor interest begin to run thereon, until the person or persons liable for the same shall come into actual possession of such estate by the termination of the estates for life or years.

If the collateral inheritance tax shall be paid within three months after the death of the decedent, a discount of five per cent. on the amount of the tax shall be made and allowed; and if said tax is not paid at the end of one year from the death of the decedent, at which time it shall be due, interest shall then be charged at the rate of six per cent. per annum on such tax.

The tax shall be assessed upon the value of the estate at the time the right of possession accrues to the owner as aforesaid; but he shall have the right to pay the tax at any time prior to his coming into possession; and in such cases the tax shall be assessed on the value of the estate at the time of the payment of the taxes after deducting the value of the estate or estates for years.

This tax is a lien until paid on the real estate against which it is chargeable. This tax on real or personal property is barred in five years after it is due. The receipt for this tax must be signed by the county court clerk and countersigned by the comptroller of the treasury.

Whenever any foreign executor or administrator or trustee shall assign or transfer any stocks or loans in this State standing in the name of the decedent, or in trust for a decedent, which shall be liable for the collateral inheritance tax, such tax shall be paid, on the transfer thereof, to the clerk of the county court where such transfer is made; otherwise the corporation or person permitting such transfer shall become liable to pay such tax.

Insolvent Laws and Assignments for Benefit of Creditors. — Except as affected by the National Bankruptcy Act of 1898, the following laws respecting assignments are in force.

An insolvent debtor may convey his real or personal property to an assignee (often called a trustee) for the purpose of paying his debts. The act of May 11, 1895, ch. 128, having been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of Tennessee, the law as now interpreted recognises two kinds of assignments for the benefit of creditors, — general and special. A general assignment excludes preferences, and is made for the benefit of all creditors alike or ratably, and must include all the property of the assignor not exempt to debtors under the statutory exemption laws. The debtor making a general assignment shall annex thereto a full and complete inventory or schedule under oath of all his property of every description, and the general assignment includes any other property of the debtor not embraced in the assignment and not exempt from execution. (Acts 1881, ch. 121.)

An assignment which does not on its face purport to be a general assignment, and does not comply with said act, but creates preferences and omits schedules, does not fall within said act, and is valid as a special assignment. (9 Pickle, 397-408.)

An assignment for the benefit of creditors will not affect a prior levy under attachment or execution. There can be no involuntary proceedings against insolvent debtors for the benefit of creditors. Acceptance of the benefits of the conveyance by creditors is presumed, in case of adverse proceedings, by execution or attachment against the property conveyed. If the assignee fails to execute the terms of the deed properly, any creditor may file his petition in the county or chancery court, have the assignee removed, and another appointed in his stead, or have the terms of the assignment executed under the orders of the court.

Every assignee to whom property exceeding the value of five hundred dollars is conveyed in trust for the benefit of creditors, unless released by them in writing, shall give bond in the value of the property for the faithful performance of his duties; and shall take an oath before the county court clerk: (1) That he will faithfully perform the duties of his office; (2) make a perfect schedule of assets assigned; and (3) make a complete report of his sales.

Actual notice must be given to the debtor in case of assignment of choses in action.

Failure to give bond does not invalidate the assignment, but subjects the assignee to removal. The court may allow the assignee reasonable compensation, in no case to exceed five per cent. See Claims against Estates, etc.

Insurance Companies. — All licenses of foreign insurance companies to transact business in Tennessee shall expire with the last day of the year during which they were issued. All foreign insurance companies that take out or renew license in this State shall, on its expiration for any cause, or on ceasing to transact new business in this State, continue to pay the same tax on business remaining in force in this State, the same as other insurance companies of like class are required to pay. If such foreign company fail to pay taxes required by this act, within sixty days after same are due, it shall be liable for a penalty of fifty per cent. in addition thereto. (Acts of 1903, ch. 442, p. 1251.) By act of April 17, 1905, ch. 479, fire insurance companies doing business in Tennessee are prohibited from entering into any agreement or alliance to maintain specific rates of insurance upon property, or prescribing penalties upon each other for failure to comply with such agreements. The penalty is not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars.

Chapter 253, Acts 1907, prohibits any foreign insurance company, without the consent of the opposite party, from removing any suit brought by or against it in any state court, to any federal court, and upon such removal directs the insurance commissioner of Tennessee to forthwith revoke said company's authority to do business in this State. For other laws on Insurance see Acts of June, 1907.

Interest and Usury. — Six per cent. interest is the legal rate on debts and judgments.

If usurious interest has been paid it may be recovered by action of the party from whom it was taken, or by his representative. (Code (M. & V.), § 2712.) The contracting for usury does not forfeit the actual debt. The courts have held, in case of an action on a written instrument, that if it show on its face an usurious contract the instrument will not support an action for the actual debt.

The taking of usury is also a misdemeanor.

In case money is loaned in Tennessee to residents or non-residents thereof and is secured wholly by mortgage or trust deed on real or personal property situated in some other State, the lender can contract for any rate of interest allowed by the law of the State where the property pledged or mortgaged is situated, but in case of deficiency judgment no recovery on same can be had unless the excess interest over the legal rate in Tennessee be allowed as a credit on the deficiency. (Acts 1901, ch. 60.)

The defendant may plead usury to all over the legal rate of interest (six per cent.) charged, whether it appear on the face of the instrument or not.

Judgments. — Judgments and decrees for money in the courts of record, if rendered in the county of the defendant's residence, have a lien on his lands wherein he has the legal title, wherever in the State situate, for twelve months from the time of rendition, if sale be made under execution within the twelve months. If rendered in a county wherein the defendant does not reside, they have not such lien, unless a certified copy of the judgment be registered in the county wherein he resides, when they have the like lien from the time of registration of the copy as if rendered in that county.

If the sale within twelve months be prevented by injunction, appeal in error, or other adverse proceeding in court, the lien will be continued, provided sale be made of the land within one year from the dissolution of the injunction, appeal in error, or adverse proceeding be ended.

In regard to lands after acquired by the debtor, they stand subject to the lien for one year after the acquisition of the legal title by the debtor. A judgment is not a lien on lands wherein the defendant has the equitable estate, unless a memorandum of the judgment be registered in the county where the land is situate within sixty days from the rendition of the judgment; and unless a bill in equity to subject the land to the satisfaction of the judgment be filed within thirty days after the return unsatisfied of the execution issued on the judgment. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3698-3700.) A judgment before a justice of the peace is not a lien on real estate; the defendant's land is only bound from the levy of the execution.

If defendant makes no defense to an action, judgment may be rendered against him: if in a justice's court, in one hour after the time fixed by the constable for the trial; if in the circuit court, on any day after the lapse of five days from the first day of the return term; if in the chancery court, at any day after the lapse of three days from the first day of the return term; if in the supreme court, whenever reached on the docket of that court. The return term is the term to which the process cites the defendant to appear.

The judgment of a court of another State must be proved as prescribed by the Statutes of the United States.

As between judgments rendered at the same term, those have priority which are first rendered, and to ascertain this priority courts will look to hours and minutes.

Legal Holidays. — First day of January; twenty-second day of February; fourth day of July; first Monday in September, commonly called "Labor Day"; twenty-fifth of December; Good Friday; Decoration Day; third day of June, known as "Memorial" or "Confederate Decoration Day"; nineteenth day of January; and when either of these days falls on Sunday, then the following Monday to be substituted. Also all days appointed by the Governor of this State or by the President of the United States as days of fasting or thanksgiving, and all days set apart by law for holding county, state, or national elections throughout this State are made legal holidays and the period from noon to midnight of each Saturday which is not a holiday is made a half-holiday.

License. — Commercial travelers are not required to take out a state license. Marriage license not to issue to persons under eighteen years.

Liens. — See Mechanics' Liens.

Limitations of Actions. — Upon bonds, notes, bills of exchange, accounts, and contracts generally, action is barred unless begun within six years from the time the cause of action accrued, or the bond, note, etc., fell due.

Actions for injuries to personal or real property, actions for the detention or conversion of personal property, must be begun within three years from the accruing of the cause of action. (Code (M. & V.), § 3470.) Actions of slander, within six months of the uttering of the slanderous words. Actions of libel, malicious prosecution, injuries to the person, false imprisonment, criminal conversation, seduction, breach of promise of marriage and statutory penalties, within one year from the accruing of the cause of action. (Code (M. & V.), § 3469.) Actions against sureties of guardians, executors, administrators, sheriffs, clerks, and other public officers for nonfeasance, malfeasance, or misfeasance in office, within six years after the accruing of the cause of action. (Code (M. & V.), § 3472.) Actions against guardians, executors, administrators, sheriffs, clerks, and other public officers on their bonds, within ten years after cause of action accrued. (Code (M. & V.), § 3473.) Actions on judgments or decrees of courts of record of this or any other State or government, actions to enforce liens on land, expressed in deeds, mortgages, etc., and all other cases not expressly provided for, within ten years after the cause of action accrued. (Code (M. & V.), § 3473.) Actions against the personal representative of a decedent for demands against such decedent shall be brought within seven years of his death, notwithstanding any disability existing. (Code (M. & V.), § 3483.)

Any person having had, by himself or those through whom he claims, seven years' adverse possession of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments granted by this State or the State of North Carolina, holding by conveyance, devise, grant, or other assurance of title purporting to convey an estate in fee, without any claim by action at law or in equity commenced within that time and effectually prosecuted against him, is vested with a good and indefeasible title in fee to the land described in his assurance of title, provided such deed is recorded in the register's office of the county wherein the land is located. And, on the other hand, any person and those claiming under him neglecting for the said term of seven years to avail themselves of the benefit of any title, legal or equitable, by action at law or in equity, effectually prosecuted against the person in possession as in the foregoing section, are forever barred. (Code (M. & V.), § 3460.)

Where the statute of limitations of another State or government has created a bar to an action upon a cause accruing therein, while the party to be charged was a resident in such State or under such government, the bar is equally effectual in this State. (Code (M. & V.), § 3481.)

Actions against the personal representatives of a deceased person shall be commenced by a resident of the State within two years and six months, and by a non-resident within three years and six months after the qualification of the personal representative, if the cause of action accrued in the lifetime of the deceased; otherwise from the time the cause of action accrued. (Code (M. & V.), § 3481.) But any specific delay granted at the special request of the personal representative shall not be counted in the time designated above. (Code (M. & V.), § 3480.)

If the person entitled to commence an action is, at the time the cause of action accrued, (1) within the age of twenty-one years; or, (2) of unsound mind; or, (3) a married woman; or, (4) paragraph 4 repealed by act of March 20, 1901, ch. 15, § 2. (Code (M. & V.), § 3451.) See, however, some exceptions designated in §§ 3452-3463.

The statutes of limitation do not apply to actions which concern the trade of merchandise between merchant and merchant, their agents and factors, while the accounts (mutual and reciprocal) between them are current. (Code (M. & V.), § 3474.) And when there are mutual accounts between persons not merchants, the time is computed from the date of the last item, unless the account is liquidated and a balance struck. (Code (M. & V.), § 3475.)

No statute exists prescribing what promise or act will revive a cause of action barred by statute of limitation. A promise to pay a debt, or an acknowledgment of the debt and the expression of a willingness to pay, suffice to revive the demand, if already barred; and if not barred, as a new date from which the statute will begin to run. Payment of part is of itself without effect upon the running of the statute. (1 Shannon's Cases, 619.)

If at any time any cause of action shall accrue against any person who shall be out of this State, the action may be commenced within the time limited therefor, after such person shall have come into the State; and after any cause of action shall have accrued, if the person against whom it has accrued shall be absent from or reside out of the State, the time of his absence or residence out of the State shall not be taken as any part of the time limited for the commencement of the action. (Code (M. & V.), § 3458; Acts 1865, ch. 10, § 3.)

Married Women. — Widow of intestate husband has dower in her husband's lands (an estate for life in one third) of which he died seized or possessed, or of which he was equitable owner at the time of his death, including lands under mortgage or deed in trust made by him to secure creditors. She takes the one third without abatement on account of incumbrances by mortgage or deed in trust, or of claims of the general creditors of her husband. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3244, 3245.) She takes in the residue of personal estate of her deceased husband intestate which may remain after payment of his debts: if without children or descendants, the whole; if with one or more children, in equal shares with children. (Code (M. & V.), § 3278.) In addition to dower, the homestead of value not exceeding one thousand dollars for use of herself and family, while she or they reside upon it, and this clear of the husband's debts.

She is entitled to dower in lands held in common by her husband with others, but her right to dower is barred by joining with her husband in conveyance by deed, mortgage, etc., unless fraud is used to defeat dower.

Whatever of furniture, etc., of the husband was exempt from his creditors in his lifetime, on his death goes to his widow free from his creditors or administration. (Code (M. & V.), § 3128.) Moreover, the probate court will set apart to her money, provisions, or assets of her husband intestate, of value sufficient for a year's support of herself and family according to the usual and suitable style of her life, and clear of the husband's debts. (Code (M. & V.), § 3125.)

The husband's interest or estate in his wife's lands cannot be subjected during her life to his debts by legal process; nor can he sell it without joining her in the deed. (Code (M. & V.), § 3338.) And personal property belonging to wife, whether acquired before or after marriage, shall be exempt from the debts, contracts, and other liabilities of the husband before marriage. (Act March 23, 1875.) Otherwise her general personal property, whether acquired before or after marriage, becomes, after being reduced to possession by the husband, his property, and subject to his debts, contracts, and disposition as his own, excepting, however, that now, by act of March 27, 1877, husband is not liable for his wife's antenuptial "debts, contracts, or obligations," and has not such interest in property owned by her at the time of or acquired by her as heir or distributee after marriage as to prevent her said creditors from subjecting her property to the satisfaction of their debts. Her separate property is not subject to his debts, contracts, or disposition, otherwise than as authorized by the instrument under which she acquired it.

If husband or wife effect insurance on his life, upon his death the money goes to his wife and children free from his debts. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3335, 3336.)

If dissatisfied with the provision made for her by the will of her husband, she may dissent, by proceeding in court, within one year after the probate of the will; in which case she takes dower, distribution, etc., as if no will had been made. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3251, 3252.) It would seem a proper construction of the last cited section that in case of dissent the widow can have, at most, of the personal estate, not more than one third, and if more than two children, not more than a child's share.

Upon application of the widow of an intestate, or one who dissents from her husband's will, the county court shall appoint three freeholders, not related to her, who being sworn shall set apart so much of the moneys or personalty on hand or due the estate as may be necessary for the support of the widow and her family for one year after the death of her husband. The three freeholders or commissioners in setting apart the year's support will designate the amount of money or the specific property so set apart, and will consider the circumstances of the widow, her former manner of living, etc., but cannot set apart partnership property or any interest therein. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3125-3128, and notes thereto.)

If no will of husband, and he die without heirs, the wife takes by inheritance absolutely his real estate (Code (M. & V.), § 3272), subject to his debts, however.

The widow may convey her right of dower or release it. (5 Lea, 103.)

Powers of Wife over her General Estate. — She cannot bind her lands by title bond or by contract to sell or convey; nor can she convey by attorney. If of age (twenty-one years) she can sell and convey by joint deed with her husband and on her privy examination; and she may convey by deed or otherwise, as an unmarried woman, without her husband's joining, but not so as to interfere with his tenancy by the curtesy. But if she abandons or refuses to live or cohabit with her husband, or he abandons or refuses to live or cohabit with her, she may dispose of her lands by deed, will, or otherwise, as an unmarried woman. (Code (M. & V.), § 3346; Act March 2, 1870, § 6.)

Wife of husband ascertained by legal proceeding to be insane may act as an unmarried woman to purchase, receive, and hold property, real and personal; to contract and be contracted with; to sue and be sued; and property acquired while so acting is not subject to the debts or contracts of husband. (Code (M. & V.), § 3345.)

Women are of legal age when twenty-one years old.

Powers of Wife over her Separate Estate. — Her separate property she can bind or dispose of by deed, will (see Wills), or otherwise, as an unmarried woman, provided the power of disposition is not expressly withheld in the instrument under which she holds. If a particular mode of conveyance is designated therein, it must be strictly pursued. Her intention to bind her separate estate must be clearly expressed, as the courts will not imply that intention, either from her acts or from a moral obligation. Her separate property is not liable for debts contracted for the support or expenses of herself, her children, or her family, although the consideration should be absolute necessities, unless she expressly contracts that it shall be.

When married women are engaged in the mercantile or manufacturing business in their own names, or by an agent, or as partner, they shall be liable for the debts incurred in the conduct of such business as if they were femes soles, and no plea of coverture shall avail in such cases. (Ch. 82, p. 228, Acts of 1897.)

Married women are under no disability on account of coverture; they can acquire, hold, use and dispose of property, real and personal, contract in reference to it, bind themselves personally and can sue and be sued just as if they were not married. (Acts 1913, ch. 26.)

Mechanics' Liens. — There shall be a lien upon any lot of ground or tract of land upon which a house has been constructed, built, or repaired, or fixtures or machinery furnished or erected, or improvements made, by special contract with the owner or his agent, in favor of the mechanic or undertaker, founder or machinist, who does the work or any part of the work, or furnishes the materials or any part of the materials, or puts thereon any fixtures, machinery, or material, either of wood or metal. (Code (M. & V.), § 2739.) The benefits of said section 1981 shall apply to all persons doing any portion of the work, or furnishing any portion of the material for the building contemplated in said section. (Acts 1859-60, ch. 114; Code (M. & V.), § 2740.)

If the contract be made with the mortgagor, and the mortgagee has written notice of the same before the work is begun or materials furnished, and consent thereto, the lien shall have priority over the mortgage; and if he fails to object within ten days after receipt of the notice, his consent shall be implied. (Code (M. & V.), § 2742.) The same rule shall operate upon the vendor's lien, when he has conveyed expressly reserving a lien, or has only executed a title bond. (Code (M. & V.), § 2743.) Each mechanic so employed shall have this lien, in proportion to the amount and value of the work he does or the materials he furnishes. (Code (M. & V.), § 2744.)

The lien shall include the building, fixture, or improvement, as well as the lot or land, and continue for one year after the work is finished or materials are furnished, and until the decision of any suit that may be brought within that time for the debt due said mechanic or undertaker; and bind the lot or land, although the owner may convey or otherwise dispose of the same. (Code (M. & V.), § 2745.) Every journeyman, or other person employed by such mechanic, founder, or machinist to work on the building, fixture, machinery, or improvement, or to furnish materials for the same, shall have this lien for his work or materials, if, at the time he begins to work or furnishes the materials, he notifies the owner of the property in writing of his intention to rely upon the lien. (Code (M. & V.), § 2746.) By the act of April 2, 1881, such notice, if made during the progress of the work, or after its completion, shall operate as a lien upon any balance then due, or to become due, under the contract, but this is amended by act of 1887, ch. 85, to read, that within thirty days after the building is completed or the contract of such laborer, mechanic, or workman shall expire, or he be discharged, he shall notify, in writing, the owner of the property on which the building or improvement is being made, or his agent or attorney, if he resides out of the county, that a lien is claimed, and said lien shall continue for the space of ninety days from the date of said notice in favor of such sub-contractor, mechanic, or laborer, and the same shall have precedence over all other liens for such time; provided a statement of the amount of such work, labor, or material shall be filed with the county registrar, who shall note the same for registration, and put it on record in the trust book in his office, etc. Section 2 of this act provides that if the work, or improvement, or material be furnished for work done on the lands of any married woman or other person under disability who has signed no agreement in writing giving a lien, etc., in ignorance of her claim, and if such married woman refuse to recognize a lien, said mechanic, laborer, or furnisher shall have the right, after giving ten days' notice, to take and remove such property on which his labor was performed, etc.

The act of 1887 was declared void for technical reasons by the supreme court at Knoxville, but its provisions were substantially reenacted by act approved March 22, 1889, and are now in force.

The claims thus secured by lien for work and labor done and materials furnished shall in no case exceed the amount agreed to be paid by the owner or proprietor in his original contract with the undertaker. (Code (M. & V.), § 2748.) This lien shall operate only in favor of the mechanic or person who furnishes materials or does work, and shall not pass to any person to whom the debt is transferred without notice of the lien. (Code (M. & V.), § 2749.)

Landlords have a lien on the growing crops of their tenants for necessary supplies of food or clothing furnished the tenants for use of themselves or those dependent on them, to enable them to make the crop. (Acts 1875, ch. 116.) And have also a lien on the crops for rent of the land: And by Acts of 1887, ch. 171, have liens on crops for supplies furnished, implements, and work-stock.

Mortgages. — Mortgages, chattel mortgages, deeds in trust, assignments of land, must be registered in the county where the land lies; of personal chattels and personalty, generally in the county where the mortgagor resides, if a resident of the State; if a non-resident, in the county where the chattels are situate at the time of the making of the instrument. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 2843, 2844.) The same is the law in regard to deeds in trust to secure creditors, and assignments for the benefit of creditors. See Records.

Registration without proper probate or acknowledgment, in the same manner as deeds to real estate, is ineffectual against seizure by execution or other process against the maker of the mortgage, deed in trust, or assignment; and until filed for registration, the mortgage, deed in trust, or assignment in like manner is ineffectual as against creditors with or without notice, and as against purchasers without actual notice.

A mortgage or deed in trust for the security of a debt or other purpose, once registered, continues in force without renewal or registration again, whether of real or personal property. The debt is barred in six years from its maturity, but the lien is not barred until ten years after the maturity of the debt secured.

The payment of the mortgage debt extinguishes the title or estate of the mortgagee or trustee and reverts the same in the mortgagor. However, it is customary and advisable to enter a release which can be done on the margin of the record where the mortgage is registered, or by separate instrument, and this release must be executed by the beneficiary unless the trustee is expressly authorized to release the lien. The same rule applies to vendor's lien.

Compulsory foreclosure of mortgage without power of sale can be had only by regular bill in chancery and sale under decree. By payment of the debt, or agreement of the parties to the deed, the mortgage must be discharged and the title divested out of the mortgagee, and without the concurrence of his wife. Wife has not any interest in the lands (except homestead) of her husband during coverture, and therefore his conveyance of his land with this exception is effectual without her joining in the deed. See Dower.

Mortgages on real property are usually accompanied by note.

Notaries Public. — The justices of the peace at their regular quarterly sessions of the county court appoint (elect) as many notaries public for their county as they may deem proper and necessary, to hold their offices for four years. (Code (M. & V.), § 3194.) All notaries so appointed shall be commissioned by the governor. (Code (M. & V.), § 3195.) They can act only in the county for which they are elected, and may take depositions, administer oaths, swear or affirm parties to a bill in chancery, and to affidavits. In all cases the notarial seal shall be affixed. (Code (M. & V.), § 3196.) They are empowered to take acknowledgments of deeds, etc., for registration. Notary public in taking depositions or taking acknowledgments to deeds in another State must certify as to time his or her commission as such notary commences and expires. The clerk of the county court of the county in which the notary public resides certifies to the official character of such notary when called for.

Notes, Bills of Exchange, etc. — The Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law was passed by the general assembly of the State of Tennessee in the year 1899 and appears in the Acts of the General Assembly of that year, ch. 94. In view of the fact that this Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law is in force in most all the States of the Union it is not deemed advisable or necessary to give a digest of same, as it applies in Tennessee with full force and effect.

Partnerships. — Uniform Law adopted by Legislature. (Acts 1917, ch. 140.)

Patent Laws. — Whenever it appears on the face of a note that it was executed as consideration for the purchase of a patent right, it shall be subject in the hands of any holder to all defenses to which it was subject in the hands of the original payee. (Act of March 28, 1879.)

Hereafter it shall be a felony, punishable by from one to five years in the penitentiary, for any person, in his own behalf or in a representative capacity, to take or receive a note or other security in the sale of a patent right, or any interest therein, unless it shall clearly appear upon the face of the note or other security that it is given in the purchase of a patent right. (Ch. 77, p. 221, Acts of 1897.)

Practice and Pleading. (See Actions; Judgments.) — The common law, as it is generally understood in the United States, prevails except where changed by statute, but pleadings may be made up under the common law or under statutes.

Proof of Claims. — Persons sued on bonds, notes, bills of exchange, or other written contract cannot put in question the execution of the same by the party sued, except by plea of non est factum verified by oath. (Code (M. & V.), § 4525.)

An account from another State, or other county of this State, duly sworn to by plaintiff or his agent, and certificate of state commissioner or notary public under official seal annexed thereto, or certificate of justice of the peace with certificate of clerk of county court that the justice of the peace is an acting justice of the peace in his county, is conclusive against defendant unless he deny the account under oath. (Acts 1903, ch. 33, p. 65.)

Claims against dead men's estates are proved in the same manner as claims against living persons are proved, and the same whether creditor be a resident or non-resident of the State.

Records. — Records to be effectual against purchasers without actual notice, or creditors by judgment or decree with or without notice, deeds of conveyance of lands, bonds or agreements to convey lands, mortgages or deeds in trust of lands or chattels, ante or post-nuptial contracts or settlements, bills of sale, etc., must be registered in the office of the county register upon proper probate or acknowledgment of their execution. Registration without such probate or acknowledgment is without any virtue. Registration upon such probate or acknowledgment is constructive absolute notice to all persons. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 2887, 2888.)

Generally, deeds of absolute conveyance of lands, or personalty, mortgages, deeds in trust, and all other registrable instruments, are valid between the parties without registration. (Code (M. & V.), § 2887.)

Redemption. — Lands sold for cash under execution, deed in trust, mortgage with power of sale, decree of court, are redeemable by the debtor paying amount bid and interest and costs within two years of the time of sale, unless his right to redeem be waived by him; or, in the case of sale under decree, the sale be on a credit of not less than six months, and the decree in terms bar redemption. When the debtor has the right to redeem, any bona fide creditor may redeem, upon payment to the purchaser of the amount bid by him and interest thereon at the rate of six per cent. per annum and "all other lawful charges," and by paying the debtor ten per cent. or more on the amount bid, or on the amount of the creditor's claim, or crediting the debtor with that amount or more on the debt owing the redeeming creditor by the debtor. And this process of redemption may go on between purchasers and creditors of the original debtor during two years. The process stops upon redemption by the debtor, or conveyance of the land, or his right of redemption by the debtor. See, also, Tax Law.

If the debtor remain in possession to the time of redemption by him, he is not accountable for the rents. If the purchaser have possession, the debtor, if he redeems, is entitled to credit for the rents. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 2947-2960; Acts 1859-60, ch. 84.)

Replevin. — Where goods or chattels are wrongfully seized or detained, the person entitled to the possession may bring action of replevin in the county where the goods or chattels or any part of them are, or in which either of the defendants may be found, and have the goods and chattels seized by the sheriff or constable, and delivered to the plaintiff. To obtain the writ of replevin, the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, is required to file with the clerk of the court an affidavit sworn to before the clerk, stating that the plaintiff is entitled to the possession of the property proposed to be replevied, and that the defendant has seized, or that he detains, the same, and that the property was not subject to such seizure or detention or execution. The plaintiff shall also, at the same time, give bond with personal security in double the value of the property, payable to the defendant, conditioned to abide by and perform the judgment of the court in the premises. The bond shall have one or more responsible sureties, but they need not own real estate. The clerk fixes the value of the property. If the officer return that he cannot get possession of the property, the plaintiff may elect to proceed in case or detainue. If on the trial of the right of property or possession the plaintiff prevail, he has judgment for the damages of the seizure and detention; if the defendant prevail, he has judgment against plaintiff and the surety on his bond for the return of the property, or, on failure to return, for the value with interest and damages; and, in proper cases, the jury may give exemplary damages in favor of either party. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 4110, 4111.)

Replevy. — The defendant to an attachment suit may always replevy the property attached by giving bond with good security in double plaintiff's demand, or double the value of property attached, in which case the officer levying attachment shall take the bond, fix the value of the property, and judge of the security. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 4250, 4251.) This is not an original action like replevin, but is in the nature of a delivery bond.

Reports, Judicial. — Supreme Court Reports consist of 128 volumes as follows: Haywood, vols. 3, 4, 5; Overton, 2 vols.; Cooke, 1 vol.; Peck, Martin & Yerger, 1 vol.; Yerger, 10 vols.; Meigs, 1 vol.; Humphreys, 11 vols.; Swan, 2 vols.; Sneed, 5 vols.; Head, 3 vols.; Coldwell, 7 vols.; Baxter, 9 vols.; Heiskell, 12 vols.; Lea, 16 vols.; Pickle, 24 vols.; Cates, 19 vols.; Thompson, 4 vols. Tennessee Cases, edited by Shannon, 3 vols.; these include decisions of the supreme court not published in the official reports of that court. Court of Civil Appeals Reports: Higgins, 4 vols. Tennessee Chancery Reports: Cooper, Chancellor, 3 vols.

Revision. — The statute law of Tennessee is embraced in the Code of Tennessee, which went into operation May 1, 1858, and subsequent acts of the legislature. The acts enacted since the Code and prior to 1871 are embraced in the edition of the Code published by W. J. Gilbert, of St. Louis, in 1871, and edited by Messrs. Seymour D. Thompson and Thomas M. Steger. Statutes enacted since 1871, and before February, 1875, are embraced in their Addenda. A later edition of the Code by Milliken and Vertrees includes all statutes up to 1885.

The latest revision of the Code was issued in December, 1896, by R. T. Shannon, and in 1903 he issued a Supplement to the Code of Tennessee which embraces all acts of the general assembly from 1897 to 1903 inclusive.

In all of the Codes decisions of the supreme court relating to statutes are annexed in the shape of notes.

Sales in Bulk. — The sale of any portion of a stock of merchandise other than in ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business, or a sale of entire stock of merchandise in bulk shall be presumed to be fraudulent and void as against the creditors of the seller, unless the seller and purchaser shall, at least five days before the sale, make a full detailed inventory, showing the quantity, and so far as possible, the cost price to the seller of each article to be included in the sale; and unless such purchaser shall at least five days before the sale, in good faith, make full, explicit inquiry of the seller as to the names and places of residence, or place of business of each and all the creditors of the seller, and unless the purchaser shall at least five days before sale, in good faith, notify or cause to be notified, personally or by registered mail, each of the creditors of the seller of whom the purchaser has knowledge, or can, with the exercise of reasonable diligence, acquire knowledge, of the proposed sale and of the cost price of the merchandise to be sold, and the price proposed to be paid therefor by the purchaser; and the seller shall, at least five days before such sale, fully and truthfully answer in writing each and all of said inquiries; provided, however, no suit shall be brought or maintained by any creditor against such seller or purchaser within five days after he receives notice from any source of the intended sale and purchase, and any suit so brought shall be dismissed at the cost of the plaintiff in the case. Whenever such notice is sent by registered mail the creditor or person to whom it is mailed shall be presumed conclusively to have received the same and the time of such reception shall be the date of the mailing of said notice.

Service. — In the circuit courts process must be served on the defendant not less than five days before the first day of the ensuing term. The pleadings are required to be made up at the return term, and trial and judgment may be had at the second term.

Process in cases in the chancery courts must be executed on defendants not less than five days before the following term or following rule day. The rule days are the first Mondays of each month. Process may be made returnable to a rule day or to the first day of the term following the service. The defendant is required to enter appearance and file demurrer, plea, or answer within three days of the return day, that day being one of the three.

In the regular course of proceeding in cases where personal service of the writ is had on the defendant, trial and judgment may be had in cases before justices of the peace, in very short time, say in from one to three days after service of the writ; in cases (where defendant puts in a dilatory or real plea) in the courts of law (circuit courts), in about eight months after service of the writ; in cases in chancery courts (where defense is made), in from eight to twelve months after service of the writ. Often, however, longer time elapses between the beginning of a suit and the end by judgment or decree.

In cases where parties defendant are not resident in the State, or cannot be found for personal service of process, the courts obtain jurisdiction of the specific property, the subject of the suit, by publication of a notice in a newspaper.

Stay of Execution. — See Execution.

Supplementary Proceedings. — See Garnishment; Execution.

Tax Law. — Taxes are a lien on the lands on which they are assessed, as of January 10 of each year, and are due on the first Monday of October of each year. No fine or penalties can be affixed for the non-payment of taxes until the month of February following the previous year of assessment. The collection of delinquent taxes is provided for from time to time by the general assembly and in view of this frequent change it is not deemed necessary to give the present system.

Tax sales have reasonable validity given them by the courts. Intendments are in favor of the regularity of the proceedings.

The legislature of the State enacts what rate of taxation shall be assessed on property, etc., for state purposes each year. The county court (the justices of the peace) of each county levies the rate of taxation for county purposes, subject to an extent to the general law applicable to all the counties. The city council of municipalities levies the rate of taxation for their respective cities, subject generally to a limit prescribed by general statutes.

Taxes on land are a personal debt of the taxpayer, and where the land is owned by one for life the taxes must be assessed and paid by such life tenant. They are not a lien on the fee, and hence on the falling in of the life estate of such life tenant before payment, or a final decree to enforce the same, the lien and tax are lost.

The tax on foreign corporations, like domestic, is ad valorem on the actual cash value of its capital stock, including its franchises, easements, incorporeal rights and privileges, and shall not be less than the actual cash value of its shares of stock and bonded debt. In counties having a population of fifty thousand or more, assessments are made by an assessor elected by the people every four years. In other counties each civil district elects an assessor for the district. They shall assess personal property annually, and real estate every two years. The comptroller of the state treasury shall prepare the assessment schedule and furnish same to the various county court clerks, who shall, in turn, furnish same to the assessors. The assessors shall report said assessments to the county court clerks on or before the first Monday of June each year as to personalty privileges and polls, and same every two years as to realty. Reports shall be made for each current year, January 1 to January 1. The report for realty stands good for two years. Taxes shall be due and payable on the first Monday of October of each year. If not paid before March 1 following, interest shall accrue thereon from that time, and a penalty of one per cent. per month is added thereto for such delinquency. Distress warrants shall issue on March 1 leviable on personal property of delinquents, and if not then satisfied on the 1st of May the property taxed shall be advertised for sale and sold the first Monday in June following.

A foreign corporation doing business in Tennessee is taxed the same as a home corporation.

Taxes are also assessed and collected by chartered municipalities upon all property within their corporate limits, including the property of foreign corporations, its stocks, franchises, easements, etc. Cities usually have their own tax assessors and collectors, but when they have none the county trustees collect for such municipalities. (Sup. pp. 110, 209, 71, 75.)

Testimony. — In civil causes persons are not incompetent as witnesses because parties to the suit or interested in the issue. (Code (M. & V.), § 4563c; Acts 1869-70, ch. 68, § 1.)

In actions by or against executors, administrators, or guardians, in which judgment may be rendered for or against them, neither party shall be allowed to testify against the other as to any transaction with or statement by the testator, ward, or intestate, unless called to testify thereto by the opposite party. (Code (M. & V.), § 4565; Acts 1869-70, ch. 78, § 1.) Husband and wife are competent witnesses in a cause to which they are parties, but neither shall testify to any matter that occurred between them by virtue or in consequence of the marital relation. (Act of March 27, 1879.)

Trust Deeds. — See Mortgages.

Wills. — No last will or testament shall be good or sufficient to convey or give an estate in lands unless written in the testator's lifetime and signed by him, or by some other person in his presence and by his direction, and subscribed in his presence by two witnesses at least, neither of whom is interested in the devise of the said lands. (Code (M. & V.), § 3003.) But a paper writing, appearing to be the will of a deceased person, written wholly by him, having his name subscribed to it, or inserted in some part of it, and found, after his death, among his valuable papers, or lodged in the hands of another for safe-keeping, shall be good and sufficient to give and convey lands, if the handwriting is generally known by his acquaintances, and it is proved by at least three credible witnesses that they verily believe the writing and every part of it to be in his hand. (Code (M. & V.), § 3004.)

Every devise shall convey the entire estate of the testator in the lands, unless the contrary intent plainly appear from the words and context of the will. (Code (M. & V.), § 3005.)

No nuncupative will shall be good where the estate exceeds two hundred and fifty dollars, unless proved by two disinterested witnesses present at the making thereof; and unless they, or some of them, were especially required to bear witness thereto, by the testator himself; and unless it was made in his last sickness, in his own habitation or dwelling-house, or where he had been previously residing ten days at least, except he be surprised by sickness on a journey or from home and dies without returning to his dwelling. (Code (M. & V.), § 3006.) No nuncupative will shall be proved by the witnesses after six months from the making, unless it were put in writing within ten days; nor shall it be proved till fourteen days after the death of the testator; nor till process has issued to call in the widow or next of kin, or both, if conveniently to be found, to contest it. (Code (M. & V.), § 3007.)

No written will shall be revoked or altered by a subsequent nuncupative will, unless the same be in the lifetime of the testator reduced to writing and read over to him and approved; and unless the same be proved to have been so done by the oaths of two witnesses at least who shall be such as are admissible in trials at common law. (Code (M. & V.), § 3008.)

Wills executed in other States, or in any of the Territories, or in the District of Columbia, shall be proved according to the laws of this State, and certified in the manner prescribed by the Act of Congress of 1790, Session 2, chapter 11. A copy of a will so certified shall be registered in the county where the land lies, and a copy from the books of the register duly certified shall be evidence. And where the last will and testament of any person deceased is proved in a court of any State or Territory of the United States, or before the mayor of any city, any person interested may present a copy thereof, duly authenticated, to the county court of any county in the State where the land or estate devised or disposed of by the will is situated; and thereupon such court may order the same to be filed and recorded; and said copy, when so recorded, shall have the same force and effect as if the original had been executed in this State, and proved or allowed in the courts of this State. And where the same is proved before the mayor of any city or corporation, the authentication shall be under the hand of the mayor and the seal of the city or corporation. Such copy so authenticated, or a copy thereof when recorded, certified by the clerk of the court in this State where the same is recorded, shall be evidence, and said will, if proved according to the laws of this State as to wills executed within this State, shall be sufficient to pass lands and other estates. (Code (M. & V.), §§ 3022-3028.)

As to wills of personalty, no subscribing witnesses are necessary.

There is no statutory restriction regarding the right of a deviser to leave his property to charitable objects, other than that affecting the right of the wife to homestead and dower in the property of which he dies seized. Children may be disinherited.

Foreign Wills. — When the last will and testament of any resident of a foreign country, devising lands in this State, has been or shall be probated in said country before a probate court or probate officer, and the record of such probate, by its recitals or otherwise, shows that the facts necessary under the laws of this State to the validity of a will of realty were proven before said probate court or officer by such witnesses and in such a manner as are required by the laws of the State, a copy of said foreign probate, including said will, authenticated as hereinafter provided, may be presented to the county court of any county in this State where the land devised or any part thereof is located; and said court, if it finds and adjudges that said copy and said probate conform to the requirements of this act, shall order the same to be recorded as the will of such foreign testator, and letters testamentary may issue thereon. The copy of said foreign will and probate shall be authenticated by the official attestation of the clerk or officer in whose custody such records are legally kept, and by the certificate of the judge or one of the judges or magistrates of said court, or by the certificate of said probate officer, that the person so attesting is the clerk or officer legally intrusted with the custody of said record, and that the signature to his attestation is genuine; said certificate shall be under the seal of the court or probate officer if it or he have one. Should the probate officer exercising the probate jurisdiction be also the custodian of said records, he shall certify in his double capacity. When such wills and probates are recorded, or such wills probated in this State as hereinbefore provided for, such records or probates shall have the same force and effect as to said real estate as the probate in this State of wills of resident citizens of the State have as to lands in this State devised by them, but nothing in this act is to prevent proving said wills as at common law and without probate. Said wills shall, as to real estate, be to the same extent and in the same manner as said domestic wills subject to contest in the State, and certified copies of the record in the county court shall be available as evidence as are copies of said domestic wills and probate thereof; provided, however, that nothing in this act shall apply to wills dated more than fifty years prior to the date of the passage of this act. (Acts 1909, ch. 87.)

TEXAS LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Baker, Botts, Parker & Garwood, of Houston.

The next legislature convenes January, 1919.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds; also Affidavits, etc.

Actions. — Suits are brought by petition clearly setting out the plaintiff's cause of action and prayer for relief, without any distinction between law and equity, upon which citation issues to the defendant, and if he be a non-resident of the county where suit is brought, a copy of the petition is served.

The defense is by answer, and the defendant may "plead at the same time as many several matters of law or fact as he shall think necessary for his defense;" but they must be filed in due order of pleading, which is understood to mean the order of pleading at common law. He may plead set-offs or cross-actions in reconvention. If he deny the execution of a writing declared on, or the consideration of such writing, the plea must be verified by oath. So a petition which prays for an attachment, injunction, sequestration, or other process by which property is sought to be seized, must be verified by affidavit.

To compel a defendant to answer at the next term of any court, the citation must be served on him ten entire days before the first day of the term. See Service.

The answer must be put in on or before the second day of the term in the district or county court, and appearance must be made on the first day of the term in justices' courts, otherwise the plaintiff is entitled to judgment final by default in cases where the demand is liquidated, and in other cases by default with a writ of inquiry. For security of costs, etc., see Costs.

In justices' courts the pleadings are ore tenus, with the exception, that the plaintiff first files a statement of his claim; and if the defendant plead any matter in abatement it must be in writing. In other respects the proceedings are substantially the same as in the district courts except that no charges are given, the jury passing on both law and facts.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits, Acknowledgments, etc. — Oaths and affirmations are required to be administered in the mode most binding on the conscience, and shall be taken subject to the pains and penalties of perjury.

Affidavits may be made in all cases by an agent or attorney cognizant of the facts. They shall be in writing and signed by the party making the same.

The following officers are authorized to take affidavits and acknowledgments or proof of instruments for record, and give certificates thereof, and take depositions: 1. In this State, any clerk of the district court, any judge or clerk of the county court, or any notary public within their several counties. 2. Without this State and within the United States, any clerk of a court of record having a seal, any notary public, or any commissioner of deeds duly appointed under the laws of this State within some other State or Territory. 3. Without the United States, any notary public or any minister, commissioner, or chargé d'affaires of the United States resident in and accredited to the country where the affidavit, acknowledgment, or deposition may be taken; or any consul general, consul, vice consul, commercial agent, vice commercial agent, deputy consul, or consular agent of the United States resident in such country. (Rev. Statutes, 1911.) The official character of a foreign notary public need not be attested except by his own seal. Secretary of state certifies to official character of notaries, commissioners, etc., when desired.

Aliens. — Aliens have such rights to personal property as are or shall be accorded citizens of the United States by the laws of the nation to which they belong, or by treaty of the United States with such nation. By Act of April 12, 1892 (took effect July 12, 1892), lands "now owned" by aliens are secured to them. Aliens who are inhabitants of the State may acquire and hold lands during residence, with right to alienate same within ten years after ceasing to be such inhabitant. Aliens may acquire and hold lands in any incorporated or platted city, town, or village without restriction. Aliens may hereafter acquire and hold other lands in course of justice in collection of debts, and acquire and enforce liens thereon, or take by devise or descent; but unless they become inhabitants or declare their intention of becoming citizens, they must alienate same within ten years, or same will be subject to escheat: proceeds of sale, less costs, to be held for alien owner.

Appeals. — All appeals are taken in first instance to the Courts of Civil Appeals. The Supreme Court has revising jurisdiction over final judgments of the Courts of Civil Appeals as to matters of law, by writ of error granted by the Supreme Court itself on petition showing grounds therefor. This jurisdiction also extends to judgments not final (or conclusive of case) in cases where the State or Railroad Commission is party, or the construction of the Constitution, or a law of the United States or validity of a state statute or title to a state office, or contradictory decisions of courts of civil appeals, or disagreements of judges thereof, are involved. A Commission of Appeals sitting in two sections was established in 1918, to assist the Supreme Court in its appellate jurisdiction. Causes pending in the Supreme Court may be transferred (1) by consent of litigants, or (2) at instance of the Supreme Court. The Commission reports its recommendations to the Supreme Court accompanied by written opinion; the Supreme Court acts upon recommendations and announces its own decision. From the district court to the Court of Civil Appeals, appeals can be taken from final judgments, and from interlocutory orders appointing receivers or trustees or granting or dissolving temporary injunctions and from sustaining or overruling a plea of privilege. They are allowed upon notice given in open courts, and in civil cases must, in order to obtain supersedeas, be supported by bond to the opposite party with sureties in double the amount of the judgment and probable amount of all costs, to be fixed by the clerk. The bond must be filed and approved by the clerk of the court within twenty days from the adjournment of the court, or, if term of court may by law continue longer than eight weeks, within twenty days from notice of appeal, if appellant resides in the county, or thirty days if he resides out of county. The record must be filed in the Court of Civil Appeals within ninety days from date of filing bond.

Writs of error are used as only another mode of appeal to the Courts of Civil Appeal, and can be sued out at any time within one year from the date of the judgment. To obtain supersedeas, bond must be given in like manner as in cases of appeal. This writ is obtained by filing a petition addressed to the clerk of the court praying for it, and by serving copy of the same with citation on defendant in error.

Appeals and writs of error can also be obtained by giving bond for costs, but in such case no supersedeas will issue.

Appeals and writs of error from the county courts can be taken in civil cases to the Court of Civil Appeals, under the same regulations that are provided in reference to the district court.

Appeals may be taken from justices' courts in civil cases to the county courts, when the judgment, or amount in controversy, exclusive of costs, exceeds twenty dollars, by giving bond within ten days to the opposite party to be approved by the justice. Such appeal must be filed at the next term of the county court, where it is docketed and the cause is tried de novo. Retrial of such cases may also be obtained by a writ of certiorari from the county court, on a proper showing on oath, and bond, filed within ninety days from date of judgment. The judgment of the county court upon such retrial is final where the amount or value in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars exclusive of interest and costs.

Arrest. — Imprisonment for debt is abolished.

Assignments. — Except as affected by the National Bankruptcy Act of 1898, the following statute respecting assignments is in force.

Assignments for the benefit of creditors, made by any debtor, insolvent, or in contemplation of insolvency, must provide for the distribution of all the estate, real and personal, of such debtor, except such as is exempt by law from execution, among his creditors, in proportion to their respective claims; and shall be so construed and enforced, however expressed. The assignment should be authenticated for record in the same manner as conveyances of real estate or other property. The law requires that the assignment have annexed an inventory of all the creditors of the assignor, giving places of residence, if known, the amount and nature of their respective claims, the consideration of each and the place where debt arose, a statement of any judgment or other lien securing any debt; a full inventory of the debtor's estate, real and personal, in law or in equity, at date of assignment, and the liens thereon, and all vouchers and securities relating thereto, and the value of such estate; which inventory shall be sworn to. The benefits of the assignment may be limited to such creditors as will accept the same in full discharge of the debtor, but such discharge shall not take effect as to creditors who receive less than one third of their debts. The assignee is required, within thirty days from the date of the assignment, to give public notice of his appointment in a newspaper of the county where the assignor resides or does his principal business, or in the nearest newspaper, for three weeks; and also in person or by mail to each creditor, where he can do so. Each creditor consenting to the terms of the assignment must in writing make known to the assignee his consent within four months after the publication above provided for, and no creditor failing so to do will be permitted to receive the benefits of the assignment; provided, however, that any creditor who had no actual notice of the assignment, and shall give in his consent before distribution, is entitled to receive his share. The receipt of any portion of his claim from the assignee by any creditor is made conclusive evidence of the assent of such creditor.

The assignee is required to place the assignment on record forthwith, and shall, before taking possession of the estate, execute a bond with sureties, to be approved by the judge of the district court or county court, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties under the assignment; which bond may be sued on by the assignor or any creditor or creditors, severally or jointly, for any damage arising from its breach. Creditors assenting to the assignment must, within six months from the time of publication first made of appointment of assignee, file with the assignee a distinct statement of the nature and amount of their claims against the debtor, which must be supported by the oath of the creditor, his agent or attorney, that the statement is true, that the debt is just, and that there are no credits or offsets that should be allowed against the claim, except as shown by the statement. Such statement prima facie justifies the assignee in allowing it as a valid claim, and it must be so allowed and paid, unless the assignor, or some creditor disputing it shall, within sixty days after the expiration of the six months within which claims are to be filed, institute an action in the district or county court of the proper county to set aside the allowance and restrain payment on such claim: for which a remedy is provided, by injunction or otherwise, to try the justness and validity of such disputed claim. If it appears that an action at law could not be maintained on such claim by the creditor against the assignor, the allowance will be set aside, in whole or in part, as the case may be. The assignee shall allow copies taken of any creditor's statement for the purpose of investigation if desired. Claims not due may be allowed at present value on the basis of the stipulated or legal interest, as the case may be.

Any claim for which the owner holds part security may be allowed for unsecured balance, after deducting the value of the security as estimated by the assignee.

Any creditor not consenting to the assignment may garnish the assignee for any excess of the estate after payment of expenses and the debts of consenting creditors.

Property transferred by the assignor previous to and in contemplation of such assignment, with intent to defeat, delay, or defraud creditors, or give preference to one creditor over another, passes to the assignee by such assignment, or may be recovered in his name by any creditor and brought into the estate for distribution. But if in any action for such property it appear that the purchaser bought in good faith for a valuable consideration, without any reason to believe that the debtor was transferring the same with the intent above stated, such purchaser shall hold as against the assignee and creditors.

No assignment is void for want of an inventory annexed; but the absence of such inventory is made prima facie evidence of the withholding of a part of his estate from the assignee by the debtor, unless, upon request, he supply the defect; and any assignee or creditor upon application may compel the debtor to disclose under oath, before the district or county judge, either in term time or vacation, any information he has as to any concealment of estate. It is made felony in any assignor to conceal from his assignee any of his estate other than such as is exempt by law from execution; or to transfer any of his property previous to or in contemplation of an assignment, with the intent to defraud his creditors.

Whenever the assignee has sufficient funds of the estate on hand to pay ten per cent. of the debts due by the assignor, he is required to make distribution among the creditors entitled.

The assignee is entitled to reasonable compensation for services, necessary costs, expenses, and attorneys' fees, — to be fixed, in case of dispute, by the judge of the county or district court.

On a final report of the assignee showing under oath the assets that have come into his hands and how he has disbursed the same, such report is placed on record in the office of the county clerk, and no action can be brought against the assignee by reason of anything shown by such report, unless brought within twelve months from the time of the filing thereof. Any funds remaining in hands of assignee at time of making final report are required to be deposited in the district court, subject to its decree.

Attachments. — The judges and clerks of the district and county courts, and justices of the peace, may issue writs of original attachment, returnable to their respective courts, upon the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, making an affidavit in writing stating: 1. That the defendant is justly indebted to the plaintiff and the amount of the demand; and 2. That the defendant is not a resident of the State, or is a foreign corporation, or is acting as such; or 3. That he is about to remove permanently out of the State, and has refused to pay or secure the debt due the plaintiff; or 4. That he secretes himself, so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served on him; or 5. That he has secreted his property for the purpose of defrauding his creditors; or 6. That he is about to secrete his property for the purpose of defrauding his creditors; or 7. That he is about to remove his property out of the State, without leaving sufficient remaining for the payment of his debts; or 8. That he is about to remove his property, or a part thereof, out of the county where the suit is brought, with intent to defraud his creditors; or 9. That he has disposed of his property, in whole or in part, with intent to defraud his creditors; or 10. That he is about to dispose of his property with intent to defraud his creditors; or 11. That he is about to convert his property, or a part thereof, into money, for the purpose of placing it beyond the reach of his creditors; or 12. That the debt is due for property obtained under false pretenses. The affidavit shall further state: 1. That the attachment is not sued out for the purpose of injuring or harassing the defendant; and 2. That the plaintiff will probably lose his debt unless such attachment is issued.

The plaintiff must also execute bond with two or more sureties, approved by the officer issuing the writ, payable to the defendant in at least double the amount sworn to be due, conditioned that plaintiff will prosecute his suit to effect and pay all such damages and costs as may be adjudged against him for wrongfully suing out such attachment. There is no requirement that bondsmen be owners of real estate. No such attachment shall issue until the suit has been duly instituted, but it may be issued in a proper case, either at the commencement of the suit or at any time during its progress.

The writ of attachment above provided for may issue, although the plaintiff's debt or demand be not due, and the same proceedings shall be had thereon as in other cases, except that no final judgment shall be rendered against the defendant until such debt or demand shall become due.

The defendant may replevy property attached, on giving bond with two sureties in double the amount of the plaintiff's debt sued on, or double the value of the property replevied, as estimated by the officer, conditioned for the satisfaction of any judgment against him for the debt or payment of the value of the property replevied, with interest from the date of bond. Subsequent attachments may be levied, but the priority of attachment liens exists as at common law, except that levy on land must be registered with county clerk. When a second or subsequent attachment is set aside, the actual injury to the property seized by virtue of such attachment alone would ordinarily be the measure of liability on the bond.

Any person other than the defendant may claim any personal property levied on. See Trial of Right of Property.

Chattel Mortgages. — Any instrument intended to operate as a lien upon personal property, not accompanied by immediate delivery and followed by actual change of possession, is void as against creditors of, and subsequent purchasers or lienholders in good faith from, the mortgagor; unless such instrument or a true copy thereof be forthwith deposited and filed in the office of the county clerk of the county where the property is situate, or, if the mortgagor be a resident of this State, then in the county of his residence. The paper so filed remains in the office; and if a copy, it shall be by the clerk compared with the original, which in this case must be acknowledged as for record, or witnessed by two subscribing witnesses, and must be found a true copy. Sale under a power is valid.

The chattel mortgage registration statute has been amended so that where any machinery or other manufactured article of a character that may become a fixture, is affixed to realty, the filing of the lien or mortgage, provided it contains an adequate description, not only of the machinery, etc., but also of the real estate, is notice to all persons dealing with the machinery or the real estate. This character of chattel mortgage must be indorsed, "Liens on machinery situated on realty." A special index is required to be kept.

Such instruments will be presumed paid and be destroyed at the expiration of six years after the date of maturity of the debts they were given to secure, unless the owner or holder thereof, his agent or attorney, shall within three months before the expiration of said time file an affidavit that the debt has not been paid and showing the amount still due thereon.

If the person granting such lien remove the property from the county, or sell or dispose of the same, without consent of the mortgagee, the mortgagee becomes entitled to the possession of the property and immediate sale thereof for the payment of his debt, whether due or not. The clerk's fee is twenty-five cents for receiving, filing, and entering such instruments, and the same for entering satisfaction thereof.

Any form of lien attempted to be given by the owner of any stock of goods daily exposed to sale, in the regular course of the business of such merchandise, and contemplating a continuance of possession of said goods and control of business and sales by such owner, is void. See Conditional Sales.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — Claims not presented within a year from the grant of letters will be postponed until those presented within that time are paid. No claim against the deceased shall be allowed by the executor or administrator or approved by the court "unless it is accompanied by an affidavit in writing that the claim is just, and that all legal offsets, payments, and credits known to affiant have been allowed." If made by other than the owner of the claim, such affidavit must state that affiant is cognizant of the facts stated. Proof may be made before any officer authorized to administer oaths and give certificates thereof. See Affidavits, etc. Notice to creditors to present claims is required to be given by publication in local or nearest newspaper by the administrator or executor. Unless excused by will, administrators and executors must give bonds in double the value of estate.

Letters of administration are granted to the surviving husband or wife, or next of kin in order of kinship, or to a creditor, or to any resident of the county. Non-resident kin may act or nominate others to act in their stead.

When a properly authenticated claim is presented to an administrator or executor, such administrator or executor shall indorse thereon or annex a memorandum signed by him, stating the time it was presented, and that he allows or rejects the claim in whole or in part. If allowed, it must within twelve months from the grant of letters testamentary be presented to the county clerk, and the amount and date of claim, with date of allowance, be entered upon the claim docket kept by the county clerk. If the claim is rejected by the administrator or disapproved by the judge, the claimant must institute suit to establish it within three months. The widow is entitled, whether estate is solvent or not, to the homestead, or if none an allowance in lieu thereof, and also a year's support. See Exemptions.

Debts due from an estate are paid in the following order: 1st. Funeral expenses and expenses of last sickness if presented in sixty days after grant of letters, otherwise deferred to second class. 2d. All expenses of administration, including the allowance for a year's support to widow and children, and allowance in lieu of homestead and other exempted property, and expenses incurred in the preservation, safe-keeping, and management of the estate. 3d. Debts secured by mortgage or having a lien on specific property, so far as such property is concerned. 4th. Other debts presented within twelve months. 5th. Other debts. The statute provides that it is not intended to impair or defeat the vendor's lien on a homestead, or the lien held by mechanics for improvements, or taxes due on such homestead, or the landlord's lien for rents and advances, or a lien given by one prior to marriage or a lien given by husband and wife, acknowledged in a manner legally binding upon the wife. Annual accounts of condition of estates are required to be made.

Claims, Proof of. — See Evidence, for affidavit to prove "open account," and see Assignments, for proof of claims against insolvent estates, and see Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Conditional Sales of chattels, where the vendee takes possession, are treated as mortgages, and must be registered as against creditors and innocent purchasers.

Consignments. — The embezzlement or fraudulent misapplication or conversion of consigned property, or its proceeds, by a factor, commission merchant, bailee, or agent, etc., is made punishable as theft; i. e. felony if over fifty dollars with punishment two to ten years in the penitentiary, and if under fifty dollars by fine not over five hundred dollars, or one year in jail, or both.

Corporations. — There is a general law, of the usual character as in other States, for the creation of private corporations in Texas. Foreign corporations must file certified copy of charters with the secretary of state and procure permit to do business, otherwise they cannot sue in state courts. Fees: for permit to do business in the State good for ten years, capital stock ten thousand dollars or less, fifty dollars; for each additional ten thousand dollars and fraction thereof, ten dollars, but the fee to be paid by any foreign corporation for permit to engage in the operation of cars, or to engage in operating telegraph lines, shall in no event exceed ten thousand dollars; mutual building and loan companies, whose stock is not permanent but withdrawable, — fee for capital stock one hundred thousand dollars or less, fifty dollars, and ten dollars for each additional one hundred thousand dollars; in case such corporation is a foreign one, the fee is based on the capital invested in Texas, but the minimum is two hundred and fifty dollars and the maximum is twenty-five hundred dollars; and the maximum fee for permit to foreign corporations to engage in loaning money in Texas is one thousand dollars. Franchise taxes, payable annually, one dollar on each one thousand dollars and fractional part thereof of the authorized capital stock up to and including one hundred thousand dollars; two dollars on each five thousand dollars and fractional part thereof of such stock in excess of one hundred thousand dollars up to and including one million dollars, and two dollars on each twenty thousand dollars and fractional part thereof of such stock in excess of one million dollars and up to and including ten million dollars; and two dollars on each fifty thousand dollars of such stock in excess of ten million dollars. The franchise tax to be computed upon the basis of the total amount of the capital stock issued and outstanding plus the surplus and undivided profits of the corporations instead of upon the authorized capital stock, whenever such total amount exceeds the authorized capital stock. The franchise tax payable by foreign corporations is computed on a proportionate amount of its capital stock issued and outstanding, plus the surplus and undivided profits, instead of upon a proportionate amount of the authorized capital stock, whenever such total amount exceeds the authorized capital stock; such proportionate amount is determined by the relation such proportionate amount bears to the total capital stock, as hereinbefore defined, as the annual gross receipts within the State bears to the grand total annual gross receipts. Charges for permit and franchise taxes are both payable to the secretary of state. A permit is good for ten years, but the franchise taxes are payable annually on or before the first day of May. Penalty for failure to pay franchise taxes, forfeiture of right to do business in State. Same result necessarily follows failure to renew permit at expiration of ten years. Corporations are taxed as individuals, and by recent statutes numerous special taxes in the nature of taxes on gross receipts and on intangible assets are levied upon various classes of corporations and persons engaged in particular pursuits. See under head of Taxes in this compilation. Domestic corporations are required to pay the following franchise taxes on the first day of May each year to the secretary of state; fifty cents on each one thousand dollars and fractional part thereof of the authorized capital stock of the corporation up to and including one million dollars; and twenty-five cents on each one thousand dollars and fractional part thereof of such stock in excess of one million dollars. Tax to be computed on stock actually issued and outstanding plus surplus or undivided profits, when the aggregate of these exceeds the authorized capital stock.

Corporations are not limited in borrowing to any amount fixed by reference to the authorized capital stock; this limitation has been repealed.

All of the authorized capital stock must be subscribed; at least fifty per cent. paid in before the charter will be filed. The remainder must be paid in two years or charter will be forfeited. An amount equal to one thousand dollars per mile of road must be subscribed and at least five per cent. of the amount subscribed paid in to the directors of a railroad company at the time of organization. The amount of the capital stock of insurance companies shall not be less than one hundred thousand dollars, fully paid, at the time of organization. Ordinarily, the number of directors of a corporation must not be less than three nor more than thirteen; insurance companies, not less than seven nor more than thirteen; railroad companies, not less than seven nor more than nine. Generally, directors are not required to be citizens of Texas, but the majority of the directors of domestic railroad companies must be citizens of this State. All domestic corporations must maintain their principal offices within this State. The liability of stockholders is limited to the amount unpaid on the capital stock subscribed or held by them.

Corporations, except railway, telegraph, express companies, created for profit must pay a charter fee of fifty dollars when charter is filed, provided the authorized capital stock does not exceed ten thousand dollars, and a further fee of ten dollars for each additional ten thousand dollars of authorized capital stock or fractional part thereof. Benevolent corporations, or corporations not created for profit, must pay a charter fee of ten dollars.

Insolvent corporations, foreign or domestic, are prohibited from doing business in this State or from exercising any franchise, permit, or charter granted by the State.

Any private corporation may be sued in any county in which the cause of action, or any part thereof, accrued, or the corporation has an agency, or in which it has its principal office; or, if a railroad, in any county through which its road runs, and service may be had upon any principal officer or local agent. For injury to or death of passengers, loss or damage to freight, etc., transported by two or more railroads, in any county through or into which either railroad runs.

Corporations under the general law may convey their property by deed under their common seal signed by the president, presiding member, or trustee thereof; or in common form without seal by their attorneys in fact where the instruments constituting such attorneys in fact are executed in the foregoing manner. See Deeds, Acknowledgments, etc.

Corporations owning, leasing, or operating in cities or towns of more than twenty-five hundred population according to the last official census of the United States, a street railway, electric light or power plant furnishing light or power to the public, gas plant furnishing gas to the public, water plant furnishing water to the public, and sewerage company furnishing sewerage to the public, are required to make, on the first day of March each year, a report to the secretary of state showing the capital stock, bonded indebtedness, liens and mortgages, floating indebtedness, value of visible property, annual cost of operating, annual gross earnings, and other particulars.

There is no distinction between foreign and domestic corporations as to their capacity to hold lands in this State, except such foreign corporations as fall under the denomination of aliens. The alien land law prohibits any alien or person who is not a citizen of the United States from acquiring title to or owning any lands in the State of Texas unless the alien shall become a bona fide inhabitant of the State; aliens may acquire any interest in lands in the ordinary courts of justice in the collection of debts, or by devise or descent, but lands thus acquired by non-resident aliens are required to be disposed of within ten years.

No private corporation whose main purpose or business is the acquisition of land by purchase, lease, or otherwise is permitted to acquire any land in this State. Private corporations whose main business is not the acquisition or ownership of lands are permitted to acquire such lands as may be necessary to enable them to carry on their business; and such corporations acquiring more land than is necessary in carrying on their business are required to dispose of the same within fifteen years, upon pain of having the lands escheated by the State.

Costs. — Each party is responsible for his own costs. The plaintiff may be ruled by the opposite party or the officers of court to give security for costs at any stage of the proceedings. Costs are demandable at the close of each term, and execution therefor may be issued against the parties respectively.

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for Texas.

Deeds, Acknowledgments, etc. — Technical words are not essential in passing a fee simple, and alienations purporting to pass a greater estate than the person lawfully possessed shall operate as alienation of so much as he might lawfully convey. A seal is not necessary to the validity of a deed, or any other instrument whatever, except instruments executed by corporations, which require their corporate seal.

An estate in futuro may be created by deed in like manner as by will.

A deed to be entitled to registry must be signed by the party making it, or by his authority, and acknowledged before some person authorized to take acknowledgment of deeds; or the deed must be signed by the party making it, or by his authority, and by two credible witnesses to the signature, and in such case the deed may be acknowledged by the grantor or proved for record by one of the subscribing witnesses. The witnesses must sign the deed at the request of the grantor.

The execution of an instrument may be established for record by proof of the handwriting of the grantor and of at least one of the subscribing witnesses in the following cases: 1. Where the grantor and all the subscribing witnesses are dead; or 2. Are non-residents of this State; or 3. Their place of residence is unknown to and cannot be ascertained by the persons desiring the proof; or 4. When the subscribing witnesses have been convicted of a felony, become of unsound mind, or otherwise incompetent to testify; 5. When any of the foregoing facts exist as to subscribing witnesses, and the grantor refuses to acknowledge the execution of the instrument for record. The evidence taken must satisfy the officer that: 1. One or more of the foregoing conditions exist; and 2. That the witness testifying knew the person whose name purports to be subscribed to the instrument as a party, and is well acquainted with his signature, and that it is genuine; and 3. That he personally knew the person who subscribed the same as a witness and is acquainted with his signature, and that it is genuine; and 4. The place of residence of the witness testifying. If the grantor signed by making his mark, only the handwriting of the witnesses need be proved. Proofs must be made by disinterested persons by deposition or affidavit in writing, and the same, with the officer's certificate, shall be attached to the instrument.

Instruments may be authenticated for record before any of the officers named under head Affidavits, Acknowledgments, etc. To this end they are empowered to administer oaths, and affirmations, employ and swear interpreters, issue subpoenas, and punish for contempt.

The execution of any instrument by a married woman must be personally acknowledged by her in form of law.

"No acknowledgment of any instrument of writing shall be taken unless the officer taking it knows or has satisfactory evidence, on oath or affirmation of a creditable witness, which shall be noted in his certificate, that the person making such acknowledgment is the individual who executed, and is described in, the instrument."

The certificate of the officer may be either written or printed; it may be pasted on the instrument authenticated, and may be in the following prescribed statutory form: —

Depositions. — Testimony by deposition can be taken of all witnesses. Any party to a suit may take the depositions of any other party to that suit upon ex parte interrogatories, save only where a party to a suit is a corporation, in which event no party shall be permitted to take the ex parte depositions of any other.

To take the deposition of a witness, it is necessary that the opposite party or his attorney of record shall be served with notice, stating name and residence of witness, together with copy of interrogatories, five days before the commission will issue. At the expiration of that time the clerk of the court will issue a commission, with copy of interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, directed to any officer authorized to administer oaths and give certificates thereof. See Affidavits, Acknowledgments, etc.

In taking the testimony, the officer will make a caption, stating the name of the case, the appearance of the witness, etc., as is usual, and after swearing the witness will proceed to take his answers to the several interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, separately, which being written must be "sworn to and subscribed" by the witness, to which fact the officer must certify under his hand and official seal. If taken stenographically, the final copy in manuscript or typewriting must be signed by the witness.

Instructions for taking Depositions. — The person writing should be an officer of the class to whom the commission is directed. Upon receipt of the commission if the witness voluntarily appear, he may proceed with the examination; if the witness do not voluntarily appear (in this State), he has the power to issue a subpoena requiring his attendance at a given time and place. If within the county, and the witness refuse to appear in obedience to the subpoena, attachment may be issued by the officer to compel his attendance. Upon appearance of the witness the officer will proceed to swear him (or in case of conscientious scruples the witness may affirm), and take his answers to the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories in writing, seriatim; the officer may employ a sworn interpreter to facilitate taking testimony, the officer writing down the answers, which, when completed, must be signed by the witness.

STATE OF NEW YORK, } ss. { JOHN DOE vs. RICHARD ROE. No. in District Court
COUNTY OF NEW YORK, } { of Harris County, Texas.

By authority of the commission directed to me and interrogatories accompanying the same, which are hereto attached, from the clerk of the district court of Harris County, Texas, in the case of John Doe v. Richard Roe, now pending in said court, I caused to come before me at my office in the city and county of New York aforesaid, the witness John Jones, therein named, a resident of the county of New York, aged forty years, who being by me duly sworn to speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in answer to the several interrogatories and cross-interrogatories in said case propounded to him proceeded to answer the same as follows: —

In answer to interrogatory 1st, the witness says:

(Signature of witness at the end) JOHN JONES.

[Conclusion of Deposition.]

Which answers I caused to be reduced to writing, and they were sworn to and subscribed before me at my office in the city and county of New York aforesaid, on this 2d day of December, 19 by the said John Jones. In witness of which I have hereto set my hand and official seal.

(Signature and official title.)

The fees of the officer should be noted on the deposition, and if paid, by whom.

The officer will then attach the answers to the commission, interrogatories, and cross-interrogatories, and place them in an envelope, which the officer must seal up and write his name across the seal. He will further indorse on the envelope the names of the parties to the suit, and the name of the witness who has given his deposition, as "John Doe v. Richard Roe," "Deposition of John Jones." He will then direct the envelope to the clerk of the court from which the commission issued, as "To the clerk of the district court of Harris County, Houston, Texas." He must then himself deposit the package in the mail and certify on the envelope that he in person deposits it, giving the date and the post office where deposited.

Depositions may be returned by hand of the officer taking, or of another, in which event the person returning them must make affidavit that they have undergone no change.

These directions are usually fully given in the commission.

A party to a civil suit in district or county court may have the deposition of a witness taken orally by giving the opposite party or his attorney ten days' notice in writing, stating name of witness and time and place of taking the deposition. (But if the place be more than 100 miles from the court where suit is pending the opposite party may by notice to the first party or his attorney require the deposition to be taken upon written interrogatories, unless the judge of the court shall upon proper application after notice direct otherwise). After service of the notice the party serving same shall note on a true copy thereof the date and hour of service, upon whom served, and the manner of service. The party desiring to take the deposition orally shall file such true copy with the clerk and request the issuance of commission which shall issue ten days after service of the notice. It shall be styled and addressed as commissions to take depositions upon written interrogatories. Any of the officers named upon having the commission placed in his hands may subpoena the witness and compel him to testify. At the appointed time the parties or their attorneys may appear and examine the witness orally. His testimony shall be reduced to writing and returned in the same manner as depositions taken upon written interrogatories.

Descent and Distribution of Property. — When any person, having title to any estate of inheritance, real, personal, or mixed, shall die intestate as to such estate, and shall leave no surviving husband or wife, it shall descend and pass in parcenary to his or her kindred, male and female, in the following course: 1. To his or her children and their descendants, if any there be. 2. If there be no children nor their descendants, then to his or her father and mother, in equal portions. But if only the father or mother survive the intestate, then his or her estate shall be divided into two equal portions, one of which shall pass to such survivor, and the other half shall pass to the brothers and sisters of the deceased, and to their descendants, or to such of them as there be; but if there be none such, then the whole estate shall be inherited by the surviving father or mother. 3. If there be neither father nor mother, then the whole of such estate shall pass to the brothers and sisters of the intestate, and to their descendants or to such of them as there be. 4. If there be none of the kindred aforesaid, then the inheritance shall be divided into two moieties, one of which shall go to the paternal and the other to the maternal kindred, in the following course, that is to say: To the grandfather and grandmother, in equal portions; but if only one of these be living, then the estate shall be divided into two equal parts, one of which shall go to such survivor and the other shall go to the descendant or descendants of such deceased grandfather or grandmother. If there be no such descendants, then the whole estate shall be inherited by the surviving grandfather or grandmother. If there be no surviving grandfather or grandmother, then the whole of such estate shall go to their descendants, or to such of them as there be, and so on without end, passing in like manner to the nearest lineal ancestors and their descendants, or to such of them as there be.

When any person, having title to any estate of inheritance, real, personal, or mixed, shall die intestate as to such estate, and shall leave a surviving husband or wife, the estate of such intestate shall descend and pass as follows: 1. If the deceased have a child or children, or their descendants, the surviving husband or wife shall take one third of the personal estate, and the balance of such personal estate shall go to the child or children of the deceased, and their descendants — the surviving husband or wife shall also be entitled to an estate for life, in one third of the land of the intestate, with the remainder to the child or children of the intestate and their descendants. 2. If the deceased have no child or children, or their descendants, then the surviving husband or wife shall be entitled to all the personal estate, and to one half of the lands of the intestate, without remainder to any person or persons, and the other half shall pass and be inherited according to the rules of descent and distribution, as prescribed in the foregoing sections of this act: provided, however, that if the deceased have neither surviving father nor mother, nor surviving brothers and sisters, or their descendants, then the surviving husband or wife shall be entitled to the whole of the estate of such intestate, real, personal, and mixed.

The community property (that is, such as is purchased or acquired by onerous title during marriage) all goes to the surviving husband or wife, if the deceased have no children.

No right of inheritance shall accrue to any person whatsoever, other than to children of the intestate, unless they be in being and capable in law to take as heirs at the time of the intestate's death. In cases before mentioned, where the inheritance is directed to pass to the collateral kindred of the intestate, if part of such collaterals be of the whole blood, and the other part of the half blood only, of the intestate, those of the half blood shall inherit only half so much as those of the whole blood; but if all be of the half blood, they shall have whole portions.

Where the children of the intestate's brothers and sisters, uncles and aunts, or any other relations of the deceased standing in the same degree, come into the partition, they shall take per capita, that is to say, by persons; and where a part of them being dead, and a part living, the issue of those dead have right to partition, such issue shall take per stirpes, or by stocks, that is to say, the shares of their deceased parents. Advancements to children are charged.

Where a man, having by a woman a child or children, shall afterwards intermarry with such woman, such child or children, if recognized by him, shall thereby be legitimated and made capable of inheriting his estate. The issue, also, in marriages deemed null in law shall nevertheless be legitimate.

Bastards shall be capable of inheriting from and through their mothers, and of transmitting estates, and shall also be entitled to distributive shares of the personal estates of any of their kindred, on the part of their mothers, in like manner as if they had been lawfully begotten of such mothers.

Survivorship to joint tenants, monopolies, primogeniture, and entailments are forbidden. The law of forced heirship was abolished by the act of July 24, 1856; and now, parties, husband and wife, may dispose of their property by will to the exclusion of their children. Homesteads descend as other real property, but no partition can be had of same during the life-time of the surviving husband or wife, or so long as the survivor may elect to use or occupy the same as a homestead, or so long as the guardian of minor children may be permitted to occupy same by order of court.

Inheritance Taxes. — Property passing by descent, or by grant or gift taking effect on the death of the grantor or donor, is not taxed where it passes to the father, mother, husband or wife, or direct lineal descendants of decedent or for charitable, educational, or religious uses. Where it passes to other persons the tax varies with the value of the property, and the degree of relationship to the decedent; but unless the value exceeds two thousand dollars in the case of a lineal ascendant, a brother, sister, or their lineal descendants, one thousand dollars in the case of an uncle or aunt or their lineal descendants, and five hundred dollars in the case of other persons, there is no tax. The Comptroller of Public Accounts is authorized to aid in the collection of inheritance taxes independently of local county authorities.

Divorces — May be granted by district courts in the following cases: Natural or incurable impotency of body at time of entering into marriage contract, or any other impediment that renders such contract void. In favor of the husband, where his wife shall have been taken in adultery, or where she shall have voluntarily left his bed and board for the space of three years, with intention of abandonment; in favor of the wife, where the husband shall have left her for three years, with intention of abandonment, or where he shall have abandoned her and lived in adultery with another woman; and where either the husband or wife is guilty of excesses, cruel treatment, or outrage towards the other, if such ill-treatment is of such a nature as to render their living together insupportable. Where either husband or wife has been convicted of felony after marriage and confined in state prison; the conviction not having been had on testimony of plaintiff, and suit not brought till twelve months after conviction. Where the husband and wife have lived apart without cohabitation for as long as ten years. Where divorces are declared, the court exercises very general jurisdiction over the property and children, but cannot compel divestiture of title to real estate.

To give jurisdiction the petitioner must be an actual inhabitant for twelve months, and a resident in the county where suit is brought six months; such suit shall not be heard or divorce granted before the expiration of thirty days after the same is filed.

Neither party to a divorce suit wherein a divorce is granted upon the ground of cruel treatment shall marry any other person for a period of twelve months next after such divorce is granted, but the parties so divorced may marry each other at any time, upon obtaining the license required by law; provided, that where a man marries a woman whom he seduces, to escape the penalties of the law punishing for seduction, the man shall not be entitled to a divorce for any cause, within three years after such marriage.

Dower — Is not known in Texas; hence if the husband be selling his own land, or land acquired by purchase or onerous title during marriage, no signature or acknowledgment of the wife is necessary, except it be a sale of homestead.

Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Evidence. — The common law as to evidence, when not modified by statute, is in force.

Either party to a suit may examine the opposing party as a witness upon interrogatories. Parties are also allowed to become witnesses in their own cases under the limitations mentioned in the act of Congress (Rev. Stats. § 858), of which our act is a copy. The husband or wife of a party may testify except as to confidential communications. Delinquent's accounts may be proved by the certificate of the comptroller; and all acts where the State is a party may be proved by certified copies, unless such instruments be denied under oath. Interest is presumed to be the same as in Texas, unless the contrary be averred and proved. Assessment and payment of taxes may be proved by the comptroller's certificate. The printed statutes of Texas are evidence of the private acts therein. So the authorized printed statutes of the United States, and of the States and Territories, are evidence, as are also certified copies. Properly recorded instruments, upon being filed in the suit with notice to the adverse party, can be read in evidence on the trial, unless the opposite party, or some one for him, will, within one day thereafter, file an affidavit stating he believes the instrument to be forged. Abstract of land titles and abstract books to land titles in the State, compiled prior to the year 1877, where original records were destroyed by fire in the months of May, 1874, and March, 1876, of the compiler of such memoranda, taken before an officer authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds in the State, certifying that the record was compiled by him from the records of the county prior to their destruction or loss, and that they are true statements of the matters to which they relate. The party offering the abstract in evidence is required to make affidavit that the instruments to which it relates are not of record, and that search has been made by him to discover the originals. Archives of the former government are proved by copies certified by the commissioner of the general land office, or other custodians. Instruments declared on in whole or in part prove themselves, unless denied under oath. Plaintiff need not deraign title beyond a common source.

When filed with the pleading, open accounts, supported by affidavit (see Affidavits, etc.) "that such account is, within the knowledge of affiant, just, true, and due, and that all just and lawful offsets, payments, and credits have been allowed," prove themselves; unless affidavit denying the same, in whole or in part, be filed before trial. If denied in part only, the denial must designate parts or items disputed.

Executions — Are issued immediately after the adjournment of court or after the lapse of twenty days, where there is no suspensive appeal, in counties where the terms of court hold longer than three weeks. In counties where the term continues longer than three weeks, or continues till the business is disposed of, execution may issue after twenty days from the rendition of judgment and the overruling motions for new trial and arrest of judgment; provided no supersedeas bond for appeal or writ of error has been filed and approved therein. Executions may also issue at any time after judgment, upon good cause being shown. They are returnable to the first day of the next term of the court, or at thirty, sixty, or ninety days, on request of plaintiff. Executions from justices' courts are returnable in sixty days. Judgments become dormant unless execution issues in twelve months from date of rendition.

It is the duty of the sheriff, upon receiving the execution, to call upon the defendant for property upon which to levy. If he fail to point out property, it is the duty of the sheriff to levy, first on the personal property of the defendant, and if not sufficient to satisfy execution, the lands may be levied, 1st, on uncultivated land; 2d, on improved land.

Sales under execution are made of personal property on ten days' notice, and may be on the premises where levied on. Sales of real estate under execution or judgment foreclosing lien are made on the first Tuesday of the month, after twenty days' notice at the courthouse door of the county where situated, and after serving copy of notice on defendant and his attorney of record and after publishing notice in newspaper for three weeks if demanded by defendant. (Acts 1895.)

In case a sole or one of several plaintiffs dies, execution may be issued in the name of the representative of deceased on an affidavit of the death of plaintiff being filed with the clerk of the court, and will be issued in favor of an administrator or subsequent guardian, upon filing in addition the order of their appointment. In case there are two or more defendants and one dies, execution may be issued against the survivors on affidavit of death of deceased defendant. And where the judgment is other than a money judgment, execution thereof may be had without revivor against the legal representatives of deceased upon filing with the clerk an affidavit of such death.

Exemptions. — By the Constitution of 1875, the homestead of a family not in a town or city is made to consist of not more than two hundred acres of land, which may be in one or more parcels, with the improvements thereon. The homestead in a city, town, or village, of lot or lots, not to exceed five thousand dollars in value at the time of designation, without reference to the value of improvements thereon; provided the same shall be used for the purpose of a home, or as a place to exercise the calling or business of the head of a family. The homestead is protected from forced sale for the payment of all debts, except for purchase money, taxes due thereon, or for work and material used in constructing improvements thereon; and in respect to the last, the contract for work and material must be with the consent of the wife given in the manner provided by law. Proceeds of sales of homesteads are not subject to garnishment or forced sale for six months after sale. (See Mortgages and Trust Deeds.) In addition to this, it is provided that in the case of the death of a person leaving wife and children, or either, there shall be granted out of the estate a sum sufficient to support them one year; also, if the exempted articles provided for by law do not exist in kind, the property of the estate may be sold for cash to raise their value, not to exceed five thousand dollars for homestead, and five hundred dollars for other exempted property. There is also exempted to every family, free from forced sale for debts: all household and kitchen furniture; any lot or lots for sepulture in a cemetery; all implements of husbandry; all tools and apparatus belonging to any trade or profession, and all books belonging to private or public libraries, and family portraits and pictures; five milch cows and calves; two yoke of work oxen; two horses and one wagon; one carriage or buggy; one gun; twenty hogs; twenty head of sheep; all provisions and forage on hand for home consumption; all bridles, saddles, and harness necessary for the use of the family. And to every citizen not a head of a family, one horse, bridle, and saddle; all wearing apparel; any lot or lots for sepulture in a cemetery; all tools, apparatus, and books belonging to his trade, profession, or private library. Current wages for personal services are not subject to garnishment. Articles otherwise exempt may be made subject to valid liens. See Liens.

Garnishment — Will issue to any person supposed to be indebted to the defendant, upon affidavit of plaintiff where judgment has been rendered against the defendant, or where an attachment has been sued out in the cause. Also, garnishment will issue after suit is brought without attachment or execution, upon the affidavit of plaintiff, his agent or attorney, that the amount claimed is just, due, and unpaid, and that he does not know of property of defendant in this State, liable to execution, sufficient to satisfy the claim, and that he has reason to believe the garnishee, naming him, is indebted to, or has property or effects of, the defendant, and that the garnishment is not sued out to injure the garnishee or defendant; and giving bond as for attachment. In such case, final judgment must first be rendered against the defendant, before judgment can be had against the garnishee. Current wages are not subject to garnishment in this State.

Shares in incorporated or joint-stock companies can be garnisheed under regulations provided, and can also be sold on execution. Defendant may replevy as in attachment.

Inheritance Taxes. — See Descent and Distribution.

Insolvent Laws. — See Assignments.

Interest. — The legal rate of interest, where there is no special contract, is declared by the constitutional amendment of 1891 to be six per cent. By contract, ten per cent. per annum may be reserved; all interest above is usurious, and the principal only can be recovered if usury be pleaded. By act of 11th April, 1892, contracts stipulating for more than ten per cent. per annum are void as to all interest, and where usurious interest has been paid, double the amount may be recovered by suit within two years.

Open or running accounts, in the absence of an agreement in regard thereto, bear interest at six per cent. per annum from January 1, next following their date.

Judgments. — Final judgment rendered in any of the courts of record of this State, or of any United States court in this State, when abstract thereof is entered on the "Judgment Record" in the office of the county clerk, operates as a lien upon the real estate of the defendant situated in the county where such entry is made, for the term of ten years from the date thereof.

Decrees for partition, or by which the title to land shall be received, must be recorded in the county where the land lies, before they are receivable in evidence.

Where service is upon one only of a partnership firm, judgment upon such service will be good against partnership property and the property of the member who was served.

No attorneys' fees are allowed to be taxed in judgments, except in federal courts, where the taxed fee is twenty dollars, and except that where a claim is presented any person or corporation for personal services rendered, for labor, material, overcharges on freight or express, for lost or damaged freight or for stock killed or injured, and is not paid within thirty days, an attorney's fee not exceeding twenty dollars may be taxed against the defendant if the plaintiff recovers the full amount of the claim presented. See, also, Limitations.

License. — Commercial travelers are not required to take out a license, but persons soliciting or taking orders for intoxicating liquors in local option counties are liable for an annual state tax of four thousand dollars, and each county and each incorporated city or town may levy an annual tax on such person of not exceeding two thousand dollars. Solicitors for books, maps, nurseries, newspapers, and gravestones are exempt. See Corporations.

Lien. — There is an implied lien upon land for the purchase-money in favor of the vendor, which is transferable with the assignment of the purchase-money notes; and where there are more notes than one and they are transferred to different persons, they have equality of lien, though due at different dates. Builders and mechanics of every description contracting to put up buildings or other improvements, or repair any building or improvements, or construct any railroad or its properties, may have a lien upon such property and improvements, by giving written notice to the owner or his agent of each and every item furnished and by showing how much is due upon each bill for material furnished or labor performed by such creditor, or may fix and secure a lien at any time within ninety days after the indebtedness shall have accrued as to all material and labor furnished at the time of or subsequent to the giving of such written notice, by filing in the office of the county clerk of the county where the property is situated an itemized account of the claim to be secured, and causing same to be duly recorded by the county clerk. Said owner shall cause to be executed a written contract for such erection, repair, or improvement, and cause same to be filed with the county clerk of the county where the property is situated, and shall also cause to be executed and filed with the county clerk, before the work is begun, a good and sufficient bond by the contractor, said bond to be in the full amount of the contract price when such contract price is equal to or less than one thousand dollars, three fourths of the contract price between one thousand dollars and five thousand dollars, one half the contract price between five thousand dollars and one hundred thousand dollars, and one third the contract price above one hundred thousand dollars. The conditions of said bond shall be the true and faithful performance of the contract and the payment of all sub-contractors, workmen, laborers, mechanics, and furnishers of material, and said bond shall be payable to the owner, sub-contractors, workmen, laborers, mechanics, and furnishers of material, as their interest may appear, all or any of whom may sue upon said bond. Upon the execution and filing of such bond, the owner shall not be required to pay a greater sum for or on account of labor performed and material furnished than the original contract price between the owner and contractor. Mechanics who repair articles have a lien for the repairs, and may retain possession ninety days and then sell under prescribed regulations.

A new statutory lien for material, machinery or supplies furnished to or for labor performed at the instance of owners or lessee of lands, mines, quarries, oil and gas wells, oil and gas pipe lines, etc., which become fixed by the filing of the contract of purchase, was established by the legislature in 1917.

Landlords have a preference lien for what rent may be due, and also for the value of animals, tools, provisions, and supplies furnished by the landlord to the tenant to enable the latter to raise a crop. Said lien rests upon the crop and such animals, tools, and other property as were furnished by the landlord.

Hotel and boarding-house keepers have a lien on property or baggage deposited with them by guests for their charges. Proprietors of livery stables also have a special lien on horses and vehicles left on livery. Clerks, accountants, bookkeepers, artisans, factory operatives, mill operatives, servants, mechanics, quarrymen, common laborers, and farm hands have a first lien on any article created in whole or in part by their labor, or necessarily connected with its performance, which lien is fixed and preserved by the record of a duplicate account of the indebtedness in the office of the county clerk in the county where the service is rendered.

Urban landlords have a lien on tenants' property for rent. See also Judgments; Chattel Mortgages; Attachments.

Liens are considered an incident to the debt secured by them, and when the debt is barred the lien dies. So revival of the debt revives the lien. But courts will not enjoin a sale by a trustee to pay a barred debt. See Limitations.

Limitations — Must be specially pleaded. For injuries done the person, suit must be brought within two years after the cause of action accrues; and when death results from such injuries, the cause of action accrues to surviving representatives at the date of such death. Actions for injuries to the character or reputation of another must be brought within one year after the cause of action accrues. Contracts limiting time in which to sue thereon to a shorter period than two years are invalid. So are contracts limiting time of notice of claim of damages to less than ninety-one days.

For injuries to property or estate of another; for the conversion or detaining personal property; for forcible entry and detainer of real estate; for taking away the goods and chattels of another; actions on verbal contracts, as well as all actions upon open accounts other than those which concern the trade of merchandise between merchant and merchant, their factors and servants, suit must be brought within two years after the cause of action accrues.

All actions of debt grounded on a contract in writing, or by one partner against another for settlement of copartnership accounts, or upon mutual current accounts between merchant and merchant, their factors or agents, or suits for specific performance of contracts to convey land, must be sued within four years after the cause of action accrues; such actions growing out of partnership and merchants' dealings accrue on cessation of mutual dealings. Action on the bond of an executor, administrator, or guardian accrues at date of his death, resignation, removal, or discharge. No limitation runs against a claim whilst the defendant is absent from the State, but the time of such absence will be deducted. When a claim is barred it can only be revived by an acknowledgment of the justice of the claim in writing signed by the debtor. Judgments, domestic and foreign, are barred in ten years, and a foreign judgment is barred in less than ten years in this State, if it would be so barred by law where rendered. All actions, other than for recovery of real estate for which no limitation is otherwise prescribed, are barred in four years from accrual of right of action. Mechanics' and material-men's liens are barred in one year.

Every suit to be instituted to recover land against one in possession under title, or color of title, must be brought within three years after the cause of action accrues. By title is meant a regular chain from the sovereignty, and color of title is constituted by a consecutive chain to him in possession, without being regular, as if one of the muniments be unregistered, or only in writing, or such like defect, not extending to a want of fairness and honesty.

Five years' peaceable possession of real estate, cultivating, using, and enjoying the same, paying tax thereon, and claiming under deed duly registered, and which is neither forged nor executed under a forged power of attorney, gives full title.

Ten years' like peaceable possession, cultivation, and enjoyment, without evidence of title, gives to the possessor full title to one hundred and sixty acres, and to all beyond which he has in actual possession.

At the expiration of four years from maturity of an obligation secured by deed, mortgage, or deed of trust, with power of sale, such power expires and is barred.

No law of limitations runs against infants, persons imprisoned, or persons of unsound mind, during the existence of their respective disabilities. But disabilities cannot be accumulated. The marriage of a female though a minor puts the statute in motion.

The statute of limitations as to civil actions was suspended from January 28, 1861, to March 30, 1870. See Wills; Claims against Estates, etc.; Notes and Bills of Exchange.

Married Women. — Females under twenty-one years of age, who may marry in accordance with the laws of this State, are deemed of full age, and entitled to all the rights and privileges as if they had been of full age (twenty-one years) at the time of marriage. All property, both real and personal, owned or claimed by the husband before marriage, and that acquired afterwards by gift, devise, or descent, and also the increase of all such real estate, is the separate property of the husband. All real and personal property owned by the wife at the time of her marriage, together with all acquired thereafter by gift, devise, or descent, as also the increase of all such lands, remain her separate property. Each spouse has the management of his or her separate property, but transfers by the wife must be joined in by the husband. All property acquired by the husband and wife during marriage, except in the manner heretofore enumerated, is considered the common or community property, and during the marriage may be disposed of by the husband without the consent of the wife; it is liable for the debts of the husband, and for the debts of the wife contracted by her during coverture, for necessities. The husband and wife may be jointly sued for all debts contracted by the wife for necessities furnished herself or children, and for all expenses which may have been incurred by the wife for the benefit of her separate property, and in such case the court may decree that execution be levied upon either the common property or, on failure of such property, on the separate property of the wife. She may give security for her husband's debt, however, by the execution of deed of trust or mortgage on her separate property therefor, by privy examination and acknowledgment. Upon the death of either party, one half of the common property goes to the survivor and the remainder to the child or children of the deceased. These laws as to marital rights have been construed by the liberal principles of the Spanish civil law. They are themselves a system. See, also, Limitations.

Mechanics' Liens. — See Liens.

Moratorium. — An enlisted sailor or soldier of the United States is not required to answer to the merits of a suit during the time he is actively engaged as a sailor or soldier in the present war. He is required to answer within ninety days after the signing of a treaty of peace, or after being discharged from service. The fact of being a sailor or soldier must be set up by sworn answer.

Mortgages and Trust Deeds — Are upon the same footing, and governed by the same laws generally as deeds, with the addition that it is made a highly penal offense for the mortgagor after the execution of the mortgage to deal fraudulently with the mortgaged property so as to defeat the lien. All mortgages to be good against third persons must be recorded in the county where the property is situated, unless such third person have actual notice, or reasonable information thereof.

All mortgages and deeds of trust upon lands or chattels are but securities. The legal estate and right of possession remain in the mortgagor. If the mortgagee die, the mortgage is treated as a chattel interest; if the mortgagor die, whatever may be the form of the deed, it has to be foreclosed by decree of the court. The foreclosure is by suit, with prayer for judgment and sale, except where the instrument gives a power of sale, in which case the power must be strictly followed, and the law requires sale as under execution, and, in case of land, in county where land lies. The equity of redemption continues until the sale; but there is no redemption after sale. An executor or administrator may release a mortgage upon payment.

Mortgages are discharged by payment, no record of discharge being necessary, but a release of record is advisable. Wife need not join in a mortgage except upon her own property. By the Constitution of 1875, no mortgage, trust deed, or lien is valid on the homestead except for the purchase-money or improvements made thereon, and all sales of the homestead involving any condition of defeasance are void. (See Liens, for effect of statute of limitation.)

Notaries Public. — The governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, appoints every two years such a number of notaries public for each organized county as he may deem proper, and one notary public for each unorganized county. A notary's term of office is two years from the first day of June next after his appointment. Each notary is required to have an official seal and to authenticate all his official acts therewith. Notaries are authorized to take acknowledgments or proof of instruments for registration, to take depositions of witnesses, to administer oaths, and make declarations and protests. They receive their commissions from the governor, but they are authorized to act only in the county for which appointed. The official character of a notary public is certified by the clerk of the county court.

In addition to the notaries public appointed by the governor, each justice of the peace is ex officio a notary public for the county in which elected, although as justice of the peace his jurisdiction is limited to a particular precinct. When acting as notary public he is required to use a notary's seal.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — All contracts for the payment of money, including accounts, may be assigned so as to authorize the assignee to bring suit in his own name.

The liability of the drawee or indorser of any bill of exchange or promissory note assignable or negotiable by law may be fixed by the holder thereof bringing suit at the first term of the court to which suit can be brought, or at the second term, showing good cause why it was not brought at the first, against the maker of such bill or note; or the said liability may be fixed by protest according to the usage and custom of merchants. The liability of the drawer who fails to accept when presented may be fixed in the same manner. In cases within the jurisdiction of justices' courts, the suits above mentioned to fix liability must be brought within sixty days.

Bills drawn by merchants within the limits of this State upon their factors and agents out of the State, if dishonored and duly protested, are subject to ten per cent. damages.

Suit may be brought against the assignor or indorser without joining the maker, when the latter lives out of the State, or in such part thereof that he cannot be reached by the ordinary process of law, or when his residence is unknown and not ascertainable by reasonable diligence, or when he is dead or notoriously or actually insolvent.

The defendant in any suit upon any bond, note, covenant, or other agreement in writing, may plead failure of consideration, where said note, etc., shall remain in the possession of the payee, or when it shall have been transferred after maturity, or when the holder knew of such failure of consideration prior to the assignment. Such plea must be supported by affidavit. In suits by an assignee the fact of assignment is regarded as proved unless the defendant file a plea under oath denying the genuineness of the assignment.

The negotiability of notes, etc., is governed by the rules of mercantile law, except as herein stated. Attorneys' fees may be stipulated in note and recovered in case of suit. Judgment notes are not in use and are not enforceable as such.

The following are legal holidays: January 1st, February 22d, March 2d, April 21st, July 4th, first Monday in September, December 25th, all days appointed by the President of the United States, or governor of Texas, as days of fasting or thanksgiving, and every day on which an election is held throughout the State. If any of the days named fall on Sunday the day thereafter is a holiday; but presentment of commercial paper for acceptance or payment in such case may be made on Saturday before.

Practice. — The civil law pleadings and practice prevail, with slight modifications.

Records. — A deed takes effect as against subsequent purchasers and creditors without notice from the date of its delivery for registration in the office of the clerk of the county court of the county where the property is, or to which such county is attached for judicial purposes; or from its date as to persons with actual notice or reasonable information of such grant or deed. Also see Deeds, etc.

Redemption. — The equity of redemption on mortgaged property exists until the day of sale; but there is no redemption after sale. See Mortgages and Trust Deeds.

Replevin. — When property which has been attached or sequestered is replevied, as set forth in the subdivisions above referred to, possession is forthwith delivered to the party who replevies same. See Attachment; Sequestration; also Trial of Right of Property.

Revision. — The Revised Statutes of the State of Texas, being a revision and digest of all the civil statute laws of the State, and the revised Penal Code, and Code of Criminal Procedure, being a similar digest of criminal laws of the State, went into effect September 1, 1911. Latest regular Session Laws, 35th Legislature, went into effect July 1, 1917. Laws first called Session Laws, 34th Legislature, went into effect August 28, 1915.

Sales. — Any sale or transfer of any portion of a stock of merchandise otherwise than in the usual and ordinary course of trade in the seller's business, and any sale or transfer of an entire stock of merchandise in bulk, is void as to creditors of the seller, unless the purchaser in good faith procures from the seller a sworn statement of the names, places of residence or business and amount due each creditor of the seller, and unless the purchaser notifies or causes to be notified of the proposed sale or transfer, each creditor of whom he has knowledge, in person or by registered mail, at least ten days before the sale.

Sequestration. — This writ is issued only in cases where the party applying for it has some claim of right to or concerning property. It will issue in the following cases: First. When a married woman sues for a divorce and makes oath that she fears her husband will waste her separate or the common property, or the fruits or revenues of either, or will sell or dispose of the same so as to defraud her, or remove the same out of the county. Second. When a person sues for the title or possession of any personal property, and makes oath that he fears the person in possession will injure or ill-treat, waste or destroy such property, or remove it, etc. Third. When a person sues for the foreclosure of a mortgage upon any personal property, and makes oath that he fears the person in possession will injure or ill-treat, or waste or destroy, or remove such property out of the county. Fourth. When a person sues for the title or possession of real property, and makes oath that he fears the defendant or person in possession will make use of his possession to injure such property or waste the fruits or revenue produced by the same, or convert them to his own use. Fifth. When any person sues for the title or possession of any property from which he has been ejected by force or violence. Sixth. When any person sues for the foreclosure of a mortgage or the enforcement of a lien on land, and makes oath that he fears the defendant or person in possession will make use of such possession to injure such property or waste the timber thereof, or waste the rents, fruits, and revenues thereof, or convert them to his own use. The facts must be set forth by the party applying for the writ in his petition and sworn to. He must give bond to answer damages in double the value of the property sequestered, and thereupon the clerk or justice issues the writ.

The defendant can replevy the property by giving bond in like manner, conditioned that he will not send movable property out of the county or State, and will have the same with the hire, fruits, or revenue forthcoming to abide the decision of the court. And if land, that he will not injure the property and will pay the value of rents if condemned to do so. If the defendant fails to replevy the property in ten days, if he, his agent or attorney, is present in the county, or twenty days if absent the officer may deliver the property to the plaintiff upon his executing bond conditioned that the property, together with its value of hire, rent, etc., shall be forthcoming to abide the decision of the court.

Service — In civil suits is made by the sheriff delivering to the defendant, if a resident of the county where suit is brought, a copy of the citation, and if a non-resident, a copy of citation and certified copy of petition, or it may be waived and service acknowledged. Non-residents may be served by notice issued by the court, directed and delivered to them, or by publication of the citation. The writ and brief statement of facts in the petition is published in a newspaper for four weeks before the return day, except where the suit is against unknown heirs, or infants, in which case the service must have been by publication eight weeks. A non-resident cannot sue a non-resident in the courts of Texas unless the object of the action is to subject property of defendant in this State. See Corporations.

Stay of Execution — Is granted only on judgment in justices' courts, who may grant stay of three months upon security and affidavit of defendant that he has not the money and that stay is necessary to prevent hardship and sacrifice of property.

Supplementary Proceedings. — No statute regulating, except as to executions. See Executions.

Taxes. — The following are constitutional provisions: Property shall be taxed according to value, but the legislature may impose a poll tax, also a tax on occupations and incomes; provided persons engaged in agricultural and mechanical pursuits shall not be required to pay an occupation tax. See Licenses.

Public property used for public purposes, places of religious worship, places of burial not held for profit, buildings used for school purposes and the furniture of schools, and institutions of public charity, are exempt from taxation.

Taxes are only to be levied and collected by general laws and for public purposes; and the right to tax the property of corporations shall not be surrendered.

All persons, including corporations, must pay the taxes on the value of their property owned on the first day of January in the county in which it is situated, and property must be assessed in the county where situated; except that the rolling-stock of railroads may be assessed at their principal office in the State; and except, further, that non-residents of a county may pay the tax assessed against them at the comptroller's office, provided same be paid on or before January 1.

The state poll tax is one dollar, the county poll tax may be fifty cents, per caput.

There is a graduated inheritance tax upon property passing to collateral heirs, but not on property passing to direct descendants or to the father, mother, husband, or wife.

The state tax on property, exclusive of the tax necessary to pay the public debt, and for benefit of public free schools, shall never exceed thirty-five cents on the one hundred dollars. It is now fixed at fifty-five cents. And no county, city, or town shall levy more than twenty-five cents for city or county purposes, and fifteen cents per one hundred dollars for roads and bridges, except for the payment of debts heretofore incurred, or for the erection of public buildings, not to exceed twenty-five cents on the one hundred dollars in one year, except as specially provided in the Constitution.

Lands lying in unorganized counties must be assessed and taxes paid thereon in the county to which the said unorganized county is attached by law or to comptroller before January 1. No suit may be brought for the collection of taxes for the year 1917 until after January 31, 1919.

The annual assessment of taxes on land constitutes a lien thereon.

The county commissioners' court in each county constitutes a board of equalization.

The legislature is required to make provision for the speedy sale of a sufficient portion of all land and other property for the taxes due thereon, and every year thereafter for the taxes which shall not have been paid.

The deed to purchaser for all lands thus sold "is held to vest a good and perfect title in the purchaser, subject to be impeached only for actual fraud"; provided that the former owner shall, within two years from date of purchaser's deed, have the right to redeem upon the payment of double the amount of money paid for the land.

Laws were passed carrying out these provisions, also for redeeming lands bid in by State.

Taxes are assessed as of the first day of January each year. The owner of property is required to file with the county assessor a list of his taxable property, under oath, between the first day of January and the first day of June each year.

Taxes may be paid at any time after the first of October, provided the assessment rolls have been approved by the board of equalization and placed in the hands of the collector; taxes become delinquent on the first day of January, after which the tax collector may seize and sell property of the delinquent to satisfy his taxes, subject, in the case of real estate, to redemption by the owner within two years.

Provision is also made for the bringing of suits after the first day of July by the district or county attorney for the recovery of state and county taxes and to enforce the lien on real property for the taxes due on it. In this case the suit proceeds as other law suits, and the real property is sold under an order of sale issued out of the courts for that purpose. The courts have gone far in upholding tax titles acquired in this way.

The law provides for elaborate reports to be made by corporations, and the state tax board, after considering these reports, determines and fixes the true cash value of the unassessed tangible property of said corporations, and distributes the same among the several counties of the State where the tax is levied and assessed as upon other property. The basis provided by law for ascertaining the true cash value of the intangible assets of a company is the aggregate market or true value of all its shares of stock increased by the aggregate market or true value of all indebtedness secured by any mortgage, lien, or other charge upon its property or assets; then deducting the assessed value of all the property and assets of the company assessed for taxation in the ordinary way, the result is taken as the true value of the unassessed franchises and intangible properties owned by the company.

Railroad corporations, express, sleeping-car, telegraph, telephone, surety, and guaranty companies, and collecting and commercial agencies, etc., are required to pay taxes. The laws are intricate and an attorney should be consulted.

In all cases the making of the prescribed report and the payment of the tax is enforced by heavy fines and forfeitures. See, also, Descent and Distribution of Property.

Testimony. — See Evidence.

Trade-Marks, etc. — Every person, association, or union of working men that has adopted a trade-mark may file the same in the office of the secretary of state by leaving two copies, facsimiles, with the secretary of state, the secretary of state furnishing a certificate of registration for which he shall receive a fee of one dollar. The certificate is sufficient proof of the adoption of the trade-mark. No trade-mark will be registered which would probably be mistaken for a trade-mark already of record. A trade-mark will not be registered which consists of, or resembles the emblem of a charitable or religious society, without the latter's consent. Infringement may be enjoined and is subject to criminal prosecution. (Arts. 703, 705, 706, R. S. 1911, § 1395, Penal Code, 1911.)

Trial of Right of Property. — When a writ of execution, sequestration, or attachment shall be levied on personal property, and the property, or a part thereof, may be claimed by a person not a party to the writ, such person, or his agent, may make oath before a justice of the peace in the county where the levy was made claiming the property, and stating that the claim is in good faith; and also deliver to the officer making the levy a bond with good sureties to be approved by the officer, equal to double the value of the property claimed to be assessed by the officer, conditioned that he will return the property and pay all damages that may be awarded against him on the trial of the right of property, and thereupon he shall receive the property.

The oath and bond is returned (if issued in the county where the levy was made) to the court which issued the writ. If the levy was made in a different county than that from which the execution issued, the oath and claim bond is returned to a court of like grade of that which issued the writ, in the county where the levy was made; and the officer returns the writ to the court which issued it. Upon the return of the claim bond and oath, the court where it is lodged is charged with the duty of making up the issues, and the trial proceeds as in ordinary suits.

Trust Deeds. — See Mortgages and Trust Deeds.

Wills. — All persons of sound mind, twenty-one years of age, may dispose of all their property, both real and personal, according to their own will and pleasure. A will must be signed by the testator himself, or in his presence by his direction, and, unless wholly written by himself, signed by two witnesses in his presence. The body of the will may be typewritten. Application for the probate of a will must be made to the county court of the proper county within four years from the date of the death of the person making it. Notice of the application must be given ten days before term of court. See Descent and Distribution.

Wills may be probated: 1. In the county where deceased resided, if he had a domicile or fixed place of residence in the State. 2. If he had no domicile or fixed place of residence, but died in the State, either in the county where the principal property of deceased was at the time of his death or in the county where he died. 3. If he had no domicile or fixed place of residence, and died without the State, in the county where his nearest of kin may reside. 4. But if he had no kindred in the State, then in the county where his principal estate may be situated.

A written will may be proved by the affidavit in writing, taken in open court, of one of the subscribing witnesses. If all the witnesses are non-residents of the county, or are unable to attend the court, the will may be proved by the testimony of one or more of such witnesses, taken by deposition. If none of the witnesses are living, the will may be probated by the testimony of two witnesses to the handwriting of the subscribing witnesses, and also of the testator, if he was able to write, which proof may be either by affidavit in open court or by deposition.

Any person interested in the will may, within four years from its being admitted to probate, institute suit to contest its validity, provided infants, femes covert, etc., shall have like time after disability is removed. The will may be attacked for forgery or fraud within four years after discovery, with saving as to infants, etc., as above.

Wills which have been probated according to the laws of any of the United States or Territories, or of any country out of the limits of the United States, may be probated in this State. A copy of such will and the probate thereof attested by the clerk of the court in which the will was admitted to probate and the seal of the court annexed, if there be a seal, together with a certificate from the judge or presiding magistrate of such court, that the said attestation is in due form, may be filed and recorded in the court, and shall have the same force and effect as the original will if probated in said court: provided that the validity of such will may be contested in the same manner, as the original might have been. (Rev. Stat. 1895, art. 1909.) An executor named as such, in a will probated in another State, is entitled to act as such in this State after the will is probated here; but is required to give bond, notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in the will. (Ibid. arts. 1922, 1923.)

By the later act of March 23, 1887, it was provided in effect, that when a will in any manner disposing of land in this State has been duly probated according to the laws of any of the United States or Territories, and copy thereof and its probate attested by the clerk of the court in which it was admitted to probate, and the seal of the court annexed, if there be a seal, together with a certificate from the judge or the presiding magistrate of such court that the said attestation is in due form, it may be filed and recorded in the register of deeds in any county in which said real estate is situated, in the same manner as deeds and conveyances are required to be recorded, and without further proof or authentication; provided that at any time within four years from the date of the record of such will in this State the validity of the same may be contested in a proceeding instituted for the purpose, as the original might have been. Such will and its probate attested as stated and delivered to the clerk of the county court to be recorded shall take effect and be valid and effectual as a deed of conveyance of said property, and the record thereof has the same force and effect as the record of deeds for other conveyances to land from the time when the same was delivered to the clerk to be recorded, and from that time only. (Rev. Stat. 1895, arts. 5353, 5354.)

No nuncupative will disposing of property to exceed thirty dollars' value can be established except by the evidence of three credible persons that it was made in the time of the last sickness of the deceased, at his or her habitation, or where he or she had resided for ten days preceding the death, or where he or she had sickened and died from home; and that the deceased called in some one to take notice and bear testimony that such was his or her will, or words of like import. After six months have elapsed from the time of speaking the testamentary words, no testimony to prove a nuncupative will will be admitted, unless the same was committed to writing, or the substance thereof, within six days after the same was spoken by the deceased. Real estate cannot be devised by nuncupative will.

There is no limitation upon the right of a testator to disinherit his children, but under the community system which prevails in this State, one half of the property acquired during marriage, except by gift, devise, or descent, is the property of the wife, and neither the husband nor wife can dispose of more than a one half interest in the community by will. By constitutional provision, the surviving husband or wife and children are protected from the sale or partition of the homestead. There is no limitation upon the power of the testator to make devises or bequests to charity. The constitution prohibits perpetuities and entailments, but this has been held not to prohibit devises or bequests to charity.

UTAH LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Dey, Hoppaugh & Fabian, of Salt Lake City.

The next legislature convenes on the second Monday in January, 1919.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — There is but one form of civil action. Actions in the district court are commenced by the filing of a written complaint with the clerk of the court or by the service of a summons. If commenced by service of summons alone, ten days are allowed in which to file complaint in the district court. See Service.

In justice's court an action is commenced only by filing a verified complaint, but the complaint may consist of the original account, note, bill, bond, or instrument upon which the action is based, or a copy thereof. In district court, before trial, intervention by any person having an interest in the subject-matter of the suit is allowed, and the court may order new parties brought in whenever a complete determination of the controversy requires it. All civil and criminal business arising in any county must be tried in such county, unless a change of venue be taken under certain exceptional circumstances. An action arising outside the State shall be tried in the county where defendant resides. A non-resident plaintiff or a foreign corporation may be required by the defendant to give security for costs, and a failure to do so gives the right to have the action dismissed. In the district court the undertaking is three hundred dollars; in the justice court, one hundred dollars. See Undertakings.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits. — Ex parte affidavits may be used to verify a pleading, or a paper in a special proceeding, to prove the service of a summons, notice, or other paper in an action or special proceeding, to obtain a provisional remedy, the examination of a witness or a stay of proceedings, or upon a motion, and in other special cases expressly authorized.

Affidavits to be used within this State may be taken anywhere in the State before any judge or clerk of any court, or before a justice of the peace, or notary public, when taken within their respective counties; if taken in another State or Territory, before a commissioner appointed by the governor of this State to take affidavits and depositions in such other State or Territory, or before any notary public, or before any judge or clerk of a court of record having a seal; if taken in a foreign country, before an ambassador, minister, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of the United States, or before any judge of a court of record having a seal. When an affidavit is taken before a judge or a court in another State or Territory, or in a foreign country, the genuineness of the signature of the judge, the existence of the court, and the fact that the judge is a member thereof, must be certified by the clerk of the court under seal thereof. (The law is silent as to whether the notary public's signature and official character shall be certified by any officer.)

Aliens. — Aliens take by descent as if citizens, and may be inherited from as if citizens.

Appeals. — Appeals from judgments of justices of the peace and city courts to the district court must be taken within thirty days, and the decision of the district court on appeals from justices' courts is final, except in cases involving the validity or constitutionality of a statute. Appeals from the district courts to the supreme court can only be taken from final judgments, and from final orders and decrees of the court in the administration of estates of decedents, and cases of guardianship, and may be taken within six months from the entry of the judgment or order appealed from.

Arrest. — No person can be arrested in a civil action except an absconding debtor. To obtain order of arrest, the plaintiff or some person for him must, by affidavit, show that the case is within the provision above mentioned. The affidavit must be positive, or if upon information and belief the facts upon which the information and belief is based must be stated. The order for arrest is obtained from the judge. Before making the order the judge must require a written undertaking with at least two sureties in a sum to be fixed by the judge, not less than five hundred dollars, to the effect that if the arrest is wrongful plaintiff will pay all costs and all damages that defendant may sustain by reason of the arrest, not exceeding the sum specified. See Undertakings. The defendant may be discharged from arrest by giving bail or security for the payment of any judgment recovered. The person arrested may apply to the court to vacate the order of arrest or reduce the amount of bail. Substantially the same proceedings apply to justices' courts except that undertaking is three hundred dollars. (As to bankrupts, see United States Bankruptcy Act.)

Assignments. — The national bankruptcy law has largely superseded the state law relating to assignments for the benefit of creditors, although the state law is occasionally utilized by corporations, which cannot become voluntary bankrupts. The general form of assignments and the administration of the same are prescribed by statute. The act does not provide for the release of the insolvent debtor by virtue of the assignment. See Sales.

Attachment. — The plaintiff at the time of issuing summons, or at any time afterward, may have an attachment issued by the clerk of the court in an action on a judgment, or on a contract express or implied, not secured by mortgage or lien upon real or personal property situated in this State; or if so secured, when such security has, without any act of the plaintiff, or the person to whom the security was given, become valueless, against a defendant who, 1, is not residing in this State; 2, stands in defiance of an officer, or conceals himself so that process cannot be served upon him; 3, has assigned, disposed of, or concealed, or is about to assign, dispose of, or conceal, any of his property with intent to defraud his creditors; 4, has departed or is about to depart from the State to the injury of his creditors; 5, fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the obligation respecting which the action is brought. In cases mentioned in 3, 4, and 5 above, the obligation shall for the purpose of securing the same be deemed to have accrued, and the attached property, or its proceeds, if sold, may be held subject to final judgment, but no judgment shall be rendered until the obligation by its terms becomes due. The clerk shall issue the writ upon receiving a proper affidavit and undertaking. The affidavit must be made by or on behalf of plaintiff, setting forth the amount of the indebtedness over and above all legal offsets or counter-claims, whether upon a judgment or an express or implied contract, and that the payment of the same has not been secured by any mortgage or lien upon real or personal property, or any pledge of personal property, situate or being in this State; or, if originally so secured, that such security has, without any act of the plaintiff, or the person to whom the security was given, become valueless; and that the same is an actual bona fide existing demand due and owing from the defendant to the plaintiff; and in all cases that the attachment is not sought and the action is not prosecuted to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the defendant, and also specifying one or more of the causes set forth above.

The undertaking must be for a sum not less than the amount claimed by plaintiff, but in no case shall an undertaking be required exceeding ten thousand dollars nor less than two hundred dollars with sufficient sureties (see Undertakings), and to the effect that if the defendant recover judgment, or if the attachment be wrongfully issued, the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking. Exceptions to sureties may be taken within five days, and justification or new sureties required.

The statutes provide specifically the methods of attaching various kinds of property and interests.

Several writs may be issued at the same time to sheriffs of different counties, and plaintiff may have other writs of attachment as often as he may require at any time before judgment.

Property attached may be released by the defendant furnishing a sufficient undertaking, and the writ may be discharged if improperly or irregularly issued, but the statute permits liberal amendment of the complaint, affidavit, bond, and writ.

Upon the commencement of any personal action arising upon a contract express or implied, or upon any judgment or decree already obtained, the plaintiff may obtain a writ of garnishment by making and filing the specified affidavit and undertaking.

Garnishment proceedings may also follow the issuance of a writ of attachment, and the statute provides for a writ of garnishment, its service, and its return with a sworn answer of the garnishee. If the answer discloses that the garnishee has personal property of any kind in his possession or under his control, belonging to the defendant, the court enters judgment that he deliver the same to the sheriff, to be sold and applied to the satisfaction of judgment, if recovered. And if the answer shows garnishee to be indebted to the defendant, then if the plaintiff recovers judgment against the defendant the court must enter judgment in favor of the defendant for the use of the plaintiff against the garnishee for the amount of the indebtedness admitted in the answer, not exceeding a sum necessary to satisfy the judgment of plaintiff against the defendant. The garnishee may deliver to the officer the property or money due, and be relieved from further liability. If no answer is made, or the indebtedness be denied, or if the answer declares that a third party claims the indebtedness or property, proceedings may be had upon proper showing and issues joined to try the questions, and upon the hearing a judgment rendered is conclusive upon all parties, except that an appeal may be taken as upon other final judgments. See Executions; Chattel Mortgages; Preferred Debts.

Chattel Mortgages. — A chattel mortgage is not good against third parties unless possession is delivered to, and retained by, the mortgagee, or the mortgage provides that the mortgagor may retain possession, and is accompanied by an affidavit of the parties, or, if parties are absent, of their agents or attorneys, that it is made in good faith to secure the amount named therein, and without any design to hinder or delay the creditors of the mortgagors, and be witnessed. Such mortgage, to constitute notice to third parties, must, together with the affidavit, or a copy of such mortgage certified by a notary public, be filed with the county recorder in the county where the mortgagor resides, or, if he be non-resident of the State, then in the counties where the property was when the mortgage was executed. Every mortgage so filed is void against the creditors of the mortgagor, or against subsequent purchasers or mortgagees, unless within thirty days after the expiration of the term of three years, and within thirty days after the expiration of each year thereafter, the mortgagee, his agent or attorney, shall make and file with the county recorder an affidavit exhibiting the interest of the mortgagee in the property at the time last aforesaid, and the amount yet due and unpaid. No mortgage of personal property is valid against creditors of the mortgagor or subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith after the expiration of five years from the date of the original filing. When the mortgage gives a power of sale, the statute provides the manner of sale, including advertisement, posting notices, time of sale, and return of sale. When the mortgagor has any legal counter-claim or a valid defense against the whole or any part of amount claimed to be due by the mortgagee foreclosing by advertisement, upon proper affidavit the court, or a judge thereof, may by order enjoin the mortgagee from foreclosing by advertisement, and direct that all further proceedings for foreclosure be had in the proper district court. When a chattel mortgage does not contain a power of sale it is foreclosed in the same manner as mortgages upon real property and without right of redemption. The husband without consent of his wife cannot mortgage personal property exempt by law to resident heads of families. See Exemption. Personal property mortgaged may be attached or taken on execution by paying or tendering to the mortgagee the amount of the mortgage debt, including interest. Any mortgagor selling or disposing of mortgaged chattels without the written consent of the mortgagee, his legal representatives or assigns, is guilty of obtaining money under false pretenses, and, on conviction, shall be fined not exceeding three times the value thereof, or be imprisoned in the county jail not more than six months, or both, at the discretion of the court. The question as to whether or not a provision in a chattel mortgage, that same shall cover future acquisitions, would be valid as against third parties, is undecided in this State.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — In granting letters of administration, preference is given to those entitled to administer in the following order: 1. The surviving husband or wife. 2. The children. 3. The father or mother. 4. The brothers or sisters. 5. The grandchildren. 6. The next of kin. 7. The creditors. 8. Any persons legally competent. A surviving partner can in no case be appointed administrator of the estate of his deceased partner.

No person is competent or entitled to serve as administrator who is, 1, under the age of majority; 2, not a bona fide resident of the State; 3, convicted of an infamous crime; 4, incompetent to execute the duties by reason of drunkenness, improvidence, or want of understanding or integrity.

When objection is made, a married woman must not be appointed administratrix; and if an administratrix marries, the letters to her may be revoked. In general an executor or administrator must execute a bond to the State, joint and several in form, with two or more sureties, with a penalty not less than twice the value of the personal property and twice the probable value of the annual rents and issues of the real property belonging to the estate. Upon sale of any real estate an additional bond may be required.

When decedent leaves a surviving wife, or husband, or minor children, they shall be entitled to remain in possession of the homestead and to the use of the property exempt from execution until otherwise directed by the court, and during administration shall receive such allowance out of the estate as the court may deem necessary and reasonable for their support; which in case of insolvent estates must not be longer than one year after the granting of letters. This allowance must be paid in preference to all other charges except expenses of funeral and of administration. In case the value of the whole estate does not exceed fifteen hundred dollars after paying the charges aforesaid, it may be all distributed in fee absolutely as follows: one half to the surviving wife or husband, and one half in equal shares to the minor children; or if there be no surviving wife or husband, in equal shares to the minor children, or if there be no minor children, to the surviving wife or husband.

An administrator within six months after his appointment, and also within thirty days after the expiration of the time mentioned in the notice to creditors, must render a full account and report of his administration.

Every executor or administrator must immediately after his appointment publish, at least once a week for four weeks, a notice to the creditors of the deceased, requiring them to exhibit their claims, with the vouchers thereof, within four months (two months when the estate does not exceed in value the sum of ten thousand dollars), to the executor or administrator. Publication of notice not required when estate is of fifteen hundred dollars or less in value.

If a claim arising on contract, whether due, not due, or contingent, be not presented within the time limited in the notice, it shall be forever barred. In cases where it appears to the satisfaction of the court or judge by claimant's affidavit that claimant had no notice by reason of his being out of the State, his claim may be presented at any time before a decree of distribution is entered. Every claim presented which is due shall be supported by the affidavit of the claimant, or some one in his behalf, that the amount is justly due, and that no payments have been made thereon which are not credited, and that there are no offsets to the same, to the knowledge of affiant. If the claim be not due when presented, or be contingent, the particulars of such claim must be stated. In case the affidavit is made by some one on behalf of claimant, it must be set forth the reason why it is not made by the claimant. The administrator may require satisfactory vouchers or proof in support of the claim. The amount of interest may be computed and included in the statement of the claim. If the claim shall be allowed by the administrator, it must be presented to the probate judge, who may then allow or reject claim.

If the executor or administrator, or the judge, refuses or neglects for ten days after presentation to indorse on back of claim his allowance or rejection thereof, the claimant may at his option deem the claim rejected on the tenth day. If presented by a notary, his certificate under his seal is prima facie evidence of the presentation and date thereof. If claim is entered within time limited for presentation, it may be acted on by administrator, executor, or personal representative after the expiration of such time. Claims allowed by executor or administrator and probate judge must, within thirty days thereafter, be filed in court. If claim is founded on bond, bill, note, or other instrument, a copy of the instrument must accompany the claim, and the original must be exhibited if demanded, unless lost or destroyed, in which case claimant must accompany claim by his affidavit containing a copy or particular description of such instrument, and stating its loss or destruction. Judgment for recovery of money against decedent must be presented like any other claim. If claim, or any part thereof, is secured by mortgage or other lien properly of record, it is sufficient if claimant describe the mortgage or lien, and refer to the date, volume, and page of its record.

If a claim is rejected by either executor, administrator, or probate judge, suit must be brought against the administrator within three months, if then due, or in two months after it becomes due, otherwise the claim shall be forever barred. No action can be maintained on any claim against an estate unless the claim has been presented to the administrator for allowance, except to enforce a mortgage or lien, expressly waiving in the complaint all recourse against other property of the estate.

Claims are payable in the following order: 1. Funeral expenses. 2. Expenses of last sickness and of administration. 3. Wages of employees of decedent for services rendered within sixty days next preceding death, and not exceeding one hundred dollars for any employee. 4. Debts having preference by the laws of the United States, or of the State. 5. All debts which are liens upon the real property occupied, selected, or set apart as a homestead. 6. Other debts which were liens on decedent's property at the time of death. 7. All other demands. Debts secured by liens or incumbrances on the property occupied, selected, or set apart as a homestead must be paid out of the funds of the estate; and such liens shall only be enforced for any deficiency remaining after such payment. The preference given to other liens only extends to the extent of the proceeds of property affected by such liens, and if after application of these proceeds part remains unpaid, the part unpaid is classed among the other demands. No creditor of any one class receives payment until those of the preceding class are fully paid. Claims not due or contingent are protected by payment into court. If there are not sufficient assets to pay all the debts of any one class, there shall be a pro rata dividend declared by the court among the claimants of that class.

Conditional Sales.— There is no statute regarding such sales or requiring the contract to be filed. The validity of such sales has been sustained repeatedly by the supreme court.

Corporations.— Provision is made for the formation of corporations for any purpose for which individuals may lawfully associate. The legislature cannot grant private charters. Corporations are organized by not less than five persons, one of whom is required to be a resident of this State, by making and signing a written agreement, to be sworn to by at least three of them before the county clerk or a notary public of the county wherein their principal place of business is situate, stating the name of the corporation, the precinct or city where it is organized, their names and places of residence in full, the time of its duration, which shall not be less than three nor more than one hundred years, the pursuit or business agreed upon in general terms, the place of its general business, the amount of stock each party has subscribed, the amount of each share and the limit of capital stock agreed upon, the number and kind of officers, with their qualifications and terms of office, and the time and manner of their election, removal, and resignation, with the names of the officers to serve until the first general election, also how many of the entire board of directors or trustees (not less than one fourth of the entire number) shall be necessary to form a quorum and be authorized to transact the business and exercise the corporate powers, and whether the private property of the stockholders shall be liable for its obligations or not, with such additional provisions as may be deemed necessary. No new corporation can take the name of an existing state corporation, nor of a foreign corporation entitled to do business in the State, nor name so similar as to be misleading. To the agreement must be added the oath or affirmation of three or more of the incorporators, taken before an officer authorized to administer an oath, to the effect that they have commenced, or it is bona fide their intention to commence and carry on, the business mentioned in the agreement, and that affiants verily believe that each party to the agreement has paid or is able to and will pay the amount of the stock subscribed by him. Before such acknowledgment is made, at least ten per cent. of the stock subscribed by each stockholder, and not less than ten per cent. of the capital stock of the corporation, must have been paid in. When subscriptions are paid by transfer of property, a description and a special oath as to its fair cash value must be contained in the articles, except in the case of mining and irrigating companies the oath as to value may be omitted. Before any officer shall enter upon the discharge of the duties of his office he must take and subscribe an oath that he will discharge the duties of such office to the best of his judgment, and that he will not do nor consent to the doing of any matter or thing relating to the business of the corporation with intent to defraud any stockholder or creditor or the public. The agreement with the oath and all oaths of office are required to be filed in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the general business is to be carried on, and a copy of the agreement certified by such clerk must be filed in the office of the secretary of state. When organized as above, the corporation has power to make contracts, to sue and be sued, to have a seal, to buy, use, sell, mortgage, or dispose of personal property, and all such real estate as may be necessary for its general business, and such as shall be necessary for the collection of its debts or judgments in its favor. Mining corporations have the additional power to purchase, bond, lease, exchange, locate, and otherwise acquire any lands, mines, options, territory, fields, or claims, and to sell, convey, lease, bond, mortgage, dispose of, or otherwise deal in same. It can make appropriate by-laws, rules, and regulations. The corporate powers are to be exercised by a board of directors or trustees as provided in agreement, who if a domestic corporation with franchises limited to the State, shall be stockholders, and at least one of them a resident of the State. No residence or stock qualification necessary when corporation engaged in interstate commerce, or consolidated, with franchises in two or more States or Territories. Meetings must be held in this State unless otherwise provided in agreement. There are special statutory provisions governing the organization, management, and rights of telegraph, railroad, irrigation, telephone, life insurance, fire insurance, loan, trust, and guaranty banking corporations, and corporations not for pecuniary profit. Any person who is the holder of full paid-up capital stock shall not be liable for any assessments or any indebtedness of the corporation unless distinctly provided for in the articles of incorporation; but, if provided in the articles, assessments to pay expenses or to conduct the business of the corporation may be levied even upon fully paid stock. In such events the stock may be sold for the assessment, but no individual liability attaches.

Foreign corporations, before doing business within the State, are required to file with the secretary of state, and with the county clerk of the county wherein their principal office in this State is, certified copies of their articles and certificate of incorporation and by-laws, and certified copies of any amendments thereto, also by resolution of the board of directors, which must be certified by the president and secretary under the seal of the corporation, to designate some person, residing in the county in which its principal place of business in the State is situated, upon whom process may be served, and also to accept the provisions of the constitution of the State before doing business, and file such resolutions with the secretary of state and with the county clerk of such county. Failing to comply with these provisions, any such corporation is not entitled to the benefit of the laws of this State relating to corporations; and the person who acts as agent of such non-complying foreign corporation shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be personally liable on any and all contracts made in this State by him for and in behalf of such company while in default. The state constitution provides that non-resident corporations shall not be allowed to transact business within the State on conditions more favorable than those prescribed by law to similar corporations organized in the State. A foreign corporation complying with said provisions can hold title to land and have every right of a domestic corporation. A fee of twenty-five cents on each one thousand dollars of capital stock of any corporation, either state or foreign, is payable by law to the secretary of state when the articles are filed. Other official fees incident to organization amount to from fifteen to thirty dollars, depending upon length of articles. All corporations organized under the laws of the Territory or State of Utah, and all foreign corporations doing business in this State, except corporations of religious or charitable societies, corporations organized not for pecuniary profit, canal and irrigation companies organized for the express purpose of providing water for lands owned solely by the incorporators, and all insurance companies, are required to pay an annual state license as follows: All domestic corporations except corporations not organized for pecuniary profit, and water and irrigation companies for furnishing water to members only with an authorized capital of ten thousand dollars or less, five dollars; with an authorized capital of more than ten thousand dollars and not to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, ten dollars; with an authorized capital of more than twenty-five thousand dollars and not to exceed fifty thousand dollars, fifteen dollars; with an authorized capital of more than fifty thousand dollars and not to exceed seventy-five thousand dollars, twenty dollars; with an authorized capital of more than seventy-five thousand dollars and not to exceed one hundred thousand dollars, twenty-five dollars; with an authorized capital of more than one hundred thousand dollars and not to exceed one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, thirty-five dollars; with an authorized capital of more than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and not to exceed two hundred thousand dollars, forty dollars; with an authorized capital of more than two hundred thousand dollars, and not to exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, fifty dollars; with an authorized capital of more than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and not to exceed three hundred thousand dollars, sixty dollars; with an authorized capital of more than three hundred thousand dollars, and not to exceed four hundred thousand dollars, seventy dollars; with an authorized capital of more than four hundred thousand dollars and not to exceed five hundred thousand dollars, eighty dollars; with an authorized capital of more than five hundred thousand dollars and not to exceed six hundred thousand dollars, ninety dollars; with an authorized capital of more than six hundred thousand dollars and not to exceed seven hundred thousand

The certificate of acknowledgment of an instrument executed by a corporation must be substantially in the following form: —

COUNTY OF } ss.

On the day of A.D. personally appeared before me A. B., who being by me duly sworn (or affirmed) did say, that he is the president (or other officer or agent, as the case may be) of (naming the corporation), and that said instrument was signed in behalf of said corporation by authority of its by-laws (or by resolution of its board of directors, as the case may be); and said A. B. acknowledged to me that said corporation executed the same.

(Signature, official title and seal.)

Short forms of warranty and quitclaim deeds and of mortgages are provided by statute and given the effect of longer forms with usual covenants.

Notaries public in this State must affix to all acknowledgments the date on which their commissions expire.

A married woman may convey her real estate as if a feme sole. It is not necessary for the husband to join with the wife in a conveyance of her real estate, except of a homestead selected out of her property. See Married Women; Homesteads.

The use of a private seal on any instrument of writing in this State is unnecessary.

Uniform Land Registration Act. — A comprehensive law for the registration of land titles, on the "Torrens" plan, was passed February 13, 1917, effective May 8, 1917. Registration of land under this law is voluntary, but once registered can be transferred or incumbered only in accordance with the law, the underlying principle of which is to require every instrument or act affecting the title to be entered on the register, and to make a certificate of title, issued by the registrar for a nominal fee, an absolute assurance of title — or as nearly as may be.

Depositions. — The testimony of witnesses may be taken, within the State, by deposition after service of summons or appearance in an action, or after issue of fact has arisen in special proceeding in the following cases: 1. When the witness is a party or a person for whose immediate benefit the action or proceeding is prosecuted or defended. 2. When the witness resides out of the county in which his testimony is to be used. 3. When he is about to leave the county where the action is to be tried, and will probably continue absent, therefrom when the testimony is required. 4. When the witness is too infirm to attend trial. 5. When the testimony is required on a motion, or in any other case where the oral examination of the witness is not required. Depositions within the State may be taken before any judge or officer authorized to administer oaths, on serving upon the adverse party previous notice of time and place of examination, with a copy of an affidavit showing a proper case in which to take depositions. The notice must be at least five days, adding also one day for every twenty-five miles of distance between the residence of the person notified and the place of examination, unless for cause a judge by order prescribe a shorter time, in which case a copy of the order must be served with the notice.

The testimony of a witness out of the State may be taken in an action at any time after the service of summons or appearance of the defendant, and in a special proceeding, after a question of fact has arisen therein, on a commission issued from the court, under seal, upon an order of the judge or court, or justice of the peace, under his hand, on application of either party, on five days' notice. If issued to any place within the United States, it may be issued to any person agreed upon, or, if no person be agreed upon, to any judge or notary public, or person named or commissioned by the officers issuing it. If issued to any country out of the United States, it may be directed to a minister, ambassador, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of the United States in such country, or to any person agreed upon by the parties.

When the defendants all stand in default for failure to answer the complaint, the plaintiff may take the deposition of any witness without notice.

The deposition, being certified by the officer taking the same, shall be sealed in an envelope directed to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending, or other person designated, and either delivered personally or forwarded by mail or by other usual channel of conveyance.

Depositions without the State may also be taken upon oral interrogatories by at least ten days' previous written notice, and one day additional for every two hundred miles or fraction thereof between place of trial and place of taking deposition.

There is no objection to depositions being taken stenographically and afterwards typewritten, provided that when completed the deposition is subscribed by the witness, properly certified, and transmitted.

Instructions and Forms for taking Depositions. — 1st. If the time and place of executing the commission are not named therein, the commissioner will secure the attendance of the witness and administer the oath to the witness. 2d. Either the commissioner, witness, or some impartial person must reduce the answers of the witness to writing, as near as may be in the language of the witness. The following forms may be used: —

"Deposition of witnesses taken in a cause pending in the (here name the court in which the suit is pending) wherein is plaintiff, and defendant, and for said plaintiff (or defendant, as the case may be), in pursuance of the notice (or commission or stipulation) hereto attached." (Here state which of the parties was present.)

"A. B. of the county of of lawful age, being first duly sworn (or affirmed) by me, as hereinafter certified, deposes and says."

1st. To the first cross-interrogatory he says.

2d. To the second interrogatory he says.

1st. To the first interrogatory he says.

When the deposition is finished it must be carefully read to the witness and corrected by him in any particular, if desired, and subscribed by the witness and certified by the officer. If more than one witness is to be examined, the next deposition may be commenced immediately below the preceding, as follows: "Also C. D. of _____ of lawful age, being," etc. (same as in first deposition). Adjournments should be from day to day, and noted when made, with the reasons therefor. At the end of the whole, the certificate of the officer must be annexed, and may be substantially as follows: —

STATE OF _____ } ss.
COUNTY OF _____ }

I, A. B. (name the official character of the officer), the commissioner named in said commission (notice or stipulation), do hereby certify that the above named (name all the witnesses) appeared before me (designate the time and place), and were by me first duly and severally sworn (or affirmed) to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth in answer to the direct and cross-interrogatories to be propounded to them severally in the above entitled cause.

The foregoing attached direct and cross-interrogatories addressed to each of said witnesses respectively were thereupon by me propounded to the witnesses to whom they are addressed, in the order of their occurrence, and upon their oaths they made answer thereto respectively, and their answers thereto were in my presence reduced to writing when given, and after the deposition and testimony of each respective witness on said direct and cross-interrogatories was completed, the same was by me carefully read to the witness and corrected by him, and then subscribed by him in my presence, and the same is attached hereto.

Said depositions were taken (and completed) at the time and place mentioned in the attached commission (or notice or stipulation; or at a specified time and place), and the taking thereof was continued by adjournment from day to day at the same place and at the same hour (or between the same hours) as in said notice (or commission or deposition) specified, and for the reasons stated above.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand (if the officer have a seal, add) [and official seal] this _____ day of _____ A. D. 19 _____. (Sign, stating official character, and "commissioner to take said depositions," if they be taken on a commission.)

The commissioner will attach together and fold the commission, notice, or stipulation, and the interrogatories, answers, and any document deposed to by the witness, in a packet, and seal the same.

The sealed package containing the deposition should be addressed to "the clerk of the _____ (naming the court in which suit is pending), at _____." Across the seals write, "Depositions in the case of A. B. v. C. D., taken, sealed up, addressed, and transmitted by me." (Sign with official character.)

If the suit is pending before a justice, the address should be "To _____ justice of the peace within and for _____ precinct _____ county of Utah."

Descent and Distribution. — After the payment of the expenses of the last sickness and funeral, allowance for the support of the surviving wife or husband and minor children, and payment of debts due from the estate (see Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons), the personal estate shall be distributed in kind, if practicable, in the same manner as real estate. The property, both real and personal, of one who dies intestate, passes to his heirs, subject to the control of the district court, and to the possession of any administrator appointed by that court. The executor or administrator is entitled to possession of all the property of deceased pending administration, and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof. One third in value of all the legal or equitable estates in real property possessed by the husband at any time during the marriage, and to which the wife had made no relinquishment of her rights, shall be set apart as her property in fee simple, if she survive him; provided that the wife shall not be entitled to any interest under the provisions of this section in any such estate of which the husband has made a conveyance when the wife at the time of the conveyance is not, or never has been, a resident of the Territory or State of Utah. Property distributed under the provisions of this section shall be free from all debts of the decedent, except those secured by mechanics' or laborers' liens for work or labor done or material furnished exclusively for the improvement of the same, and except those created for the purchase thereof and for taxes levied thereon. The value of such part of the homestead as may be set aside to the widow shall be deducted from the distributive share provided for her in this section. Provision by will for the widow shall be construed to be in lieu of such distributive share, unless it shall appear from the will that decedent designed the testamentary provision to be additional. But if the testamentary provision is not additional, then the widow shall be conclusively presumed to have renounced such provision, and to have accepted her distributive share, unless within four months after admission of the will to probate she shall file a written acceptance which shall be construed to be a renunciation of her distributive share. The succession act also provides that a homestead consisting of lands and appurtenances not exceeding in value two thousand dollars, and two hundred and fifty dollars additional for each minor child, and all personal property exempt from execution, shall be wholly exempt from payment of debts of the decedent (except incumbrance for purchase price or by consent of both husband and wife and mechanics' liens), and shall be the absolute property of the surviving husband or wife and minor children, or of the minor children, if no surviving husband or wife. This section does not prevent disposition of such property by will. The value of such property so distributed shall be deducted from the distributive share otherwise to be received by the person entitled thereto.

Subject to the foregoing are the following rules of descent: If the decedent leaves a husband or a wife and only one child, or the issue of only one child, the estate passes in equal shares to the surviving husband or wife and child, or issue of such child. If there are more than one child living, or one child and the issue of a deceased child or children, the estate goes, one third to the surviving husband or wife, and the remainder in equal shares to the surviving children and the issue of any deceased child, by right of representation; but if there is no child of the decedent, the remainder goes to all the lineal descendants of the decedent; and if they are in the same degree of kindred to the decedent, they share equally, otherwise they take by right of representation. Provided that the share in legal and equitable estates in real property of which an intestate husband died possessed secured by this section to the widow shall not be additional to the interest in such property provided for her as set forth in a preceding paragraph.

If decedent leaves no husband or wife, but leaves issue, the whole estate goes to such issue; and if the issue consists of more than one child living, or one child living and the issue of one or more deceased children, then the estate goes in equal shares to children living, or to the child living, and the issue of deceased child or children by right of representation. If decedent leaves no issue, all of the estate, real and personal, if not over five thousand dollars in value, exclusive of debts and expenses, goes to the surviving husband or wife; and if over that value, five thousand dollars in value thereof goes to the surviving husband or wife, and the excess goes one half to the surviving husband or wife, and the other half to decedent's father and mother in equal shares, and if either be dead the whole half goes to the other, and if no father or mother the one half of such excess goes equally to brothers and sisters and children of deceased brother or sister by right of representation. If no issue, no husband or wife, estate goes equally to father and mother, and if either be dead then wholly to the other. If no issue, husband, wife, father, or mother, then equally to brothers and sisters and children of deceased brother or sister by right of representation. If decedent leaves a husband or wife and no issue, father, mother, brother, or sister, the whole goes to the surviving husband or wife. If decedent leaves no issue, husband, wife, father, mother, brother, or sister, all goes to next of kin in equal degree; except, when two or more collateral kindred in equal degree claim through different ancestors, those claiming through nearest ancestor preferred. If decedent leaves several children, or one child and issue of one or more children, and any such surviving children dies under age and not having been married, all the estate inherited by deceased child from decedent goes in equal shares to the other children of same parent, and to the issue of any such other children, who are dead, by representation; and if all such other children are dead, and any of them have left issue, the estate goes to such issue equally, if all are in the same degree of kindred to the deceased child, otherwise by right of representation. All property of persons dying intestate and without heirs shall escheat to the State for the benefit of the common schools.

Every illegitimate child is an heir of the person who acknowledges himself to be its father and an heir of its mother, and if it die without lawful issue, intestate, its estate goes to its mother, or, if she be dead, to her heirs. Kindred of half blood inherit equally with those of whole blood in the same degree, unless the inheritance came to the deceased by descent, devise, or gift of some one of his ancestors, in which case all who are not of the blood of such ancestor cannot inherit. The degrees of relationship are fixed by statute. Advancements are defined by statute, and must be deducted from the heir's share, and from the share of those claiming by representation when made to the one they represent who has died before decedent. Posthumous children are considered as living at the time of death. See Aliens; also see Taxes for "inheritance taxes."

Divorce. — District courts have exclusive jurisdiction in actions for divorce. An actual bona fide residence in a county within the jurisdiction of the court for one year next preceding the commencement of the action is required. Divorces may be granted for any of the following causes: Impotency of the defendant at the time of marriage; adultery committed by defendant subsequent to marriage; willful desertion for more than one year; willful neglect of defendant to provide for the plaintiff the common necessities of life; habitual drunkenness; conviction for felony; cruel treatment to the extent of causing great bodily injury or great mental distress; permanent insanity, where defendant, at least five years prior to action, judicially declared insane. No decree in divorce shall be granted upon default or otherwise except upon legal testimony taken in the cause. All hearings and trials must be before the court. If determined divorce ought to be granted interlocutory decree entered, which becomes absolute after six months unless appeal or review pending, or unless the court on its own motion, or on the application of any party whether interested or not, otherwise orders. The guilty party forfeits all rights acquired by marriage. Alimony and allowance for maintenance of children may be awarded in all cases. Children ten years of age and of sound mind may select the parent to which they will attach themselves. All orders of the court respecting alimony, allowance, and control of the children are subject to such changes as may be conducive to the best interest of all concerned.

Dower. — There is neither dower nor curtesy in this State, but a widow has a distributive share in the estate of a deceased husband in the nature of dower. See Descent and Distribution.

Estates. — See Claims against Estates.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Executions. — Executions may issue from any court immediately on the rendition of the judgment, or at any time or times thereafter within eight years. The writ is returnable in not less than ten nor more than sixty days from its receipt by proper officer, and is to be executed in the manner specifically prescribed by statute. Garnishment in aid of execution may be had in like manner as upon attachment. See Attachment; Preferred Debts; Redemption.

Exemptions. — The following property is exempt from execution, except on a judgment for the purchase price, or on a judgment of foreclosure of a mortgage or a mechanic's or laborer's lien thereon, or from sale for taxes, to wit: 1. Chairs, tables, and desks, of the value of two hundred dollars, and the library belonging to the judgment debtor, also musical instruments in actual use in the family. 2. Necessary household, table, and kitchen furniture of the value of three hundred dollars, one sewing-machine, family hanging pictures, oil paintings and drawings, portraits and their necessary frames, provisions on hand for three months, two cows with their sucking calves, and two hogs and all sucking pigs, all wearing apparel, and beds and bedding, and all carpets in use. 3. To a farmer, farming implements of the value of three hundred dollars; two oxen, horses or mules and harness; a cart or wagon; seed, grain or vegetable, for planting or sowing within six months, not exceeding in value two hundred dollars, and crops and the proceeds thereof not exceeding two hundred dollars. 4. Necessary tools, tool chest, and implements of a mechanic or artisan, not exceeding in value five hundred dollars; the seal and records of a notary public; the instruments and chests of a surgeon, physician, surveyor, and dentist, with their libraries, and the law libraries and office furniture of attorneys and judges, and libraries of ministers, and typewriters of reporters and copyists, the type, presses, and material of a printer or publisher, not exceeding five hundred dollars. 5. The cabin of a miner, not exceeding five hundred dollars in value, also his tools and appliances, not exceeding in value five hundred dollars. 6. Two oxen, or horses or mules and harness, and cart or wagon, or dray or truck, by which a cartman, drayman, huckster, teamster, or other laborer habitually earns his living; and one horse, harness, and vehicle of a physician, surgeon, or minister. 7. One half the earnings of the judgment debtor for personal services rendered within thirty days preceding the levy, if debtor is married or is head of a family residing in Utah and dependant upon such earning for support. If his earnings are two dollars per day or less, a married man or head of a family is entitled to an absolute exemption of thirty dollars per month. Costs cannot be taxed in any proceeding to obtain levy upon moneys of judgment debtor earned within thirty days next preceding levy. 8. All moneys, benefits, privileges, or immunities accruing in any manner from a life insurance on a debtor's life, when the annual premiums do not exceed five hundred dollars. 9. All arms, ammunition, uniforms, and accoutrements required by law to be kept. 10. Court-houses and all public edifices and grounds, churches and grounds, school-houses, cemeteries, and public squares, and other similar property listed in the statute. 11. To a head of a family a homestead, to be selected by the debtor. A homestead consisting of lands and appurtenances (which lands may be in one or more localities), not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars in value for the head of the family and five hundred dollars additional for his wife, and two hundred and fifty dollars for each other member of his family, shall be exempt from judgment lien and from execution or forced sale, except upon judgments obtained for mechanics' or laborers' liens thereon, lawful mortgage thereon, or lien for purchase-money or for taxes. The statute provides that the homestead exemption may be claimed by either the husband or the wife, and defines the terms "head of the family" and "members of the family"; also for manner of sale when value exceeds the exemption. In case of sale the money received by the judgment debtor for value of his exemption is also exempt, and so, too, is insurance money when fire occurs (to the extent of the exemption). The wife must join with the husband in any conveyance or incumbrance affecting the homestead. None of the foregoing exemptions are for the benefit of non-residents, or persons about to depart from the State with the intention of removing their effects therefrom, but their property is liable to execution, with the exception of ordinary wearing apparel.

Garnishment. — See Attachment; Executions.

Heirship and Inheritance. — See Descent.

Inheritance Taxes. — All property within the jurisdiction of this State, and any interest therein, whether belonging to a resident or non-resident, and whether tangible or intangible, which shall pass by will or by the statutes of inheritance of this or any other State or by deed, grant, bargain, sale, or gift, made in contemplation of the death of the grantor, vendor, or donor, or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after the death of the grantor, vendor, or donor, to any person, in trust or otherwise, is subject to the following tax, after the payment of all debts, for the use of the State, viz.: Three per cent. of its market value in excess of ten thousand dollars and not exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars; and five per cent. of its market value in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars. Administrators, executors, and trustees and any such grantee under conveyance and such donee under a gift made during the grantor's or donor's life are respectively liable for all such taxes to be paid by them respectively. The tax is a lien on the estate from the death of the decedent until paid. In determining the amount of taxes, the following debts are deducted, viz.: Those owing by decedent at the time of his death and established against the estate within fifteen months from the death of decedent; also local or state taxes then due, funeral expenses, court costs, statutory fees of executors, administrators, or trustees. The tax is computed and paid on the entire remainder in excess of ten thousand dollars. The court having control of the probate proceedings determines the amount of tax to be paid by the several devisees, legatees, grantees, or donees of the decedent. Taxes are payable to and collected by the state treasurer, whose address is Salt Lake City, Utah, and required to be paid within fifteen months from the death of the testator or intestate. All taxes not paid within said period draw interest at the rate of eight per cent. per annum until paid.

Foreign Estates. — Where any property belonging to a foreign estate is subject to the payment of an inheritance tax in this State, such tax shall be assessed upon the market value of such property remaining after the payment of such debts and expenses as are chargeable to the property under the laws of this State. When representative of foreign estate files statement with local court having ancillary jurisdiction showing true market value of entire estate and adjudicated indebtedness, the beneficiary is entitled to have deducted such proportion of said indebtedness from the value of the property within this State as the value of property within this State bears to the value of the entire estate. By construction of state taxing officers applying the statute, shares of stock in corporations chartered under the laws of this State are subject to this tax, regardless of whether owned by residents or non-residents of this State.

Insolvents. — See Assignments.

Interest. — The legal rate of interest is eight per cent. per annum; but parties may agree in writing for the payment of any rate of interest whatever not exceeding twelve per cent. per annum on money due or to become due on any contract. Any judgment rendered on such contract shall conform thereto and bear the interest agreed upon by the parties, not to exceed twelve per cent. per annum.

Excess over the legal rate of interest may be recovered by borrower or his personal representative, if action is brought within one year after such payment. County superintendent of schools has three years thereafter to sue for such excess. All instruments and all deposits of goods or other things whereupon or whereby a greater rate is reserved, taken or secured, are void. Borrowers may sue in equity for the discovery of the money, goods or things in action taken or received in violation of the act, without paying or depositing the principal sum borrowed, or any interest thereon. It is made a misdemeanor for any person, association, or corporation, their or its agents, to take usurious interest.

Judgments. — Judgment may be given for or against one or more of several plaintiffs or defendants; and, in case of persons jointly or severally liable on a contract, when some only have been served, those served may be proceeded against as if they were the only defendants.

Judgment is barred after the lapse of eight years.

From the time the judgment is docketed it is a lien upon all the real property of the judgment debtor not exempt from execution, in the county, owned by him at the rendition of the judgment or thereafter acquired during the existence of the lien, in his own right. Such lien continues eight years from date of judgment; and such lien will exist in any other county from the time of filing a transcript with the recorder of such county. Judgments prior in time have priority of lien, even if obtained at the same term.

The filing of an abstract of a judgment of a justice of the peace with the clerk of the district court gives it the same lien as if judgment had been rendered by the district court. A justice's judgment creates no lien on lands until filed and docketed in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county in which the lands are situated. Homesteads are exempt from judgment lien. See Executions. Judgments of circuit or district United States courts may be made a lien for five years by filing transcript in the county where real estate of the judgment debtor is situated. Except in county in which judgment is rendered, the lien attaches from time judgment is docketed.

Judgments may be satisfied by the judgment creditor upon an acknowledgment of satisfaction filed with the clerk, made in like manner to an acknowledgment of conveyance of real property, or by his indorsement on the record, or within eight years by the attorney of record when no assignment has been filed.

Liens, Mechanics' and Others. — Liens are secured to mechanics and others, including all persons of every class performing labor upon, or furnishing material to be used in construction, alteration, addition to, or repair of any building, bridge, ditch, flume, aqueduct, tunnel, fence, railroad, wagon road, or other structure or improvement upon land; and architects, engineers, and artisans who have furnished designs, plats, maps, specifications, drawings, estimates of costs, surveys, or superintendence are likewise granted a lien upon the property upon which they have rendered service, performed labor, or furnished materials, whether at the instance of the owner, or his agent, or a contractor.

The lien attaches to such interest as the owner or lessee may have in the real estate, and extends to the entire contract price; and payment made to the principal contractor before commencing the work, or prior indebtedness of the said contractor to the owner, cannot defeat sub-contractor's lien unless written notice thereof is posted and kept posted upon the structure.

The statute is favorable to the laborers and sub-contractors. The original contractor must file his notice of lien in statutory form with the county recorder for record, within sixty days after the completion of his contract, and every other person claiming the benefit of the lien act must file his notice of lien for record within forty days after furnishing the last material or performing the last labor.

Liens may be enforced by action at any time within twelve months after the completion of the original contract, or the suspension of work thereunder for a period of thirty days. The plaintiff must publish a notice once a week, for three consecutive weeks, in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county notifying all persons holding or claiming liens on the premises to appear before the court on a day specified. The court shall proceed to hear and determine the claims in a summary way, and all liens not exhibited shall be deemed to be waived. Liens rank, as between the contractor and sub-contractor, and shall be ordered to be satisfied in the decree, in the following order, viz.: 1. Sub-contractors who were laborers or sub-contractors paid by the day but without furnishing material therefor. 2. All other sub-contractors and all material men. 3. The original contractor.

Provisions of the law also apply to persons who shall do work or furnish material for the working, preservation, or development of any mine, lode, or mining claim, except on leased mines the lien extends only to the leasehold interest and to ores, etc., mined and excavated by the lessees.

All foundrymen, boiler-makers, and all persons performing labor or furnishing machinery or boilers or castings or other materials for constructing or repairing or carrying on work of any mill, manufactory, or hoisting works, have a lien on such structure; but the act does not apply to any public structure or improvement.

Special statutes give liens for feeding, pasturing, or herding cattle, horses, or other animals; upon the baggage of a guest or boarder for board or lodging; to any mechanic or other person who bestows labor upon personal property at the request of another, and to warehousemen or others who safely keep personal property for another.

Lessor has a lien on personal property of lessee, not exempt from execution, for rent due.

An attorney, from the time of commencement of an action, or the service of an answer containing a counter-claim, has a lien upon his client's cause of action (which attaches to a verdict or judgment) for his fees, and no settlement between the parties affects this lien.

Limitations. — Civil actions must be commenced within the periods hereinafter prescribed after the cause of action shall have accrued.

No action for the recovery of real property, or the possession thereof, can be maintained unless it appears that the plaintiff, or his grantor, ancestor, or predecessor, was seized or possessed of the premises within seven years before the action is commenced. No cause of action or defense, founded upon title to real property or to the rents or profits thereof, shall be effectual unless the person prosecuting or defending, his ancestor, grantor, or predecessor, be shown to have been seized or possessed of the premises within the same period. Possession within the time limited is presumed in person establishing the legal title, and occupation by any other person deemed subordinate to legal title unless adverse possession for seven years shown. Whenever an occupant, or those under whom he claims, enters into possession under claim of title, exclusive of other right, founding his claim upon written instrument as being a conveyance of the property, or upon a decree or judgment of competent court, and continuously occupies the property included in such instrument, judgment, or decree, or some part of the property under such claim, for seven years, and pays all the territorial, county, and municipal taxes legally levied or assessed thereon during such period, he has held adversely; except, when tract is divided into lots, possession of one lot is not possession of any other lot. The character of the possession based on instrument, judgment, or decree, to constitute an adverse possession, may be (1) where the land has been usually cultivated or improved, (2) or protected by a substantial inclosure, (3) or although not inclosed, where it has been used for supply of fuel or fencing timber, for the purposes of husbandry, for pasturage, or for the ordinary use of the occupant, (4) or where a known farm or single lot has been partly improved, the portion left not cleared or not inclosed, according to course or custom of country, shall be deemed to have been occupied same length of time as the part improved. Where there has been actual continued occupation for seven years as aforesaid of land under claim of title, exclusive of any other right, but not founded upon a writing, judgment, or decree, the land actually occupied and no other shall be deemed to have been held adversely, provided the taxes thereon during the period have been paid by the occupant and those under whom he claims. The character of the possession to constitute adverse possession not based on writing, judgment, or decree may be either (1) where the land has been protected by substantial inclosure, or (2) usually cultivated or improved, or (3) labor or money expended on dams, canals, embankments, aqueducts, or otherwise, for irrigation purposes, amounting to five dollars per acre.

In case of the disability of minority, insanity, imprisonment on criminal charge, or in execution upon a conviction of criminal offense for a term less than life, or coverture when husband is a necessary party, existing at time title first descends or accrues, the statute does not commence to run until the removal of the disability, but such action must be commenced, or entry or defense made, within the period of two years after removal of disability, or two years after the death of person under the disability, if he die meantime.

The limitations of actions, other than for the recovery of real property, are as follows: (1) Within eight years: on a judgment or decree rendered in any court of the United States, or of any State or Territory within the United States. (2) Within six years: for mesne profits of real property; on a contract, obligation, or liability founded on an instrument of writing. (3) Within three years: trespass on realty, taking, detaining, or injuring personalty, including replevin of personalty: for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake (statute commencing to run from time of discovery of fraud or mistake). (4) Within four years: on a contract obligation, or liability not founded on an instrument of writing, open account for goods, etc., provided, that action may be commenced at any time within four years after last charge made or last payment received. (5) Within two years: an action against a marshal, sheriff, etc., for omission of duty or malfeasance, including non-payment of money collected on execution, provided that action may be commenced within two years after expiration of term of office, but excluding action for escape; to recover damages for the death of one caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another. (6) Within one year: on statute for penalty or forfeiture where action given to an individual or to an individual and the people, except where the statute imposing it prescribes different limitation; on a statute, or on an undertaking in criminal action for a forfeiture or penalty to the people of the State; for libel, slander, assault, battery, false imprisonment, or seduction; against marshal, sheriff, or other officer for escape of a prisoner detained on civil or criminal process, or against a municipal corporation for damages to property caused by mob or riot, for liability created by statute of any State, other than a penalty or forfeiture under the laws of this State, one year. To recover goods or other personal property seized by a tax collector, de jure or de facto, or the price or value thereof, or damages for the seizure, detention, sale of or injury to same, or damages done to any person or property in making the seizure, or for money paid to such officer under protest or seized by him, and which it is claimed should be refunded, six months. On claims against a county rejected by county court, one year after first rejection. Action to redeem a mortgage of real property with or without account of rents and profits may be brought by the mortgagor, or those claiming under him, against mortgagee in possession or those claiming under him, unless he or they have continuously maintained adverse possession for seven years after breach of condition of the mortgage.

In an action on mutual, open, and current account where there have been reciprocal demands, the statute commences to run from the date of the last item in the account proved. In an action for relief not specified above, four years. No limitation against actions to recover money or other property deposited with bank, banker, trust company, savings or loan society.

If the defendant be out of the State at the time the action accrued, the statute does not run till his return; and if he departs after the cause of action accrued, the statute ceases to run in his favor during such absence. Disabilities of minority, insanity, imprisonment on criminal charge or in execution upon a conviction of criminal offense for less than life, prevents running of statute to bar personal actions if existing when cause of action accrued.

If a person entitled to bring an action dies before the expiration of the limitation, and the cause of action survive, his representatives may bring the action after the expiration of the limitation, within one year after the death.

If a person against whom an action accrues dies before the expiration of the limitation, and the cause of action survive, the action may be brought after such expiration against his executors or administrators, within one year after the granting of administration or letters testamentary.

No acknowledgment or promise shall revive a barred claim, unless in writing, signed by the party to be charged thereby; but bona fide payment of any part of principal or interest has the effect to cut off all previous time.

No action for the recovery of any estate sold by an executor or administrator shall be maintained by any heir or other person claiming under the deceased testator or intestate, unless it be commenced within three years after the sale, or within three years after discovery of fraud or other grounds on which action is based, or within one year after the removal of any disability.

As to limitation regarding rejected claims against estates, see Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Married Women. — All property owned by either spouse before marriage, and that acquired afterwards by gift, devise, bequest, descent, or purchase, is the separate property of such spouse, and either spouse may sue or be sued at law. All property belonging to any married woman at the time of her marriage, or to which she subsequently becomes entitled in her own right, and all rents, issues, and profits thereof, and all compensation due or owing for her personal services, are exempt from execution against her husband. Wife is liable on her own contracts and torts, and husband is not liable therefor. A female arrives at majority at the age of eighteen, or sooner if she marries.

Mechanics' Liens. — See Liens.

Mortgages. — Mortgages are executed the same as deeds. A mortgage of real property, whatever its terms, shall not be deemed a conveyance, so as to enable the owner of the mortgage to recover possession of the property without a foreclosure and sale. A mortgage must be foreclosed by action. Six months' redemption is given. See Redemption. Wife should join in all mortgages of husband's real property. Mortgages may be discharged of record by a certificate (executed by the mortgagee, and witnessed and acknowledged so as to entitle it to be recorded) of payment of the debt and discharge of the mortgage; or by entry on the margin of the record acknowledging satisfaction thereof, signed by the mortgagee in the presence of the recorder or his deputy, who shall subscribe the same as a witness. Neglect of mortgagee to discharge the mortgage after the same has been fully paid or satisfied renders him liable for double the damages sustained by such failure. See Trust Deeds.

Notaries Public. — Governor may appoint one or more notaries public in each county of this State, upon the filing with secretary of state of oath of office and five hundred dollar bond, conditioned for faithful performance of duties. The secretary of state or county clerk certifies the official character of a notary.

Notaries, within counties for which they are appointed, may administer oaths, take acknowledgments, affidavits, and depositions, make protests, and do all acts usually done by notaries in other States. Notaries shall attest every official act with seal, and must affix date of expiration of commission. All courts take judicial notice of seal. A record of all notices of protest, when and how served, names of parties, amount and description of instrument, is required to be kept, which record is competent evidence to prove such notices.

Notes, Bills, etc. — The Negotiable Instrument Statute, which became effective July 1, 1899, is in the form recommended by the American Bar Association, and minutely covers the subject, setting at rest many mooted questions of the law of negotiable instruments, a complete abstract of which is impracticable. Days of grace are not allowed. When the day of maturity falls upon Sunday or a holiday the instrument is payable on the next succeeding business day. Instruments falling due on Saturday are to be presented for payment on the next succeeding business day, except that instruments payable on demand may at the option of the holder be presented for payment before twelve o'clock noon on Saturday when that entire day is not a holiday. Where the instrument is payable at a bank it is equivalent to an order on the bank to pay the same for the account of the principal debtor thereon. Notice of dishonor must be given forthwith to drawer and each indorser, and may be in writing or oral. Dishonored instruments may be protested, but protest is not required except in the case of foreign bills of exchange, i. e., bills not drawn and payable in this State. An instrument which contains an order or promise to do any act in addition to the payment of money is not negotiable, but negotiability is not destroyed by a provision which (1) authorizes sale of collateral securities if the instrument be not paid at maturity; or (2) authorizes confession of judgment if not paid at maturity; or (3) waives the benefit of any law intended for the advantage or protection of obligor; or (4) gives the holder an election to require something to be done in lieu of payment of money. A check must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after issue or drawer will be discharged from liability thereon to the extent of loss caused by delay. Certification of check procured by holder discharges drawer and all indorsers from liability thereon.

Practice. — The civil practice is conducted under a code prescribing a complete system of procedure. See Revision.

Preferred Debts. — Debts owing to laborers or servants (also referred to as "employees") for work or labor performed within one year next preceding seizure of property of debtor by any process of any court, or when debtor's business is suspended by the action of creditors or put into the hands of receiver or trustee, are preferred, and if proved must be paid first. Proof is required within ten days after seizure upon attachment, or within thirty days after business placed in hands of receiver, trustee, or assignee. Taxes are always preferred after lien attaches, and lessor has a preferred lien for rent.

Proof of Claims. — Persons sending claims should state amount due, not due, and when due, the full name or names of the parties in whose name the suit is to be brought. In case of a partnership, the full name of each partner. In case of a corporation or stock company, its legal title and where organized. An itemized statement of account should always accompany the claim. When the plaintiff is a non-resident or foreign corporation, security for costs may be required not exceeding three hundred dollars. See Undertakings. Claims which are to be filed under an assignment for benefit of creditors must be verified under oath. See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Public Utilities Commission. — A public utilities commission was created by an act passed February 27, 1917, effective March 8, 1917.

Records. — See Deeds.

Redemption. — Real property sold under execution or foreclosure, except when the estate is less than a leasehold of two years' unexpired term, may be redeemed by the following persons or their successors in interest: 1. The judgment debtor or his successor in interest. 2. The creditor having a subsequent lien by judgment or mortgage on the whole or some part of the property sold. The judgment debtor or redemptioner may redeem the property from the purchaser within six months after the sale, on paying the purchaser the amount of his judgment with six per cent. thereon, together with the amount of any assessment or taxes which the purchaser may have paid thereon, and interest on such amount. If the purchaser also be a creditor having a lien prior to that of the redemptioner, other than the judgment under which the purchase was made, the amount of such lien with interest. If redeemed by a redemptioner, another redemptioner may within six months after the sale again redeem it by paying the sum paid on the preceding redemption, with an additional three per cent. thereon in addition to the amount of subsequent taxes or assessments paid with interest thereon, and any lien held by said last redemptioner, prior to his own, with interest. The property may be successively redeemed from any previous redemptioner, within sixty days after the last redemption and within six months from the date of sale, on the same terms. Upon the expiration of six months without redemption by the judgment debtor or his successor in interest, a deed issues from the officer to the person entitled. See Trust Deeds; Taxes.

Replevin (statutory title, "Claim and Delivery"). — The plaintiff in an action to recover the possession of personal property may replevy same at the time of issuing summons, or at any time before answer, upon filing requisite affidavit and an undertaking with two or more sureties in double the value of the property. See Undertakings. The affidavit must show that the plaintiff is the owner of the property claimed (particularly describing it), or is entitled to the possession thereof; that it is wrongfully detained; the alleged cause of the detention, according to his best knowledge, information, and belief; that it has not been taken for a tax assessment or fine pursuant to a statute, or seized under an execution or an attachment against plaintiff, or if so seized that it is exempt; and also stating the actual value of the property.

The defendant may within two days after the service on him of a copy of the affidavit and undertaking except to the sufficiency of the sureties, thus compelling justification before judgment or clerk, and failing to do so he is deemed to have waived the right. At any time before the delivery of the property to the plaintiff defendant may, if he does not except to the sufficiency of the sureties, require the return thereof upon giving to the officer a written undertaking executed by two or more sufficient sureties bound in double the value of the property, as stated in the affidavit of the plaintiff, for the delivery to plaintiff, if delivery be adjudged, and for payment to him of such sum as may for any cause be recovered against defendant.

If defendant does not require return of property within two days after taking and service of notice on him, the officer is required to deliver same to plaintiff, except that if the property be claimed by third party by proper affidavit, plaintiff must indemnify the officer against such claim, to entitle himself to delivery.

Reports, Judicial. — The reports of the decisions of the territorial and state supreme court are published in the Utah Reports, at present numbering thirty-six volumes.

Revision. — A complete revision of the laws of the State took effect January 1, 1898. It is published in one volume, and is known and cited as "The Revised Statutes." A new compilation of the laws was issued January 1, 1908, known as "Compiled Laws."

Sales. — Uniform Sales Act, passed March 8, 1917; effective June 15, 1917.

Sales in Bulk. — An act has been passed by the legislature, but there has been no decision as to its constitutionality.

Service. — A summons is served by delivering a copy thereof to the defendant personally, or by leaving a certified copy thereof at his usual place of abode, with some suitable person of at least the age of fourteen years. Provision is made for serving on corporations both domestic and foreign, minors and insane persons, and upon non-residents by publication, or by service out of the State. A summons issued out of the district court requires the defendant to answer, in twenty days if served within the county; otherwise thirty days.

Stay of Execution. — A perfected appeal, and a sufficient undertaking, the requirements of which in various different actions are prescribed by statute, stay execution.

Supplementary Proceedings. — When execution has been returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, the plaintiff is entitled to an order of the judge of the court for the appearance and examination of the judgment debtor if he resides in the district, or a like order may be obtained at any time after issuing execution, on satisfying the judge of the court, by affidavit or otherwise, that the judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply toward satisfaction of the judgment. An order may also be had for the examination of any person or corporation alleged to have property of the debtor or to be indebted to him. If any property is thus discovered in the debtor's or any other person's possession, it may be levied on and applied in satisfaction. See Executions.

Taxes. — There is levied and directed by statute to be collected an annual ad valorem tax on all taxable property in the State as follows: Not to exceed three mills on the dollar for state district school purposes, such sums as the county courts of the several counties may designate for district school purposes, not to exceed four mills on the dollar, and such sums as the county courts of the several counties may designate for county purposes, not to exceed five mills on the dollar. Debts are deducted from taxable credits. All property, for purpose of state and county taxation, is assessed as owned and valued on the second Monday of January of each year. Taxes attach to and constitute a lien on the property assessed from the second Monday in January each year. A tax on personal property is a lien on the taxpayer's real estate. Every tax has the effect of a judgment against the person, and every lien for taxes has the force and effect of an execution duly levied against all personal property of the delinquent. All state, school, and county taxes become due on the third Monday of September annually, and become delinquent on the Saturday preceding the first Monday in December. The assessor may require from any person a statement in writing under oath specifically stating all the real and personal property owned by such person or in his possession or control on the second Monday of January. The county treasurer shall, on or before the second Monday of December in each year, cause to be published, under the direction of the county commissioners, three times if in a daily paper, twice if in a semi-weekly paper, and once if in a weekly paper, in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, a delinquent tax list showing the amount of taxes assessed against each parcel delinquent in the county, with name of owner, if known, and on the third Monday of December in each year he shall expose for sale, in front of the county court-house, sufficient real property of each of such delinquents, and sell the same to the highest responsible bidder for cash, and continue to sell from day to day until such property is exhausted or the taxes have been paid with costs.

Real estate sold for taxes may be redeemed at any time within four years by any person interested therein by paying into the county treasury, for the use of the purchaser or his legal representatives, the amount paid by the purchaser, and all costs and one and a half per cent. a month interest on the whole from the day of sale to that of redemption, and all taxes subsequently paid by the purchaser. Where two or more persons are interested in property sold for taxes, either party may redeem the property in which he is interested on paying his proportionate share plus fifty cents for redemption certificate.

Tax deeds are received as prima facie evidence of their recitals.

Tender. — In an action for the recovery of money only, if defendant has tendered plaintiff amount to which he is actually entitled before suit, and further deposits amount tendered in court, all costs must be paid by plaintiff. An offer in writing to pay a particular sum, or to deliver a written instrument or specific personal property, is, if made in good faith and not accepted, equivalent to the actual production and tender of the money, instrument, or property.

Testimony. — All persons may be witnesses in civil cases, except: 1. Those of unsound mind. 2. Children under ten, who appear incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts respecting which they are examined, or of relating them truly. 3. Parties or assignors of parties to an action or proceeding, or persons in whose behalf an action or proceeding is prosecuted, against an executor or administrator upon a claim or demand against the estate of a deceased person, as to any matter of fact occurring before the death of such deceased person, and equally within the knowledge of both the witness and the deceased person. The same rule applies to insane and incompetent persons. Husband and wife cannot be examined for or against each other without their consent; nor can either, during marriage or afterward, without consent of the other, be examined as to communication made during marriage; but the foregoing does not apply to civil proceedings by one against the other, nor to criminal proceedings for crime committed by one against the other. Substantially the common law rules as to communications by and between attorney and client, clergyman or priest, physician or surgeon, and public officers, are enacted.

Torrens Land Law. — See under Deeds.

Trust Deeds. — In the usual form, with power of sale in trustee, are occasionally used in this State. The exercise of the power of sale is not prohibited by any law. Trust deeds are executed the same as mortgages, and may be released by the trustee in the same manner. See Mortgages. The debtor or his successor in interest may redeem from a sale within six months by paying the debt, interest, and costs.

Undertakings. — In all cases where an undertaking with sureties is required, the sureties must each be residents and householders or freeholders within the State, and each worth the sum specified in the undertaking over and above all their just debts and liabilities, exclusive of property exempt from execution; but when the amount of the undertaking exceeds two thousand dollars, and there are more than two sureties thereon, they may state in their affidavits that they are severally worth amounts less than that expressed in the undertaking, if the whole amount be equivalent to that of two sufficient sureties. Attorneys cannot become sureties for their clients in any undertaking in any court. Qualified Utah or foreign corporation, i. e. surety company, may execute bonds as surety in lieu of individuals.

Usury. — See Interest.

Warehouse Receipts. — A general law known as the uniform Warehouse Receipt Act was enacted by ch. 139, L. 1911.

Wills. — Any person over the age of eighteen years and of sound mind may dispose of his or her property, personal and real, by will, except that a husband may not devise away from his wife more than two thirds of his real property without her consent. There are no other statutory limitations or restrictions. Widow has an election between will and distributive share. See Descent and Distribution. A will must be in writing, subscribed by the testator at the end thereof, in the presence of two witnesses, and the testator must, at the time of subscribing, declare to the witnesses that the instrument is his will; and must be attested by two witnesses, each of whom must sign his name as a witness at the end of the will, at the testator's request, in his presence and in the presence of each other. By express enactment of statute the word "writing" includes printing and typewriting. All wills executed according to the law of the State or country where made, or where testator was at the time domiciled, or in conformity to the laws of Utah, may be admitted to probate here after being duly proved and allowed in any other State, Territory, or foreign state or county.

Married women may make wills as if sole.

Nuncupative wills are good provided the estate bequeathed does not exceed in value the sum of one thousand dollars, and provided the will be proved within six months after decedent's death by two witnesses who were present, one of whom was asked by testator to bear witness that such was his will or to that effect, and only in cases where testator was in expectation of immediate death from an injury or casualty happening within twenty-four hours previous to the making of the will. Proof must be made within six months, and substance of the testamentary words must have been reduced to writing within thirty days after words were spoken.

A holographic will, defined as one that is entirely written, dated, and signed by the hand of the testator himself, need not be witnessed, and may be proven in the same way as other private writings.

A witness to a will should write with his name, his place of residence, but failure so to do does not affect validity of will.

If a beneficial devise, legacy, or gift is made by the will to a subscribing witness, there must be two other competent witnesses, or devise, etc., is void.

The execution of a codicil has the effect to republish previous will referred to therein; as modified by the codicil.

A prior will is not revoked by a subsequent will unless latter contains express revocation, or provisions wholly inconsistent with former. Otherwise former remains effectual as far as consistent.

Workmen's Compensation Act. — A Uniform Workmen's Compensation Act, creating the Industrial Commission of Utah, establishing rates of compensation for personal injuries or deaths sustained by employees, creating a State Insurance Fund, was adopted March 8, 1917; effective July 1, 1917.

[Certificate of Acknowledgment of Deed of a Corporation.]

STATE OF }
COUNTY OF } ss.

At this day of 19 personally appeared who has executed the foregoing written instrument as the duly authorized agent of and acknowledged the same to be the free act and deed of said corporation, and that he, as such agent, freely executed the same. Before me, (Signature and title.)

Proof by Subscribing Witness: —

In certain cases where deed is not acknowledged, proof of execution may be made by the subscribing witnesses before any judge of the supreme or county court in this State; and if the witnesses are dead or out of the State, the deed may be proved before such court by proving the handwriting of the grantor, and of any subscribing witness, or adducing other evidence to the satisfaction of the court. If a grantor refuses to acknowledge his deed, any person claiming under him may cite him before a justice of the peace to hear the testimony of the subscribing witnesses, and if the deed is proved to the satisfaction of the justice by one or more of the subscribing witnesses, he shall so certify, which shall be equivalent to a due acknowledgment by the grantor. These proceedings must be had in this State. See Married Women; Corporations.

Depositions — May be taken out of court when the witness resides more than thirty miles from the place of trial; when he is going out of the State not to return before the time of trial; when by reason of sickness or infirmity he is incapable of appearing in court; and when he resides out of the State. They may be taken with a typewriter if the signatures of the deponent and magistrate are written with a pen.

Depositions may be taken before a justice of the peace, a notary public, or master in chancery, or, if out of the State, by any officer there authorized to take depositions.

Any person wishing to take the deposition of a witness out of court shall either cause personal notice to be given by the magistrate taking such deposition to the adverse party, or a citation, signed by a justice, notary public, or master in chancery, to be served on the adverse party, if residing within this State, and in case such adverse party resides without this State, on his attorney if residing within this State, in the same manner as the service of a writ of summons, which citation shall state the time and place of taking such deposition, and before whom it will be taken, and shall be served so that such adverse party may have a reasonable time to appear and be present at the taking of such deposition.

Citation to a party to attend the taking of the deposition of a witness: —

STATE OF VERMONT, }
COUNTY OF } ss.

To any sheriff or constable of the State, or to an indifferent person, greeting: By the authority of the State of Vermont, you are hereby commanded to notify C. D., of in the county of to appear before at on the day of at of the clock in the noon, to be present at the taking the deposition of E. F., to be used in a case to be heard and tried before court, to be held within and for the county of on the day of next, in which cause of is plaintiff, and of is defendant. Fail not, but make service and return according to law.

Dated at in the county of the day of in the year of our Lord (Signature and title.)

[Certificate and Caption of a Deposition.]

STATE OF }
COUNTY OF } ss.

At in the county of this day of A. D. 19 personally appeared A. B., and made oath that the foregoing deposition, by him subscribed, contains the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Before C. D., justice of the peace (or commissioner as the case may be).

The above deposition is taken at the request of E. F., to be used in a cause to be heard and tried by (here insert the style of the court, or the name of the justice, or the description of the board, or auditors, referees, etc., by whom the cause is to be tried, and the time and place of session), in which cause is plaintiff, and is defendant. The deponent (here insert the cause of taking the deposition, as the case may be), is the cause of taking the deposition; and the adverse party was (or was not) notified, and did (or did not) attend. Certified by justice of the peace (or commissioner, as the case may be).

The deposition is then to be sealed up and the following superscription placed on the wrapper: The within deposition of A. B. was taken and sealed up by justice of the peace (or commissioner, as the case may be).

The deposition should not be written by the attorney, or either of the parties, or any one interested. If taken out of State ex parte, must be at least fifteen days before the term at which to be used, and immediately filed in the clerk's office.

The signature of the officer taking the deposition is prima facie sufficient without the certificate of a court of record to that effect or to the official character of such officer, and the same remark is applicable to affidavits.

Descent and Distribution of Property. — Personal Property. — The widow is entitled to her personal apparel and ornaments, and such other part of the personal estate as the probate court may assign her, being not less than one third thereof, after debts and expenses of settlement are paid. If the personal estate does not exceed three hundred dollars, the probate court may assign the whole for the support of the widow and children, and if there is no widow, then for the support of the children under seven years of age, after paying funeral expenses and charges of administration.

The residue, if there is more than three hundred dollars, after paying the funeral charges and expenses of administration, is to be distributed in the same proportions as provided in case of real estate.

Real Estate. — Widow has one third of real estate as dower, unless barred by jointure or provisions of a will in lieu of dower. Dower exist only in realty of which the husband died seized; so she need not execute conveyance with him to bar dower. If the husband leaves no issue, the widow is entitled to the whole of his estate, if it does not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars. If the estate exceeds twenty-five hundred dollars, then the widow is entitled to twenty-five hundred dollars and one half of the remainder, and the remaining part of the estate shall descend in the same manner as the whole would if no widow survived. If the wife leaves no issue, husband has same share as wife would have in his estate if he left no issue. Husband or wife may, in every case, waive the provisions of the other's will and insist upon their rights according to law of descent and distribution.

By Act of General Assembly 1917, the widow of a deceased person shall be entitled to one third in value of the real estate of which her husband died seized, and if such husband left him surviving only one heir and such heir is the issue of said widow or the heir by adoption of both the widow and husband, she shall be entitled to one half in value of such real estate, unless she is barred as provided in this chapter; but where a right of homestead also exists, such one third or one half, as the case may be, shall be diminished by the amount of such homestead. All provisions of this chapter relating to the widow's one third interest in her husband's real estate shall apply in the same manner to her one half interest when she shall be entitled thereto under the provisions of this section. (The above statute is identical in the case of a widower's interest in his wife's real estate.)

If deceased person leave no issue, nor surviving husband or wife, the estate descends in equal shares to his father and mother, and if the mother is not living the estate descends to the father, or, if the father is not living and the mother survives, the estate descends to the mother. If the deceased person leave no issue, nor wife, nor husband, nor father, nor mother, the estate descends in equal shares to the brothers and sisters of such deceased person, and to the legal representatives of a deceased brother or sister. If none of the relatives above named shall survive, his estate shall descend in equal shares to the next of kin, in equal degree; but no persons shall be entitled, by right of representation, to the share of such next of kin who shall have died. The degrees of kindred are computed according to rules of civil law, kindred of half blood inheriting equally with those of whole blood in same degree. Posthumous children are considered as living at death of parent.

If any person shall die leaving no kindred who by law can inherit the estate, the same escheats to town for use of schools.

Illegitimate children inherit the estate of their mothers, and mothers that of such children.

There is also allowed and set off to the widow of the deceased a homestead of the value of five hundred dollars in the dwelling-house, out-buildings, and lands used in connection therewith.

All taxation imposed is payable to the treasurer of the State by the executors, administrators, trustees, grantees, or donees at the expiration of one year from the date of the issuing of letters testamentary or of administration, the appointment of a trustee, or the death of a grantor or donor.

Probate court has power to extend the time when taxes shall be due, whenever in the judgment of said court the circumstances in the case may require. No specific legacy or property subject to said tax shall be delivered to any person until the tax therefrom has been collected. The value of the property subject to the tax shall be the actual market value as found by the judge of probate. Appraisal of the same may be made upon application of the commissioner of state taxes to the probate court.

Divorces. — Divorces from the bond of matrimony may be granted for adultery in either party, or when either of them is sentenced to confinement to hard labor in the state prison for life, or for three years or more, or in any prison outside of the State, and is actually confined at the time; for intolerable severity in either of the parties, for willful desertion for three consecutive years, or if the husband, being of sufficient pecuniary or physical ability to provide suitable maintenance for his wife, shall without cause grossly or wantonly and cruelly refuse or neglect so to do. Divorces may be granted for any of the above causes, notwithstanding such causes first happened while the parties were residing in another State or country, provided the party petitioning shall have resided in this State two years and within the county where such petition is preferred six months next previous to the term of court at which the petition is presented. No divorce can be granted unless the libellant has resided in this State one full year next preceding the filing of the libel in court.

It is not lawful for any petitionee in any divorce proceedings, in which a divorce is granted to again marry any person other than the petitioner, for the space of three years next after the granting of such divorce; but this provision does not apply after the death of the petitioner. Any person violating this last provision, or living in this State under such forbidden marriage relation within said three years, is punishable by imprisonment at hard labor in the state prison for not less than one year nor more than five years.

The petition must be preferred and tried in the county court of the county in which the parties, or one of them, live. The cause is tried by the judges of the county court without a jury, and the testimony must be given orally, except that depositions may be taken and used in the same manner and for the same causes as is provided by law in other cases. The parties are allowed to testify in all divorce cases. No argument is usually allowed on questions of fact in divorce cases. Personal service upon the libellee within the State must be made not later than twelve days before the opening of the term; personal service outside the State not later than twenty days before the opening of the term. Where personal service cannot be had, and the whereabouts of the libellee are unknown, service may be made by publication for three successive weeks in a local newspaper, the last publication to be not later than six weeks before the opening of the term. Where service is by publication the court may, at its discretion, continue the case for one term for further notice.

Divorces from bed and board for a limited or indefinite length of time may be decreed for the same causes, and by similar proceedings, as in case of absolute divorce.

Marriage. — Before marriage can be solemnized in this State a regular marriage certificate must be procured in the town where groom lives if a resident of the State. If he is not a resident, then in the town where the bride resides. If neither bride nor groom is a resident of the State, then in the town where the marriage is to be solemnized. In cases where neither party is a resident of the State marriage shall not be solemnized until five days have elapsed since the procurement of the certificate.

Dower. — See Descent and Distribution.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Executions — Are not issued from the county court until close of the term, except by special leave of the court. From justices' courts they may issue at the expiration of two hours after judgment, if there is no appeal. Are returnable in sixty days from date. Executions may be stayed by order of court, but this is very rarely done except in cases of exceptions to the rulings of the court below, and passing of cases thereon to the supreme court. No general stay laws exist. Real estate and personal property levied upon are sold to the highest bidder; but in case of real estate, the debtor may redeem within six months after sale. See Attachment; Exemptions.

Exemptions. — The law exempts a homestead from attachment or levy of execution to the amount of five hundred dollars; also (unless turned out to the officer by the debtor, to be taken on the attachment in execution) such suitable apparel, bedding, tools, arms, and articles of household furniture as may be necessary for upholding life, one sewing-machine kept for use, one cow, the best swine, or the meat of one swine, sheep not exceeding in number ten, and one year's product of said sheep in wool, yarn, or cloth, forage sufficient for keeping not exceeding ten sheep and one cow through one winter, ten cords of firewood or five tons of coal, twenty bushels of potatoes, all growing crops, ten bushels of grain, one barrel of flour, three swarms of bees and hives, together with their produce in honey, two hundred pounds of sugar, and all lettered gravestones, the bibles and other books used in a family, one pew or slip in a meeting-house or place of religious worship, live poultry not exceeding in value the sum of ten dollars, the professional books and instruments of physicians and dentists, and the professional books of clergymen and attorneys at law, to the value of two hundred dollars; and also one yoke of oxen or steers, as the debtor may select, two horses kept and used for team-work, and such as the debtor may select in lieu of oxen or steers, but not exceeding in value the sum of three hundred dollars, with sufficient forage for keeping the same through the winter; also the pistols, side arms, and equipments personally used by any soldier in the service of the United States and kept by him or his heirs as mementos of his service, also one two-horse wagon with whiffletrees and neck-yoke, or one ox-cart, as the debtor may choose; one sled or one set of traverse sleds, either for horses or oxen, as the debtor may select; two harnesses, two halters, two chains, one plow, and one ox-yoke, which, with the oxen or steers or horses which the debtor may select for team work, shall not exceed in value three hundred and fifty dollars; also one tool chest kept for use by a mechanic. But no personal property shall be exempt from attachment on a suit brought to recover for the purchase-money, or for material or labor expended on the same.

A housekeeper or head of a family has a homestead exemption from attachment or execution in a dwelling-house and lands appurtenant, used or kept as a homestead, to the value of five hundred dollars. Such homestead cannot be mortgaged by the owner, if a married man, unless his wife joins in the mortgage. This homestead passes on the death of the owner to his widow and minor children, but the children's right continues only till majority.

Garnishment. — See Trustee Process.

Inheritance Taxes. — All property and interests therein within the jurisdiction of this State, whether tangible or intangible, which shall pass by will, by intestate laws, or by deed grant, sale, or gift, made or intended to take effect at the death of the grantor, except on a bona fide purchase for full consideration, to any person other than father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant, adopted child, lineal descendant of any adopted child, wife or widow of a son, or the husband of the daughter of a decedent, or to and for charitable, educational, religious societies or institutions, the property of which is exempt by law from taxation, shall be subject to a tax of five per cent. of its value for the use of the State.

The tax applies equally to people living within or without the State, to the assignment or transfer of stocks or obligations in domestic corporations, or in foreign corporation having its principal place of business located in this State. The amount of assessment is fixed by th-judge of probate in the district in which the estate is being administered. Payment of tax is made directly to the state treasurer at Montpelier.

Insolvent Laws and Assignments. — Suspended by the operation of the National Bankruptcy Law.

Interest. — Rate six per cent. per annum. Only the excess paid is forfeited, and that may be recovered back or set up in reduction of claim, if such action is brought or defense made within six years after payment of the usury. On judgments, six per cent. is allowed.

Money loaned on mortgage on property in this State at a rate of interest not in excess of five per cent. is exempt from taxation.

Judgments — Do not of themselves create a lien upon property not attached upon mesne process. Judgments of other States are proved by a certified copy of the record, authenticated as provided by act of Congress on that subject. Interest on judgments, at the rate of six per cent. per annum.

If no defense is interposed, and there has been personal service, judgment is rendered in the county court at the first term. Before justices of the peace, judgment is rendered on the return day, if no defense is made. Judgment notes are not used.

License. — It is not necessary for a commercial traveler to procure a license.

Liens. — A mechanics' lien for work or materials in erecting, repairing, altering, or removing buildings may be created upon the buildings and lot of land on which they stand, if the contract was with the owner, by causing to be recorded in the town clerk's office of the town where situated a memorandum, signed by the claimant, asserting such lien, which must be followed by an action on the claim within three months after filing the memorandum, if the debt is then due, or within three months after the debt becomes due, if not due when the memorandum is filed. In this action the property on which the lien is claimed is to be attached within five months after judgment is obtained, a certified copy of the record is to be recorded in the town clerk's office, and the lien then becomes one in the nature of a mortgage, to be enforced by foreclosure as in cases of mortgage.

By filing a lien and giving notice to the owner, a sub-contractor may acquire and assert a similar lien, not to exceed the amount due from the owner to the original contractor.

Every person who shall make, alter, or repair any article of personal property at the request of the owner thereof has a lien thereon for his reasonable charges therefor, and may retain possession thereof until such charges are paid, and may, if such charges remain unpaid for three months and the value of the property does not exceed one hundred dollars, on ten days' notice, by posting in two or more public places in the town of his residence, sell the same at public auction in such town, and apply the proceeds to the satisfaction of such debt and the expenses of the sale, and the balance shall be paid to the owner.

A person boarding horses or cattle has a lien for the keeping.

Conditional Sales. — The lien of a vendor of personal property by conditional sale (reserving title till the payment of the purchase-money) is not good against bona fide purchasers or attaching creditors, unless a written acknowledgment of such lien by the purchaser is recorded in the town clerk's office in the town where the purchaser resides within thirty days from the time of delivery. If the purchaser is a non-resident of the State, the record must be made in the town where the vendor resides.

Property subject to such lien must not be removed from the State without the consent of the vendor or his assignee. Such lien may be enforced by public sale of the property after thirty days after condition broken, in similar manner to sales of property under chattel mortgage. See Chattel Mortgages. Such lien may be discharged by an entry to that effect on the margin of the record, signed by the vendor, his legal representative, attorney, or assignee, or by a similar entry on the instrument creating the lien, or by a release of the lien signed as aforesaid, recorded in the town clerk's office. See Judgments.

Limitations. — Actions for recovery of lands, fifteen years. The following actions are limited to six years: All actions of debt founded upon any contract, obligation, or liability, not under seal, or upon the judgment of any court, excepting such as are brought upon the judgment or decree of some court of record of the United States, or of this or some other State; 2d, all actions of debt for rent; 3d, all actions of account, assumpsit, or on the case founded on any contract or liability, express or implied; 4th, all actions of trespass on land; 5th, all actions of replevin, and all other actions for taking, detaining, or injuring goods or chattels; 6th, all other actions on the case, except actions for slanderous words and for libels; and for recovery of damages for bodily hurt or injury to personal property suffered by plaintiff by act or default of defendant; against towns and town clerks for neglect of duty of town clerks after final judgments based on such neglect; eight years, actions of debt or scire facias on judgment; debt on specialty; covenant except of seisin in deeds of land.

Actions for assault and battery and false imprisonment, within three years after cause of action accrued; actions against sheriffs for the misconduct of the deputies, within four years; action upon promissory notes signed in presence of an attesting witness, within fourteen years after cause of action accrued; actions of covenant, except covenants of warranty and seisin, within eight years; actions on covenant of warranty, within eight years next after a final decision against the title of the covenantor in the deed, and on actions on covenants of seisin, within fifteen years after the cause of action shall accrue. Actions for slanderous words and for libel, and for recovering damages for bodily hurt, or injury to personal property, shall be commenced within three years after cause of action accrues.

Time of absence from State, without known attachable property in the State, is not to be computed in making up the limitation. If party is under legal disability to sue, time of limitation does not commence to run till removal of disability. Right of action is revived, and statute bar prevented from running by part payment, acknowledgment, or new promise, but indorsement of payment upon written contract is not sufficient proof to take case out of the statute, unless in handwriting of the party making the payment. No new promise or acknowledgment removes or suspends statute bar, unless in writing, signed by party affected thereby.

Married Women. — The real estate of a married woman, and the rents, issues, and products thereof, and, during coverture, her husband's interest in the same, cannot be attached or levied upon for the sole debts of her husband, except that such annual products may be so taken for his debt created for necessities for his wife and family, or for labor or materials furnished upon, or for the cultivation or improvement of, such real estate.

By a statute of 1884 it was enacted that a married woman may make contracts with any person other than her husband, and bind herself and her separate property, in the same manner as if she was unmarried, and may sue and be sued as to all such contracts made by her, either before or during coverture, without her husband being joined in the action as plaintiff and defendant, and execution may issue against her, and be levied on her sole and separate goods, chattels, and estates. But this provision is subject to the limitation that nothing in such statute contained shall authorize a married woman to convey or mortgage her real estate except by deed duly executed by her and her husband, as previously provided by law, nor to become surety for her husband's debts, except by way of mortgage duly executed as aforesaid.

All personal property and rights of action acquired by a woman before marriage, or in any manner during coverture, except by gift from her husband, shall be held to her sole and separate use, and neither a wife's separate property, nor the rents, issues, income, and profit of the same shall be subject to the disposal of her husband or liable for his debts; but nothing in such statute contained shall authorize any claim by either husband or wife against the other for personal services.

No married man shall be liable for any debt contracted by his wife before the marriage, except in case where the marriage was contracted before January 1, 1884, nor shall any husband be liable for the torts of his wife unless committed by his authority or direction.

The earnings of a married woman are not subject to attachment by the trustee process upon her husband's debts. She may make a will, and thereby devise her real or personal property. The husband must join in the conveyance of the wife's real estate. If a married man is incapacitated by intemperance, insanity, or otherwise, from supporting his family, or deserts or ill-uses his wife, or by criminal conduct gives her cause to live apart from him, the chancellor may, upon her petition, authorize such wife to sell and convey her real estate. See Testimony; Deeds.

Females become of age at eighteen.

Mechanics' Liens. — See Liens.

Mortgages. — Mortgaged premises are not sold upon foreclosure, but the proceeding is one of strict foreclosure under the jurisdiction of the court of chancery, or by ejectment with statutory redemption right in county court. The title passes to the mortgagee, if the land is not redeemed within the time fixed in the decree, which is one year, when the security is sufficient; when not so, the court may shorten the time at its discretion. Mortgages may be discharged by the mortgagor or his assignee, attorney, executors, or administrators, by signing an acknowledgment of satisfaction thereof upon the margin of the record, or by entering such an acknowledgment on the mortgage deed, and signing and affixing his seal to the same. This acknowledgment of satisfaction must be recorded on the margin of the record of the mortgage. A mortgagee may also discharge a mortgage by the execution of an ordinary quitclaim deed of the mortgaged premises, or by a satisfaction piece executed by the mortgagee, his attorney, executor, administrator, or assignee, giving the names of the parties to the mortgage and the volume and page of its record, which must be executed, witnessed, acknowledged, and recorded like a deed in the land records of the town where the mortgaged property is situated. The wife is not required to join in the discharge. Instead of a bond, mortgages are usually accompanied by one or more negotiable promissory notes. See Chattel Mortgages.

Negotiable Instruments. — The general law known as the "Negotiable Instruments Act," which became effective in 1913, made the law relative to negotiable paper uniform with laws of New York, Massachusetts, and other States in which the Negotiable Instruments Act is in operation, changing the law merchant in some respects.

Notaries Public. — Notaries are appointed by the judges of the county court and hold office during the term of the judges appointing them. Their jurisdiction extends throughout the State. No seal is required in the State to their official acts.

County clerks are notaries by virtue of their office. They are required to take the oath of office prescribed by the constitution, and their certificate of appointment is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county in which they are appointed, which certificate is forwarded to the secretary of the State, where the same is recorded.

Notaries are required to have a seal of office which shall be affixed to all papers officially signed by them, unless otherwise provided by law. They may take acknowledgments of deeds and other papers, which are valid without a seal. They are empowered to take depositions, administer oaths of office, and issue subpoenas for witnesses.

Notes and Bills of Exchange — Are governed ordinarily by the law merchant. In actions on them between the original parties, partial failure of consideration may be set up as partial defense. No grace is allowed on notes or other evidences of debt made or payable in this State. Notes falling due on Sunday or legal holiday are considered as falling due on next following business day. Notes payable on demand are considered overdue after sixty days from date. To charge indorser on such notes, presentment for payment must be made on or before sixty days from date. No paper is negotiable except such as is so by the general law merchant. See Trustees Process.

Patent Laws. — The law relative to patent rights provides that a person who sells or barter a patent right and takes a note or obligation therefor without writing the words "given for a patent right" shall be punished by imprisonment, and that all such notes or obligations shall be subject to the same defenses in hands of an innocent purchaser as in hands of original promisee.

Practice. — The courts practice under the common law, as modified by statute.

Proof of Claims. — Claims of non-residents are proved in the same manner as those of residents, that is, by competent oral testimony or written evidence. Oral testimony is to be given either personally upon the stand or by deposition. Affidavits ex parte are not received in proof of claims. To be admissible for that purpose, they must be taken as depositions with notice. See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Recording Deeds, etc. — Deeds must be recorded in the town or city where the land is located, in the office of the town or city clerk, to convey title as against subsequent purchasers or attaching creditors without notice.

Redemption. — See Executions; Tax Sale.

Replevin. — Goods or chattels may be replevied at the time of the service of the writ in replevin upon the plaintiff giving a bond with sufficient sureties, in double the value of the property replevied (such value to be ascertained by appraisers appointed by the officer serving the process), conditioned to prosecute the replevin to final judgment, and pay such damages and costs as the defendant shall recover against him, and also to return the property in case such shall be the final judgment. No provision is made for an enforced return of the property to the defendant while the replevin suit is pending.

Reports, Judicial. — N. Chipman, 1 vol.; Brayton, 1 vol.; Tyler, 2 vols.; D. Chipman, 2 vols.; Aikens, 2 vols.; Vermont, 92 vols.

Two Digests of the Reports are published, — one by Robert Roberts is in one volume and includes all the State Reports to and including the 77th Vt.; the other, by the West Publishing Company, is in three volumes and covers all the reports including the 83d Vt.

Revision. — The latest revision of the laws was the General Laws enacted in 1917.

Sales in Bulk. — There is a statute in force. (G. L. 8013.)

Service. — See Actions; Attachment; Arrest. Notice by publication to absent defendant, where the court obtains jurisdiction by attachment of the property or from the nature of the subject-matter, is given by publication in some newspaper, to be designated by the court, three weeks successively, the last of which publications shall be at least twenty days before the term at which the party is required to appear.

Stay of Execution. — See Executions.

Supplementary Proceedings — Are unknown.

Tax Sale. — Notice of sale must be advertised three weeks successively in the vicinity of lands, the last publication being ten days before time of sale, and by posting notice in same town. If the owner tenders the constable the full sum for which the lands were sold, with legal costs and twelve per cent. interest, within one year from day of sale, the constable shall not execute a deed of the premises sold, but refund the purchaser his money. If not redeemed, the constable executes to the purchaser a deed. Lands can only be sold for taxes by first constables. It is made the duty of all collectors of taxes, other than first constables, to deposit a list of the lands of non-residents upon which taxes are unpaid, stating the parcels of land and the amounts due thereon, with the first constable on or before the 1st day of August annually, and such lists shall remain in his hands until the 15th of August before the lands shall be advertised for sale.

Taxes upon foreign corporations are based upon either the appraised values or the income, for instance: Railroads, seven tenths of one per cent. of the appraised value, or two and one half per cent. of gross earnings, on mileage in the State. Telephone companies, three per cent. on gross earnings wholly in State. Telegraph companies, sixty cents per mile for one wire and forty cents per mile additional for each wire, or three per cent. on business in the State. Sleeping and palace car companies, five per cent. on gross earnings in State. Express companies, four per cent. on gross receipts, on business in this State. Steamboat, car, and transportation companies, seven tenths of one per cent. on appraised value of property and franchise. License tax on all corporations, foreign or domestic, doing business in this State, having capital stock or deposit of fifty thousand dollars or less, ten dollars; for each fifty thousand dollars or less in excess of fifty thousand dollars, five dollars; but no tax shall exceed fifty dollars. Tax to be paid to treasurer in month of February, and return shall then be made to treasurer and commissioner of state taxes. On failure to pay, commissioner to notify company, and upon neglect to pay, to bring a proceeding in chancery for dissolution of company. Insurance and guaranty companies, two per cent. on gross amount of premiums or assessments in this State, with special provisions as to domestic life insurance companies. Savings banks, seventh tenths of one per cent. on average amount of deposits and accumulations.

The assessing authority is the commissioner of state taxes. Return must be made to him and to the state treasurer on or before September 15, for the year terminating with the last day of June next preceding; or semiannually, on or before the fifteenth days of March and September for the semiannual period terminating the last day of June or December next preceding. Penalty for not making returns, one hundred dollars a day. If a foreign insurance, loan, mortgage, or investment company, or an agent thereof, fails to make return or pay the tax, the commissioner shall notify the insurance commissioners, or inspector of finance, and thereupon the license shall be revoked.

Testimony. — No person is disqualified as a witness by reason of interest as party or otherwise, but such interest may be shown as affecting credibility. Where one of the original parties to the contract or cause of action in issue is dead or insane, or when an executor or administrator is a party, the other party cannot testify in his own favor, unless the contract in issue was originally made with a person living and competent to testify, except as to acts and contracts done and made since the probate of the will or appointment of the administrator, and except to meet or explain the testimony of living-witnesses produced against him. Husband and wife are competent witnesses for or against each other in all cases civil and criminal except that neither shall be allowed to testify against the other as to any statement, conversation, letter, or communication made to the other, or to another person, nor to any matter in violation of marital confidence.

No person is incompetent as a witness on account of his religious opinions, nor by reason of conviction of any crime, other than perjury or subornation of perjury, or endeavoring to procure another person to commit perjury; but the conviction of any crime involving moral turpitude may be given in evidence as affecting the credibility of the witness. See Depositions.

Trust Deeds — Are not used as security for loans of money.

Trustee Process. — Actions ex contractu may be begun by trustee process, which attaches the goods, effects, and credits of the defendant in the hands of the trustee at the times of attachment, or coming into the hands of the trustee after attachment and before disclosure, to respond to final judgment. Negotiable paper transferred before maturity to any bank in the State is exempt from this process. In other cases of transfer of negotiable paper, in order to cut off its liability to attachment by the trustee process, that is, by summoning the maker as trustee of the payee in the suit of a creditor of the latter, notice must be given to the maker by the transferee before the service of the process. The trustee process does not reach debts due upon a contingency, nor debts due on judgment, so long as the judgment debtor is liable to an execution on the judgment. Indebtedness arising from exempt property, earnings of minors or married women in suits against their parents or husbands, wages earned after service upon the trustee, and debentures of officers and members of the general assembly or of petit or grand jurors, cannot be attached by this process. The trustee or garnishee may be discharged by the defendant giving plaintiff bond equal to the amount directed to be attached in the writ, with two sureties worth in the aggregate equal to the amount of the bond, conditioned for payment of the amount of the plaintiff's judgment, if he shall recover one. Claimants may appear and maintain their right to the property attached. Wages of a defendant to the amount of ten dollars are exempt.

Wills — Must be in writing and signed by the testator and attested by three witnesses, who must subscribe as such in the presence of the testator and at his request, and in the presence of each other. The body of a will made upon typewriter complies with the statute requiring wills to be in writing. To pass the title to property a will must be proved before the probate court. A will made out of the State, which may be proved or allowed, according to the laws of the State or country where made, may be proved, allowed, and recorded in this State, and shall thereupon have the same effect as if executed according to the laws of this State. See Married Women.

Wills must be recorded in the probate court, and also in the town clerk's office in every town containing real estate upon which they operate.

Women's Right to Vote. — By Act of General Assembly in 1917, a female citizen twenty-one years of age, whose list is taken in a town at the annual assessment preceding a town meeting and whose tax or taxes due said town were paid prior to the fifteenth day of February preceding said meeting, shall while residing in such town be a voter in town meeting. (To entitle a woman to vote, no particular amount of list is required, many claiming the privilege by paying taxes on from one dollar to twenty-five dollars.)

VIRGINIA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Jo. Lane & Cary Ellis Stern, of Richmond.

The next legislature convenes January, 1920.

Under an act, March 21, 1914, three commissioners have been appointed by the governor to revise and codify the laws of Virginia.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — The actions of ejectment, unlawful entry and detainer, debt, covenant, trespass, detinue, trover, assumpsit, continue in force, though assumpsit may be maintained wherever covenant will lie. Replevin is abolished. Attachment and distress lie for rent. In detinue, when the defendant is insolvent or the property will be injured or destroyed, there is a process to take it in possession. (Code, 1904, § 2907.)

Any person entitled to recover money damages or penalty in an action at law may do so on motion after fifteen days' notice. (Code, § 3211; Acts 1914, p. 28.)

The assignee of any bond, note, or writing not negotiable may maintain thereupon an action in his own name, but must allow all just discounts, not only against himself, but against the assignor, before the defendant has notice of the assignment. (Code, § 2860.)

Whenever the death of a person is caused by the wrongful act, neglect, or default of any person or corporation, or of any ship or vessel, and the act, neglect, or default is such as would (if death had not ensued) have entitled the party injured to maintain an action, or to proceed in rem against said ship or vessel, or in personam against the owners thereof or those having control of her, and to recover damages in respect thereof, then, and in every such case, the person who, or corporation or ship or vessel which, would have been liable, if death had not ensued, shall be liable to an action for damages, or, if a ship or vessel, to a libel in rem, and her owners or those responsible for her acts or defaults or negligence to a libel in personam, notwithstanding the death of the person injured, and although the death shall have been caused under such circumstances as amount in law to a felony (Code, 1887, § 2902); the action to be brought in the name of the personal representative of deceased within twelve months after his or her death; the jury to assess the damages, not exceeding ten thousand dollars, and direct in what proportion they are to be distributed to wife, husband, parent, and child of the deceased; the court to have power to grant new trials as in other cases (§ 2903); if there be a wife, husband, parent, or child of deceased, the recovery to be free from the debts or liabilities of deceased; if there be no wife, husband, parent, or child, then the recovery to go to the personal representative, to be administered as other assets (§ 2904); the action not to abate by the death of the defendant, or the dissolution of the corporation, when a corporation is defendant. (§ 2906; Acts 1893-94, p. 83.)

When the action is brought by party injured during his life, and he die pending the action, and his death is caused by such wrongful act, neglect, or default, the action will not abate by reason of his death, or by the dissolution of the corporation when a corporation is the defendant, but, his death being suggested, the action may be revived in the name of his personal representative (§ 2906); and the declaration and other pleadings shall be amended so as to conform to an action under sections 2902, 2903; and afterwards the case will be proceeded in as if originally instituted after his death. (See Code, 1904, § 2906; Acts 1893-94, p. 83.)

Security for costs may be required by a defendant or any officer of the court by a suggestion on the record of the court, or (if the case be at rules) on the rule docket, that the plaintiff is not a resident of this State, and that security is required of him. After sixty days from such suggestion, the suit shall, by order of the court, be dismissed, unless, before the dismissal, the plaintiff be proved to be a resident of the State, or security be given before said court, or the clerk thereof, for the payment of the costs and damages which may be awarded to the defendant, and of the fees due, or to become due, in such suit, to the officers of the court. (See Code, § 3539.)

Affidavits. — Any oath or affidavit required by law, which is not of such a nature that it must be made in court, may be administered by or made before a justice and certified by him, unless otherwise provided; and in any case in which an oath might be administered by, or an affidavit made before a justice, the same may be administered by or made before a notary, a commissioner in chancery, a commissioner appointed by the governor, or a court, or clerk of a court, or clerks of city councils, common councils, or boards of aldermen, or in case of a survey directed by a court in a cause therein pending, by or before the surveyor directed to execute said order of survey. (Code, § 173; Acts of Assembly, 1906, ch. 169, page 253.) An affidavit may also be made before any officer of another State or country authorized by its laws to administer an oath, and is duly authenticated if it be subscribed by such officer, and there be annexed to it a certificate of the clerk or other officer of a court of record of such State or country, under an official seal, verifying the genuineness of the signature of the first mentioned officer, and his authority to administer an oath. (Code, § 174; Acts of Assembly of Virginia, 1897-98, p. 115.) Certificate by foreign notary with official seal need not be certified by clerk, etc.

In an action of assumpsit on contract express or implied, if plaintiff file with his declaration an affidavit made by himself or his agent, stating the amount of his claim, that the amount is justly due, and the time from which interest is claimed, no plea in bar shall be received unless defendant file with plea affidavit of himself or agent that plaintiff is not entitled to recover any thing on such claim, or that he is entitled to a less sum. (Code, § 3286.) A mere bookkeeper cannot make this affidavit.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Aliens. — Any alien, not an enemy, may acquire by purchase or descent and hold real estate in this State, and the same shall be transmitted in the same manner as real estate held by citizens. (Code, § 43.)

Appeals. — Any person who thinks himself aggrieved by an order in a controversy concerning the probate of a will, or the appointment or qualification of a personal representative, guardian, curator, or committee, or concerning a mill, roadway, ferry, wharf, or landing, may, in a court, during the term at which such order is made, appeal therefrom of right, with or without a supersedeas, as he may elect, on giving bond as prescribed by Code, § 3454. Other appeals are granted on application, and the judge applied to may refuse to grant the appeal. (See §§ 3454-3456.) But in applications to the judges of the court of appeals they may be made successively to the whole five, notwithstanding the refusal of any one or more of the other judges. Except in certain specified cases, the court of appeals has no jurisdiction where the amount in controversy in the court below is less in value or amount than three hundred dollars.

From decisions in the justices' courts appeals may be granted within ten days after rendition of judgment, if the case involves the constitutionality or validity of an ordinance or by-law of a corporation, or if the matter in controversy, exclusive of interest, is of greater amount or value than ten dollars, the appeal to be taken to the circuit or corporation court. (§ 2947.)

From judgments or decrees of the corporation courts, and from judgments or decrees of the circuit courts, appeals are taken to the court of appeals. Time allowed for the appeal, one year from the rendition of a final judgment, decree, or order, unless it be a decree refusing a bill of review to a final decree rendered more than six months prior thereto, in which event the time allowed is six months after such refusal (§ 3474); but the time which elapses from presenting the petition for an appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas, and the delivery of the record with the petition required by law to the clerk of the appellate court, is excluded from the computation of the said period of one year, or of six months, as the case may be. When a petition for appeal is presented to a judge he is required to indorse thereon the day and year he receives it.

Arrest. — There is no imprisonment for debt in Virginia; but when a plaintiff, his agent or attorney, makes affidavit before the court in which a suit or action is pending, or the judge thereof in vacation, or a justice, stating that the plaintiff has cause of action or suit against a defendant, the amount and justice of his claim, and that there is probable cause for believing that the defendant is about to quit the State unless he be forthwith apprehended, it is lawful for such court, judge, or justice to direct that such defendant shall be held to bail for such sum as the said court, judge, or justice may think fit; and thereupon the plaintiff may sue out of the clerk's office on such action or suit a writ of capias ad respondendum against the defendant. The defendant may be discharged on giving bond and security that in case there shall be in the action or suit any judgment, decree, or order on which a writ of fiery facias may issue, and within four months after such judgment, decree, or order interrogatories be filed under section 3643 with a commissioner of the court wherein such judgment, decree, or order is, the said defendant will, at the time the commissioner issues a summons to answer such interrogatories, be in the county or corporation in which such commissioner may reside, and will, within the time prescribed in such summons, file proper answers, upon oath, to such interrogatories, and make such conveyance and delivery as is required by the said chapter [section], or, in case of failure to file such answers and make such conveyance and delivery, that the defendant will perform and satisfy the said judgment, decree, or order. (§§ 2991, 2992.)

Assignments. — See Insolvent Laws.

Attachment. — The classes who may be proceeded against by attachment, besides tenants liable for rent, are: 1. A foreign corporation. 2. A non-resident of this State having estate or debts owing him within the county or corporation in which the action is, or is sued with a defendant residing therein. 3. A defendant who is removing or about to remove out of the State with intent to change his domicile. 4. A defendant who is removing, intends to remove, or has removed the specific property sued for, or his own estate, or the proceeds of the sale of his property, or a material part of such estate or proceeds, out of this State, so that process of execution on a judgment, when obtained in said action, will be unavailing.

5. A defendant who is converting, or is about to convert, or has converted his property of whatever kind, or some part thereof, into money, securities, or evidences of debt, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors. 6. A defendant who has assigned or disposed of, or is about to assign or dispose of, his estate, or some part thereof, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors. In any such case, the clerk of the court in which the action is shall issue an attachment as the case may require. (Code, § 2959.)

Non-residents may be sued by attachment in an action at law for the recovery of specific property, or for debt, or for damages for the breach of a contract express or implied, or for damages for a wrong, or in equity upon a claim to any specific personal property, or a like claim to any debt, whether such debt be payable or not, or to damages for the breach of any contract, express or implied, if such claim exceeds twenty dollars, exclusive of interest. (See Code, §§ 2959, 2964.) But if the only ground for the attachment is that the defendant, or one of the defendants, against whom the claim is, is a foreign corporation, or is not a resident of this State and has estate or debts owing to the said defendant within the county or corporation in which the suit is, or is sued with a defendant residing therein, the court of equity has not in such case jurisdiction to enforce by attachment a claim to a debt not payable. (See Code, § 2964.) The words estate or debts do not embrace a contingent remainder.

Against defendants removing effects, etc., out of the State, or against a tenant removing his effects from the leased premises, any justice of the peace may issue an attachment; in all other cases the writ of attachment must be obtained from the clerk of a court, if the claim exceed twenty dollars exclusive of interest. In cities containing seventy thousand inhabitants or more, if the claim be for three hundred dollars or under, inclusive of interest, the attachment may be brought in the civil justice's court. If of twenty dollars or under, exclusive of interest, the attachment should be before a justice of the peace and not before a court. (Acts 1895-96, ch. 566, p. 602.) Gives right of action whether debt due or not.

A non-resident may sue out an attachment against another non-resident when the latter has an estate or a debt due to him in this State.

As to attachments against masters or owners of vessels for materials or supplies furnished, see Code, § 2963, but it is claimed that the section is in conflict with United States judiciary. (Act, 1789, § 9, etc.)

Attachments have priority of lien on the property or persons having such property in possession in the order of their being levied.

Attachments may be levied upon any estate, real or personal, of the defendant. They are sufficiently levied if sued out against specified property, by serving the attachment on the defendant, or other person having possession of such property, and in every other case by a service of the attachment on such persons as may be designated by the plaintiff in writing to be in possession of effects of, or to be indebted to, the defendant, and, when the defendant is in possession, by service of the attachment on him; and as to real estate, by such estate being mentioned and described by indorsement on the attachment made by the officer to whom it is delivered to the following effect: "Levied on the following real estate of the defendant A. B. [or A. B. and C. D.] to wit: (Here describe the estate), this the day of E. F., sheriff (or other officer)" (see Code, § 2967), and by service of the attachment on the person, if any, in possession of such estate. (Ibid.)

The lien of the attachment on real estate, described in an indorsement on the attachment, is from the suing out of the attachment. (Code, § 2971.)

Chattel Mortgages and Deeds of Trust. — There may be mortgages and deeds of trust upon goods or chattels or upon real estate, but the description of the chattel should be as full as may be. (Hardaway v. Jones, Sup. Ct. App., Va., June 26, 1902.) See, as to recording, Records.

As to deeds of trust declared fraudulent per se and void as to creditors of grantors, see Addington v. Etheridge, 12 Gratt. 436.

Chattels on Conditional Sales (Sales by installments, etc.). — Every sale or contract for the sale of goods and chattels wherein the title thereto or a lien thereon is reserved until the same be paid for in whole or in part, or the transfer is made to depend on any condition, and possession be delivered to vendee, shall in respect to such reservation and condition, be void as to purchasers for value without notice from such vendee until such sale or contract be in writing, signed by both the vendor and vendee, in which said reservation or condition is expressed, and until and except from the time that a memorandum of said writing setting forth the date thereof, the amount due thereon, when and how payable and a brief description of said goods or chattels be docketed in the clerk's office of the circuit or corporation court of the county or corporation in which said goods or chattels may be. (Acts, 1904, p. 96.) A chattel mortgage on a changing stock of merchandise is invalid. As to rolling stock, cars, etc., of railroad companies, contracts concerning them are to be recorded in the county or corporation court of the county or corporation where the principal office of the company is located; if in Richmond city, in the Richmond chancery court (see Code, § 2462); and each locomotive, car, or other piece of rolling stock is to be plainly and permanently marked with the name of the vendor on both sides thereof, followed by the word "owner." (Ibid.; Acts 1904, p. 422.)

Claims against the Estates of Deceased Persons. — Chapters 119 and 120 of Code of 1904 contain full provisions respecting the powers and duties of personal representatives. Claims against deceased persons must be brought against the personal representative.

In granting letters of administration preference is given: 1st. To the husband or wife.

2d. To such others entitled to distribution as the court shall see fit to select. If no distributee applies within thirty days from the death of intestate, the court may grant administration to one or more creditors or to any other person. (See Code § 2369.)

Bonds shall be required in a penalty at least to the full value of the personal estate; and where there is a will which authorizes the executor to sell real estate, or receive the rents and profits thereof, the bonds shall be in a penalty equal to the full value of both the said personal estate and such real estate. The statute makes no provision for any notice to be given by an administrator or an executor to creditors in regard to the proof of claims, and how such claims should be proven. It is the custom, however, to give notice by publication for ten days in one or more newspapers, calling upon debtors of the estate to come forward, and requesting creditors to file their claims, supported by an affidavit.

Dower of the widow is ahead of any claims against the estate, whether solvent or insolvent. The dower is one third for her life of all the real estate whereof her husband or any other to his use was at any time during coverture seized of an estate of inheritance, unless her right to such dower shall have been lawfully barred or relinquished. In addition, the widow is entitled as a distributee (after the debts are paid), if there is issue of her marriage living, one third absolutely; or if there is no living issue, either of the marriage of the widow or of any former marriage, then she is entitled to one half absolutely. The birth of issue during coverture is not necessary to give any right to share in distribution of the estate. Executors and administrators must file, within four months from the date of the order conferring their authority, an inventory of all the estate, real and personal, which has come into their possession or under their control. The executor or administrator is required to file before the commissioner of accounts his account of the first year's administration within six months from the close of the year, and so on for each year's accounting.

Assets of a decedent, after the payment of funeral expenses and charges of administration, are applied, 1st, to claims of physicians not exceeding fifty dollars, for services rendered during the last illness of decedent, and accounts of druggist not exceeding fifty dollars for articles furnished during the same period; 2d, to debts due the United States and the State of Virginia; 3d, to taxes and levies assessed upon the decedent previous to his death; 4th, to debts due as trustee for persons under disabilities, as receiver or commissioner under decree of a court of this State, as personal representative, guardian, or committee, where the qualification was in this State, in which class of debts is included a debt for money received by a husband acting as such fiduciary in right of his wife; 5th, to all other demands except voluntary obligations; 6th, to voluntary obligations. (Code, § 2660; see Acts 1895-96, ch. 253, p. 288.)

The appointment of a debtor as executor does not extinguish the debt. It is lawful, with the consent of the court in which an administrator de bonis non qualifies, to pay and deliver to such administrator de bonis non the assets of the decedent, whether converted or not, for which the former personal representative is responsible; but such consent shall not be given unless the administrator de bonis non shall have given, or shall give, a bond sufficient to cover the additional assets so to be paid or delivered to him. An administrator de bonis non is not authorized to sue the former personal representative or his estate to compel the payment and delivery to him of such assets of the decedent as were converted by said representative.

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims.

Conditional Sales. — See Chattel Mortgages.

Consignments. — If any person store or ship goods, wares, merchandise, grain, flour, or other produce or commodity, in his own name, being in the possession thereof for or on account of another, and sell, negotiate, pledge, or hypothecate the same, or any part thereof, or the receipt or bill of lading received therefor, and fraudulently fail to account for or pay over to his principal, or the owner of the property, the amount so received on such sale, negotiation, pledge, or hypothecation, he shall be deemed guilty of larceny thereof.

If any person obtain from another an advance of money, merchandise, or other thing, upon a promise, in writing, that he will send or deliver to such other person his crop, or other property, and fraudulently fail or refuse to perform such promise, he shall be deemed guilty of the larceny of such money, merchandise, or other thing. (Code of Va. §§ 3718, 3719; Acts 1897-98, p. 371.)

Corporations. — The general attributes of, and restrictions upon, corporations are governed by the Act of May 21, 1903. (Acts of Extra Session 1902-03, p. 437.)

Corporations are formed by executing, filing, and recording a certificate by not less than three persons, except a railroad, telegraph, telephone, canal, turnpike, or other company, which shall need to possess a right of eminent domain. Such certificate shall set forth the name of the corporation, which name shall contain the word "corporation," or the word "incorporated;" the name of the county or city wherein its principal office in this State is to be located; the purposes for which it is formed; the maximum and minimum amount of capital, and its division into shares; classes of stock, etc; the period, if any, limited for the duration of the corporation; the names and residences of the officers and directors who are to manage the corporation for the first year; the amount of real estate to be held by the corporation, and any provisions which the incorporators may choose to insert for the regulation of the business, etc., not inconsistent with the law. The certificate must be signed by three persons, and acknowledged, and may be presented in term time or in vacation to the judge of the circuit court of the city wherein the principal office is to be located. Such judge shall certify whether in his opinion such certificate is signed and acknowledged in accordance with law, and after payment of fees required the certificate is presented to the state corporation commission, which shall ascertain and declare whether the applicants are entitled to a charter.

After the charter has been granted, it is certified to the secretary of the Commonwealth who records the same and certifies it to the clerk of the county or corporation court above stated.

Amendments may be made to the charter either before or after the amount of stock fixed by the incorporators has been subscribed for, and the business, capital stock, and location may be changed upon proper application made in compliance with the statute.

The stock may be decreased, or the company may be dissolved without the creditors being affected thereby.

Management of a corporation is vested in a board of directors of not less than three, but stockholders may authorize directors to designate two or more of their number to constitute an executive committee, who shall exercise the power of the board of directors.

Corporations shall, after each annual meeting of its stockholders, certify to the clerk of the court of the county or corporation wherein its principal office is located, a list of the officers and directors elected at said annual meeting, and the clerk shall record the same, for which he is entitled to a fee of twenty-five cents. Every such corporation, all of the officers and directors of which are non-residents of the city or county in which its principal office is located, shall at the annual meeting appoint, by written power of attorney, some practicing attorney at law, residing in the city or county wherein the principal office is, its attorney or agent, upon whom all legal process against the corporation may be served. Such power of attorney shall be recorded in the clerk's office of the same court above mentioned. A penalty of not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for failure to comply with this law within sixty days after the meeting may be imposed, and each day may be construed as a separate offense. But the failure to conform to this requirement does not prevent corporation from instituting suits in this State.

Companies incorporated under a jurisdiction beyond the limits of this State (designated as foreign corporations) before doing business in this State must present to the state corporation commission a written power of attorney executed in duplicate, appointing some person residing in this State its agent, upon whom all legal process against the corporation may be served; also two duly authenticated copies of the charter of the corporation and a certificate of the auditor showing payment into the treasury of the fee required by law by such corporation, and shall obtain from said corporation commission a certificate of authority to transact business in this State.

If any foreign corporation shall transact business without first obtaining such certificate it shall be fined not less than ten nor more than one thousand dollars, and every transaction shall be deemed a separate offense.

No such foreign corporation shall recover any money or property or enforce any contract in any court without first obtaining the certificate of authority to do business in this State provided for above, nor until all taxes, fees, and charges due to the State have been fully paid. (Amendment 1910.)

Corporations are authorized to create liens on the property or franchises of the company by authority of a majority in amount of all of the stockholders having voting power, present or represented, and voting, at a meeting of the stockholders called by the board of directors for that purpose, of which meeting notice by publication at least six times a week for two successive weeks in some newspaper published in or near the place where the principal office is, or notice in writing must be given to each stockholder. In any case notice may be waived by the stockholders in writing.

Any corporation of this State may conduct its business in any other States, and in the District of Columbia and in the territories and colonies of the United States and in foreign countries; may hold meetings of its directors either within or without this State; may have offices without this State as well as within, and may hold, purchase, mortgage, and convey real and personal property without as well as within this State, provided that its principal office shall be in this State.

The annual meeting of the stockholders shall be held at such place in this State as may from time to time be fixed by the board of directors, on such day as may be prescribed in the charter or by the by-laws, or if none be so prescribed, the time may be fixed by the stockholders. Any other meeting may be held upon the call of the directors or of stockholders holding together at least one tenth of the stock. Notice of such meetings to be given as required by the statute.

Subscriptions to the stock may be paid in money, land, or other property, real or personal, leases, options, mines, minerals, mineral rights, patent rights, rights of way, or other rights or easements, contracts, labor, or services; and there shall be no individual or personal liability on any subscriber beyond the obligation to comply with such terms as he may have agreed to in his contract of subscription, and any corporation may adopt such plan of financial organization and may dispose of its stock or bonds for the purposes of its incorporation at such prices, for such consideration, and on such terms and conditions as it sees fit.

There shall be a president and directors and a secretary, and there may be assistant secretaries, vice-presidents, and other officers or agents as a corporation may see fit.

There may be two or more kinds of stock, which may be increased or decreased, and provisions made for redemption of preferred stock, dividends, etc.

Officers and directors are liable for fraudulent or false statements. Suits against directors must be brought within two years after right of action.

New certificate of stock may be issued for lost stock by applicant giving bond, or issue may be ordered by court.

All appeals from the commission shall be to the supreme court of appeals only. Foreign corporations may hold land, just as domestic may. Foreign corporations having an office in this State must appoint an agent upon whom process may be served. They shall also make certain reports to the corporation commission.

Blue Sky Law. — An act passed by the legislature in 1918 to prevent unfairness, imposition, or fraud in the sale or disposition of certain securities.

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for Virginia.

Curtesy. — See Married Women.

Deeds and other Writings. — Their Authentication and Record. — A power of attorney may be admitted to record in any county or corporation court.

By uniting with her husband in a power of attorney to convey real estate, a married woman who is not a resident of Virginia may authorize the making of a conveyance of her estate, or bar her right of dower.

A deed of bargain and sale is valid as against creditors and subsequent purchasers from the time it is duly admitted to record.

A scroll operates as a seal, if acknowledged as such in the body of the instrument, and an impression on paper is the same in effect as if by means of a wafer or wax.

To bar her right of dower, the deed must be signed by both husband and wife, and admitted to record as to the husband as well as the wife; and as to a married woman, who is not a resident of this State, who wishes to convey by power of attorney, her husband must unite in the power of attorney and acknowledge it. (See Code, § 2509.)

A deed of trust or mortgage is valid as against creditors; and against purchasers for value without notice, only from the date of its record.

Witnesses are not necessary to the validity of a deed if the deed is acknowledged before a duly authorized officer; otherwise two witnesses are necessary. Where deeds are acknowledged before two witnesses, however, the witnesses must prove the acknowledgment before the court (or the clerk thereof) in which the deed is to be recorded. (See Acts 1895-96, ch. 526, p. 542.)

The court of any county or corporation (other than the city of Richmond) in which any writing is to be or may be recorded, and the chancery court of the city of Richmond when any such writing is to be or may be recorded in the said city, or the clerk of any such court, in his office, shall admit to record any such writing as to any person whose name is signed thereto, when it shall have been acknowledged by him or proved by two witnesses as to him in such court, or before such clerk in his office. (Code, § 2500.) Such court or clerk shall also admit any such writing to record as to any person whose name is signed thereto, upon a certificate of his acknowledgment before the said clerk, or a justice, a commissioner in chancery of a court of record, or a notary, within the United States, written on or annexed to the same, to the following effect, to wit:

[Acknowledgment.]

STATE OF _____ }
COUNTY (or Corporation) of _____ } to wit:
I, _____ clerk of _____ court (or, a justice of the peace, or commissioner in chancery of the _____ court, or notary public) for the county (or corporation) aforesaid, in the State (or Territory or District) of _____ do certify that E. F. (or E. F. and G. H., etc.), whose name (or names) is (or are) signed to the writing above (or hereto annexed), bearing date on the _____ day of _____ has (or have) acknowledged the same before me, in my county (or corporation) aforesaid. Given under my hand, this _____ day of _____ .

(Signature.)

Or, upon the certificate of acknowledgment before any commissioner appointed by the governor, within the United States, so written or annexed to the following effect, to wit:

[Acknowledgment before Commissioner.]

STATE (or Territory or District) of _____ to wit:
I, _____ a commissioner appointed by the governor of the State of Virginia for the said State (or Territory or District) of _____ certify that E. F. (or E. F. and G. H., etc.), whose name (or names) is (or are) signed to the writing above (or hereto annexed), bearing date on the _____ day of _____ has (or have) acknowledged the same before me, in my State (or Territory or District) aforesaid. Given under my hand and seal of office this _____ day of _____ Anno Domini 19 _____ .

(Signature.)

Or, upon the certificate of the clerk of any county or corporation court in this State, or of the clerk of any court out of this State and within the United States, that the said writing was acknowledged by such person, or proved as to him by two witnesses before such clerk, or before the court of which he is a clerk, or upon certificate under the official seal of any minister plenipotentiary, chargé d'affaires, consul-general, consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent appointed by the government of the United States to any foreign country, or of the proper officer of any court of such country, or of the mayor or other chief magistrate of any city, town, or corporation therein, that the said writing was acknowledged by such person, or proved as to him by two witnesses, before any person having such appointment, or before such court, mayor, or chief magistrate. (Code, § 2501; Acts 1889-90, p. 44; Acts 1895-96, p. 542.)

No peculiar forms are required for deeds of corporations. They must be by duly authorized officers and agents. The certificate should show the name of the person and his official connection with the corporation thus: J. B. P., President of (name of corporation) and E. B. M., Secretary of said company, etc.

Depositions.—Depositions may be taken, in the State, before any justice, notary, or commissioner in chancery. They may be taken stenographically and afterwards written out on a typewriter and signed. Outside the State (in the United States), the deposition of a witness, whether a party to the suit or not, who resides out of this State, or is out of it in the service thereof or of the United States, may be taken before any commissioner appointed by the governor of this State, or any justice, notary, or other officer authorized to take depositions in the State wherein the witness may be. In a foreign country the deposition may be taken before any person that the parties may agree upon in writing, or any American minister plenipotentiary, chargé d'affaires, consul-general, vice-consul, commercial agent appointed by the government of the United States, or any other representative of the United States in a foreign country, or the mayor or other magistrate of any city, town, or corporation in such country, or any notary therein. When a deposition is taken before some person agreed upon in writing by the parties other than the officer authorized to take the deposition, the said writing is to be returned with the deposition, and the deposition will not be read unless said writing is so returned. (See Code, § 3360.)

Reasonable notice must be given to the adverse party. What is reasonable notice must be determined by all the circumstances of the case. When in the same court there are several actions or suits between the same parties, depending on the same facts or involving the same matter of controversy, in whole or in part, a deposition taken in one of them upon a joint notice to the same party or parties may be read in all, so far as it is applicable and relevant to the issue. (See Code, § 3362.)

[Form of Notice.]

To . Take notice shall on the day of 19 at in the city of between the hours of A. M. and P. M., proceed to take the depositions of and others to be read in evidence in my behalf in a certain suit pending in the court in which I am plaintiff and you are defendant and if from any cause the taking of the said depositions be not commenced, on that day, or if commenced, shall not be concluded on that day, the taking of the same will be adjourned and continued from day to day, or from time to time, at the same place and between the same hours, until the same shall be completed.

(Signed.)

Depositions may be read in a civil case at law, if, when it is offered, the witness be dead, or out of this State, or one of its judges, or a superintendent of a lunatic asylum distant more than thirty miles from the place of trial, or in any public office or service, the duties of which prevent his attending the court, or be unable to attend it from sickness or other infirmity, or be more than a hundred miles from the place of trial. But where the only ground of reading a deposition is that the witness is more than a hundred miles from the place of trial, on motion to the court, before the commencement of the trial, it may, for good cause shown, require such witnesses to attend in person. (See Code, § 3365.)

The cross-examination and re-examination to be written down in like manner. Exceptions to any questions or answers to be noted at the time when made. When the deposition is completed, witness to sign his name at the end thereof.

3. Adjournments from day to day, or from time to time, pursuant to the notice, to be noted by the officer, as well as the recommencements of taking the depositions. If by consent of parties, the fact to be noted.

4. Any papers or writings referred to by witnesses, or copies thereof, to be annexed to the depositions, and referred to by such marks or designations as to identify them.

5. When the depositions are completed, the officer taking the same will annex the following certificate: —

I, C. D., a for the of in the State of (or the person named in the commission hereto annexed) do hereby certify that the foregoing depositions were duly taken, reduced to writing, and signed by the witnesses, respectively, before me, at the place and the times therein mentioned, pursuant to the annexed notice. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal at aforesaid, this day of

A. D. 19 .

[Official seal.]

C. D., etc.

If the officer or person taking the deposition have no official seal (unless he take the deposition as a justice of the peace, or before some person agreed upon in writing by the parties, in either of which cases it is not required), the genuineness of the signature must be authenticated by some officer of the same State or country under his official seal.

6. When the depositions have been duly certified, the officer taking them will seal them up securely, indorse them as follows, directing them to the clerk of the court where the suit is pending, and transmit them by mail, or otherwise.

E. F., Plaintiff, } To the clerk of the court of the of in the State vs. } of
G. H., Defendant. } (Richmond, Virginia, etc.)

Descent and Distribution. — Course of Descent generally. — When any person having title to any real estate of inheritance shall die intestate as to such estate, it shall descend and pass in parcenary to such of his kindred, male and female, as are not alien enemies, in the following course: 1st. To his children and their descendants. 2d. If there be no child, nor the descendant of any child, then to his father. 3d. If there be no father, then to his mother, brothers, and sisters, and their descendants. 4th. If there be no mother, nor brother, nor sister, nor any descendant of either, then one moiety shall go to the paternal, the other to the maternal kindred, in the following course: 5th. First, to the grandfather. 6th. If none, then to the grandmother, uncles, and aunts on the same side, and their descendants. 7th. If none such, then to the great-grandfathers, or great-grandfather, if there be but one. 8th. If none, then to the great-grandmothers, or great-grandmother, if there be but one, and the brothers and sisters of the grandfathers and grandmothers and their descendants. 9th. And so on, in other cases, without end, passing to the nearest lineal male ancestors, and, for want of them, to the nearest lineal female ancestors, in the same degree, and the descendants of such male and female ancestors. 10th. If there be no father, mother, brother, or sister, nor any descendant of either, nor any paternal kindred, the whole shall go to the maternal kindred, and if there be no maternal kindred the whole shall go to the paternal kindred. If there be neither maternal nor paternal kindred, the whole shall go to the husband or wife of the intestate, or, if the husband or wife be dead, to his or her kindred in the like course as if such husband or wife had survived the intestate and died entitled to the estate. (Code, § 2548.)

To Collaterals of Half Blood. — Collaterals of the half blood shall inherit only half so much as those of the whole blood, but if all the collaterals be of the half blood the ascending kindred, if any, shall have double portions. (Ibid. § 2549.)

When Per Stirpes or Per Capita. — When the children of an intestate, or his mother, brothers, and sisters, or his grandmother, uncles, and aunts, or any of his female lineal ancestors living, with the children of his deceased lineal ancestors, male and female, in the same degree, come into the partition, they shall take per capita or by person; and where, a part of them being dead and a part living, the issue of those dead have right to partition, such issue shall take per stirpes or by stocks, that is to say, the shares of their deceased parents; but whenever those entitled to partition are all in the same degree of kindred to the intestate, they shall take per capita or by persons. (Ibid. § 2550.)

Alienage of Ancestor when not to bar. — In making title by descent, it shall be no bar to a party that any ancestor (whether living or dead) through whom he derives his descent from the intestate is or hath been an alien. (Ibid. § 2551.)

Bastardy. — Bastards shall be capable of inheriting and transmitting inheritance on the part of their mother as if lawfully begotten. (Ibid. § 2552.)

If a man having had a child or children by a woman shall afterwards intermarry with her, such child or children, or their descendants, if recognized by him before or after the marriage, shall be deemed legitimate. (Ibid. § 2553.)

The issue of marriages deemed null in law, or dissolved by a court, shall nevertheless be legitimate. (Ibid. § 2554.)

Any person in ventre sa mere, who may be born in ten months after the death of the intestate, shall be capable of taking by inheritance in the same manner as if he were in being at the time of such death. (Ibid. § 2555.)

Infants' Real Estate. — If an infant die without issue, having title to real estate derived by gift, devise, or descent from one of his parents, the whole of it shall descend and pass to his kindred on the side of that parent from whom it was so derived, if any such kindred be living at the death of the infant. If there be none such, then it shall descend and pass to his kindred on the side of the other parent. (Ibid. § 2556.)

Distribution of Personal Estate. — When any person shall die intestate as to his personal estate or any part thereof, the surplus [subject to the provisions of ch. 178, the chapter which provides for homestead and other exemptions], after payment of funeral expenses, charges of administration and debts, shall pass and be distributed to and among the same persons, and in the same proportions, to whom and in which real estate is directed to descend, except as follows: 1st. The personal estate of an infant shall be distributed as if he were an adult. 2d. If the intestate was a married woman, her husband shall be entitled to the whole of the said surplus of the personal estate. 3d. If the intestate leave a widow, and issue by her, the widow shall be entitled to one third of the said surplus. 4th. If the inter-tate leave a widow, but no issue by her, the widow shall be entitled absolutely to such of the personal property in the said surplus as shall have been acquired by the intestate in virtue of his marriage with her prior to April 4, 1877, and remain in kind at his death; she shall also be entitled, if the intestate leave issue by a former marriage, to one third; if no such issue, to one half of the residue of such surplus. (Ibid. § 2557.)

Tax on Collateral Inheritance. — Any estate of a decedent passing under his will, or the laws regulating the descent and distribution, to any other person, or for any other use than to or for the use of the grandfather, grandmother, father, mother, husband, wife, brother, sister, or lineal descendant of such decedent, shall be subject to a tax of five per cent. of every hundred dollars' value thereof. Property devised or bequeathed exclusively for state, county, municipal, benevolent, charitable, educational, or religious purposes, is exempt. There is no inheritance tax on non-residents owning stock in corporations chartered in this State.

After one year from the qualification of the personal representative, the court may order (after notice to creditors as set forth in the statute to show cause if any against it) distribution to legatees or distributees, with or without refunding bond.

Divorces. — What marriages are void without decree of divorce, see Code, §§ 2252, 2254. What marriages declared void, and made so by decree of divorce (Acts Assembly, 1893-94, ch. 365, p. 425). Divorces from the bond of matrimony may be decreed for adultery, natural or incurable impotency of body existing at the time of entering into the matrimonial contract; when the marriage was solemnized when either of the parties was insane; where either of the parties is sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary (and no pardon granted to the party so sentenced shall restore such party to his or her conjugal rights); where, prior to the marriage, either party, without the knowledge of the other, had been convicted of an infamous offense; where either party charged with an offense punishable with death or confinement in the penitentiary has been indicted, is a fugitive from justice, and has been absent for two years; where either party willfully abandons or deserts the other for three years, a divorce may be decreed to the party abandoned; where, at the time of the marriage, the wife, without the knowledge of her husband, was with child by some person other than the husband, or prior to such marriage had been, without the knowledge of the husband, a prostitute; such divorce may be decreed to the husband; but no such divorce shall be decreed if it appears that the party applying for the same has cohabited with the other after knowledge of such conviction of an infamous offense, or has cohabited with the wife after knowledge of the fact that she was with child, or had been a prostitute, as aforesaid. (§ 2257.) A divorce from bed and board may be decreed for cruelty, reasonable apprehension of bodily hurt, abandonment, or desertion. (§ 2258.)

The circuit or corporation courts on the chancery side have jurisdiction of suits for annulling or affirming marriages or for divorces (and by special act the chancery court of Richmond). No suit for annulling a marriage or for divorce shall be maintainable unless one of the parties has been domiciled in this State for at least one year preceding the commencement of the suit; nor shall any suit for affirming a marriage be maintainable unless one of the parties be domiciled in this State at the time of bringing such suit. (§ 2259.) The court in term, or the judge in vacation, may, pending suit, make any order that may be proper to compel the man to pay any sums necessary for the maintenance of the woman, and to enable her to carry on the suit, or to prevent him from imposing any restraint on her personal liberty, or to provide for the custody and maintenance of the minor children of the parties during the pendency of the suit; or to preserve the estate of the man so that it be forthcoming to meet any decree which may be made in the suit, or to compel him to give security to abide such decree. (§ 2261.) Upon decreeing the dissolution of a marriage, and also upon decreeing a divorce, whether from the bond of matrimony or from bed and board, the court may make such further decree as it shall deem expedient concerning the estate and maintenance of the parties or either of them, and the care, custody, and maintenance of their minor children, and may determine with which of the parents the children, or any of them, shall remain; and the court may from time to time afterwards, on the petition of either of the parents, revise and alter such decree concerning the care, custody, and maintenance of the children, and make a new decree concerning the same, as the circumstances of the parents and the benefit of the children may require. (§ 2263; see Acts 1895-96, ch. 73, p. 103.) When three years shall have elapsed from the desertion, or three years in other cases for which divorce from bed and board has been made, the divorce may be merged into a decree from the bonds of matrimony. (§ 2266.)

Dower. — A widow is endowed of one third of all the real estate whereof her husband, or any one to his use, may at any time during coverture be seized of an estate of inheritance, unless her right to such dower shall have been lawfully barred or relinquished. But where land is bona fide sold in the lifetime of the husband to satisfy a lien or incumbrance thereon created by deed in which the wife has united, or created before the marriage, or otherwise paramount to the wife, she has no right to be endowed in said land. But if a surplus of the proceeds of sale remain after satisfying the said lien or incumbrance, she shall be entitled to dower in said surplus, and a court of equity having jurisdiction of the case may make such order as may seem to it proper to secure her right. (See Code, § 2269.)

When any conveyance of estate, real or personal, is made, or any devised for the jointure of the wife, such conveyance or device bars her dower of the real estate, unless the contrary intention plainly appears in such deed or will, or in some other writing signed by the party making the provision; but if such conveyance or devise was before marriage and without her assent in writing, or during her infancy, or if it were after marriage, she may at her election waive such jointure and demand her dower, provided such election be made within one year after death of husband, or within one year after admission of will to probate. (§ 2271.)

Adultery bars dower unless husband be afterwards reconciled.

Dower is assigned as at common law, or, on motion of heirs or devisees, by commissioners appointed by court. (§ 2275; Acts 1895-96, ch. 270, p. 309.)

The right of a wife to dower is not affected by judgment for money against her husband after coverture, nor by his alienation in which she does not unite; and a widow is not precluded from her dower by reason of the real estate whereof she claims dower having been recovered from her husband by a judgment rendered by default or collusion, if she would have been entitled to dower therein had there been no such judgment. (See Code, § 2279.)

Evidence. — See Testimony, Deeds, etc.

Executions. — On a judgment for money there may be issued a writ of feri facias.

On judgment for specific property a writ of possession may issue; and there may be also a writ of feri facias for damages or profits, and costs.

When in an action or warrant for the recovery of personal property, the plaintiff shall prevail under a contract which, regardless of its form or express terms, was in fact made to secure the payment of money to the plaintiff or his assignor, judgment shall be for the recovery of the amount due the plaintiff thereunder, or else the specific property, and cost, and the defendant shall have the election of paying the amount of said judgment or surrendering the specific property, and the court or justice may grant the defendant a reasonable time, not exceeding thirty days, within which to discharge such judgment upon such security being given as the court or justice may deem sufficient.

The Code of 1904, § 3587, provides: "By a writ of feri facias, the officer shall be commanded to make the money therein mentioned out of the goods and chattels of the person against whom the judgment is. The writ may be levied as well on the current money and bank-notes as on the goods and chattels of such person, except such as are exempt from levy under ch. 178; and as against purchasers for valuable consideration without notice and creditors, shall bind what is capable of being levied on only from the time it is delivered to the officer to be executed. The lien of a writ of feri facias under this section on what is capable of being levied on but is not levied on under the writ on or before the return day thereof, shall cease on that day: provided, however, that such lien may be enforced after the return day of the writ by proceedings under ch. 176, if the same be commenced before that day."

The Code of 1904, § 3601, provides that "every writ of feri facias shall, in addition to the lien it has under section 3587 on what is capable of being levied on under that section, be a lien, from the time it is delivered to a sheriff or other officer to be executed, on all the personal estate of or to which the judgment debtor is, or may afterwards and before the return day of the said writ become possessed or entitled, and which is not capable of being levied on under the said section, except such as is exempt under the provisions of ch. 178, and except that, as against an assignee of any such estate for valuable consideration, or a person making a payment to the judgment debtor, the lien by virtue of this section shall not affect him unless he had notice thereof at the time of the assignment, or payment, as the case may be."

Executions are not usually issued until the term closes; but by statute it is provided that "any court, after the fifteenth day of its term, may make a general order allowing executions to issue on judgments and decrees after ten days from their date, although the term at which they are rendered be not ended. For special causes it may, in any particular case, except the same from such order, or allow an execution thereon at an earlier period." (Code, § 3600.)

Execution may issue on a judgment within a year, and a scire facias or action may be brought on a judgment within ten years after the date of the judgment. If execution issue within the year other executions may be issued, or a scire facias or action may be brought within ten years from the return day of any such execution, though there be no return thereon; and within twenty years, if there be a return; except that where the scire facias or action is against the personal representative of a decedent, it shall be brought within five years from the qualification of such representative; and in computing time under this section there shall, as to writs of feri facias, be omitted from such computation the time elapsed between January 1, 1869, and March 29, 1871. Any return by an officer on an execution showing that the same has not been satisfied shall be a sufficient return within the meaning of this section. (Code, § 3577.)

Executions from justices' courts may be issued immediately after rendition of judgment; yet the justice rendering it may, if it be for a sum exceeding ten dollars and not exceeding twenty dollars exclusive of interest and costs, stay execution on it forty days from its date on security being given for its payment; if it be for a sum exceeding twenty dollars and not exceeding thirty dollars, the justice may stay execution on it sixty days from its date on like security being given; if it be for a sum exceeding thirty dollars, the justice may stay execution on it, ninety days from its date, on like security being given.

Upon a writ of feri facias the officer shall return whether the money therein mentioned is or cannot be made, or if there be only part thereof which is or cannot be made, he shall return the amount of such part. With every execution under which money is recovered, he shall return a statement of the amount received, including his fees and other charges; and such amount, except the said fees and charges, he shall pay to the person entitled. In his return, upon every such execution, the officer shall state whether or not he made a levy of the same, and the date of such levy, and the date when he received such payment or obtained such satisfaction upon the said execution, and, if there be more than one defendant, from which defendant he received the same. Upon the return of said writ of fiery facias by the officer to the clerk's office or to the court to which it is returnable, it shall be the duty of the clerk thereof to enter the return of said officer on the execution book. (Code, § 3591.)

Exemptions. — The exemption laws are very liberal. A householder residing in this State may hold exempt from levy or distress the family bible, family pictures, school-books, and library for the use of the family, not exceeding in all one hundred dollars in value; a seat or pew in any house or place of public worship; a lot in a burial ground; all necessary wearing apparel of the debtor and his family; all beds, bedsteads, and bedding necessary for the use of such family, and all stoves and appendages put up and kept for the necessary use of the family, not exceeding three; one cow and her calf till one year old, one horse; six chairs, one table, six knives, six forks, six plates, one dozen spoons, two dishes, two basins, one pot, one oven, six pieces of wooden or earthen ware, one loom and its appurtenances, one safe or press, one spinning-wheel, one pair of cards, one axe, two hoes, ten barrels of corn, or in lieu thereof twenty-five bushels of rye or buckwheat, five bushels of wheat or one barrel of flour, two hundred pounds of bacon or pork, three hogs, ten dollars in value of forage or hay, one cooking-stove and utensils for cooking therewith, and one sewing-machine; and, in the case of a mechanic, the tools and utensils of his trade, not exceeding one hundred dollars in value; and in case of an oysterman or fisherman, his boat and tackle, not exceeding two hundred dollars in value, the same shall be sold, and out of the proceeds the oysterman or fisherman shall first receive two hundred dollars in lieu of such boat and tackle; and if the householder is at the time actually engaged in the business of agriculture, there shall also be exempt from such levy or distress, while he is so engaged, to be selected by him or his agent, the following articles, or so many thereof as he may have, to wit: one yoke of oxen, or a pair of horses or mules in lieu thereof (unless he selects or has selected a horse or mule under the preceding section, in which case he shall be entitled to select under this section only one), with the necessary gearings, one wagon or cart, two plows, one drag, one harvest cradle, one pitchfork, one rake, and two iron wedges; wages, owing to a laboring man being a householder, not exceeding fifty dollars per month, shall also be exempt from distress, levy, or garnishment. These embrace what is known as the Poor Debtor's Exemption. (Code, ch. 178.)

The Homestead Exemption is as follows: Every householder residing in this State shall, in addition to the property or estate which he is entitled to hold exempt from levy, distress, or garnishment, under ch. 178, be entitled to hold exempt from levy, seizure, garnishment, or sale under any execution, order, or process issued on any demand for any debt or liability on contract, his real and personal estate, or either, to be selected by him, including money and debts due him, to the value of not exceeding two thousand dollars: provided, that such exemption shall not extend to any execution, order, or other process issued on any demand in the following cases: first, for the purchase price of said estate, or any part thereof; second, for services rendered by a laboring person, or a mechanic; third, for liabilities incurred by any public officer, officer of a court, fiduciary, or by any attorney at law for money collected by him; fourth, for a lawful claim for any taxes, levies, or assessments; fifth, for rent; sixth, for the legal or taxable fees of any public officer, or officer of a court; seventh, for any debt or liability on contract, as to which the debtor or party to the contract has waived, as hereinafter provided, the exemption to which he is entitled to claim under this section. (Ibid. § 3650.) The homestead exemption, as this is called, may be waived by express stipulation in the body of the bond, note, or other evidence of the contract, but there can be no waiver of the poor law exemption; and a deed of trust upon such articles as are exempted by the poor law exemption is void. The homestead exemption may be claimed on legal or equitable estate of any kind. The waiver to be in the following words or equivalent words: "I (or we) waive the benefit of my (or our) homestead exemption as to this obligation." It is provided that a deed of the property claimed under this exemption shall be recorded, but the exemption may be claimed after suit and judgment as well as before. The property set apart as homestead exemption may be mortgaged or sold by the joint act of husband and wife, or, if the householder be unmarried, by his act alone. If the householder die without claiming the exemption, the right survives to the widow and the infant children. If a widow claim dower or jointure she cannot claim the homestead; but, in such case, the rights of the minor children therein are not impaired. When householder leaves the State, provision concerning, see § 3649. (Acts 1889-90, p. 117.)

An unmarried man who kept house and had hirelings on his farm was held not to be a "householder or head of a family" within the meaning of the statute. (Calhoun v. Williams, 32 Gratt. 18.)

Garnishee Process. — The Code, § 3609, provides for enforcing the lien of a fiery facias by summoning the person indebted to the judgment debtor, on suggestion of the judgment creditor, to a term of court or before a justice of the peace, as the case may be. Such party may be examined on oath, and if it appear that there is a liability upon him to pay any debts, or deliver any estate to the judgment debtor, the court may order such payment or delivery to any officer whom it may designate; and the levy of execution on such order is valid although levied by such officer.

Inheritance Taxes. — See Descent and Distribution; Tax on Collateral Inheritance.

Insolvent Laws. — There are no insolvent laws, strictly so called, in Virginia. An insolvent may voluntarily assign his estate to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, and may prefer certain creditors to others. This is not consistent with the bankrupt law, which overrides the State law with reference to assignment. An insolvent will not be released if his creditors do not assent to it, although he should make an assignment of all his property. See statute as to requiring security of trustee or assignee when property conveyed exceeds in value two hundred dollars. A limited partnership, and the partners therein, whether general or special, prohibited, under certain circumstances, from making deeds giving preferences. (See Code, § 2874.)

Interest. — Six per cent. is the legal rate of interest. The penalty for usury is the forfeiture of all interest. Corporations cannot plead usury. Judgments bear six per cent. except in certain specified cases, where a higher rate is prescribed by statute as a penalty. (See Acts 1895-96, ch. 130, p. 154.)

Judgments — Create liens on all real estate of or to which the judgment debtor is or becomes possessed or entitled at or after the date of such judgment. (See § 3567, Acts 1901-02, p. 427.) But as against a purchaser thereof for valuable consideration without notice it is not a lien unless docketed, and unless the docket of it be duly indexed in the judgment docket in the county or corporation where such real estate is. (§ 3570, as amended by Acts 1901-02, p. 427.) There is no writ of elegit in Virginia; but a judgment creditor may enforce his lien on real estate by suit in equity. In suits for the sale of real estate, if the rents and profits for five years will not satisfy the judgment, the real estate or a part of it may be sold to discharge the judgment. A suit in equity to enforce the lien of a judgment not of greater amount than twenty dollars, exclusive of interest and costs, shall not be entertained unless it appear that sixty days before the institution of the suit the judgment debtor, or his personal representative, and the owner of the land on which the judgment is a lien, or, in the case of a non-resident, his agent or attorney (if he have one in the State), had notice that the suit would be instituted if the judgment was not paid within that time.

In a justice's court claims of three hundred dollars (exclusive of interest) and under are cognizable. If the claim exceeds twenty dollars, it may, on motion, be removed to the circuit or corporation court, on the application of the defendant and upon affidavit that he has a substantial defense thereto. When cognizable before a justice, judgment is given after service of the warrant. The practice is to give judgment in justice's courts after five days' notice. No specified time is mentioned in the statute other than this, that the return day of the warrant must not exceed thirty days from its date.

Judgments by default in other courts require the expiration of two rule days; the rules are held on the first and third Monday in each month with the exception that when the term of the court commences on the first or third Monday in a month, or on either of the two following days, the rules which would otherwise have been held on the first or third Monday, as the case may be, are held on the Monday of the preceding week. The rules continue three days. (§ 3276.)

On judgments in courts other than justices' courts, an attorney's fee of two dollars and fifty cents is taxed. There is no practice authorizing a larger attorney's fee to be taxed in ordinary common law actions.

Judgment notes are not used in Virginia.

License. — Commercial travelers are required to pay a license tax of one hundred dollars. The penalty for selling without such license is five hundred dollars. (By a recent decision of the United States supreme court, a similar law in Tennessee has been declared unconstitutional. Robbins v. Shelby County, 120 U. S. 480.) See Acts 1897-98, ch. 201, p. 224, passed to evade this decision, establishing peddler's license.

Liens. — As to liens on crops for advancements made, see Code § 2494; Acts 1891-92, page 782; Acts 1906 ch. 45, page 35.

As to liens on the baggage and effects of boarders, see Code, § 2520; Acts 1887-88, pp. 240-504.

See Mechanics' Liens. (Code, § 2475, 2476; see Acts 1895-96, ch. 62, p. 71; Act 1897-98, p. 487.)

As to claims by vendor on personal property (e. g. sewing-machines, etc.) sold and delivered to vendee on the installment plan, see Acts of Assembly, 1889-90, ch. 135. The claim must be evidenced by writing and the writing recorded to make it valid against creditors of the vendee and purchasers for value without notice from such vendee, and is valid only from the time the writing is duly admitted to record in the county or corporation in which the goods and chattels are, etc. (Ibid.)

As to liens of employees of railway and other companies on the franchise, gross earnings, and real and personal property of the company, see §§ 2485, 2486; Acts 1891-92, p. 362; Acts 1895-96, ch. 304, p. 340; amended Acts 1902-3-4, pp. 623, 624.

As to supply-liens, the law is very liberal to persons furnishing supplies to any mining or manufacturing company, giving to such supplyman a lien upon the personal property of such company other than that forming part of the plant, superior to any other lien, whether by mortgage, sale, hypothecation, or conveyance executed since March 21, 1877, except upon personal property covered by a warehouse receipt. The supplyman is given the benefit of this lien, if within ninety days after the date of the last item furnished he files a memorandum of the amount and consideration of his claim, verified by affidavit, in the proper clerk's office.

Limitations. — No person shall make an entry on, or bring an action to recover any land lying east of the Alleghany Mountains, but within fifteen years, or any land lying west of the Alleghany Mountains, but within ten years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or bring such action shall have first accrued to himself or to some person through whom he claims. For the purposes of this section, the County of Carroll shall be held and considered as lying wholly west of the Alleghany Mountains. (Code, § 2915. Acts 1895-96, ch. 292, p. 331.)

Every action to recover money which is founded upon an award, or on any contract, other than a judgment or recognizance, shall be brought within the following number of years next after the right to bring the same shall have first accrued, that is to say: if the case be upon an indemnifying bond taken under any statute, or upon a bond of an executor, administrator, guardian, curator, committee, sheriff or sergeant, deputy sheriff or sergeant, clerk or deputy clerk, or any other fiduciary or public officer, or upon any other contract by writing under seal, within ten years; if it be upon an award, or be upon a contract by writing, signed by the party to be charged thereby, or by his agent, but not under seal, within five years; and if it be upon any other contract, within three years, unless it be an action by one partner against his copartner for a settlement of the partnership accounts, or upon accounts concerning the trade of merchandise between merchant and merchant, their factors or servants, where the action of account would lie, in either of which cases the action may be brought until the expiration of five years from a cessation of the dealings in which they are interested together, but not after: provided, that the right of action, against the estate of any person hereafter dying, on any such award or contract, which shall have accrued at the time of his death, or the right to prove any such claim against his estate in any suit or proceeding, shall not in any case continue longer than five years from the qualification of his personal representative, or if the right of action shall not have accrued at the time of the decedent's death, it shall not continue longer than five years after the same shall have so accrued. (Code, § 2920, amendment 1912.)

On bond of executor, administrator, guardian, curator, or committee, or of a sheriff or sergeant acting as such, right of action first accrues as follows: on bond of a guardian or curator of a ward, from the time of the ward's attaining twenty-one years of age, or from the termination of the guardian's or curator's office, whichever shall happen first; on bond of personal representative of a decedent or committee of an insane person, the right of action of a person obtaining execution against such representative or committee, or to whom payment or delivery of estate in the hands of such representative or committee shall be ordered by a court acting upon his account, shall be deemed to have first accrued from the return day of such execution, or from the time of the right to require payment or delivery upon such order, whichever shall happen first; and as to any suit against such fiduciary himself, or his representative, which could have been maintained if he had given no bond, there shall be no other limitation that would exist if the preceding section [§ 2920] was not passed; except that where any such fiduciary has settled an account under the provisions of ch. 121, a suit to surcharge or to falsify the same, or to hold such fiduciary or his sureties liable for any balance stated in such account to be in his hands, shall be brought within ten years after the account has been confirmed; and except also, that no suit or proceeding shall be instituted against any fiduciary on account of money collected, or received by him as such fiduciary, in Confederate currency during the late war, unless the person entitled to institute such suit or other proceeding be an infant, married woman, or insane person, in which case such suit or other proceeding may be instituted within three years after the Code takes effect [May 1, 1888], and not thereafter. (Code, § 2921.)

Married Women. — A married woman shall have the right to acquire, hold, use, control, and dispose of property, as if she were unmarried, and such power of use, control, and disposition shall apply to all property of a married woman heretofore or hereafter acquired: provided, however, that her husband shall be entitled to curtesy in her real estate when the common law requisites therefor exist, and he shall not be deprived thereof by her sole act; but the right to curtesy shall not entitle him to the possession or use, or to the rents, issues, and profits of said real estate during the coverture; nor shall the property of the wife be subject to the debts or liabilities of the husband.

A married woman may contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued, in the same manner and with the same consequences as if she were unmarried, whether the right or liability asserted by or against her shall have accrued before or after the passage of this act.

A husband shall not be responsible for any contract, liability, or tort of his wife, whether the contract or liability was incurred or the tort was committed before or after marriage. When a woman is a minor at the time of her marriage, and is then entitled to any estate, or during her coverture, and while a minor, becomes entitled to any estate, she shall not during coverture, and while a minor, have the control and management of such estate; but the circuit court of the county, or the circuit or corporation court of the corporation wherein she resides, or the said real estate or any part thereof is, or the judge of the said court in vacation, shall, on the petition of her next friend, commit her said estate to a receiver.

who shall give bond before the court or judge, and shall hold and manage the said estate, and pay out the rents, issues, profits, and income thereof to her use under the direction of the court, or apply the estate, or any part thereof, if the court so order, to her use during coverture, and while she is a minor; and upon her attaining the age of twenty-one years, all such estates and the rents, issues, income, and profits thereof, not before paid out or applied as aforesaid, shall be delivered into her possession; or if she die before attaining that age, the same shall be delivered at her death to those entitled thereto. The seizin requisite for the husband's curtesy in the wife's real estate committed to a receiver shall, for the purpose of curtesy, be presumed, if there could have been such seizin, had not the real estate been so committed. When a married woman, having title to any estate, dies intestate, as to the said estate, or any part thereof, it, or such part, shall pass according to the provisions of chapter one hundred and thirteen, subject to her debts, and to the curtesy of her husband, should he survive her. (§§ 2291, 2293.) Section 2294 provides that nothing contained in the preceding sections of the act shall be construed to prevent the creation of equitable separate estates, and they shall be held according to the provisions of the instrument by which they are respectively created. Section 2296 provides that if a husband willfully deserts or abandons his wife, and such desertion or abandonment continues until her death, he shall be barred of all interest in her estate as tenant by the curtesy, distributee, or otherwise. (Acts 1899-1900, p. 1240, amending Code, §§ 2291, 2293, 2294, and 2296.)

This act also repeals §§ 2284, 2285, 2286, 2287, 2288, 2289, 2290, 2292, and 2295, as amended by the act of 1895-96. (See Directory for 1900.)

Mechanic's Lien. — Section 2475, as amended Acts 1895-96, p. 71: Lien for work done and materials furnished by artisans, mechanics, lumber dealers, and others. All artisans, builders, mechanics, lumber dealers, and other persons performing labor about or furnishing materials for the construction, repair, or improvement of any building or structure permanently annexed to the freehold, and all persons performing any labor or furnishing materials for the construction of any railroad, whether they be general or sub-contractors or laborers, shall have a lien, if perfected as hereinafter provided, upon such building or structure, and so much land therewith as shall be necessary for the convenient use and enjoyment of the premises, and upon such railroad and franchise for the work done and materials furnished: but where the claim is for repairs only no lien shall attach to the property repaired unless the said repairs were ordered by the owner or his agent.

Section 2476, as amended Acts 1897-98, p. 487: Perfection of lien by general contractor; mechanics' lien record; notice of lien. A general contractor, in order to perfect the lien given by the preceding section, shall at any time after the work is done and the materials furnished by him and before the expiration of sixty days from the time such building, structure, or railroad is completed, or the work thereon otherwise terminated, file in the clerk's office in the county or corporation in which the building, structure, or railroad, or any part thereof is, or in the clerk's office of the chancery court of the city of Richmond if the said building, structure, or railroad, or any part thereof, is within the corporate limits of said city, an account showing the amount and character of the work done or materials furnished, the prices charged therefor, the payments made, if any, and the balance due, verified by the oath of the claimant or his agent, with a statement attached declaring his intention to claim the benefit of said lien and giving a brief description of the property on which he claims the lien. It shall be the duty of the clerk in whose office such account or statement shall be filed as hereinbefore provided, to record the same in a book kept for that purpose, called mechanics' lien record, and to index the same in the name as well of the claimant of the lien as of the owner of the property, and from the time of such filing all persons shall be deemed to have notice thereof.

Section 2477, as amended Acts 1897-98, p. 487: Perfection of lien by sub-contractors; extent of lien. Any sub-contractor, in which term are included all contractors and laborers and mechanics and those furnishing materials as provided in section two thousand four hundred and seventy-five and acts amendatory thereof other than general contractors, in order to perfect the lien given him by section two thousand four hundred and seventy-five, shall comply with the preceding section, and in addition give notice in writing to the owner of the property or his agent of the amount and character of his claim. But the amount for which a lien may be perfected under this section shall not exceed the amount in which the owner is indebted to the general contractor at the time the notice is given, or shall thereafter become indebted to said general contractor upon his contract with said general contractor for said structure or building or railroad. And when the labor shall have been performed or work done or material furnished for one who is himself a sub-contractor, then the person claiming the lien shall also give a like notice to the general contractor; provided, that the amount for which a lien may be perfected by such person shall not exceed the amount for which said sub-contractor could himself claim a lien under this section.

Any sub-contractor may give notice in writing to the owner or his agent before performing work for or furnishing materials to a general contractor, stating the probable value of the work to be done or materials to be furnished; and if such sub-contractor shall afterward perform such work or furnish such materials, and the said materials are used in the construction, repair, or improvement of such building or structure, and shall, at any time after the work done or materials furnished by him, and before the expiration of thirty days from the time such building or structure is completed or the work thereon otherwise terminated, furnish the owner thereof or his agent, and also the general contractor, with a correct account, verified by affidavit, of his claim against the general contractor for the work done or materials furnished, and of the amount due, the owner shall be personally liable to the claimant for the said amount; provided the same does not exceed the sum in which the owner is indebted to the general contractor at the time the notice is given, or may thereafter become indebted by virtue of his contract with said general contractor. (Ibid. § 2479; Acts 1893-94, p. 523.)

If the account furnished under the preceding section be approved by the general contractor, or if, after ten days' notice to him of the filing of the said account with the owner, such contractor shall fail to file with the owner any objection in writing to the said account, in either case the owner may pay the amount of the account to the sub-contractor, and shall then be entitled to credit for the amount so paid upon whatever may be due by him to the general contractor. If the general contractor dispute the correctness of the account furnished to the owner by the sub-contractor at any time before the same is paid, the parties may have the amount of such disputed claim summarily adjudicated and settled by arbitrators selected, one by the general contractor, and one by the claimant, or by an umpire selected by the arbitrators, in case of their disagreement; and upon the failure or refusal of either of the said parties to select an arbitrator, then the matter in controversy shall be settled by an action at law; and upon the payment by the owner or his agent of the amount ascertained to be due by the award of the arbitrators, or by an action at law, he shall be released from all liability, if any there be, to the said sub-contractor and entitled to a credit against the general contractor for the amount so paid. The cost of arbitration shall be borne and paid as the arbitrators may adjudge and award in each case. (Ibid. § 2480.)

No suit to enforce any lien perfected under the preceding sections of this chapter shall be brought after six months from the time when the whole amount covered by such lien has become payable: provided, however, that the filing of a petition to enforce any such lien in any suit wherein such petition may be properly filed shall be regarded as the institution of a suit under this section. (Ibid. § 2481; Acts 1893-94, p. 576, also Acts 1889-90, p. 36, Acts 1893-94, p. 576.)

The perfected lien of a general contractor on any building or structure shall inure to the benefit of any sub-contractor who has not perfected a lien on such building or structure, provided such sub-contractor shall give written notice of his claim against the general contractor to the owner or his agent before the amount of such lien is actually paid off or discharged. (Ibid. § 2482; Acts 1895-96, p. 379.)

If the person who shall cause such building or structure to be erected or repaired owns less than a fee simple estate in such land, then only his interest therein shall be subject to said liens. No lien or incumbrance upon the land created before the work was commenced or materials furnished shall operate upon the building or structure erected thereon, or materials furnished for and used in the same, until the lien in favor of the person doing the work or furnishing the materials shall have been satisfied; or shall any lien or incumbrance upon the land created after the work was commenced or materials furnished operate on the land or such building or structure, until the lien in favor of the person doing the work or furnishing the materials shall have been satisfied. And in the enforcement of the liens acquired under the previous sections of this chapter any lien or incumbrance created on the land before the work was commenced or materials furnished shall be preferred in the distribution of the proceeds of sale only to the extent of the value of the land estimated exclusive of the buildings or structures, at the time of sale, and the residue of the proceeds of sale shall be applied to the satisfaction of the liens provided for in the previous sections of this chapter. (Ibid. § 2483.)

The liens created and perfected under the preceding sections of this chapter may be enforced in a court of equity. There shall be no priority among them except that the lien of a sub-contractor shall be preferred to that of his general contractor. (Ibid. § 2484; Acts 1893-94, p. 576.)

Mortgages. — In the technical sense of the term, mortgages are rarely used in Virginia, being superseded in practice by deeds of trust, which are sometimes spoken of as mortgages. Deeds of trust are closed by the trustee, without necessity of resort to a court of equity. See Redemption; Deeds.

Notaries Public. — The governor appoints for a term of four years as many as he thinks proper for every city and county. They can only act in the city and county for which they are appointed. They are conservators of the peace. No seal is necessary except on papers to be used out of the State.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — Instruments to be negotiable must be in writing, signed by the maker or drawer, payable on demand or at a fixed or determinable future day to order or bearer for a sum certain.

Where a bill of exchange drawn or indorsed within this State is protested for non-acceptance or non-payment, the party liable for the principal of such bill shall, in addition, pay damages upon the principal at the rate of three per cent. if the bill be payable out of Virginia and within the United States, and ten per cent. if payable without the United States. (See Code, § 2851.)

All evidences of debt may be assigned by indorsation of such assignment upon them. Assignees may sue in their own name.

Suits on negotiable instruments duly protested may be maintained, and judgment given against all liable by virtue thereof, or against any one or any intermediate number. See Sureties; Guarantors; Indorsers.

Days of grace are abolished. Notice of protest may be served by personal delivery or by sending notice by mail. (See Acts 1897-98, ch. 866, p. 896.)

The first day of January, nineteenth day of January, the 22d of February, the 30th of May, 4th of July, first Monday in September (Labor Day), 25th of December, the entire day of every Saturday, and any day recommended or appointed by the governor of this State, or the President of the United States, as a day of thanksgiving, or of fasting and prayer, or other religious observance, are legal holidays. When any negotiable instrument fall due on Saturday, Sunday, or on a holiday, presentment must be on next succeeding business day. (Act July 28, 1902.)

Certain warehouse and other receipts made negotiable. (§ 1791.)

Practice. — The practice is according to the common law, save so far as modified by statute.

Proof of Claims. — There is no distinction in the character of proof required of residents and non-residents of the State. A non-resident's deposition may be taken, as is explained under the head of Depositions. Save in the cases mentioned in Code, § 3286, declaring when an office judgment should be confirmed without an inquiry, it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove his case; which he may do by oral testimony, and, sometimes, by depositions taken without commission. Affidavit with account for suit should show the date from which interest is claimed. (Do not calculate the interest as a part of the affidavit.) Proof by a corporation should be made by treasurer. See Affidavits; Depositions.

Records. — Deeds and contracts valid as between the parties, but void as to creditors and purchasers for value without notice in certain events, see Deeds. Every contract not in writing, made in respect to real estate or goods and chattels, in consideration of marriage, or made for the conveyance or sale of real estate, or a term therein of more than five years, shall be void, both at law and in equity, as to purchasers for valuable consideration without notice and creditors. (Code, § 2463.) Any such contract, if in writing, shall, from the time it is duly admitted to record, be, as against creditors and purchasers, as valid as if the contract was a deed conveying the estate or interest embraced in the contract. (§ 2464.)

Every such contract, every deed conveying any such estate or term, and every deed of gift, or deed of trust, or mortgage conveying real estate or goods and chattels, shall be void as to subsequent purchasers for valuable consideration without notice and creditors, until and except from the time that it is duly admitted to record in the county or corporation wherein the property embraced in such a contract or deed may be (§ 2465; Acts 1899-1900, p. 89); and although recorded in one county it is not valid as to property embraced in it lying or being in another county. (See § 2466; Acts 1895-96, ch. 250, p. 285; Acts 1895-96, p. 842.) If after the conveyance goods and chattels mentioned in such writing be removed from the county or corporation in which it is admitted to record, one year is allowed for recording it in the county or corporation to which goods and chattels are removed (see § 2468); and to protect the interests of a married woman, infant, or insane person, one year after removal of disability is allowed. (See § 2468; Acts 1893-94, p. 545.)

The county and corporation courts are those in which wills and deeds are recorded. In Richmond they are recorded in the chancery court of Richmond. This is a city court, but not what is technically known as the "corporation court." There is no official designated as "Recorder." The clerk of the court, under the supervision of the judge, acts in the premises.

Redemption. — There are no statutory provisions regulating the redemption of estates under mortgages and deeds of trust; but the equity of redemption exists in the mortgagor in a mortgage, and in the grantor in a deed of trust.

Release of Mortgage or Trust Deed. — Where the money secured to be paid by a mortgage or trust deed has been paid, a release of the deed of trust or mortgage may be made by deed from the trustee and beneficiary or deed of trust, or mortgage may be marked satisfied on the margin of the deed book where recorded by the beneficiary or his attorney in fact, or by the clerk of the court at his instance.

Replevin. — There is no action of replevin in Virginia. Any property levied on or seized under any attachment may be recovered by the person in whose possession it was giving bond with condition to have the same forthcoming at such time and place as the court may require. See Actions.

Reports. — Martin P. Burks, Lexington, Va., is the reporter of the supreme court of appeals. About one volume of reports per annum is issued. Decisions of no other courts reported. The Virginia Law Register publishes the important decision of the court of appeals each month.

Revision. — The Code of 1904 shall be received in the courts of this commonwealth as prima facie evidence of the statutes therein published. (Acts, 1906, p. 15.)

Sales in Bulk. — The usual statute is in force.

Service of Summons. — The process to commence a suit is a writ directed to an officer for service on defendants, commanding them to answer the action at law, or bill in equity, as the case may be. The writ is directed to the sheriff or sergeant of any county or corporation, except that when suit is brought in a county or city where the cause of action arose, and none of the defendants reside there, the writ cannot be directed to an officer of any other county or corporation than that in which the action is brought, unless it be an action against a railroad, express, canal, navigation, turnpike, telegraph, or telephone company, or upon a bond taken by an officer under authority of some statute, or to recover damages for a wrong, or against two or more defendants, on one of whom such process has been executed in the county or corporation in which the action is brought.

The summons must be returnable within ninety days to the court on the first day of the term, in the clerk's office on the first or to third Monday in a month, or to the first day of any rules. If executed, and the declaration is filed, a common order is made, and at the next rules the common order is confirmed.

Rules are held on the first and third Mondays in every month, except in certain cases; and a defendant may appear at the rule day to which the summons is returnable; or if it be returnable in term, at the first rule day after the return day; and if the declaration or bill be not then filed, may give the plaintiff a rule to file the same. If the plaintiff fail to do this at the next rules, or fail to prosecute the suit, he is nonsuited, and must pay five dollars and costs. If one month elapse after the process is executed on any one or more of the defendants without the declaration or bill being filed, the suit is dismissed although none of the defendants appear. (See § 3241.)

The case is tried at the term of court succeeding the rule day at which the common order is confirmed, unless there be good cause shown for a continuance.

Summons is served by delivering a copy in writing to the party in person; or, if he be not found at his usual place of abode, by delivering such copy and giving information of its purport to his wife, or any person found there who is a member of his family and above the age of sixteen years; or if neither he nor his wife nor any such person be found there, by leaving such copy posted at the front door of said place of abode.

There are special provisions as to the service of process against a corporation. (Code, § 3225; Acts 1893-94, p. 614; 1895-96, p. 445.)

Service by Publication. — 1st. On affidavit that a defendant is not a resident of this State; or 2d, that due diligence has been used by or on behalf of the plaintiff to ascertain in what county or corporation he is, without effect; or 3d, that process directed to the officer of the county or corporation in which he resides, or is, has been twice delivered to such officer more than ten days before the return day, and been returned without being executed; or 4th, that the defendant in a suit for divorce from the bond of matrimony is under sentence to confinement in the penitentiary — an order of publication may be entered against such defendant. In suits in equity where the bill states that the names of any persons interested in the subject-matter are unknown, on affidavit, there may be an order of publication. And in a suit in equity in which the number of defendants upon whom process has been served exceeds thirty, and it appears that the thirty represent like interests with the others, an order of publication may be made as to the other defendants if directed by the court, or judge thereof in vacation; in other cases the order of publication may be ordered in court, or by the clerk in vacation. In proceeding by petition there may be an order of publication in like manner as in a suit in equity. (Code, § 3230.)

Stay of Execution. — There is no stay of execution except in the case of small claims (see Executions from Justices' Courts), and except when a party desires to petition for an appeal, in which case execution on the judgment or decree is suspended (on his giving security) for a period not usually more than sixty days. But after execution reaches the hands of the officer he may take from the debtor a bond with good security conditioned for the forthcoming of the property at the day and place of sale.

Supplementary Proceedings. — To ascertain the estate on which a writ of fiery facias is a lien, and to ascertain any real estate in or out of the State to which a debtor named in such fiery facias is entitled, the judgment creditor may obtain from the judge of the court from which the fiery facias issued, either in term or vacation, a summons requiring the execution debtor, or any debtor or bailee of his, to appear before a commissioner to answer interrogatories and make disclosure. (See Acts 1897-98, p. 503.) If it comes to the knowledge of the judgment creditor that there are any debts owing to his debtor by any third party, such third party may by a summons on suggestion be required to answer before the court at its next term, or (when execution issued by a justice) before any justice of the county or corporation in which the same issued, whether or not he is indebted to such execution debtor; and if he answers affirmatively judgment may be entered against such garnishee in favor of the execution creditor. (§ 3609.) If the creditor is not satisfied with the answer of the garnishee a jury may be impaneled to try the question of his indebtedness if the matter is before a court; when the summons is before a justice, he proceeds without a jury. (See § 3610.)

Sureties, Guarantors, and Indorsers. — The surety, or guarantor, or indorser (or his committee or personal representative) of any person bound by any contract, may, if a right of action has accrued thereon, require the creditor, or his committee or personal representative, by notice in writing, forthwith to institute suit thereon; and if he be bound in a bond with a condition, or for the performance of some collateral undertaking, he shall also specify in such requisition the breach of the condition or undertaking for which he requires suit to be brought. (Code, § 2890.)

If suits be not then brought in a reasonable time against every party to such contract who is a resident of the State, and not insolvent, and prosecuted with due diligence to judgment and by execution, the claim against the surety, guarantor, or indorser is forfeited. (See § 2891.)

See other provisions concerning sureties in bonds, etc. (Ch. 136.)

By motion, the party paying money as bail, surety, guarantor, or indorser, or any sheriff liable for not taking sufficient bail, or the committee or heir or personal representative of any so liable to pay, in whole or in part, may recover the amount paid with interest from the time of payment and five per cent. damages on the amount. (See § 2893.)

Taxation. — Lands are assessed for taxation every five years for state taxation by commissioners whose report is made in triplicate, one to the auditor of public accounts, one to the clerk of the circuit court of the county or corporation, one to the commissioner of the revenue of the county, district, or corporation, on or before the first day of June in the year in which the assessment is made, but for good causes the judges of the circuit or corporation court may extend the time of making returns to the first day of July, next succeeding. (Acts of G. A., extra session 1902-3-4, ch. 388.) Taxes are payable from July 1 to December 1. Penalty for non-payment is five per cent. added to the amount assessed. On all real estate liable for taxes and on the rent thereof the State has a paramount lien for its taxes due. The lien on rent is limited to taxes due for the current year. Lands delinquent December 15 for non-payment of taxes may be sold by the State. Taxes upon corporations vary as to the corporations of different kinds, both as to the time of report, character of report, and the officer or officers to whom they are to be made, also as to penalties for non-payment; there are also license taxes too numerous to be noted. The tax laws are complicated and of difficult construction. Questions concerning them can only be properly settled by calling in the aid of professional advice; a general statement is more likely to mislead than direct aright.

Testimony. — The common rules of evidence prevail, except that by statute parties in interest are rendered competent witnesses in civil cases. A court may for good cause shown require interested witnesses to give evidence ore tenus, or rule out their depositions. (See Code, § 3345.)

Where one of the original parties to the contract is dead, insane, or incompetent to testify by reason of any other cause, the other party is not usually admitted to testify in an adverse interest. There are exceptions to this rule.

Trust Deeds. — See Deeds; Chattel Mortgages; Mortgages.

Wills. — Every one but persons of unsound mind, or under twenty-one years of age, may make a will; and minors eighteen years of age may make wills of personalty, and married women may make wills for the disposition of their separate estate or in the exercise of a power of appointment. (Code, § 2513; Acts 1899-1900, p. 753.)

Wills must be in writing and signed by testator, or some one in his presence and by his direction. The court of last resort has not decided that typewriting is or is not writing within the meaning of the statute. (By Code, § 5, sub-section 11, "written," "in writing," shall be construed to include any representation of words, letters, or figures, whether by printing or otherwise. Unless wholly written by testator, signature shall be made or will acknowledged by him in the presence of at least two competent witnesses present at the same time, and such witnesses shall subscribe the will in the presence of the testator, but no form of attestation is necessary. This applies to both personalty and realty. (See § 2514.)

A soldier in actual military service, or a mariner or seaman being at sea, may dispose of his personal estate as he might heretofore have done; and the will of a person domiciled out of this State at the time of his death shall be valid as to personal property in this State, if it be executed according to the law of the State or country in which he was so domiciled. (Code, § 2516.) Testator can leave the whole or any part of his estate to charity. He may also disinherit one or more of his children.

The circuit, county, and corporation courts have probate jurisdiction. The jurisdiction is in the court of the county or corporation in which decedent has a mansion-house or known place of residence; if no such house or place of residence, then in a county or corporation in which any real estate lies that is devised or owned by decedent; and if no such real estate, then in the county or corporation wherein he dies or in which he has estate. (See § 2533; Acts 1887-88, p. 16; 1893-94, p. 898.)

All parties interested may be summoned by the propounder of the will, non-residents by publication. Those not summoned and made parties to the proceeding may, within two years after probate or refusal, file a bill to impeach or establish the will; and in case of an infant the time is extended one year after he becomes of age, and in case of one proceeded against by order of publication, unless he actually appeared as a party or was personally summoned he "may file such bill within two years after such sentence or order."

The depositions of non-resident witnesses may be taken.

Where a will relative to estate within this State has been proved without the same, an authenticated copy thereof, and the certificate of probate thereof, may be offered for probate in this State. When such copy is so offered, the court to which it is offered shall presume, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the will was duly executed and admitted to probate as a will of personalty in the State or country of the testator's domicile, and shall admit such copy to probate as a will of personalty in this State. And if it appear from such copy that the will was proved in the foreign court of probate to have been so executed as to be a valid will of lands in this State by the law thereof, such copy may be admitted to probate as a will of real estate. (Code, § 2536.)

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — For the enforcement or protection of private rights and the redress of private wrongs, there is but one form of action in this State, which is called a civil action. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 153.) All forms of pleadings existing at common law are abolished, and forms of pleading allowed are those provided for by the Code. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 255.) Any person or corporation may bring an action against the State. Such action must be brought in the superior court of Thurston County, and plaintiff must file a bond for costs at the time of filing his complaint. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 886.) An action is commenced by the service of a summons or by filing a complaint with the clerk of the court, provided that where a suit is begun by filing a complaint the defendant must be served personally, or service by publication commenced within ninety days from the filing of the complaint. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 220.) Complaint must be filed to "commence" action to stop statute of limitations. Every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, except that an administrator, executor, guardian, trustee of an express trust, or a person authorized by statute, may sue without joining the person for whose benefit the action is prosecuted. A trustee of an express trust shall be construed to include a person with whom, or in whose name, a contract is made for the benefit of another. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 179-180.) The widow or widow and children, or children, if no widow, of a man killed in a duel have a right of action against the slayer and against the seconds and all aiders and abettors; when the death of a person is caused by an injury received in falling through any opening or defective place in any sidewalk, street, alley, square, or wharf and in all cases where the death of a person is caused by the wrongful act or negligence of another, his heirs or personal representatives may maintain an action for damages against the person causing the death and whose duty it was to keep the sidewalk or other place in repair, and the jury may give such damages, pecuniary or exemplary, as they may deem just. If the deceased leaves no widow or issue, then his parents, sisters, or minor brothers dependent upon him for support, and residing within the United States, may maintain said action. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 183.) Every husband, wife, child, parent, guardian, employee, or other person who shall be injured in person or property or means of support by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of the intoxication, habitual or otherwise, of any person, shall have a right of action in his or her own name, severally or jointly, against any person or persons who shall, by selling or giving intoxicating liquors, have caused the intoxication of such person, for all damages sustained. A married woman may bring such action in her own name, and all damages recovered by her shall inure to her separate use. In case of the death of either party, the action and right of action to or against his executor or administrator shall survive. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 6289.) Owner may recover in a civil action damages paid for act of tenant. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 6291.)

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits. — Affidavits may be taken before the following officers: Judges of the supreme court and the clerk thereof, or his deputy, judges of the superior court and their clerks, and deputy clerks, court commissioners, justices of the peace, notaries public, and auditors and deputy auditors of counties. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 59, 77, 85; 2 R. & B. C. secs. 8298, 3926.)

Aliens. — The state Constitution provides that the ownership of lands by aliens, other than those who in good faith have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States, is prohibited, except where acquired by inheritance, under mortgage, or in good faith in the ordinary course of justice in the collection of debts; and all conveyances of lands made to any alien directly, or in trust for such alien, shall be void. These provisions do not apply to lands containing valuable deposits of minerals, metals, iron, coal, or fire clay, and the necessary land for mills and machinery to be used in the development thereof and the manufacture of the products therefrom. Every corporation, the majority of the capital stock of which is owned by aliens, shall be considered an alien. (Const. art. II. sec. 33.)

Only those who have declared their intention to become citizens are qualified to obtain fishing licenses or to fish in waters of the State, or those over which the State has concurrent jurisdiction. (Laws 1915, ch. 31.)

Appeals. — If the amount in controversy, exclusive of costs, exceeds twenty dollars, any person considering himself aggrieved by any judgment or decision of a justice of the peace may appeal therefrom to the superior court by filing a notice of appeal with the justice, and serving a copy thereof on the adverse party or his attorney within twenty days after the rendition of the judgment or decision complained of. He must also, within the time aforesaid, file a bond, with one or more sureties, in the sum of one hundred dollars, to the effect that he will pay all costs that may be adjudged against him on the appeal, or, if a stay of proceedings be claimed, a bond with two or more sureties, in double the amount of the judgment appealed from to the effect that the appellant will pay the costs and judgment rendered against him on appeal. The justice shall then allow the appeal and certify a transcript to the superior court. If the appealing party be a county, city, or school district, no cost or superseding bond is required. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1910-1914.)

Appeals to the supreme court may be made from all of the following determinations, and no others, made by the superior court or judge thereof: 1. From the final judgment entered in any action or proceeding, and such appeal brings up for review all orders made in the action. 2. From any order refusing to vacate an order of arrest in civil action. 3. From an order granting or denying a motion for a temporary injunction heard upon notice to the adverse party or order vacating or refusing to vacate a temporary injunction. Provided that no appeal shall be allowed from any order denying a motion for a temporary injunction or vacating a temporary injunction unless the judge of the superior court shall have found upon the hearing that the party against whom the injunction was sought was insolvent. 4. From any order discharging or refusing to discharge an attachment. 5. From any order appointing or removing, or refusing to appoint or remove, a receiver. 6. From any order affecting a substantial right in a civil action or proceeding, which either (a) in effect determines the action or proceeding and prevents a final judgment therein; or (b) discontinues the action; or (c) grants a new trial; or (d) sets aside or refuses to affirm an award of arbitrators, or refers the cause back to them. 7. From any final order made after judgment, which affects a substantial right. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1716.)

Unless the action involves the legality of a tax, impost, assessment, toll, municipal fine, or the validity of a statute, appeal does not lie to the supreme court, where the original amount in controversy does not exceed two hundred dollars. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1.)

In all cases appeals from final judgments must be taken within ninety days after the entry thereof, appeal from orders, other than final orders, must be taken within fifteen days after the entry thereof if made at time of hearing, or, when made after the hearing, fifteen days after service of order with written notice of entry thereof. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1718.)

Within ninety days after appeal taken, the clerk of the superior court shall prepare, certify, and file in his office, at the expense of appellant, a transcript of the record. Within four months after said appeal taken the clerk shall send up to the supreme court, at appellant's expense, said transcript, together with the original briefs on appeal and a printed or typewritten abstract of so much of the record and statement of facts as is necessary to determine the appeal. Supplementary record may be prepared, certified, and sent up at any time prior to the hearing of the appeal. Appellant's brief is due ninety days after appeal has been taken, respondent's brief thirty days after service of appellant's brief. Not less than ten days before the hearing, appellant may serve and file a reply brief. Time may be extended by the court or by stipulation of parties. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1729, 1730.)

In order to stay proceedings upon the judgment, the appellant must file a bond with one or more sureties conditioned to pay to the respondent all costs and damages which may be awarded against him in the supreme court, and also that he will satisfy and perform the judgment or order appealed from if required so to do by the supreme court. In the case of a money judgment the bond must be for double the amount and costs recovered. In all other cases it must be for at least two hundred dollars. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1722.)

Arrest. — The defendant may be arrested upon an order of the court where the action is brought, or of a judge of the supreme court, in the following cases: In an action for the recovery of damages, on a cause of action not arising out of contract, when the defendant is non-resident or is about to remove from the State, or in an action for an injury to person or character, or for injuring or wrongfully taking, detaining, or converting personal property. In an action for a fine or penalty, or on a promise to marry, or for money received or property embezzled or fraudulently misapplied or converted to his own use by a public officer or by an attorney, or by an officer or agent of a corporation, in the course of his employment as such, or by a factor, agent, broker, or other person acting in a fiduciary capacity, or for misconduct or neglect in office or in professional employment. In an action to recover the possession of personal property unjustly detained, when the property has been concealed, removed, or disposed of, so that it cannot be taken by the sheriff, with the intent to conceal it or deprive the plaintiff of the benefit thereof. When the defendant has been guilty of fraud in contracting the debt or incurring the obligation for which the action is brought, or in concealing or disposing of the property. When the defendant has removed or disposed of his property, or is about to do so, with intent to defraud his creditors. When the action is to prevent threatened injury to or destruction of property in which the plaintiff claims an interest, and there is imminent danger that the property will be destroyed or its value impaired. On the final judgment or order of the court, when the defendant having no property subject to execution has money which he ought to apply in payment, but refuses, with intent to defraud the plaintiff. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 748-749.) The order of the court for arrest will not be granted except upon proof under oath other than the complaint and affidavit of the party applying, his agent or attorney. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 750.)

Before the clerk shall issue the warrant of arrest a bond shall be executed and filed in such sum as the court or judge shall fix in the order, with two or more sureties to the satisfaction of the clerk, conditioned that if the order of arrest shall be vacated, or if the plaintiff shall fail to recover in the action, the obligors will pay all damages the defendant may sustain, and all expenses he may incur by reason of such arrest or imprisonment. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 752.)

Actions may be commenced upon any agreement in writing before the time for the performance of the contract expires, when the plaintiff shall make and file an affidavit with the clerk of the court that the defendant is about to leave the State without providing for the performance of the contract, taking with him property, moneys, credits, or effects subject to execution, with intent to defraud the plaintiff. In such a case a warrant of arrest issues, as in other cases heretofore stated, and an attachment may issue as in other cases. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 778-779.) Within six years after entry of judgment for twenty-five dollars or over, and upon proper showing, absconding debtor may be arrested. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 613.) In justice's court, if the action be one in which the defendant might have been arrested upon a warrant, the defendant may be arrested after the return of an execution against his property unsatisfied in whole or in part, or where the defendant has been arrested upon warrant and not discharged according to law. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1885.)

Assignments. — See Insolvent Laws.

Attachments. — The plaintiff at the time of commencing an action, or at any time afterward before judgment, may have the property of the defendant, or that of any one or more of several defendants, attached as security for the satisfaction of such judgments as he may recover. The writ of attachment shall be issued by the clerk of the court in which the action is pending; but before any such writ of attachment shall issue, the plaintiff, or some one in his behalf, shall make and file with such clerk an affidavit, showing that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff (specifying the amount of such indebtedness over and above all just credits and offsets), and that the attachment is not sought, and the action is not prosecuted, to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the defendant; and either, 1. That the defendant is a foreign corporation; or, 2. That the defendant is not a resident of this State; or, 3. That the defendant conceals himself, so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him; or, 4. That the defendant has absconded or absented himself from his usual place of abode in this State, so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him; or, 5. That the defendant has removed, or is about to remove, any of his property from this State with intent to delay or defraud his creditors; or, 6. That the defendant has assigned, secreted, or disposed of, or is about to assign, secrete, or dispose of, any of his property with intent to delay or defraud his creditors; or, 7. That the defendant is about to convert his property, or a part thereof, into money for the purpose of placing it beyond the reach of his creditors; or, 8. That the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in contracting the debt or incurring the obligation for which the action is brought; or, 9. That the damages for which the action is brought are for injuries arising from the commission of some felony, or for the seduction of some female. The affidavit must state fully the particular acts of defendant of which plaintiff complains, and the circumstances which constitute the ground for the writ. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 647-648.)

An action may be commenced, and the property of a debtor may be attached previous to the time when the debt becomes due, when nothing but time is wanting to fix an absolute indebtedness, and when the affidavit, in addition to that fact, states: 1. That the defendant is about to dispose of his property with intent to defraud his creditors; or, 2. That the defendant is about to remove from the State and refuses to make any arrangements for securing the payment of the debt when it falls due, and which contemplated removal was not known to the plaintiff at the time the debt was contracted; or, 3. That the defendant has disposed of his property in whole or in part with intent to defraud his creditors; or, 4. That the debt was incurred for property obtained under false pretenses. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 649.)

Before the writ of attachment shall issue, the plaintiff, or some one in his behalf, shall execute and file with the clerk a bond or undertaking with two or more sureties in a sum in no case less than three hundred dollars, in the superior court, nor less than fifty dollars in a justice's court, and double the amount for which plaintiff demands judgment, conditioned that the plaintiff will prosecute this action without delay, and will pay all costs that may be adjudged to the defendant and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, not exceeding the amount specified in such bond or undertaking as the penalty thereof, should the same be wrongfully, oppressively, or maliciously sued out. In attachment of real estate only of foreign corporations, non-residents, of those concealing themselves, absconding or absenting themselves from usual place of business so that process cannot be served, the writ of attachment issues without bond. The sureties shall justify as in proceedings in arrest. The sheriff to whom the writ is directed and delivered must execute the same without delay as follows: 1. Real property shall be attached by filing a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property attached, with the county auditor of the county in which the attached real estate is situated. 2. Personal property, capable of manual delivery, shall be attached by taking it into custody. 3. Stock or shares, or interest in stock or shares, of any corporation, association, or company shall be attached by leaving with the president or other head of the same, or the secretary, cashier, or managing agent thereof, a copy of the writ, and a notice stating that the stock or interest of the defendant is attached in pursuance of such writ. 4. Debts and credits and other personal property, not capable of manual delivery, shall be attached by leaving with the person owing such debts, or having in his possession or under his control such debts or other personal property, a copy of the writ, and a notice in writing that the debts owing by him to the defendant, or the credits or other personal property in his possession or under his control, are attached in pursuance of such writ. Writs of attachment may be issued or executed on Sundays or holidays. Registration of land titles under Torrens system does not affect attachment. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 652, 659, 64; 2 R. & B. C. sec. 8875.)

If the defendant, at any time before judgment, causes a bond to be executed to the plaintiff with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the officer having the attachment or after the return thereof by the clerk, to the effect that he will perform the judgment of the court, the attachment shall be discharged and restitution made of property taken or proceeds thereof. The execution of such bond shall be deemed an appearance of such defendant in the action. Such bond shall be part of the record, and, if judgment shall go against the defendant, the same shall be entered against him and sureties. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 671-672.)

The defendant may at any time after he has appeared in the action, either before or after the release of the attached property or before any attachment shall have been actually levied, apply on motion, upon reasonable notice to the plaintiff, to the court in which the action is brought, or to the judge thereof, that the writ of attachment be discharged on the ground that the same was improperly or irregularly issued. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 673.)

Attachments are levied in the order of their receipt by the officer, and the lien thereof ranks according to the time of levy. When two or more orders of attachment are received by the officer at the same time, they must be levied at the same time, and operate as pro rata liens. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 657.)

Attachments are issued from justices' courts, when the amount is less than one hundred dollars, and are governed by the foregoing provisions except that a justice of the peace has no power to issue a writ of attachment to be served out of the county in which he has his office, and no power to issue attachment of real estate or of any interest therein. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 44, 679.)

Chattel Mortgages. — Mortgages may be made upon all kinds of personal property, and upon the rolling stock of a railroad company, and upon all kinds of machinery, and upon boats and vessels, and upon portable mills and such like property, and upon growing crops, and upon crops before the seed thereof shall have been sown or planted, except that the mortgaging of crops before the seed thereof shall have been sown or planted, for more than one year in advance, is forbidden.

A mortgage of personal property must be accompanied by the affidavit of the mortgagor that it is made in good faith and without any design to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors. It must be acknowledged and filed within ten days from the time of the execution thereof in the office of the county auditor of the county in which the mortgaged property is situated. Such filing ceases to be notice as against creditors of the mortgagors and subsequent purchasers and the mortgagees in good faith after the expiration of the time such a mortgage becomes due, unless before the expiration of two years after the time such mortgage becomes due, the mortgagee, his agent or attorney, shall make and file, as aforesaid, an affidavit setting forth the amount due upon the mortgage, which affidavit must be annexed to the instrument to which it relates, and the auditor shall indorse thereon the time it was filed. The effect of such affidavit shall not continue beyond one year from the time when such mortgage would otherwise cease to be valid, as against such creditors and subsequent purchasers and mortgagees in good faith, unless before the time when any such mortgage would otherwise cease to be valid, as aforesaid, a similar affidavit be filed and annexed as hereinbefore provided and with like effect.

A chattel mortgage given to secure the sum of one hundred dollars or less, exclusive of interest and the costs of foreclosure, may be made in substantially the following form: —

This mortgage, made this day of in the year by A. B., of mortgagor, to C. D., of mortgagee, witnesseth:

That the mortgagor mortgages to the mortgagee (here describe the property) as security for the payment to him of dollars on (or before) the day of in the year with interest thereon (or security for the payment of a note, or obligation, describing it, etc.)

A. B.

Signed and delivered in the presence of: E. F., G. H.

A mortgage given to secure the sum of three hundred dollars, or more, exclusive of interest, costs, and attorney's or counsel fees, may be recorded and indexed in the same manner as a conveyance of real property, but such mortgage or copy thereof must also be filed and indexed.

In case the property mortgaged exists in two or more counties, a copy of such mortgage may be filed in each of such counties, with like force and effect as the original mortgage.

When personal property mortgaged is thereafter removed from the county in which it is situated, it is, except as between the parties to the mortgage, exempted from the operation of the record, unless either (1) the mortgagee within thirty days after such removal causes the mortgage to be recorded (or filed) in the county to which the property has been removed; or (2) the mortgage be recorded in the custom-house; or (3) the mortgagee within thirty days after such removal takes possession of the property.

A mortgage on any vessel or boat, or part of a vessel or boat, over twenty tons burden, shall be recorded in the office of the collector of customs where such vessel is registered, enrolled, or licensed, and it need not be recorded elsewhere. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3659-3668.)

Any mortgage of personal property, when the debt to secure which the mortgage was given is due, may be foreclosed by notice and sale, or by action in the superior court having jurisdiction in the county in which the property is situated. When the mortgage is foreclosed by notice and sale, the notice must contain a full description of the property mortgaged, together with the time and place of sale, also a statement of the amount due, and must be signed by the mortgagee or his attorney. Such notice shall be placed in the hands of the sheriff and be personally served in the same manner as a summons, provided that if the mortgagor cannot be found in the county, it shall not be necessary to advertise the notice or affidavit in a newspaper, but publication of said notice, made as in cases of sales on execution, shall be sufficient service upon the parties interested and shall be sufficient authority for the officer to take such property into his immediate possession. This general notice must be published (after notice has been served upon the mortgagor) in the same manner and for the same length of time as required in cases of the sale of like property on execution, and the sale is conducted in the same manner. The purchaser takes all interest which the mortgagor had in the mortgaged property, and the officer conducting the sale executes to the purchaser a bill of sale, effectual to carry the whole title and interest purchased. If any balance of the purchase price remains, it is disposed of in the same manner as surplus proceeds of sales are on execution. The right of the mortgagee to foreclose, as well as the amount claimed to be due, may be contested by any person interested in so doing, and the proceedings may be transferred to the superior court, for which purpose an injunction may issue, if necessary. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1104-1110.)

Mortgagor's interest may be sold under process by third parties. The mortgagee or his agent must be notified of the sale by personal service of a notice, or by mailing to him or to his agent a notice of the intended sale, at the time the mortgaged property is seized under process, or within five days thereafter, and said property cannot be sold within less than thirty days after its seizure, and a notice of the time and place of sale must be posted in three public places. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1115.)

A mortgagee of personal property, where a debt for the security of which a mortgage has been given has become due, or if the debt is not yet due and the mortgagee has reasonable ground to believe that his debt is insecure, and that by allowing the property longer to remain in the hands of the mortgagor he would be in danger of losing his debt or security, may have the property taken from the possession of the mortgagor and sold in the manner hereinbefore described. Where the debt is not due for which the mortgage is given, and the mortgagee has reasonable cause to believe that the mortgaged property will be destroyed, lost, or removed, the mortgagee has the right to immediate action in the superior court of the county having jurisdiction where the property is situated for the recovery of his debt; and the court may make any order it may deem fit in order to secure said property, so as to make the same available for the satisfaction of the debt. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1111-1112.)

Where a chattel mortgage is foreclosed by action, the provisions governing the foreclosure of mortgages on real estate, so far as the same are applicable, govern. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1113.)

Any mortgagor of personal property, or the successor in interest of such mortgagor, who, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud the mortgagee thereof, or his assigns or representatives, injures or destroys such property, or any part thereof, or sells such property, or any part thereof, or removes the same, or any part thereof, from the county where it was situated, and without the consent in writing of the mortgagee, or sells or disposes of his interest, or any interest therein, or parts with the possession thereof, without the consent in writing of the mortgagee, is guilty of a misdemeanor. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3669.)

Any mortgage may be satisfied of record by an acknowledgment on the margin of the record, signed by the mortgagee, or his agent, and attested by the auditor, or his deputy; or by filing with the auditor a written instrument signed and acknowledged by the mortgagee, referring to the mortgage by volume and page of record, and acknowledging satisfaction thereof. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8798.)

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — Letters of administration are granted in the following order: 1. To the surviving husband or wife, or such person as he or she may request to have appointed. 2. To the next of kin: 1st, child or children; 2d, father or mother; 3d, brother or sister; 4th, grandchildren. 3. To one or more of the principal creditors. 4. If the person so entitled or interested shall neglect for more than forty days after the death of the intestate to present a petition for letters of administration, or if there be no relatives or next of kin, or they waive their right, or if the heirs or one or more of the principal creditors, in writing, waive their right to administration, or if there be no principal creditor or creditors, then the court or judge may appoint any suitable person to administer such estate.

Non-residents of this State are disqualified from acting as executors or administrators, except that a person named as executor in any last will and testament may be appointed to act as such executor whether he be a resident of this State or not.

Every person to whom letters testamentary or of administration are directed to issue must, before receiving them, execute a bond to the State of Washington, with such surety or sureties as the court may judge sufficient, which bond shall be in a sum to be fixed by the court, and which bond must be conditioned that the executor or administrator shall faithfully execute the duties of the trust according to law, except that when it is expressly provided in the will that no bonds shall be required of the executor, letters testamentary may issue and sale of real estate be made and confirmed without any bond, unless the court for good cause requires one to be executed; but the executor may at any time afterwards, if it appear from any cause necessary or proper, be required to file a bond, as in other cases.

The debts of the estate shall be paid in the following order: (1) Funeral expenses; (2) expenses of the last sickness; (3) debts having preference by the laws of the United States; (4) wages due for labor performed within sixty days immediately preceding the death of decedent; (5) taxes, or any debts or dues, owing to the State; (6) judgments rendered against the deceased in his lifetime which are liens upon real estate on which execution might have issued at the time of his death, and debts secured by mortgages in the order of their priority; (7) all other demands against the estate. The preference given to mortgage or judgment extends only to the proceeds of the property subject to the lien of such mortgage or judgment.

In case of insufficiency to pay the debts of any one class, claims of the same class are paid pro rata.

If no homestead has been claimed either prior or subsequent to the death of the person whose estate is being administered, the court, upon being satisfied that the funeral expenses, expenses of last sickness and of administration have been paid or provided for, and upon petition therefor, shall award and set off to the surviving spouse, if any, property of the estate, either community or separate, not exceeding the value of three thousand dollars, which property as set off shall include the home and household goods, and upon such portion of the estate there shall be no further administration. If a homestead be selected as provided by law, and the value thereof, exclusive of liens, be less than three thousand dollars, the court shall set off and award additional property, either separate or community, in lieu of such deficiency, so that the value of such homestead, exclusive of liens, when added to the value of the other property awarded, exclusive of liens, shall equal three thousand dollars, and such homestead and other property shall not be further administered upon; provided that such awards shall not be taken from separate property of the deceased, which is otherwise disposed of by will, where there is no minor child living as the issue of the surviving spouse and the deceased. If there be no surviving spouse, the court shall award and set aside to the minor child or children, if any, in such proportions as he considers proper, property of the estate as the court may consider necessary for the care and support of said minor or minors until they become of legal age, not exceeding in value the sum of three thousand dollars. In addition to the above, the court may make such further reasonable allowance of cash out of the estate as may be necessary for the maintenance of the family according to their circumstances, during the progress of the settlement of the estate, and any such allowance shall be paid by the executor or administrator in preference to all other charges, except funeral charges, expenses of last sickness and expenses of administration.

Every executor or administrator must publish, immediately upon his appointment, a notice that he has been appointed and qualified as such executor or administrator, and therewith a notice to the creditors of the deceased, requiring all persons having claims against the deceased to serve the same on the executor or administrator or his attorney of record, and file the same with the clerk of the court, together with proof of such service, within six months after the date of the first publication of such notice. Every claim must be supported by the affidavit of the claimant that the amount is justly due, that no payments have been made thereon, and that there are no offsets to the same to the knowledge of the claimant. The executor or administrator shall thereupon endorse thereon his allowance or rejection. If he allow the claim, it shall be presented to the judge, who shall endorse thereon his allowance or rejection. If allowed by the executor or administrator and the judge, it shall become an acknowledged debt of the estate. If rejected by either the executor or administrator or the court, the holder must bring suit within thirty days after notification of the rejection, otherwise the claim shall be forever barred.

Within thirty days after the expiration of the time for filing claims of creditors, the executor or administrator shall make, verify, and file with the clerk of the court a report of the affairs of the estate, and when the estate shall be ready to be closed he shall make, verify, and file his final report and petition for distribution. He also may at other times file such reports as in his judgment would be proper or such as the court may order. (Laws 1917, ch. 156.)

No real estate of a deceased person shall be liable for his debts unless letters of administration be granted within six years from the date of the death. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1368.)

Conditional Sales. — All conditional sales of personal property, or leases thereof, containing a conditional right to purchase, where the property is placed in the possession of the vendee, shall be absolute as to all bona-fide purchasers, pledgees, mortgagees, incumbrancers, and subsequent creditors, whether or not such creditors have or claim a lien upon such property, unless, within ten days after the taking of possession by the vendee, a memorandum of such sale, stating its terms and conditions and signed by the vendor and vendee, shall be filed in the auditor's office of the county, wherein, at the date of the vendee's taking possession of the property, the vendee resides. (Laws 1915, ch. 95.) There is a penalty for the fraudulent removal, sale, disposition, destruction, etc., of personal property sold conditionally. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3672.)

Consignments. — No statute upon this subject.

Corporations. — Corporations may be formed under general laws, but cannot be created by special acts. All laws relating to corporations may be altered, amended, or repealed by the legislature at any time, and all corporations doing business in this State may, as to such business, be regulated, limited, or restrained by law. The legislature cannot extend any franchise or charter, nor remit the forfeiture of any franchise or charter, of any corporation.

Each stockholder in all incorporated companies, except corporations organized for banking or insurance purposes, is liable for the debts of the corporation to the amount of his unpaid stock and no more; and one or more stockholders may be joined as parties defendant in suits to recover upon this liability. Corporations cannot issue stock, except to bona-fide subscribers therefor, or their assignees; nor shall any corporation issue any bond, or other obligation, for the payment of money, except for money or property received or labor done. All fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness is void.

Each stockholder of any banking or insurance corporation or joint-stock association is individually and personally liable equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such corporation or association accruing while they remain such stockholders, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. (Const. art. XII. secs. 1-4, 6, 11.)

Corporations for manufacturing, mining, milling, wharfing and docking, mechanical, banking, mercantile, improvement, and building purposes, or for the building, equipping, and managing water flumes for the transportation of wood and lumber, or for the purpose of building, equipping, and running railroads, or constructing canals or irrigation canals, or engaging in any other species of trade or business, may be formed according to the provisions of this chapter; such corporation and the members thereof being subject to all the conditions and liabilities herein imposed, and to none others: provided, that no such corporation shall commence business or institute proceedings to condemn land for corporate purposes until the whole amount of its capital stock has been subscribed; and provided further, that the provisions of the foregoing proviso shall not apply to corporations engaged exclusively in loaning money on real estate, nor to corporations engaged exclusively in raising money from, and loaning or repaying it to, their own members, and which confine their loaning and business operations wholly to the counties of their principal place of business respectively, and to the counties adjacent, and adjoining thereto. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3677.)

Two or more persons desiring to form a company for one or more of the purposes stated shall make, subscribe, and acknowledge written articles of incorporation in triplicate. One of such articles must be filed in the office of the secretary of state, one in the office of the county auditor of the county in which the principal place of business of the company is to be located, and one must be retained by the corporation. Articles shall state the name of the corporation, objects, amount of capital stock, term of existence (not to exceed fifty years, but this limit of existence shall not apply to any life, accident, or health insurance company), number of shares, number of trustees and their names, who shall manage the concerns of the company for such length of time (not less than two nor more than six months) as may be designated in the articles, name of city, town, or locality and county in which the principal place of business of the corporation is located. Persons who have signed and acknowledged articles constitute the corporation. Corporation has usual power, and may purchase, hold, mortgage, sell, and convey real and personal property. Articles of incorporation may be amended. The time of existence cannot be extended by amendment. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3679.)

The corporate powers of a corporation shall be exercised by a board of not less than two trustees, who shall be stockholders in the company, and at least one of whom shall be a resident of the State of Washington, and a majority of them citizens of the United States, who shall, before entering upon the duties of their office, respectively take and subscribe to an oath, as provided by the laws of this State, and who shall, after the expiration of the term of the trustees first elected, be actually elected by the stockholders, at such time and place, within this State, and upon such notice and in such manner, as shall be directed by the by-laws of the company. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3686.)

Meetings of the board of trustees or directors may be held at such place or places within or without the State as may be designated in the articles of incorporation or by-laws. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3690.)

A majority of the whole number of trustees shall form a board for the transaction of business, and a decision of a majority of the persons duly assembled as a board shall be valid as a corporate act. No transfer of stock is valid, except between the parties thereto, until the same is entered upon the books of the corporation. Stockholders may in the by-laws prescribe the times, manner, and amounts in which payment of sums subscribed shall be made; if not so prescribed, trustees may make assessments upon the stockholders, notice to be given personally or by publication. Trustees shall keep a book containing names of stockholders, number of shares of stock held by them, and the time when they became owners of such shares, which book, during the usual business hours of the day, shall be open for inspection of stockholders and creditors of the company, at the office or principal place of business of the company. Any false entry or neglect to make proper entry, any refusal or neglect to exhibit any paper of the company on file, shall be a misdemeanor and render the guilty person liable to a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars and damages. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3688, 3693, 3694, 3701, 3702.)

A corporation may increase or diminish its capital stock. Amount of capital stock cannot be reduced to an amount less than the amount of the debts and liabilities. To increase or diminish the amount of capital stock, a meeting of the stockholders shall be called by a notice signed by a majority of the trustees, and published eight weeks in a newspaper published in the county where the principal place of business of the company is located. Notice shall specify object of the meeting, time and place held, and amount to which it is proposed to diminish or increase the capital stock. To increase or diminish the amount of capital stock a vote of two thirds of all the shares of stock is necessary. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3704, 3705.) A corporation may acquire and hold stock of another. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3684.)

A corporation may dissolve and disincorporate itself by presenting a petition to the judge of the superior court, and a certificate of its proper officers, showing a two thirds vote of all the stockholders to dissolve. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3708.)

Any two or more persons desirous of forming a corporation for a college, seminary, church, library, or benevolent, temperance, charitable, or scientific society, may incorporate. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3731, 3732.)

Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, or other fraternal society may incorporate. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3733.)

An act relating to the organization and powers of corporations other than those formed for purposes of profit was passed by the legislature in 1907. Corporations formed under that act must pay the same filing fee and the same annual license as corporations having a capital stock. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3752-3764.)

No foreign corporation is allowed to transact business in this State on more favorable conditions than a similar domestic corporation. (Const. art. XII. sec. 7.)

As to ownership of land by foreign corporations, see title Aliens (supra). Foreign corporations can hold land subject to restrictions mentioned therein.

Any corporation incorporated under the laws of any State or Territory of the United States, or of any foreign country, state, or colony, for any of the purposes for which domestic corporations may be formed, may sue and be sued, may purchase, hold, mortgage, and sell real or personal property necessary for the objects of the corporation, and generally may transact business the same as domestic corporations, upon filing and recording in the office of the secretary of state a certified copy of its charter or articles of incorporation, certified to by the officer who is the custodian of the same, according to the laws of the State or Territory, country or colony, where such corporation is incorporated, and also upon filing for record a written appointment of an agent who shall reside at the principal place of business of the corporation in this State, and be authorized to accept service of process. A fee of five dollars must be paid on filing appointment of a resident agent or revocation of appointment. No foreign corporation engaged in the business of dealing in real estate shall transact such business in this State, nor may any foreign corporation not engaged in the savings and loan association business within the State on July 1, 1913, engage in such business thereafter. Penalty for doing business without filing and recording papers or appointing resident agent is two hundred and fifty dollars. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3720-3723 and 3711.) Every domestic corporation must file with the auditor of the county in which its principal place of business is situated, before the second Tuesday of each year, and within thirty days after its organization, a written statement containing a list of its officers, their names and addresses and term of office. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3691, 3692.)

All corporations required by law to file articles of incorporation, except religious, social, charitable, or educational corporations, shall pay to the secretary of state, at the time of filing its articles of incorporation, twenty-five dollars, and annually thereafter on or before the first day of July, the sum of fifteen dollars. Any corporation failing to pay its annual license fee may not maintain any suit, action, or proceeding in courts of this State. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3709, 3714, 3715.) If not paid before December 31, a further fee of two dollars and fifty cents shall be charged as a penalty. Failure to pay the annual license fee for a period of one year shall be prima facie evidence of the insolvency of the corporation, and on failure to pay said license fee for two years the secretary of state shall strike from the records of his office the name of the delinquent corporation. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3714, 3715.) Stricken corporation may be reinstated at any time upon application to the secretary of state, and the payment of all license fees and penalties due and the additional sum of twenty dollars for each and every year that the corporation's name has been stricken from the records. (Laws 1911, page 135.) Corporations which had been stricken at the time this law was passed must pay the sum of one hundred dollars, instead of twenty dollars for each year their names were stricken, as provided for corporations stricken after this law was passed. The property of a corporation is taxed the same as the property of an individual. See title Taxation.

No corporation shall take a name so similar to the name of a corporation heretofore organized as to be misleading. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3680.)

Any person, being the bishop, overseer, or presiding elder of any church or religious denomination in this State, may become a corporation sole under the provisions of ch. 79, Laws 1915.

Courts, Jurisdiction of. — See Court Calendar for Washington.

Deeds. — A deed shall be in writing, signed by the party bound thereby, and acknowledged before an officer authorized to take acknowledgments. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8746.) Witnesses not required.

A conveyance of lands in payment of a wager at cards, dice, or other gambling device is void as between parties and all other persons except holders in good faith. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 5317.)

A deed of community property must be executed and acknowledged by husband and wife. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 5918.)

In conveying or mortgaging the homestead property, the wife must sign and acknowledge the deed or mortgage. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 534.) A husband or wife may convey directly to the other his or her community real property. A husband or wife may make and execute powers of attorney for conveyance of his or her separate estate, without the other joining in the execution thereof; and either husband or wife may make and execute a power of attorney to the other to convey community property. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 8766-8769.)

Acknowledgments of deeds, mortgages, and other instruments in writing, made within the State, may be taken before a judge of the supreme court, the judge of a superior court, a clerk of the supreme or a superior court, or their deputies, a justice of the peace, county auditor or his deputy, a notary public, or United States commissioner. Certificates of the official character of notaries public may be granted by the county clerk of the county in which such notary resides or by the secretary of state. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 8754, 8304.)

Acknowledgments made in any other State or Territory of conveyances of or mortgages upon lands situated within this State may be made before any person authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds by the laws of the State or Territory wherein the acknowledgment is taken, or before any commissioner appointed by the governor of this State for such purpose. Unless such acknowledgment is taken before a commissioner appointed by the governor of this State, or by a clerk of a court of record of said State, or by a notary public or other officer having a seal of office, there must be attached to the deed a certificate of a clerk of a court of record, for the county or district where the acknowledgment is taken, under the seal of said court, or a certificate of any other proper officer of said district or county that the person making the certificate of acknowledgment was at the date thereof such officer as he therein represents himself to be; that such officer is authorized by law to take the acknowledgment of deeds, and that he verily believes the signature of the officer to be genuine. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 8755, 8756.)

Acknowledgments may be taken in a foreign country before any minister plenipotentiary, secretary of legation, chargé d'affaires, consul-general, consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent appointed by the government of the United States to the country where they are taken, or before the mayor or other chief magistrate of any city, town, or other municipal corporation, or before the proper officer of any court of said country, or before any notary public. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8758.)

The person or officer taking such acknowledgment shall certify the same by a certificate written on or annexed to such instrument, certifying under his seal, if any he has, the date of the acknowledgment, and that the instrument was acknowledged by the person signing the same before him as such officer. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8759.)

[Certificate of Acknowledgment.]

STATE OF WASHINGTON, }
COUNTY OF } ss.

I (here give name of officer and official title) do hereby certify that on this day of 19 personally appeared before me (name of grantor, and, if acknowledged by wife, her name, and add "his wife"), to me known to be the individual (or individuals) described in and who executed the within instrument, and acknowledged that he (she or they) signed and sealed the same as his (her or their) free and voluntary act and deed, for the uses and purposes therein mentioned.

Given under my hand and official seal this day of A. D. 19
[Seal of officer.]

(Signature of the officer and official title, with residence.) (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8761.)

[Certificate of Acknowledgment for Corporations.]

COUNTY OF } ss.

On this day of A. D. 19 before me personally appeared to me known to be the (president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, or other authorized officer or agent, as the case may be) of the corporation that executed the within and foregoing instrument, and acknowledged the said instrument to be the free and voluntary act and deed of said corporation, for the uses and purposes therein mentioned, and on oath stated that he was authorized to execute said instrument and that the seal affixed is the corporate seal of said corporation.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal the day and year first above written.

(Signature and title of officer.)

(2 R. & B. C. sec. 8761½.)

The use of private seals upon all deeds, mortgages, leases, bonds, and other instruments and contracts in writing is abolished. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8751.)

When a notary public shall sign an instrument, not to be filed in a court of this State, officially, he shall, in addition to his name and the words "Notary Public," add his place of residence and affix his official seal. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8299.)

Depositions. — Depositions may be taken out of the State by a judge, justice, chancellor, or clerk of any court of record, a justice of the peace, notary public, mayor or chief magistrate of any city or town, or any person authorized by a special commission from any court of the State of Washington. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1239.)

A commission to take depositions without the State can be granted by any superior court in the State, or any judge thereof. The clerk issues the commission under the seal of the court. Depositions may be taken upon written interrogatories, or upon oral questions, or partly upon oral and partly upon written interrogatories. Before any such commission is granted, the person intending to apply therefor must notify the adverse party of his intention to make such application. The notice must state the time and place of making the application. It must specify the action, the name of the court in which the deposition is to be used, and the time and place of taking the deposition. In case of depositions in the State the adverse party is to have three days' notice, exclusive of the day of service, and such additional time as may be required in traveling to attend the hearing. At the time the application is presented, the court or judge shall settle the interrogatories, if any have been served and the parties have not settled the same. The clerk, upon issuing the commission, shall attach the interrogatories thereto, if any have been agreed upon or settled by the court, and immediately forward the same to the commissioner.

At least five days' notice must be given to the party or witness to be examined out of the State, in case such examination shall be had upon oral interrogatories, and the person before whom the deposition of the witness shall be taken shall have the same power to compel the attendance of such parties or witnesses as any person authorized to take such deposition within this State.

When the party against whom the deposition is to be read is absent from or a non-resident of the State, and has no agent or attorney of record therein, he shall be notified of the application for a commission by publication. The publication must be made for three consecutive weeks in some newspaper printed in the county where the action is pending if there be any printed in such county, and if not in some newspaper printed in this state, of general circulation in that county. The published notice must conform to the notice hereinbefore set out. The deposition shall be written by the officer taking the same or by the witness or by some disinterested person in the presence and under the direction of such officer.

When the deposition is completed, it shall be carefully read to or by the witness, corrected, if desired, and subscribed by him, and if taken upon notice, it shall be certified by the officer substantially as follows: —

STATE OF WASHINGTON, }
COUNTY OF } ss.

I, A. B., justice of the peace in and for said county (or judge, clerk, etc., as the case may be), do hereby certify that the above deposition was taken before me and reduced to writing by myself (or witness, as the case may be), at _____ in said county, on the day of _____ 19__ at _____ o'clock, in pursuance of notice hereto annexed; that the above-named witness, before examination, was sworn (or affirmed) to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and that the said deposition was carefully read to (or by) said witness, and then subscribed by him.

A. B., Justice of the Peace.

Dated at _____ the _____ day of _____ 19__ .

If the deposition be taken upon a commission the commissioner shall certify it in substantially the same manner and annex to it the commission and interrogatories. Whether taken upon notice or commission, it shall be inclosed in a sealed envelope, mailed or delivered to the clerk of the court, arbitrators, referee, or justice of the peace before whom the action is pending. Depositions may be used by either party upon a trial against any party giving or receiving the notice, subject to all legal exceptions to the competency or credibility of the witness, or the manner of taking the deposition. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1240-1244.)

Descent and Distribution of Real Estate. — When any person shall die seized of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, not having devised the same, they shall descend subject to his debts as follows: If the decedent leaves a surviving husband or wife, and only one child, or the lawful issue of one child, in equal shares to each; if the decedent leaves a surviving husband or wife, and more than one child living, or one child living and the lawful issue of one or more deceased children, one third to the surviving husband or wife, and the remainder in equal shares to his children, and to the lawful issue of any deceased child by right of representation. If there be no child of the decedent living at his death, the remainder goes to all his lineal descendants; and if all of the descendants are in the same degree of kindred to the decedent, they share equally, otherwise they take according to the right of representation. If the decedent leaves no issue, the estate goes in equal shares to the surviving husband or wife, and to the decedent's father and mother, if both survive. If there be no father nor mother, then one half goes in equal shares to the brothers or sisters, and to the children of any deceased brothers or sisters, by the right of representation. If decedent leaves no issue, nor husband, nor wife, the estate must go to his father and mother. If the decedent leaves a surviving consort and no issue, and no father, mother, brother, or sister, the whole must go to the surviving consort. If the decedent leaves no issue, nor surviving husband, or wife, father, mother, brother, or sister, the whole estate goes to the next of kin in equal degree; and if there are two or more collateral kindred in equal degree, but claiming through different ancestors, those claiming through the nearest ancestor must be preferred. If the decedent leaves several children or one child, and the issue of one or more other children, and any such surviving child dies under age, and not having been married, all the estate that comes to the deceased child by inheritance from such decedent descends in equal shares to the other children of the same parent, and to the issue of any such other children who are dead, by right of representation. If at the death of such child, who dies under age, not having been married, all the other children of his parents are also dead, and any of them have left issue, the estate that came to such child by inheritance from his parent descends to the issue of all other children of the same parent; and if all the issue are in the same degree of kindred to the child, they share the estate equally, otherwise they take according to the right of representation. If the decedent leaves no husband, wife, or kindred, the estate escheats to the State to inure to and become a part of the permanent common school fund of the State. The foregoing provisions relate only to the separate property of the decedent. Upon the death of either husband or wife, the one half of the community property, subject to the community debts, goes to the survivor, and the other half is subject to the testamentary disposition of the decedent, subject also to the community debts. In case there is no will, it descends as other property to the legitimate issue of his or her body, and if there be no issue it descends to the survivor to the exclusion of collateral heirs subject to the community debts, family allowance and the charges and expenses of administration. Tenancy by the curtesy and tenancy in dower are abolished. Every illegitimate child is an heir to the person who shall in writing, signed in the presence of a competent witness, have acknowledged himself to be the father of such child, and shall in all cases be considered as heir of his mother. If any illegitimate child shall die intestate without lawful issue, his estate shall descend to his mother or her heirs at law. The kindred of the half blood shall inherit equally with those of the whole blood in the same degree. Posthumous children are considered as living at the death of their parent. Kinship is computed according to the rules of the civil law. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1341-1343, 1345-1347, 1355.)

All real estate owned by any deceased person vests immediately in his heirs or devisees, subject to the debts, family allowance, expenses of administration, and any other charge for which such real estate is liable under existing laws; and no administration of the estate or decree of distribution is necessary to vest the title in the heirs or devisees: provided, no person shall be deemed a devisee until the will has been probated, and any heirs or devisees may sue for and recover their respective shares or interests, whether letters testamentary or of administration have been granted or not, from any person except the executor or administrator. This rule applies to community as well as separate property. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1364-1370.) In case of escheats the title vests in the State immediately upon the death of the intestate subject to existing liens, decedent's debts, and the expenses of administration. If at the expiration of eighteen months after the issuance of letters of administration no heirs shall have appeared and established their claim, the court having jurisdiction shall render a decree escheating all the property and effects of the decedent to the State of Washington. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1356-1357.)

Of Personal Estate. — When any person dies intestate, possessed of separate personal estate, the widow, if any, shall have all articles of apparel or ornament, and also provisions and other necessities for her use and that of her family, as may be decreed in pursuance of law. This allowance is made as well when the widow receives the provision made for her in the will of her husband as when he dies intestate. The residue, after paying the funeral expenses, debts, and expenses of administration, shall be distributed to the same persons and in the same proportions as the real estate, except, if the intestate leave a husband and issue, the husband shall be entitled to one half. If there be no issue, he shall have the whole. If the intestate leave a widow and issue, she shall be entitled to one half, and if there is no issue she shall be entitled to the whole.

If there be no husband, widow, or kindred of the intestate, the said personal estate shall escheat to the State, for the use of common schools in the particular county in which the intestate shall have resided at the time of death. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1364.)

Inheritance Tax Law. — All property within the jurisdiction of this State, and any interest therein, whether belonging to the inhabitants of this State or not or whether tangible or intangible, which shall pass by will or by the statutes of inheritance of this or any other State, or by deed, grant, sale, or gift made in contemplation of the death of the grantor or donor or by deed, grant, sale, or gift made or intended to take effect in possession or in enjoyment after the death of the grantor or donor to any person in trust or otherwise, shall, for the use of the State, be subject to a tax, after the payment of all debts owing by the decedent at the time of his death, the local and state taxes due from the estate prior to his death, and a reasonable sum for funeral expenses, court costs, including cost of appraisement made for the purpose of assessing the inheritance tax, the statutory fees of executors, administrators, or trustees, and no other sum, but said debts shall not be deducted unless the same are allowed or established within the time provided by law, unless otherwise ordered by the judge or court of the proper county, and all administrators, executors, and trustees, and any such grantee under a conveyance, and any such donee under a gift made during the grantor's or donor's life, shall be respectively liable for all such taxes to be paid by them, with lawful interest until the same shall have been paid. The inheritance tax shall be and remain a lien on such estate from the death of the decedent until paid.

On all sums exceeding the first ten thousand dollars where the same passes or is for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant, adopted child, or the lineal descendant of an adopted child, the tax is one per cent. On all sums not exceeding the first fifty thousand dollars, of three per cent. where such estate passes to collateral heirs to and including the third degree of relationship, and of six per cent. where such estates pass to collateral heirs beyond the third degree or to strangers to the blood. On all sums above the first fifty thousand dollars, and not exceeding the first one hundred thousand dollars, four and one half per cent. to collateral heirs to and including the third degree and nine per cent. to collateral heirs beyond the third degree or to strangers to the blood. And on all sums in excess of the first one hundred thousand dollars, the tax shall be six per cent. to collateral heirs to and including the third degree, and twelve per cent. to collateral heirs beyond the third degree or to strangers to the blood.

Within these limitations and excepting real property located outside of the State passing in fee from the decedent owner, the tax imposed is collected from property of every kind, which at the death of the decedent is subject to or thereafter, for the purpose of distribution, is brought into this State and becomes subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of this State for distribution purposes, or which was owned by any decedent domiciled within the State at the time of the death of such decedent, even though the property of said decedent so domiciled was situated outside of the State. A corporation permitting stock standing in the name of a decedent to be transferred on its books, without payment of the tax thereon, becomes itself liable for the tax. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 9194.)

In case of any property belonging to a foreign estate, which estate, in whole or in part, is liable to pay a collateral inheritance tax in this State, the said tax shall be assessed upon the market value of said property remaining after the payment of such debts and expenses as are chargeable to the property under the laws of this State. If the executor, administrator, or trustee of such foreign estate shall file with the clerk of the court having ancillary jurisdiction and with the state board of tax commissioners duly certified statements exhibiting the true market value of the entire estate of the decedent owner, and the indebtedness for which the said estate has been adjudged liable, which statements shall be duly attested by the judge of the court having original jurisdiction, the beneficiaries of said estate shall then be entitled to have deducted such proportion of the said indebtedness of the decedent from the value of the property as the value of the property within this State bears to the value of the entire estate. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 9182, 9184, 9185, and Laws 1911, p. 60.)

The state board of tax commissioners, Olympia, Wash., has jurisdiction of the collection of inheritance taxes and inquiries as to proper assessment should be addressed to it.

Divorce.—Divorces may be granted by the superior court on application of the party injured, for the following causes: 1. When the consent to the marriage of the party applying for the divorce was obtained by force or fraud, and there has been no subsequent voluntary cohabitation. 2. For adultery on the part of the wife or the husband, when forgiven, and application is made within one year after it shall come to the knowledge of the party applying for divorce. 3. Impotency. 4. Abandonment for one year. 5. Cruel treatment of either party by the other, or personal indignities rendering life burdensome. 6. Habitual drunkenness of either party, or the neglect or refusal of the husband to make suitable provision for his family. 7. The imprisonment of either party in the penitentiary, if complaint is filed during the term of such imprisonment; and a divorce may be granted upon application of either party for any other cause deemed by the court sufficient, and the court shall be satisfied that the parties can no longer live together. 8. Where the parties are estranged and have lived separate and apart for eight years or more and the court shall be satisfied that the parties can no longer live together. 9. In case of incurable chronic mania or dementia of either party having existed for ten years or more, the court may, in its discretion, grant a divorce. When there is any doubt as to the facts rendering a marriage void, either party may apply for, and on proof obtain, a decree of nullity of marriage. Any person who has been a resident of the State for one year may file his or her complaint for a divorce or decree of nullity of marriage under oath in the superior court of the county where he or she may reside, and like proceedings shall be had thereon as in civil cases. When the defendant does not answer, or answering admits the allegations in the complaint, the court shall require proof before granting a divorce or a decree of nullity. The defendant may, in addition to his or her answer, file cross-complaint for divorce, and the court may in such case grant a divorce, in favor of either party, or as on application of both. Persons divorced by the courts of this State are prohibited from contracting marriage within the period in which an appeal may be taken. Whenever judgment or decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony is granted by any court in this State, such judgment or decree shall expressly prohibit the plaintiff and defendant named therein from contracting any marriage with third parties within the period of six months from the date of the entry of such judgment or decree, and in case either party to said decree remarry within said period, he or she shall be deemed guilty of contempt of the court granting such judgment or decree, and shall be proceeded against and punished in like manner as in other cases of contempt of court. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 982-987, 991, 992.) Soliciting divorce business by means of advertisement, either in this State or elsewhere, is a misdemeanor. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 2900.)

Dower. — No estate is allowed the husband as tenant by curtesy upon the death of his wife nor is any estate in dower allotted to the wife upon the death of her husband. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 5922.)

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Executions. — After the expiration of six years from the rendition of any judgment it shall cease to be a lien or charge against the estate or person of the judgment debtor. (R. & B. C. sec. 459.) The execution must be directed to the sheriff of the county in which the property is situated, and the sheriff must satisfy the judgment out of the personal property; if personal property be not sufficient, out of the real property upon which the judgment is a lien. If execution is against the property in the hands of heirs, or personal representatives, devisees, legatees, tenants, or trustees, sheriff must satisfy same out of property in their hands; if against person of judgment debtor, sheriff must arrest and commit debtor to jail until judgment is paid; if for delivering possession of property, sheriff must deliver property to person entitled to it. Sheriff must return execution within sixty days after its date to clerk of court. Money collected must be paid to clerk within twenty days after collection. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 513; 515.) In case of the death of the judgment creditor, execution may, upon proper proceedings being taken, issue in the name of the executor, administrator, or legal representative of such deceased person. Where judgment has been assigned, execution may issue in the name of assignee upon recording the assignment. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 519.) Execution may issue and be enforced upon an award of arbitrators, filed in the superior court, and upon a judgment by confession. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 419, 429, 430.) Execution issued on judgment against garnishee in like manner as upon any other judgment. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 694.) Execution or other legal process cannot be levied upon construction material to enforce any debt due by purchaser of such material as long as in good faith it is to be applied in the construction, alteration, or repair of property subject to a lien for labor and material, except to enforce a debt due for the purchase-money thereof. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1144.) Franchises are subject to sale upon execution. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 520.) See Judgments; Stay of Execution.

Exemptions. — All real and personal estate belonging to a married woman at the time of her marriage, and all she subsequently acquires or becomes entitled to in her own right, and all her personal earnings, and rents and profits of such real estate, shall not be liable for her husband's debts so long as she or any minor heir of her body is living, but her separate property is liable for debts owing by her at the time of her marriage. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 570.) To a householder, being the head of a family, a homestead of the value of two thousand dollars while occupied by such family, except that the homestead is subject to execution for debts secured by mechanic's, laborer's, material-men's or vendor's liens upon the premises and for debts secured by mortgages on the premises executed and acknowledged by the husband and wife or by an unmarried claimant. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 532, 533.) All wearing apparel, private libraries (not to exceed five hundred dollars in value), family pictures, and keepsakes. To each householder one bed and bedding, and one additional bed and bedding for each additional member of the family, and other household goods of the coin value of five hundred dollars. Provisions and fuel for family for six months. Two cows with their calves, five swine, two stands of bees, thirty-six domestic fowls, and feed for six months. To a farmer one span of horses and harness, or two yokes of oxen, and one wagon, with farming utensils not exceeding five hundred dollars in coin value, one hundred and fifty bushels of wheat, one hundred and fifty bushels of oats or barley, fifty bushels of potatoes, ten bushels of corn, and ten bushels of peas, and ten bushels of onions for seeding purposes. To a mechanic the tools used to carry on his trade for the support of himself and family, also material of the value of five hundred dollars. To a physician, his library, not exceeding five hundred dollars in value, horse and carriage, instruments and medicines not exceeding two hundred dollars in coin. To attorneys and clergymen, their libraries, not exceeding the coin value of one thousand dollars, also office furniture, stationery and fuel not exceeding in value two hundred dollars. All firearms. A canoe, skiff, or small boat, not exceeding in value two hundred and fifty dollars. To a person engaged in lightering, one or more lighters or scows and a small boat, not exceeding the aggregate value of two hundred and fifty dollars. To a drayman, his team. To a person engaged in logging, three yokes of work oxen, and implements of the value of three hundred dollars. No property shall be exempt upon a judgment for its purchase-price, or for a tax levied thereon. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 563.) Proceeds or avails of all life and accident insurance shall be exempt from all liability for any debt. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 569.) To any person whose exempt property is insured, and destroyed by fire, the insurance money coming to or belonging to the person thus insured to an amount equal to the exempt property thus destroyed. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 533.) Any person making a general assignment for the benefit of creditors may reserve all property exempt by law from levy by execution or attachment. (1 R. & B. C.

sec. 1102.) Burial lots exempt. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3647.) Pension money exempt, but exemption may be waived. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 566.) Except as provided in the next title, no property is exempt from execution for clerk's, laborer's, or mechanic's wages earned within the State, nor for actual necessities not exceeding fifty dollars in value furnished to defendant or family within sixty days preceding the beginning of an action to recover therefor, nor is any property exempt from execution upon a judgment against an attorney or agent on account of liability incurred by such attorney or agent to his client or principal for moneys or property coming into his hands from or belonging to his client or principal. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 564.)

Garnishment. — Clerks of superior courts and justices of the peace may issue writs of garnishment in the following cases: 1. Where an original attachment has been issued in accordance with the statutes in relation to attachments. 2. Where the plaintiff sues for a debt, and makes affidavit that such debt is just, due, and unpaid, and that the garnishment applied for is not sued out to injure either the defendant or garnishee. 3. Where the plaintiff has a judgment wholly or partially unsatisfied in the court from which he seeks to have a writ of garnishment issued. Under subdivision 2, when writ is issued by superior court, plaintiff must execute bond, payable to defendant, in double the amount of the debt claimed, conditioned that he will prosecute his suit and pay all damages and costs that may be adjudged against him for wrongfully suing out such garnishment. Plaintiff or some one in his behalf shall make application for writ by affidavit, stating the facts authorizing the issuance of the writ, and that the plaintiff believes that the garnishee, stating his name and residence, is indebted to the defendant, or has in his possession or under his control personal property or effects belonging to the defendant, or that the garnishee is an incorporated or joint stock company, and that the defendant is the owner of shares in such company, or has an interest therein. Sheriff shall serve writ on garnishee in like manner as summons is served, and shall make return similar to return of summons. From and after the service of such writ it shall not be lawful for the garnishee to pay to the defendant any debt or to deliver to him any effects. Execution may be issued on the judgment against the garnishee in like manner as upon any other judgment. Current wages or salary to the amount of one hundred dollars for personal services rendered by any person having a family dependent on him for support are exempt from garnishment, except that where the debt is for necessities, the exempt share be limited to ten dollars a week for four consecutive weeks. In the superior court, where the garnishee is discharged upon his answer, the costs of the proceeding, including a reasonable compensation to the garnishee for attorney's fees, shall be taxed against the plaintiff. Where the answer of the garnishee has not been controverted and the garnishee has been held thereon, such costs shall be taxed against the defendant and included in the judgment. Where the answer is controverted the costs shall abide the issue of such contest. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 680-682, 687, 688, 693, 1823, 703, 704.)

Counties, cities, towns, school districts, and other municipal corporations shall be subject to garnishment in the superior and justice courts, but only after judgment shall have been entered against the defendant in the main action. (Laws 1915, ch. 130.)

Inheritance Taxes. — See Descent.

Insolvent Laws or Assignments. — The national bankruptcy act of 1898 has suspended the operation of this law.

Interest. — The legal rate of interest is six per cent. per annum; any rate of interest not exceeding twelve per cent., agreed upon in writing, shall be valid. If a greater rate of interest than is hereinbefore allowed shall be contracted for or received or reserved, the contract shall not, therefore, be void; but if in any action on such contract proof be made that a greater rate of interest has been directly or indirectly contracted for or taken or reserved, the plaintiff shall only recover the principal, less the amount of interest accruing thereon at the rate contracted for, and the defendant shall recover costs; and if interest shall have been paid, judgment shall be for the principal, less twice the amount of the interest paid, and less the amount of all accrued and unpaid interest; and the acts and dealings of an agent in loaning money shall bind the principal, and in all cases where there is illegal interest contracted for by the transaction of any agent, the principal shall be held thereby to the same extent as though he had acted in person. And where the same person acts as agent for the borrower and lender, he shall be deemed the agent of the lender for the purposes of this act. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 6250, 6251, 6255.)

Judgments founded on written contracts, providing for the payment of interest until paid at a specified rate, shall bear interest at the rate specified in such contracts: provided, that said interest rate is set forth in the judgment; and all other judgments shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from date of entry thereof. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 457.)

State warrants bear interest at a rate not greater than five per cent., all county, city, town and school warrants and all other warrants drawn upon or payable from any public fund draw interest at a rate not greater than eight per cent. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 6252, 6253.)

Judgments on actions to enforce assessments in cities shall bear interest at the rate of eight per cent. per annum and shall be payable in five equal installments. If installments are not paid when due they shall bear interest at the rate of twelve per cent.; if not paid within six months after maturity, then entire amount of the lien shall mature and become payable, and from the time of its maturity shall bear interest at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 7917, 7919.) Bonds issued by cities to pay for waterworks, etc., shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed six per cent. per annum. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8008.) Bonds issued by school districts shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed six per cent. per annum. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 4607.)

Judgments.—Judgments of the district or circuit court of the United States, if rendered in this State, or of the superior or supreme court, or any judgment of a justice of the peace, shall be a lien, for a period of five years from the day on which said judgment was rendered, on the real estate of a judgment debtor and such as he may acquire. Said liens to commence as follows: Judgments of the superior court of the county in which real estate of the judgment debtor is situated, from the date of the entry thereof; judgments of the district and circuit courts of the United States, if rendered in this State; judgments of the supreme court; judgments of the superior court of any county other than the county in which said judgment was rendered; and judgments of a justice of the peace, from the time of the filing and indexing of a duly certified transcript of such judgments with the county clerk of the county in which said real estate is situated. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 445.)

Appeal does not affect the lien; limitations begin to run from the date of final judgment in the supreme court. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 458.)

When a transcript of any judgment of a justice of the peace is filed in the county clerk's office in the county in which said judgment was rendered, it becomes a judgment of the superior court of that county; and said judgment of said justice of the peace becomes a lien upon the real estate of the judgment debtor in any county of the State in which a certified abstract thereof is filed in the office of the county clerk of that county. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 450.)

Any assignment or satisfaction of judgment, or any certified transcript of such assignment or satisfaction, may be recorded in any county auditor's office, or county clerk's office in which the judgment is of record, and from the time of the filing for record shall be notice of such assignment or satisfaction. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 447.)

Judgment notes, although not prohibited, are not used in this State. Personal property is held only from the time it is actually levied upon. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 458.)

A judgment for debt rendered in any other State or Territory, against any resident of this State, at the time of the rendition of such judgment, shall not be of any higher character as evidence of indebtedness than the original claim upon which such judgment is rendered, unless such judgment shall be rendered upon personal service of summons, notice, or other due process against the defendant therein. If there was no personal service on him, the defendant may set up the same defense as he might have to the original action. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1255, 1256.)

Execution may issue immediately after judgment if no motion for new trial be filed. If one be filed execution shall not issue until said motion be determined. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 431.) There is no priority as to judgments. The first levy of an execution binds the property, unless there is a judgment lien by virtue of a record in the auditor's office, or some lien or pledge that gives another judgment priority.

License.—Commercial travelers are not required to take out a license. Hunters must secure license. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 5327.) Aliens not allowed to carry or have firearms without license. (Laws 1911, p. 303.) A motor vehicle to operate upon a public highway must be licensed. (Laws 1915, ch. 142.) Every insurance agent, solicitor or broker shall annually procure a license from the insurance commissioner. (Laws 1915, ch. 177.)

Liens.—All vessels are liable, 1, for services rendered on board; 2, for supplies furnished, or for work or materials furnished in this State for their construction, repair, and equipment; 3, for their wharfage and anchorage in this State and for pilotage; 4, for non-performance or malperformance of any contract for transportation of persons or property between places, within this State, or to or from places within this State, made by their respective owners, masters, agents, or consignees; and, 5, for injuries committed both to persons and property within this State, or while transporting such persons or property to or from this State. Such demands constitute liens upon vessels and have priority in the order enumerated, and have preference over all other demands, and continue in force for three years from the time the cause of action accrued. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1182; 2 R. & B. C. sec. 8242.) Stevedores and longshoremen have a lien for services rendered in loading cargo. Such lien is prior to all except 1 and 2 and 3 above. All above liens are enforceable by suit in rem. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1183-1186.)

Every person performing labor for any person, company, or corporation, in the operation of any railway, canal, or transportation company, or any water, mining, or manufacturing company, saw-mill, lumber, or timber company, shall have a prior lien on the franchise, earnings, and on all real and personal property of said person, company, or corporation, which is used in the operation of its business, to the extent of the moneys due him from such person, company, or corporation, operating said franchise or business, for labor performed within six months next preceding the filing of his claim therefor; and no mortgage, deed of trust, or conveyance shall defeat or take precedence over said lien. Notice of claims must be filed for record with county auditors of the county in which labor was performed, or in which is located the principal office of such person, company, or corporation, within ninety days after claimant has ceased to perform labor, and copy of said notice must be served within thirty days after same is filed. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1149, 1150.)

All taxes and levies which may hereafter be lawfully imposed or assessed shall be, and they are hereby declared to be, a lien respectively upon the real estate upon which they

sec. 1102.) Burial lots exempt. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 3647.) Pension money exempt, but exemption may be waived. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 566.) Except as provided in the next title, no property is exempt from execution for clerk's, laborer's, or mechanic's wages earned within the State, nor for actual necessities not exceeding fifty dollars in value furnished to defendant or family within sixty days preceding the beginning of an action to recover therefor, nor is any property exempt from execution upon a judgment against an attorney or agent on account of liability incurred by such attorney or agent to his client or principal for moneys or property coming into his hands from or belonging to his client or principal. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 564.)

Garnishment. — Clerks of superior courts and justices of the peace may issue writs of garnishment in the following cases: 1. Where an original attachment has been issued in accordance with the statutes in relation to attachments. 2. Where the plaintiff sues for a debt, and makes affidavit that such debt is just, due, and unpaid, and that the garnishment applied for is not sued out to injure either the defendant or garnishee. 3. Where the plaintiff has a judgment wholly or partially unsatisfied in the court from which he seeks to have a writ of garnishment issued. Under subdivision 2, when writ is issued by superior court, plaintiff must execute bond, payable to defendant, in double the amount of the debt claimed, conditioned that he will prosecute his suit and pay all damages and costs that may be adjudged against him for wrongfully suing out such garnishment. Plaintiff or some one in his behalf shall make application for writ by affidavit, stating the facts authorizing the issuance of the writ, and that the plaintiff believes that the garnishee, stating his name and residence, is indebted to the defendant, or has in his possession or under his control personal property or effects belonging to the defendant, or that the garnishee is an incorporated or joint stock company, and that the defendant is the owner of shares in such company, or has an interest therein. Sheriff shall serve writ on garnishee in like manner as summons is served, and shall make return similar to return of summons. From and after the service of such writ it shall not be lawful for the garnishee to pay to the defendant any debt or to deliver to him any effects. Execution may be issued on the judgment against the garnishee in like manner as upon any other judgment. Current wages or salary to the amount of one hundred dollars for personal services rendered by any person having a family dependent on him for support are exempt from garnishment, except that where the debt is for necessities, the exempt share be limited to ten dollars a week for four consecutive weeks. In the superior court, where the garnishee is discharged upon his answer, the costs of the proceeding, including a reasonable compensation to the garnishee for attorney's fees, shall be taxed against the plaintiff. Where the answer of the garnishee has not been controverted and the garnishee has been held thereon, such costs shall be taxed against the defendant and included in the judgment. Where the answer is controverted the costs shall abide the issue of such contest. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 680-682, 687, 688, 693, 1823, 703, 704.)

Counties, cities, towns, school districts, and other municipal corporations shall be subject to garnishment in the superior and justice courts, but only after judgment shall have been entered against the defendant in the main action. (Laws 1915, ch. 130.)

Judgments. — Judgments of the district or circuit court of the United States, if rendered in this State, or of the superior or supreme court, or any judgment of a justice of the peace, shall be a lien, for a period of five years from the day on which said judgment was rendered, on the real estate of a judgment debtor and such as he may acquire. Said liens to commence as follows: Judgments of the superior court of the county in which real estate of the judgment debtor is situated, from the date of the entry thereof; judgments of the district and circuit courts of the United States, if rendered in this State; judgments of the supreme court; judgments of the superior court of any county other than the county in which said judgment was rendered; and judgments of a justice of the peace, from the time of the filing and indexing of a duly certified transcript of such judgments with the county clerk of the county in which said real estate is situated. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 445.)

Appeal does not affect the lien; limitations begin to run from the date of final judgment in the supreme court. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 458.)

When a transcript of any judgment of a justice of the peace is filed in the county clerk's office in the county in which said judgment was rendered, it becomes a judgment of the superior court of that county; and said judgment of said justice of the peace becomes a lien upon the real estate of the judgment debtor in any county of the State in which a certified abstract thereof is filed in the office of the county clerk of that county. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 450.)

Any assignment or satisfaction of judgment, or any certified transcript of such assignment or satisfaction, may be recorded in any county auditor's office, or county clerk's office in which the judgment is of record, and from the time of the filing for record shall be notice of such assignment or satisfaction. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 447.)

Notice of claims must be filed for record with county auditors of the county in which labor was performed, or in which is located the principal office of such person, company, or corporation, within ninety days after claimant has ceased to perform labor, and copy of said notice must be served within thirty days after same is filed. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1149, 1150.)

All taxes and levies which may hereafter be lawfully imposed or assessed shall be, and they are hereby declared to be, a lien respectively upon the real estate upon which they may hereafter be imposed or assessed, which liens shall include all charges and expenses of and concerning the said taxes which, by the provisions of this act, are directed to be made. The said lien shall have priority to and shall be fully paid and satisfied before any recognisance, mortgage, judgment, debt, obligation, or responsibility to or with which said real estate may become charged or liable. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 9230.)

Every person performing labor upon, or who shall assist in obtaining or securing, saw-logs, spars, piles, cordwood, shingle bolts, or other timber, and the owner or owners of any tug-boat or towboat which shall tow or assist in towing, from one place to another within this State, any saw-logs, spars, piles, cordwood, shingle bolts, or other timber, and the owner or owners of any team or any logging engine which shall haul or assist in hauling from any place to another within this State any saw-logs, spars, piles, cordwood, shingle bolts, or other timber and the owner or owners of any logging or other railroad over which saw-logs, spars, piles, cordwood, shingle bolts, or other timber shall be transported and delivered, shall have a lien upon the same for the work or labor done upon, or in obtaining or securing, or for the services rendered in towing, transporting, hauling, or driving, the particular saw-logs, spars, cordwood, shingle bolts, or other timber in said claim or lien described, whether such work, labor, or service was done, rendered, or performed at the instance of the owner of the same or his agent. The cook in a logging-camp shall be regarded as a person who assists in obtaining or securing the timber herein mentioned. Every person performing labor upon, or assisting in manufacturing, saw-logs and other timber into lumber, has a lien upon said lumber while the same remains at the mill where manufactured or in the possession or under control of the manufacturer. The owner of timber land, upon which he permits others to cut saw-logs, spars, piles, or other timber, has a lien thereon for the value thereof. Such liens are preferred liens and prior to all others. The person performing the labor, or permitting the timber to be cut, has a lien for the work performed or for the money due for the period of eight months next preceding his filing of the claim. A person claiming the benefit of such a lien must file a notice of lien for record in the office of the county auditor within thirty days from the time the lien accrued, and commence proceedings to enforce the lien within eight months thereafter. Such liens shall be enforced by civil action in the superior courts of the county wherein the lien was filed. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1162-1172.)

Every person, firm or corporation who shall have performed labor or furnished material in the construction or repair of any chattel at the request of its owner, shall have a lien upon such chattel for such labor performed or material furnished, notwithstanding the fact that such chattel be surrendered to the owner thereof: Provided, however, That no such lien shall continue, after the delivery of such chattel to its owner, as against the rights of third persons who, prior to the filing of the lien notice as hereinafter provided for, may have acquired the title to such chattel in good faith, for value and without actual notice of the lien. Claimant of this lien must file notice of his claim within sixty days from date of delivery of the chattel, and action to foreclose lien must be commenced within nine months after the filing of the lien notice.

Every person performing labor upon, or furnishing materials to be used in the construction, alteration, or repair of any mining claim, building, wharf, steamer, vessel, boat, bridge, ditch, dike, flume, tunnel, wall, fence, machinery, railroad, street-railway, wagon-road, aqueduct, or any other structure, mining claim, or stone quarry, or who performs labor in any mine, mining claim, or stone quarry, has a lien upon the same for the work or labor done or materials furnished. Material-men must give, not later than five days after the date of the first delivery of the material or supplies, notice in writing to the owner or reputed owner of the property on, upon, or about which such material or supplies are to be used, giving name of party ordering. (Laws 1911, p. 376.) Liens rank in following order: 1, Laborer; 2, material-man; 3, sub-contractor; 4, original contractor. Any person who, at the request of the owner of any real property, grades, fills in, or otherwise improves the same, or the street in front of or adjoining the same, has a lien upon such real property for his work done and materials furnished. Person furnishing materials or supplies must deliver or mail to the owner of the property upon or about which said materials or supplies are to be used a duplicate statement of all such materials or supplies delivered to any contractor or person to whom any such materials or supplies have been sold or delivered. The land upon which any building, improvement, or structure is constructed, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the lien and the judgment thereon, is also subject to the lien. Notice of the lien must be filed for record with the auditor of the county within ninety days after the completion of the building, improvement, or structure after the last work performed, or after ceasing to furnish materials. No such lien binds any building, improvement, or structure for a longer period than eight months after the claim has been filed, unless within that time an action be commenced to enforce the lien. In case the action be not prosecuted to judgment within two years the court may dismiss the same, and the dismissal shall constitute a cancellation of the lien. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1141.)

Any railroad company contracting with any person for the construction of its road or any part thereof shall take from such person a good and sufficient bond, conditioned that he shall pay all laborers, mechanics, and material-men, which bond shall be filed in each county in which any part of the work is situated. If the railroad company fails to take such bond it shall be liable to all laborers, etc., to the full extent of all debts contracted by the contractor. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1129-1138.)

In cases of assignments, or of insolvency, the wages of miners, mechanics, salesmen, servants, clerks, or laborers, to the amount of one hundred dollars each, and for services rendered within sixty days previous, are preferred claims. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1204.)

A farm laborer employed in tilling the soil and raising crops has a lien on the crops for the payment of his wages. A landlord has a lien upon the crops grown or growing upon demised premises of any year for the rent accrued or accruing for such year. Liens must be filed, as other liens, within forty days after the close of work, or after the expiration of each year of the lease. The liens of landlords shall only apply when the lease has been recorded. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1188-1190.) A farmer, herder of cattle, or stable-keeper has a lien on all animals intrusted to him for their keep and care, and is authorized to retain possession for a period of ten days, after which, if the lien is not satisfied, the animal may be sold at public auction by the sheriff or constable. Delivery of animal not a waiver of the lien, but lienor must enforce his lien in competent court within ten days after parting with possession. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1197-2000.)

Property may be sold to satisfy a lien for advances, freight, transportation, wharfage, and storage, by the person in whose favor such lien exists, when such property remains uncalled for. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1191.)

The keeper of any hotel shall have a lien on all personal property brought into such hotel belonging to his guests for the proper charges due him for accommodations, money paid, or advanced to them, and shall have the right to retain such property until such charges are paid. If the charges are not paid in ninety days the hotel-keeper may proceed to sell the property. (Laws 1915, ch. 190.)

Limitations. — Actions for the recovery of real property, or the possession thereof, cannot be maintained unless the plaintiff, his ancestor, predecessor, or grantor, has been seized or possessed of the premises within ten years before the commencement of the action. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 156.) Same limitation for collection of local improvement taxes. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 7906.)

The following actions must be commenced within six years after the cause of action accrues: actions upon a judgment or decree of any court of the United States, or of any State or Territory within the United States (no suit, action, or other proceedings shall ever be had on any judgment rendered in the State of Washington by which the lien or duration of such judgment, claim, or demand shall be extended or continued in force for any greater or longer period than six years from the date of the entry of the original judgment — R. & B. C. sec. 460; see also, Kelleher v. Wells, 87 Wash. 323, 151 Pac. 823); upon a contract in writing, or liability express or implied, arising out of a written agreement; for rents and profits, or use and occupation of real estate. No action for the recovery of any real estate sold by an executor or administrator under the laws of this State, or the laws of the Territory of Washington, shall be maintained by any heir or other person claiming under the deceased, unless it is commenced within five years next after the sale, and no action for any estate sold by a guardian shall be maintained by the ward, or by any person claiming under him, unless commenced within five years next after the termination of the guardianship, except that minors and other persons under legal disability to sue at the time when the right of action first accrued may commence such action at any time within three years after the removal of the disability. Within three years: actions for cancellation of tax deeds; actions for waste or trespass upon real property; for taking, detaining, or injuring personal property, including an action for the specific recovery thereof, or for any other injury to the person or rights of another not hereinafter enumerated; actions upon a contract or liability express or implied which is not in writing, and does not arise out of any written instrument; for relief upon the ground of fraud, the limitation commencing from the time of the discovery thereof; against a sheriff, coroner, or constable, upon a liability incurred by doing an act in his official capacity, and by virtue of his office, or by the omission of an official duty, or for the non-payment of money collected upon execution — but this section shall not apply to an action for an escape; upon a statute for penalty or forfeiture where an action is given to the party aggrieved, or to such party and the State, except when the statute imposing it prescribes a different limitation; and for seduction and breach of promise of marriage. Within two years: actions for libel, slander, assault, assault and battery, and false imprisonment, or upon a statute for a forfeiture or penalty to the State. Within one year: an action against a sheriff or other officer for the escape of a prisoner arrested or imprisoned on civil process; an action by an heir, legatee, creditor, or other party interested against an executor or administrator, for alleged misfeasance, or malfeasance or mismanagement of the estate, within one year from the time of final settlement, or the time such alleged misconduct was discovered. Within three months: claim against an estate rejected by the executor or administrator.

Other actions, within two years after the cause of action shall have accrued.

In an action brought to recover a balance due upon a mutual, open, and current account where there have been reciprocal demands, the cause of action shall be deemed to have accrued from the time of the last item of the account proved on either side, but when more than one year shall have intervened between any of a series of items, they are not to be deemed such an account. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 156-166.)

If a person was under a legal disability at the time the cause of action arose, the time of such disability shall not be a part of the time limited for the commencement of the action. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 169.)

If a person dies before the time limited expires and the cause of action survive, an action may be commenced by his representatives after the expiration of the time and within one year from his death. If a person dies before the time limited expires, an action may be brought against his representatives within one year after the issuing of letters testamentary or of administration. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 170.) Absence, concealment of defendant, war, and judicial proceedings suspend the running of the statute. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 168, 171, 172.)

No acknowledgment or promise shall take the case out of the statute of limitations unless the same is in writing, signed by the party charged; this, however, does not change the effect of any payment of principal or interest upon any contract, note, or bill of exchange, bond, or other evidence of indebtedness, after the same becomes due; but makes the limitation commence at the time of such payment. When the cause of action arose in another Territory, State, or country, between non-residents of this State, and by the local law where the cause of action arose an action cannot be maintained thereon by reason of lapse of time, no action shall be maintained in this State. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 176-178.)

Married Women. — A married woman may sue and be sued without joining her husband, when the action concerns her separate property, or her right or claim to the homestead property, or when she is living separate and apart from her husband, or when the action is between herself and her husband. If a husband and wife be sued together, she may defend for her own right, and for his also if he neglects to do so. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 180-182.)

All property, both real and personal, owned by the wife before marriage, and that acquired afterwards by gift, devise, or descent, is her separate property. Property thus acquired by the husband constitutes his separate property. All property acquired during marriage, except by gift, devise, or descent, constitutes their community property. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 5915-5917.)

A wife may receive the wages of her personal labor and maintain an action in her own name therefor, and may prosecute and defend all actions for the preservation and protection of her property rights, as if unmarried. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 5920.) Contracts may be made by a wife, and liabilities incurred, to the same extent as if unmarried. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 5927.)

The husband has the management and control of the community property, and may dispose of the personal property, but he cannot sell or encumber the real estate unless the wife joins in executing the conveyance or incumbrance. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 5917, 5918.)

Any person, married or single, having the legal title of record to any real estate, can convey the same to an actual bona fide and innocent purchaser. Such conveyance carries the full legal and equitable title, free and clear of all claims which do not appear of record. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8771.)

A husband or wife can protect whatever interest either may have in any real estate, by virtue of the marriage relation, by causing a notice to be recorded in the auditor's office setting forth whatever interest the party may have. Such an instrument shall be regarded as sufficient notice to all the world. The instrument, in order to bind subsequent purchasers, must be filed within ninety days from the date when the legal title becomes a matter of record, otherwise a bona fide purchaser takes such real estate free and clear of all claims. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8772.)

All laws which impose or recognize civil disabilities upon a wife which are not imposed or recognized as existing as to the husband are abolished; provided that this shall not confer the right to vote or hold office upon the wife, except as is otherwise provided by law; and for any unjust usurpation of her natural or property rights she shall have the same right to appeal, in her own individual name, to the courts of law or equity for redress and protection, that her husband has. Henceforth the rights and the responsibilities of the parents, in the absence of misconduct, shall be equal, and the mother shall be as fully entitled to the custody, control, and earnings of the children as the father, and in case of the father's death the mother shall come into as full and complete control of the children and their estate as the father does in case of the mother's death. Females shall be deemed and taken to be of full age at the age of eighteen years and upwards. All females married to persons of full age shall be deemed and taken to be of full age. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 5926, 5932, 8743, 8744.)

A husband may give, grant, sell, or convey directly to his wife, and a wife may give, grant, sell, or convey directly to her husband, his or her community right, title, interest, or estate in all or any portion of their community real property. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8766.)

A husband and wife may make and execute powers of attorney for the sale, conveyance, transfer, or incumbrance of his or her separate estate, both real and personal, and of his or her community interest, without the other spouse joining in the execution thereof. The husband or wife may appoint the other his or her attorney in fact. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8767.)

Any conveyance, transfer, deed, lease, or other incumbrance, executed under and by virtue of such power of attorney, shall be executed, acknowledged, and certified in the same manner as if the person making such power of attorney had been unmarried. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8768.)

Mechanics' Liens. — See Liens.

Mortgages. — Mortgages are executed and acknowledged in the same manner as deeds. They are not accompanied by bonds, but are generally made to secure promissory notes. The mortgage of real property is not deemed a conveyance so as to enable the mortgagee to recover possession without foreclosure and sale. Upon default in the performance of any condition, or upon failure of the mortgagor to pay any installment of the principal or interest, the mortgage may be foreclosed. When there is no express agreement in the mortgage nor any separate instrument given for the payment of the money, the remedy of the mortgagee is confined to the property mortgaged. The mortgagee cannot proceed to foreclose his mortgage while he is prosecuting any other action for the same debt or matter which is secured by the mortgage, or while he is seeking to obtain an execution of any judgment in such other action, nor shall he prosecute any action for the same matter while he is foreclosing his mortgage or prosecuting a judgment of foreclosure. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1117, 1125.) Payment of any interest or installment of the principal, together with the accrued costs, before a decree of sale is made, suspends further proceedings until a default again occurs. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1126.) Only so much of the property shall be sold as will be sufficient to pay the amount due on the mortgage with costs, provided the property can be sold in parcels. After the satisfaction of the amount due on the mortgage and costs, the surplus shall be paid to the mortgagor. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1127, 1128.) Mortgages may be assigned, and after assignment has been recorded may be satisfied of record by the assignee. Mortgages are exempt from taxation. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 9093.) A mortgage may be satisfied either by executing and recording a properly acknowledged satisfaction of mortgage describing and referring to said mortgage, by volume and page of record, or by acknowledgment of satisfaction written upon the margin of the page where the mortgage is recorded. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8798.) See Chattel Mortgages.

Notaries Public. — Notaries public are appointed by the governor upon petition supported by signatures of at least twenty freeholders of the county in which petitioner resides. Term of office is four years. The person appointed must execute a bond to the State in the sum of one thousand dollars, pay to the state treasury ten dollars, procure a seal on which shall be engraved the words "Notary Public" and "State of Washington" and date of expiration of commission, with surname in full and at least the initials of christian name, subscribe oath and file bond with impression of seal, which seal shall be approved by governor. It is not necessary for a notary public in certifying an oath to be used in any of the courts in the State to append an impression of his official seal, but in all other cases when a notary public shall sign any instrument officially he shall, in addition to his name and the words "Notary Public," add his place of residence and affix his official seal. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 8295-8297, 8299.)

Every duly qualified notary public is authorized to perform the duties of his office "in any county in this State." (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8298.) Women over the age of twenty-one years resident within this State and of good moral character may be appointed notaries public. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8295.)

Notes and Bills. — A general law governing negotiable instruments in all their relations and substantially uniform with the Negotiable Instruments Law of the States of Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, Wisconsin, and the District of Columbia, was adopted in 1899. A warehouse receipt made "to bearer" or "to order" is by statute declared to be a negotiable instrument. Days of grace are abolished. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 3392-3586.)

Practice. — The civil practice is regulated by Remington and Ballinger's Annotated Codes and Statutes of Washington. See Revised Statutes.

Proof of Claims. — Persons transmitting claims to this State for collection should furnish their attorney with the full name and residence of the creditor, or, if the claim be held by a partnership, of the full name and residence of each member of the firm. They should also forward a small sum of money to defray the costs or fees of the officers as they accrue. All accounts should be made out in detail, and the name and residence of witnesses by whom the claim can be established should be furnished.

The testimony of non-resident witnesses must be taken by deposition, upon a commission issued by the court where the action is pending.

Records. — All deeds, mortgages, and assignments of mortgages shall be recorded in the office of the county auditor of the county where the land is situated, and shall be valid as against bona fide purchasers from the date of their filing for record in said office, and when so filed shall be notice to all the world. (2 R. & B. C. sec. 8781.)

Redemption. — Real estate sold under judgment or foreclosure of mortgage may be redeemed by the judgment debtor, or his successor in interest, or a creditor having a lien by judgment decree or mortgage, within one year after sale, by repayment of the purchase-money, together with interest at eight per cent. per year thereon and any taxes and assessments paid. If the property be redeemed by the judgment debtor, his successor, or a creditor having a lien by judgment, decree, or mortgage, on the property, namely by a "redemptioneer," any other "redemptioneer" may re-redeem, within sixty days after the last redemption, by payment of redemption price last paid, with eight per cent. interest and taxes. During period of redemption the purchaser, or those claiming by, through, or under him, shall be entitled to the possession and to the rents, issues, and profits of such real estate or property, except that a mortgagor may remain in possession of the mortgaged premises after sale, when the mortgage so provides; except also that when the land sold is used for farming purposes or is part of a farm, at the time of the sale, the judgment debtor is entitled to retain possession during the period of redemption, and except also that in case of a homestead occupied for that purpose at the time of the sale, the judgment debtor has the right to retain possession without accounting for issues or value of the occupation. In the case of land used for farming purposes, if the judgment debtor does not redeem, the purchaser has a lien upon the crops harvested during the period of possession by the judgment debtor.

right, and it shall be his duty, upon demand and payment of the taxes and interest, to make out and issue a certificate or certificates of delinquency against such property. Any time after the expiration of three years from the original date of delinquency of any tax included in a certificate of delinquency, the holder of any certificate of delinquency may give notice to the owner of the property described in such certificate that he will apply to the superior court of the county in which such property is situated for a judgment foreclosing the lien against the property mentioned. After the expiration of five years from the date of delinquency, when any property remains on the tax rolls for which no certificate of delinquency has been issued, the county treasurer shall proceed to issue certificates of delinquency on said property to the county, and shall file said certificates when completed with the clerk of the court, and the treasurer shall thereupon, with the assistance of the county prosecuting attorney, proceed to foreclose in the name of the county. Real property upon which certificates of delinquency have been issued may be redeemed at any time before the issuance of tax deed. (2 R. & B. C. secs. 9091-9103, 9212, 9219, 9223, 9230, 9235, 9252, 9254, 9257-9259; Laws 1911, pp. 90, 91; Laws 1917, ch. 142.)

Testimony. — All persons are competent as witnesses, except persons of unsound mind, or who are intoxicated at the time of their production, and children of tender years, who seem incapable of receiving correct impressions of facts or relating them truly. A husband shall not testify for or against his wife, nor a wife for or against her husband, nor during marriage or afterwards as to any communication made during marriage, without the other's consent. This does not apply in suits by one against the other, nor in prosecution of the husband for desertion or non-support of his family, nor to a criminal action or proceeding committed by one against the other; and in all actions, civil or criminal, involving the chastity of the wife, in which the husband is a competent witness, the wife is also competent. An attorney shall not, without the consent of his client, be examined as to communications by the client in course of professional employment, nor a priest or clergyman in regard to confessions in the course of church discipline without consent, nor a physician or surgeon in a civil action as to information acquired in attending his patient, without consent. Testimony as to transactions with a decedent is inadmissible in action by or against his executor or administrator. Any person having committed bribery, grafting, or corrupt solicitation is a competent witness against any other charged with the same offense, but the testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding, civil or criminal, against the person so testifying, and a person so testifying shall not thereafter be liable to indictment, prosecution, or punishment for such offense. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1210-1214, 2149; 2 R. & B. C. sec. 5935.)

Trust Deeds — Are not in practical use as a mode of securing debts. There is no legislation upon the subject of trust deeds.

Wills. — Every male person above the age of twenty-one years, and every female above the age of eighteen years, of sound mind, may by last will devise his or her real and personal estate. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1319.)

Wills executed out of the State are valid, if executed in the mode prescribed by the law of the place where executed or of the testator's domicile. (Laws 1911, p. 9.)

Every will shall be in writing, signed by the testator, or by some person under his direction, and shall be attested by two or more competent witnesses, subscribing their names in the presence of the testator. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1320.)

The amount a person can leave to charity is not limited, but a husband cannot will away more than one half of the community property. Children can be disinherited provided they be named in the will. This is generally done by bequeathing them the sum of one dollar.

A nuncupative will, when the estate bequeathed exceeds two hundred dollars in value, must be proved by two witnesses who were present at the making thereof, and the testator must have at the time bid some person present to bear witness that such was his will, and such nuncupative will must have been made at the time of his last sickness, and at his dwelling-house, or where he had been residing ten days or more, except where such person was taken sick from home and died before his return. This statute does not prevent sailors or soldiers from disposing of their personal property by nuncupative will. Proof of any nuncupative will must be offered within six months after the speaking of the testamentary words, which must have been committed to writing. (1 R. & B. C. secs. 1330, 1331.)

A married woman, otherwise qualified, may act as administratrix of the estate of any deceased person, or as executrix of the last will of a deceased person. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1378.)

In all cases where it is provided in the last will and testament of the deceased that the estate shall be settled in a manner provided in such last will and testament, and that letters testamentary or of administration shall not be required, and where it also duly appears to the court, by the inventory filed, and other proof, that the estate is fully solvent, which fact may be established by an order of the court on the coming in of the inventory, it shall not be necessary to take out letters testamentary or of administration, except to admit to probate such will and to file a true inventory of all the property of such estate in the manner required by existing laws. And after the probate of such will and the filing of such inventory, all such estates may be managed and settled without the intervention of the court, if the said last will and testament shall so provide. (1 R. & B. C. sec. 1444.)

WEST VIRGINIA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Erskine, Palmer & Curl, of Wheeling.

The next legislature convenes January 8, 1919.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions — At law and in chancery are commenced by the issue of a summons to the defendant, returnable within ninety days after its date to the court on the first day of a term, or in the clerk's office to the first Monday in a month, or to some rule-day. Rules are held by the clerk at his office, monthly, at which the parties file their pleadings at law and in equity, take orders for publication, the appointment of guardians ad litem, and rules upon the opposite party to plead. Judgments and decrees are rendered by confession, and conditional judgments are taken upon a second default, for the amount due, if the action is debt upon bill, note, bond, or other writing for the payment of money, or debt, or scire facias on a judgment or recognisance, which become final (if the plaintiff files his affidavit that the amount is justly due), unless the defendant appears and has the judgment against him set aside by the last day of the succeeding term. In other civil actions an order for an inquiry of damages in court is ordered at the rules, and in chancery cases a decree is ordered pro confesso.

In any action on contract the plaintiff may file with his declaration an affidavit stating that there is, as he verily believes, due and unpaid from the defendant to him upon the demand or demands stated in the declaration, including principal and interest, after deducting all payments, credits, and set-offs made by defendant to which he is entitled, a sum certain, to be named in the affidavit. When such affidavit has been filed by plaintiff, no plea can be filed by the defendant, unless accompanied by his affidavit that there is not, as he verily believes, any sum due from him to the plaintiff upon the demand or demands stated in the plaintiff's declaration, or stating a sum certain, less than that stated in the affidavit of the plaintiff, which, as he verily believes, is all that is due from him to the plaintiff upon the demand or demands aforesaid. If the defendant fails to file such affidavit and the case is one arising out of contract, judgment shall be given by the court for the plaintiff for the sum stated in his affidavit, with interest from the date of the affidavit till paid, unless the case is one in which an order for inquiry of damages has been entered: and if the case is one in which such order has been entered, such order shall be executed in court, and the affidavit of the plaintiff hereinbefore mentioned shall be legal evidence on such inquiry. If the defendant's affidavit admits part of the plaintiff's demand, judgment may be entered for the part admitted and the case tried as to the residue. If the plaintiff fails to file his affidavit, and the office judgment be not set aside, judgment shall not be entered by the court until the plaintiff files such affidavit or proves his case in open court. (Code, ch. 125, § 46.)

In civil actions on contract before a justice of the peace the practice is now similar (Acts 1915, reg. sess., ch. 79), and in chancery causes, other than suits to enforce judgment liens on real estate, where there is a reference to a commissioner, and in proceedings before commissioners of accounts of the county court, proof of the demand, if it be for money due on contract and uncontested, may now be made by similar affidavit. (Acts 1915, reg. sess., ch. 74.)

The court has supervision over the judgments, orders, and decrees made at rules by the clerk.

The assignee of any bond, note, account, or writing not negotiable may maintain thereupon an action in his own name; but shall allow all just discounts, not only against himself, but against the assignor, before the defendant had notice of the assignment. In such action he may unite claims payable to him individually with those payable to him as such assignee. (Code, ch. 99, § 14.)

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits. — In any case in which an affidavit of a person residing in another State may be used in this State, it should be made before a commissioner appointed by the governor, or before any officer of another State or country authorized by its laws to administer an oath, and it shall be deemed duly authenticated if it be subscribed by such officer, with his official seal annexed, and if he have none, the genuineness of his signature, and his authority to administer an oath, shall be authenticated by some officer of the same State or country under his official seal. (Code, ch. 130, § 31; Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 48.)

Aliens. — There is no distinction between citizens and aliens (not enemies) in reference to purchase, enjoyment, conveyance, devise, or descent of property. (Code, ch. 70, §§ 1, 2.)

Appeals. — A party to a controversy in any circuit court may obtain an appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas to the supreme court of appeals from a judgment, decree, or order therein, in the following cases, among others: 1st. In civil cases, where the matter in controversy, exclusive of costs, is of greater value or amount than one hundred dollars, wherein there is a final judgment, decree, or order. 2d. In controversies concerning the title or boundaries of land, the probate of a will, or the appointment of a personal representative, guardian, committee, or curator. 3d. Concerning a mill, road, way, ferry, or landing. 4th. Concerning the right of a corporation, county, or district to levy tolls or taxes. 5th. In any case of quo warranto, habeas corpus, mandamus, or prohibition. 6th. In any case involving freedom, or the constitutionality of a law. 7th. In any case in chancery wherein there is a decree or order dissolving or refusing to dissolve an injunction, or requiring money to be paid, or real estate to be sold, or the possession or title of property to be changed, or adjudicating the principles of the cause. 8th. In any case where there is a judgment or order quashing or abating, or refusing to quash or abate, an attachment. 9th. In any civil case wherein there is an order granting a new trial, or rehearing; and in such cases an appeal may be taken from the order without waiting for the new trial or rehearing to be had. 10th. In any criminal case where there has been a conviction in a circuit court, or a conviction in an inferior court which has been affirmed in a circuit court.

Any question arising upon the sufficiency of a summons or return of service, or challenge of the sufficiency of a pleading, in any case within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court of appeals, may, in the discretion of the court in which it arises, and shall, on the joint application of the parties to the suit, in beneficial interest, be certified by it to the supreme court of appeals for its decision, and further proceedings in the case stayed until such question shall have been decided and the decision thereof certified back. (Code, ch. 135, § 1 as amended by Acts 1915, reg. sess., ch. 69.)

Any person who is a party to the controversy, wishing to obtain a writ of error, appeal, or supersedeas, must file, in the clerk's office of the lower court, a petition, and a copy thereof, assigning errors, with a certificate of an attorney qualified to practice in the appellate court that in his opinion the decision complained of ought to be reviewed; and the clerk will transmit to the clerk of the supreme court of appeals, or, if the court be not in session, to such judge thereof as the petitioner shall designate, the original of said petition, together with so much of the record (original papers) of the case as will enable the court or judge to whom the petition is to be presented, properly to decide on such petition, and, if the petition be granted, to enable the court properly to decide the questions that may arise before it. If the petition be granted, the original record is returned to the lower court and a transcript thereof made and returned to the supreme court of appeals for further proceedings in the case. The court or judge to whom such petition is duly presented, if of opinion that the decision complained of ought to be reviewed, may allow an appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas, and may stay proceedings in whole or in part, bond being required in certain cases. (Code, ch. 135, §§ 2, 3, 5, 8, 12, 14, as amended by Acts 1915, reg. sess., ch. 69.) Such petition must be received by the supreme court of appeals, or by a judge thereof in vacation, within one year from the date of the decision complained of, and, if the appeal or writ of error be allowed, the transcript of the record must be filed within one year and two months of the date of the decision complained of. (Code, ch. 135, §§ 3, 5, 17; Snuffer v. Spangler, W. Va. 1917, 92 S. E. 106.)

In criminal matters the State may petition, within thirty days, for, and be granted, a writ of error to review a decision holding an indictment bad or insufficient. (Acts 1915, reg. sess., ch. 69, § 31.)

An appeal lies to the circuit court of a county from the final order of the county court in the following cases: 1st. In cases of contested elections tried and determined by the county court. 2d. In cases of contempt. 3d. The establishment and regulation of a road, way, bridge, public landing, ferry, or mill. 4th. The probate of a will. 5th. The appointment and qualification of a personal representative, guardian, curator, or committee, and the settlement of their accounts. When an appeal is taken from the order of a county court for the probate of a will, the same shall be reviewed and the same proceedings had thereon as if the application for such probate had been to the circuit court in the first instance. (Code, ch. 39, § 47.)

Appeals lie from the judgment of a justice to the circuit court, when the amount in controversy on the trial before the justice exceeds fifteen dollars, exclusive of interest and costs or the case involves the freedom of a person, the validity of a law or of an ordinance of any corporation, or the right of a corporation to levy tolls or taxes. The appeal cannot be granted by the justice unless, within ten days after the judgment is rendered or revived, bond, with good security, to be approved by the justice, in a penalty double the amount of the judgment, is filed with him, with condition to the effect that the person proposing to appeal will perform and satisfy any judgment which may be rendered against him by the circuit court on such appeal, or, if he does not wish to stay the execution on such judgment, with condition to pay the costs on such appeal if the judgment appealed from be affirmed. (Code, ch. 50, §§ 163, 164.)

Appeals from the judgments of justices may be granted after the expiration of ten days and within ninety days after the date of the judgment, by the circuit court or the judge thereof in vacation, the applicant delivering a proper bond and showing good cause for his not having taken such appeal within the said ten days. (Code, ch. 50, § 174.) On the trial of an appeal from a justice all lawful evidence shall be heard, whether produced before the justice or not, and the cause determined without reference to the judgment of the justice, on the principles of law and equity. (Code, ch. 50, § 169.)

Arrest. — There is no imprisonment for debt in this State. An order for the arrest and holding to bail of the defendant may be made by the court in which the action is pending, or by the judge or clerk thereof in vacation, upon affidavit of the plaintiff or any credible person showing to the satisfaction of the court, judge, or clerk the nature and justice of the claim, the amount which the affiant believes the plaintiff is entitled to recover in the action, and the existence of some one or more of the following grounds for the arrest of the defendant: that the defendant has removed, or is about to remove, any of his property out of the State, with intent to defraud his creditors; that he has converted, or is about to convert, his property, or any part thereof, into money or securities with like intent; that he has assigned, disposed of, or removed his property, or any part thereof, or is about to do so, with like intent; that he has property or rights in action which he fraudulently conceals; that he fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the liability for which the action or suit is brought; that he is about to leave this State and reside permanently in another State or country, without paying the debt or liability for which the action or suit is brought. But the plaintiff, or some person for him, must first file a bond, with one or more sufficient securities, to the effect that the plaintiff will pay the defendant all damages he may sustain by reason of the arrest, should it thereafter appear that the order was wrongfully obtained. The defendant may be discharged upon giving bond and security that he will be in the county and answer such interrogatories as may be filed within four months after judgment, decree, or order, and make the required conveyance or delivery, or perform and satisfy such judgment, decree, or order. (Code, ch. 106, §§ 30, 31, 33, 34.)

In a civil action before a justice an order of arrest may be made upon the plaintiff filing an affidavit showing the nature of the plaintiff's claim, that it is just, the amount thereof as near as may be, and the existence of one or more of the following particulars: 1st. That the defendant has removed or is about to remove his property, or a material part thereof, out of the State, with intent to defraud his creditors; or, 2d. That he has converted or is about to convert his property, or a material part thereof, into money or securities with the like intent; or, 3d. That he has assigned, disposed of, or removed, his property, or a material part thereof, or is about to do so, with like intent; or 4th. That he has property or rights in action which he fraudulently conceals; or, 5th. That he fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the liability for which the action is to be or has been brought; or, 6th. That the defendant, being a resident of this State, is about to depart therefrom and reside out of the State, without having paid the plaintiff's demand. But the plaintiff must give bond satisfactory to the justice in a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars. (Code, ch. 50, § 40.)

Assignments. — Except as affected by the National Bankruptcy Act of 1898, the following is the law of this State respecting assignments for the benefit of creditors.

Assignments for the benefit of creditors are made by deed, acknowledged as other deeds, and filed in the office of the clerk of the county court of the county wherein the property assigned is situated. If real estate is included in the assignment the wife of the assignor must sign, seal, and acknowledge the deed of assignment to bar her dower. A person appointed by an insolvent debtor as trustee in an assignment of all his property for the benefit of all his creditors shall not have the power of such trustee until he qualifies as such by taking an oath, and giving a bond in a penalty double the amount of the ascertained estate, with sufficient surety. Upon the qualification of such trustee, there shall be appraisers appointed to appraise the estate of the insolvent debtor. All such trustees shall appear before some one of the commissioners of accounts of the county court before which he qualifies as such trustee and lay before such commissioner a report of his receipts and disbursements, and his vouchers for the same. (Code, ch. 72, § 6a.) The trustee's commissions are generally five per cent. on amount of money received under the trust. The deed of assignment usually states the percentage of commissions, and five per cent. is ordinarily directed to be allowed:

The assignee is any person chosen by the debtor, who has such assignee's name inserted in the deed of assignment.

Every transfer or charge which is not upon consideration deemed valuable in law shall be void as to creditors whose debts shall have been contracted at the time it was made; but shall not upon that account merely be void as to creditors whose debts shall have been contracted, or as to purchasers who shall have purchased after it was made; and though it be decreed to be void as to a prior creditor, because voluntary, it shall not for that cause be decreed to be void as to subsequent creditors or purchasers. The word "transfer" shall be taken to include every gift, sale, conveyance, and assignment, and the word "charge" shall be taken to include every confessed judgment, deed of trust, mortgage, lien, and incumbrance. Every transfer or charge made by an insolvent debtor attempting to prefer any creditor of such insolvent debtor or to secure such a creditor or any surety or indorser for a debt to the exclusion or prejudice of any other creditor, shall be void as to such preference or security, but shall be taken to be for the benefit of all creditors of such debtor, and all the property so attempted to be transferred or charged shall be applied and paid pro rata upon all the debts owed by such debtor at the time such transfer or charge is made; provided, that any such transfer or charge by an insolvent debtor shall be valid as to such preference or priority unless a creditor of such insolvent debtor shall institute a suit in chancery within one year after such transfer or charge was made to set aside and avoid the same and cause the property so transferred or charged to be applied toward the payment pro rata of all the debts of such insolvent debtor existing at the time such transfer or charge is made, subject, however, to the provision hereinafter contained with reference to creditors uniting in such suit and contributing to the expenses thereof. But if such transfer or charge be admitted to record within eight months after it is made, then such suit to be availing must be brought within four months after such transfer or charge was admitted to record. Every such suit shall be deemed to be brought in behalf of the plaintiff and all other creditors of such insolvent debtor, but the creditor instituting such suit or proceeding, together with all creditors of such insolvent debtor who shall come into the suit and unite with the plaintiff before final decree and agree to contribute to the costs and expenses of said suit, shall be entitled to have their claims first paid in full pro rata out of the property so transferred or charged in preference to any creditor of such debtor who shall before final decree decline or fail to so unite and agree to contribute to the costs and expenses of said suit, but not in preference to such creditor as may attempt to sustain the preference given him by such transfer or charge; provided, further, that nothing herein above shall be taken to prevent the making of a preference as security for the payment of purchase-money or a bona fide loan of money or other bona fide debt contracted at the time such transfer or charge was made or as security for one who at the time of such transfer or charge becomes an indorser or surety for the payment of money then borrowed; provided, further, that nothing above stated shall be taken to affect any transfer of bonds, notes, stocks, securities, or other evidences of debt in payment of or as collateral security for the payment of a bona fide debt or to secure any indorser or surety, whether such transfer is made at the time such debt is contracted or indorsement made or for the payment or security of a preëxisting debt. (Code, ch. 74, § 2.)

No notice is required by law to be given to prove claims. It is customary to file a sworn claim with the trustee under an assignment for the benefit of creditors.

If the assignee should reject a claim, a suit in chancery against him for the proper dividend would be the remedy. No exemption is made from the assigned property, but generally the legal exemption, as elsewhere herein stated, is expressly reserved in the deed.

The assignee has a reasonable time — no specific time — to declare dividends and close the estate. If a creditor is dissatisfied he must sue in chancery the trustee for breach of his trust, and to expedite the execution thereof. The assignment does not generally give the debtor a final discharge. The dividend is applied on his indebtedness, leaving the residue thereof as a claim against him. The debtor is not required to submit to examination, and there is no special punishment for fraud in an assignment. If crime is committed in perpetrating the fraud, it is punishable according to the grade of crime. A general assignment for the benefit of creditors will not affect a levy made under a valid attachment prior to such assignment.

Attachment. — The plaintiff may have an order of attachment against the property of the defendant on filing with the clerk of the court an affidavit stating the nature of his claim, the amount at the least which the affiant believes the plaintiff is justly entitled to recover in the action, and also that the affiant believes that some one or more of the following grounds exist for such attachment: that the defendant, or one of the defendants, is a foreign corporation, or is a non-resident of this State; has left or is about to leave this State, with intent to defraud his creditors; so conceals himself that a summons cannot be served upon him; is removing or is about to remove his property, or the proceeds of the sale of his property, or a material part of such property, or proceeds, out of the State, so that process of execution on a judgment or decree in such action or suit, when it is obtained, will be unavailing; is converting, or is about to convert, his property, or a material part thereof, into money or securities, with intent to defraud his creditors; has assigned or disposed of his property, or a material part thereof, or is about to do so, with intent to defraud his creditors; has property or rights in action which he conceals; has fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the liability for which the action or suit is about to be or is brought. Unless the attachment is sued out upon the ground that the defendant is a non-resident or foreign corporation, the affiant must state in his affidavit the material facts relied on by him to show the existence of the grounds upon which the application for the attachment is based. Upon an objection to the sufficiency of such facts, the affiant shall have the right, within such time, not exceeding ten days, as may be prescribed by the court in which the action or suit is pending, to file a supplemental affidavit, stating any other facts which may have come to his knowledge since the filing of the original affidavit, and which are relied upon to show the existence of such grounds. Such supplemental affidavit shall be taken as part of the original. (Code, ch. 106, § 1.) The affidavit may be made by the plaintiff, or any credible person whatever. Upon plaintiff's giving bond and security the sheriff is required to take the attached property into his possession. The bond must be in a penalty of at least double the amount of the claim sworn to or sued for, with condition to pay all costs and damages which may be awarded against the plaintiff, or sustained by any person, by reason of the suing out of the attachment, and to pay to any claimant of any property seized or sold under or by virtue of said attachment all damages which he may recover in consequence of such seizure or sale, and also to warrant and defend to any purchaser of the property such estate or interest therein as is sold. The only provision of law as to the security in such bond is that the security shall be good and approved by the clerk issuing the attachment. (Code, ch. 106, § 6.)

An attachment may be sued out in a court of equity for a debt or claim, legal or equitable, whether due or not, upon any of the grounds aforesaid, but the affidavit in case the debt or claim be not due must show when it will become due: Provided that an attachment shall not be sued out against a foreign corporation for a debt not due upon the ground alone that it is a foreign corporation, nor against a non-resident defendant for a debt not due unless the affiant shows by his affidavit that such defendant was a resident of this State when the debt was contracted, and that the plaintiff believed he would remain a resident of this State at the time he gave him credit. (Code, ch. 106, § 1.)

A non-resident of the State can obtain an attachment against the property of another non-resident on the ground of the latter's non-residence, even though both parties reside in the same State. See Garnishee Process.

In an action before a justice an attachment can be issued on the plaintiff's giving bond in double the amount of the claim and filing an affidavit showing the nature of the claim, that it is just, the amount thereof as near as may be, that the defendant has committed or is about to commit fraud in one or more of the particulars mentioned in relation to orders of arrest made by justices, or has absconded, left his residence, or concealed himself with intent to hinder or defraud any creditor, or avoid service or process, or that the defendant or any of the defendants is a foreign corporation or a non-resident of the State.

Attaching creditors do not share pro rata, unless the attachments are all levied or served at the same time, but they are entitled to satisfaction in the order of the levies or services of their attachments. When two or more attachments are delivered to the same officer at different times, to be served, he shall serve them in the order in which he receives them; and when they are received at the same time, they shall be served at the same time, and be satisfied pro rata.

The attaching creditor and securities upon the bond given at the issuance of the attachment are liable to the damages, etc., stated in the condition of the bond to the extent of the penal sum therein named. The attaching creditor himself, however, is liable for the damages occasioned to defendant by an attachment sued out without sufficient cause, or improperly, although in excess of such penal sum, and the amount thereof may be assessed by a jury, there being no arbitrary amount of such damages fixed by statute. As to attaching wages, see Exemptions.

Chattel Mortgages. — See Mortgages; Deeds of Trust, etc.

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims; Actions.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — Administration is granted to the distributees of the estate who apply therefor, preferring first the husband or wife, and then such of the others entitled to distribution as the court shall see fit. If no distributee apply for administration within thirty days from the death of the intestate, the court may grant administration to one or more of his creditors, or to any other person.

Before any grant of administration, the person to whom it is granted shall, before the court granting it, give bond, with approved sureties or surety, in a penalty equal, at least, to the full value of the personal estate of the deceased to be administered; and where there is a will which authorizes the executor or administrator to sell real estate, or receive the rents and profits thereof, the bond shall be in a penalty equal at least to the full value both of the personal estate and of such real estate. (Code, ch. 85, §§ 4, 5, 6.)

There is no statute prescribing that any notice shall be given by the executor or administrator of an estate to creditors to prove, or in regard to proving claims, but the practice has been for the executor or administrator to make newspaper publication of his appointment, and notify therein creditors to present their claims to, and all debtors of the estate to make payment to, the executor or administrator.

No allowance as such is allowed out of the estate to the widow, but whether the estate is insolvent or not, she may set apart and hold personal property to the value of not exceeding two hundred dollars, to be exempt from execution or other process, except for taxes, or for purchase-money for the property claimed to be exempted. See Exemptions.

Every executor and administrator must, within six months after the termination of the first year from the date of the order conferring his authority, and within six months after the termination of each succeeding year after said first year render an account of his administration to one of the four commissioners of accounts appointed by the county court of the county wherein the said order was made. But such account need not be so rendered for any year if such fiduciary shall have given to the parties entitled to the money received in such year a statement of the said money and actually settled therefor with them, nor if such fiduciary shall have laid a statement of his receipts within such year before a commissioner of the circuit court who may in a pending suit have been ordered to settle his account.

There is no form or mode prescribed for proving claims against estates (see Actions, however), and there is no distinction in this respect between residents and non-residents. No person not a resident of this State shall be appointed or act as personal representative unless the decedent be a non-resident of the State at the time of his death and names in his will a non-resident as his executor. (Code, ch. 85, § 4.) Suits may be brought against the personal representative, but he is not chargeable beyond the assets of the decedent.

Where the assets, after the payment of funeral expenses and charges of administration, are not sufficient for the satisfaction of all demands, they are to be applied: 1st. To debts due the United States. 2d. To taxes and levies assessed upon the decedent previous to his death. 3d. To debts due as a fiduciary. 4th. All other demands ratably, except mere voluntary obligations. 5th. Voluntary obligations. (Code, ch. 85, § 25.)

A personal representative who, after twelve months from his qualification pays a debt of his decedent, shall not thereby be personally liable for any debt or demand of equal or superior dignity, whether of record or not, unless before such payment he shall have notice thereof.

The real estate of the decedent is made assets, and where the personal estate is insufficient, the executor or administrator may bring a suit in equity to subject the real estate to the payment of debts, and if he does not do so within six months from the time of his qualification, any creditor may file such bill, on behalf of himself and the other creditors, whether he has obtained a judgment at law for his claim or not. (Code, ch. 86, § 7.)

Conditional Sales. — The Code, ch. 74, § 3, provides: If any sale be made of goods and chattels, reserving the title until the same is (sic) paid for, or otherwise, and possession be delivered to the buyer, such reservation shall be void as to creditors of, and purchasers without notice from, such buyer, unless a notice of such reservation be recorded in the office of the clerk of the county court of the county where the property is, or in case said goods and chattels consist of engines, cars, or other rolling stock or equipment to be used in or about the operation of any railroad, unless such notice be recorded in the office of the secretary of state, who in such case shall record the same in a book to be kept for the purpose, and be entitled to a fee of five dollars for so doing.

Consignments. — No special statute has been enacted as to consignments, but if any agent embezzle or fraudulently convert to his own use any bullion, money, bank notes, or other security for money, or any effects or property of another person which shall have come to his possession, or been placed under his care and management, by virtue of his place or employment, he shall be guilty of larceny thereof. (Code, ch. 145, § 19.)

Simple larceny of goods or chattels of the value of twenty dollars or more is grand larceny, punishable by term in penitentiary of two to ten years. If the goods or chattels are of less value it is petit larceny, and punished by confinement in jail for not more than one year. (Code, ch. 145, § 14.)

If any person shall transact business as a trader, with the addition of the words "factor," "agent," and "company," or "and co.," and fail to disclose the name of his principal or partner by a sign in letters, easy to be read, placed conspicuously at the house wherein such business is transacted, and also by a notice published for two weeks in a newspaper (if any) printed in the town or county wherein the same is transacted, or if any person transact such business in his own name, without any such addition, all the property, stock, choses in action, acquired or used in such business, shall, as to the creditors of any such person, be liable for the debts of such person. This section shall not apply to a person transacting such business under a license to him as an auctioneer or commission merchant. (Code, ch. 100, § 13.)

Any person or persons carrying on or conducting or transacting any mercantile business under any assumed name, or under any designation, name, or style, corporate or otherwise, other than the real name or names of the individual or individuals owning, conducting, or transacting such business, must, under penalty of law, file in the office of the clerk of the county court of the county or counties in which such person or persons own, conduct, or transact, or intend to own, conduct, or transact, such business, or maintain an office or place of business, a certificate, executed and duly acknowledged by the person or persons so owning, conducting, or intending to conduct said business, setting forth the name under which such business owned is, or is to be, conducted or transacted, and the true or real full name or names of the person or persons owning, conducting, or transacting the same, with the home and post-office address or addresses of said person or persons; provided, that the selling of goods by sample or through traveling agents or traveling salesmen or by means of orders forwarded by the purchaser through the mails, shall not be construed as conducting or transacting business so as to require the filing of said certificates. (Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 53.)

Corporations. — No church or religious denomination, or company whose object is to purchase land and resell the same for profit, can be incorporated; but corporations may be formed for any purpose or business useful to the public for which a firm or copartnership may lawfully be formed in the State. There must be at least five incorporators, who must pay in at least ten per cent. of the capital stock agreed on, and sign and acknowledge an agreement in form prescribed by law, filing it with the secretary of state along with the affidavits of two incorporators that the ten per cent. was duly paid in, etc. Foreign corporations may be authorized to hold property and do business in the State by certificate of the secretary of state that they have filed with him a copy of their articles of association, which certificate, with a copy of the charter, must be filed with and the certificate recorded by the clerk of the county court of some county in which their business is conducted. Railroad companies are incorporated by certificate of the secretary of state. Any joint stock company incorporated in West Virginia, under the laws thereof, can have its principal office and chief works either within or outside of the State. A domestic corporation is one (a) incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or (b) under the laws of the State of Virginia before the existence of West Virginia, which began on the 20th day of June, 1863, and which corporation has its principal place of business and chief works (if it have chief works) in this State. Every other corporation is a foreign corporation. Domestic corporations are subdivided into two classes: resident and non-resident. A resident corporation is a domestic corporation whose principal place of business and chief works (if it have chief works) are located within this State, and a non-resident corporation is a domestic corporation whose principal place of business or chief works is located without this State. The words "chief works" include shops, factories, mines, manufacturing plants, or any building or other place where mechanics, artisans, or laborers are employed. (Code, ch. 32, § 124.) Every resident and non-resident domestic corporation shall pay an annual license tax on its charter based on its authorized capital stock, as follows: If the authorized capital stock be five thousand dollars, or less, twenty dollars; if more than five thousand dollars and not more than ten thousand dollars, thirty dollars; if more than ten thousand dollars, and not more than twenty-five thousand dollars, forty dollars; if more than twenty-five thousand dollars and not more than fifty thousand dollars, fifty dollars; if more than fifty thousand dollars and not more than seventy-five thousand dollars, eighty dollars; if more than seventy-five thousand dollars and not more than one hundred thousand dollars, one hundred dollars; if more than one hundred thousand dollars and not more than one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, one hundred and ten dollars; if more than one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars and not more than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, one hundred and twenty dollars; if more than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and not more than one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, one hundred and forty dollars; if more than one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars and not more than two hundred thousand dollars, one hundred and fifty dollars; if more than two hundred thousand dollars and not more than one million dollars, one hundred and eighty dollars, and an additional twenty cents on each one thousand dollars, or fraction thereof, in excess of two hundred thousand dollars; and if more than one million dollars, three hundred and forty dollars, and an additional fifteen cents on each one thousand dollars, or fraction thereof, in excess of one million dollars. (Code, ch. 32, § 126; Acts 1915, 2d extra. sess., ch. 3.) Such license taxes are payable to the secretary of state, as provided by the statute law of West Virginia, when the certificate of incorporation is issued, in no case for a longer time than one year from July 1 after such issue. All license taxes subsequently becoming due are required by law to be collected by the state auditor. No other taxes are assessed in West Virginia against such non-resident corporation chartered by said State, unless it has personal property or real estate therein, or is doing business or has capital invested therein.

The stockholders may in a general meeting, by by-law, prescribe the number of the directors, but unless a different number be so prescribed there shall be five directors. The stockholders may by a by-law prescribe the qualifications of directors; but if it be not otherwise provided, every director must be a resident of the State of West Virginia, and a stockholder. (Code, ch. 53, § 49.)

The cost of incorporation is a fee of ten dollars to the secretary of state for issuing the charter, a fee of ten dollars for a certified copy of charter (if one is desired), the payment of the license tax as above mentioned, ten dollars for auditor's annual fee as attorney in fact (or one dollar per month for the remainder of the first year if it does not exceed nine months), four dollars and twenty-five cents for recording power of attorney in office of clerk of county court and office of secretary of state, and one dollar and twenty-five cents for filing and recording charter.

A foreign corporation obtaining the above-mentioned certificate from the secretary of state may, in general, hold real or personal property and the title thereto, and do business in West Virginia, and not otherwise. (Code, ch. 54, § 30.) Every such corporation which shall do business in this State without having obtained such certificate and having it filed and recorded according to law shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars for each month its failure so to comply shall continue.

The provisions hereinbefore set forth do not apply to foreign insurance, telegraph, telephone, or express companies except where contained in statutes with reference to them. They are required to pay taxes according to special provisions of the statute law in reference thereto, which are too voluminous to be here inserted.

Every foreign corporation holding property or doing business in this State shall make a sworn report to the auditor annually, in the third month preceding the beginning of the license tax year (July 1), in which report shall be set out the name of such corporation, the name of the State or country by which incorporated, the date of incorporation, the date of the certificate of the secretary of state authorizing it to do business in this State, the place of its principal office, the names and post-office addresses of its president, secretary, and of its officer (if any) charged with the duty of making returns of its property for taxation; the name and post-office address of its attorney of record in this State; the number of shares of its authorized capital stock and the par value of each share; the value of the property owned and used by such corporation within this State, where situate, of what it consists, and the number of acres of land it holds in this State; the value of its property owned and used within this State; and the proportion of its capital stock which is represented by property owned and used in the State of West Virginia. The auditor, according to the proportion of the capital stock of such corporation which is represented by its property owned and used in this State, assesses and fixes the license tax at the rate prescribed for resident and non-resident corporations, hereinbefore set out, plus fifty per centum of such tax: provided, that no such corporation shall pay an annual license tax of less than one hundred and fifty dollars. Such tax is payable into the treasury of the State within thirty days after being thus assessed. (Code, ch. 32, § 130; Acts 1915, 2d extra. sess., ch. 3.) The auditor shall, between the first and the fifteenth day of the second month of the license tax year in every year, publish in some daily newspaper of general circulation, printed in this State, a list of all corporations failing to pay the license tax, or any part thereof, due therefrom on or before the first day of the first month of the license tax year. Such list shall contain the names of such delinquent corporations, arranged in three classes, resident, non-resident, and foreign. Any such delinquent corporation may pay the amount of such tax and a penalty of one per cent. per month for each month, or fractional part thereof, that such failure continues, if such payment is made on or before the first day of the fifth month of the license tax year following, or at any time before judgment or decree is entered as provided by law, but the amount of such penalty shall not be less than five dollars. (Code, ch. 32, § 134.)

Every corporation, joint-stock company, or association (with certain specified exceptions) organized for profit and having a capital stock represented by shares, and every insurance company respectively, now or hereafter organized under the laws of this State, or under the laws of any other State or government, and engaged in any business whatsoever in the State of West Virginia, shall pay an annual special excise tax for the privilege of carrying on or doing business in the State of West Virginia, equivalent to one half of one per centum of the entire net income of such company, received by it from all sources during the year on business transacted and capital invested in this State. Such tax is assessed from returns made to the State Tax Commissioner, on forms prescribed by him, on or before March 1 in each year, for the year ending December 31 next preceding. Such tax is payable into the State treasury within sixty days after the date of the mailing of the notice of the amount thereof, and is in addition to all license or other taxes now imposed or prescribed by law. (Acts 1915, 2d extra. sess., ch. 3.)

The Constitution of the State of West Virginia provides, art. 11, § 2: The stockholders of all corporations and joint-stock companies, except banks and banking institutions, created by the laws of this State, shall be liable for the indebtedness of such corporations to the amount of their stock subscribed and unpaid, and no more. The stockholders of incorporated banks of discount and deposit are personally liable to the creditors thereof, over and above the amount of stock held by them respectively, to an amount equal to their respective shares so held, for all its liabilities accruing while they are such stockholders. (Code, ch. 54, § 78-a-III.)

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for West Virginia.

Deeds, etc. — Any deed, mortgage, deed of trust, power of attorney, or contract in writing made in respect to real estate or goods and chattels, including leases for more than five years, shall be admitted to record as to any person whose name is signed thereto, upon his acknowledgment thereof before the clerk of the county court, who is to record same, or upon a certificate of his acknowledgment before a justice, notary public, recorder, prothonotary, clerk of any court within the United States, or commissioner appointed within the same by the governor of this State, written or annexed to the same; or proved by two witnesses as to him before the proper clerk of the county court or before the proper officer or court in foreign countries.

Deeds for West Virginia must be executed under seal (or scroll) and must be acknowledged, unless proved by two witnesses. No witnesses are required when deeds are acknowledged before an officer.

The clerk of the county court shall admit a deed to record as to any person whose name is signed thereto, upon request of any person interested, upon a certificate of his acknowledgment, written on or annexed to the same, to the following effect, to wit: —

STATE (Territory or District) of _____ } To wit:
COUNTY OF _____

I, _____ a commissioner, appointed by the governor of the State of West Virginia, for the said State (or Territory or District) of _____; (or I, _____ a justice of the county aforesaid; or I, _____ recorder of said county; or I, _____ a notary of said county; or I, _____ a prothonotary or clerk of the _____ court of said county) do certify that _____ whose name (or names) is (or are) signed to the writing above (or hereto annexed) bearing date on the _____ day of _____ has (or have) this day acknowledged the same before me, in my said _____

Given under my hand this _____ day of _____

Or, upon a certificate so written or annexed, under the official seal of any minister plenipotentiary, chargé d'affaires, consul-general, consul, deputy-consul, vice-consul, consular agent, vice-consular agent, commercial agent, or vice-commercial agent, appointed by the government of the United States to any foreign country, or of the proper officer of any court of such country, or of the mayor or other chief magistrate of any city, town, or corporation therein, that the said writing was acknowledged by such person, or proved as to him by two witnesses, before any person having such appointment, or before such court, mayor, or chief magistrate. No officer other than those mentioned in the last sentence is authorized to take and certify such acknowledgments without the United States. A notary public in a foreign country is not an officer thus mentioned. (Code, ch. 73, § 3.) If a husband and wife have signed a writing, they may acknowledge it separately or at the same time.

[Acknowledgment by a Married Woman jointly with Husband or separately.]

STATE (Territory or District) of _____ } To wit:
COUNTY OF _____

I, _____ a commissioner appointed by the governor of the State of West Virginia for the said State of (or Territory or District of _____); or I, _____ a justice of the peace of the said county of _____; or I, _____ a notary of the said county of _____; or I, _____ prothonotary (or clerk) of the _____ court or county of _____ (or other officer or person authorized to take acknowledgments as above, as the case may be), *do certify that _____ and _____ his wife, whose names are signed to the writing above (or hereto annexed) bearing date of the _____ day of _____ 19 _____ have this day acknowledged the same before me in my said _____.

Given under my hand this _____ day of _____ 19 _____.

If the wife acknowledge a deed or other writing separately from her husband, the certificate of her acknowledgment after the star in the foregoing form shall be in form or effect as follows: "do certify that _____ the wife of _____ whose names are signed to the writing above (or hereto annexed) bearing date the _____ day of _____ 19 _____ has this day acknowledged the same before me in my said _____.

" Given under my hand this _____ day of _____ 19 _____."

If the acknowledgment in any case be before a notary without the State of West Virginia, the certificate should read: " Given under my hand and official seal this _____ day of _____ 19 _____."

If the deed be executed by a married woman who, at the time of its execution and acknowledgment, is living separate and apart from her husband, or her husband be non compos mentis, and such deed be for real estate which is her sole and separate property, such facts shall be recited in the deed, and if her husband has not joined therein, no person authorized by law to take acknowledgments shall take and certify the same until it is proved to his satisfaction that such real estate is the sole and separate property of such married woman, and that she was, and is, living separate and apart from her husband, or that her husband is non compos mentis at the date of such deed and the acknowledgment thereof; and it shall be stated in the certificate of such acknowledgment that all of the said facts were shown to the satisfaction of the person taking the same. Such certificate shall, in all cases where the validity of any such deed comes in question, be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated.

The certificate as to such facts may be in form or effect as follows: " And I further certify that before taking said acknowledgment, it was proved to my satisfaction that the real estate in said writing mentioned was the sole and separate property of said _____ and that she was, at the date of said writing, and now is, living separate and apart from her husband (or that her husband is non compos mentis). " And the same shall be included in the certificate of her acknowledgment. (Code, ch. 73, § 6.)

Any person who shall willfully make a certificate of such facts, falsely, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined and imprisoned at the discretion of the court.

[Acknowledgments by Corporations, etc.]

The certificate of acknowledgment of a corporation or joint stock association may be in form or effect as prescribed in the form of certificate of acknowledgment by husband and wife down to the star, and then as follows: " do certify that _____ personally appeared before me in my said _____ and being by me duly sworn (or affirmed) did depose and say that he is the president (or other officer or agent) of the corporation (or association) described in the writing above (or hereto annexed) bearing date the _____ day of _____ 19 _____ authorized by said corporation (or association), to execute and acknowledge deeds and other writings of said corporation (or association), and that the seal affixed to said writing is the corporate seal of said corporation (or the seal of the said association, as the case may be), and that said writing was signed and sealed by him in behalf of said corporation (or association) by its authority duly given. And the said _____ acknowledged the said writing to be the act and deed of said corporation (or association)." Or if the corporation has no corporate seal, or the association has no seal, omit the words " seal affixed to said writing is the corporate seal of said corporation (or the seal of said association, as the case may be)," and say, "said corporation (or association) has no seal." And in such case omit the word "sealed" after the words "signed and," and insert in lieu of it the word "executed." (Code, ch. 73, § 5.)

Conclude the certificate with the words: " Given under my hand (" and official seal," if without the State of West Virginia) this _____ day of _____ 19 _____." And the officer should then sign, adding to his signature the title of his office.

The official signature of any notary shall state the date of expiration of his commission.

A statute (Code, ch. 73, § 11) provides that the certificate of acknowledgment to any deed or other writing that omits the official seal of the officer that took the same, or fails to mention that the acknowledgment was taken within the district, township, or county of that officer, shall be sufficient, unless there be other lawful objections, except that the rights of any party to any pending suit shall not be affected by that statute.

By Acts of 1915, reg. sess., ch. 75, acknowledgments of husband and wife executed prior to February 21, 1891, are not to be deemed, held, or adjudged invalid or defective or insufficient in law or in equity by reason of any informality or omission in setting forth the particulars of the acknowledgment made before an officer duly authorized by law to take the same, in the certificate thereof, or in stating the official character, of such officer, or the place of taking the acknowledgment, but such acknowledgments shall be good, valid and effectual, as if all the requisites and particulars of such acknowledgment mentioned in any law in force at the date of the instrument were particularly set forth in the certificate thereof, and the record of the same duly made in the proper recording office.

No certificate of the official character of a notary, commissioner, etc., by whom an acknowledgment is taken, is necessary or required to be made by any other officer. A certificate of acknowledgment may be written or printed on the instrument, or pasted on or annexed thereto, as is indicated in the foregoing forms. Of course the signature of the officer to the certificate of acknowledgment must be written by him.

Proof by two Witnesses. — No form is prescribed by law for proving by witnesses; and officers should, in all cases, require the grantor's personal acknowledgment. There is no law for the admission of the deed of a married woman to record on proof by witnesses. A married woman can only make a deed by virtue of the statute. And her deed only takes effect on being acknowledged before the proper officer, being certified by him, and after delivery.

It will be seen from the forms above given for certificates of acknowledgment which are prescribed by the statute that the officer is not required to certify that the grantors are personally known to him. The question of identity as to the grantors who appear before him is left to the officer certifying the acknowledgment. The wife must in all cases acknowledge the deed before the officer in person. Deeds, etc., can only be proved by witnesses, before the proper recording officer of the county where they are admitted to record; or, when executed out of the United States, before a minister plenipotentiary, or other officer of court above mentioned, having authority to take acknowledgments in foreign countries. (Code, ch. 73, § 3.)

A natural person may affix a seal by way of seal, or adopt as his seal any scroll written, printed, or engraved, made thereon by another. An impression of a corporate seal upon the paper is sufficient. (Code, ch. 13, § 15.)

Depositions. — In any pending case the deposition of a witness, whether a party to the suit or not, may without commission be taken in or out of this State by a justice or notary public, or by a commissioner in chancery, or before any officer authorized to take depositions in the county or State where they may be taken; and such depositions may be taken in shorthand, or stenographic characters or notes, and shall be written out in full and transcribed into the English language by the stenographer taking the same, and certified by the officer before whom the depositions are taken; and if certified by such officer under his hand and if further certified by him that such stenographic characters and notes were correctly taken and accurately transcribed by him, or under his direction and supervision, and that the witnesses were duly sworn, such depositions may be received and read in evidence without proof of the signature to such certificate, and, without the signature of the witness to such depositions; and in case the stenographer taking the said depositions is not the officer before whom the same is being taken, then such stenographer before proceeding to take any of said depositions shall be sworn to take correctly and accurately transcribe the same, and the certificate of the officer before whom the depositions are taken shall state that the stenographer was so sworn. (Code, ch. 130, § 33.)

Commissioners in other States appointed by the governor of this State are also authorized to take depositions within the State, Territory, or District for which any such commissioner is appointed, to be used in this State; and no special commission for such deposition is necessary. (Code, ch. 51.)

Reasonable notice must be given to the adverse party of the time and place of taking every deposition. (Code, ch. 130, § 35.)

The above-named officers are the only ones authorized to take depositions, either in or out of the State, without a commission, simply upon notice to the adverse party. But by § 34, ch. 130, of the Code, it is further provided that "On affidavit that a witness resides out of this State, or is out of it in the service thereof, or of the United States, his deposition may be taken by or before any commissioner appointed by the governor of this State, or any justice, notary public, or other officer authorized to take depositions in the State wherein the witness may be, or if the deposition is to be taken in a foreign country, by or before such commissioner or commissioners as may be agreed upon by the parties, or appointed by the court, or, if there be none such, by or before any American minister, plenipotentiary, chargé d'affaires, consul-general, consul, vice-consul, consular agent, vice-deputy consular agent, commercial agent, or vice-commercial agent, appointed by the government of the United States, or by or before the mayor or other chief magistrate of any city, town, or corporation in such country, or any notary public therein. Any person or persons taking such deposition may administer an oath to the witness, and take and certify the deposition with his official seal annexed; and if he have none, the genuineness of his signature shall be authenticated by some officer of the same state or country under his official seal."

Conclude by saying, "And further this deponent saith not," and let the witness sign it.

If there be more than one witness, continue as follows: —

And at the same time and place came C. D., another witness on behalf of the who being of lawful age, etc., as above.

When the depositions are taken, conclude with the following [Certificate.]

STATE OF } To wit:
COUNTY OF }

I, a justice of the peace (or notary public, or commissioner, appointed by the governor, etc., as the case may be), do hereby certify that the foregoing depositions of A. B., C. D., etc. (naming the witnesses) were duly taken down in shorthand and stenographic characters or notes before me by stenographer, who, before proceeding to take any of said depositions, was by me sworn to take correctly and accurately transcribe the same, and said shorthand and stenographic characters or notes were written out in full and transcribed into the English language by the said stenographer, under my direction and supervision; that the said witnesses were duly sworn, and [if such be the case, which however, is not necessary] subscribed the said depositions in my presence; that the said depositions were taken pursuant to the annexed notice, at the time and place, and within the hours in the annexed notice specified. And I do further certify that at the time of so taking the same I was justice of the peace (or notary public, or commissioner, etc., as the case may be), in and for in the State of .

Given under my hand this day of 19 . (Or, if a notary public or commissioner say, Given under my hand and notarial seal, or official seal, this day of 19 .)

Costs of taking deposition $ paid by .

If any adjournments are taken from the time stated in the notice, note such fact on the face of the deposition, and also so state in the certificate.

Annex notice, and commission if there be one, to deposition, inclose the whole in an envelope, seal it up and direct it to "The clerk of the circuit (or county) court of county, West Virginia" (or to Esq., Justice of the Peace of (here insert his address), indorse the name of case on the outside, and "Depositions for [plaintiff]" or defendant, as the case may be, and send it without delay by mail. If taken for use before a justice, the officer taking the same must write his name across the place where the envelope is sealed.

Descent and Distribution. — Real estate descends in parcenary, in the following course: 1st. To the children and their descendants; and by Code, ch. 70, §§ 1, 2, aliens who are not enemies may inherit, purchase, convey, or devise real estate the same as citizens of the State. 2d. If there be no child, nor descendant, then to the father. 3d. If no father, then to the mother, brothers and sisters, and their descendants. 4th. If no mother, brother, sister, or their descendants, then one moiety shall go to the paternal, the other to the maternal kindred, as follows: 5th. First, to the grandfather. 6th. If none, then to the grandmother, uncles and aunts on the same side, and their descendants. 7th. If none such, then to the great-grandfathers, or great-grandfather, if there be but one. 8th. If none, then to the great-grandmothers, etc., and the brothers and sisters of the grandfathers and grandmothers, and their descendants. 9th. And so on, in other cases, without end, passing to the nearest lineal male ancestors, and, for want of them, to the nearest lineal female ancestors in the same degree, and the descendants of such male and female ancestors. 10th. If there be no father, mother, brother, or sister, nor any descendant of either, nor any paternal kindred, the whole shall go to the maternal kindred; and if there be no maternal kindred, the whole shall go to the paternal kindred. If there be neither maternal nor paternal kindred the whole shall go to the husband or wife of the intestate; or if the husband or wife be dead, to his or her kindred in the like course as if such husband or wife had survived the intestate, and died entitled to the estate. (Code, ch. 78, § 1.)

Collaterals of the half blood inherit only half so much as those of the whole blood. But if all the collaterals be of the half blood, the ascending kindred (if any) take double portions.

The personal property, after the payment of debts, etc., is distributed in the same manner as realty with the following exceptions: 1st. Alienage is no impediment. Neither is it as to realty since February 16, 1872. 2d. If the intestate was a married woman, and leave children, her husband is entitled to one third; and if she leave no children, he takes the whole. 3d. If the intestate leave a widow and children, the widow gets one third; and if he leave no children, she gets the whole. (Code, ch. 78, § 9.)

Divorce. — A divorce from the bond of matrimony may be decreed for adultery, unless condoned, natural or incurable impotency at time of marriage, wilful abandonment, or desertion for three years, where either of the parties is sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary, or prior to the marriage, without the knowledge of the other, had been convicted of an infamous offense, and (unless condoned) where the wife at the time of marriage (without the knowledge of the husband) was enceinte by some other person; or prior thereto had been notoriously a prostitute; or where the husband prior to the marriage had, without the knowledge of the wife, been notoriously a licentious person. Marriages which were solemnized within the State may also be annulled and made void from the rendition of the de-thereof for public purposes, provided the property so transferred is used for the purposes herein mentioned in this State, shall be exempt. (b) Property of the market value of fifteen thousand dollars transferred to the widow of the decedent, and ten thousand dollars transferred to each of the following persons, viz.: husband, child, lineal descendant or lineal ancestor of the decedent, shall be exempt.

A transfer of personal property of a resident of the State which is not therein, or within the jurisdiction thereof, at the time of his death, shall not be taxable in this State if such transfer of the property be legally subject in another State or country to a tax of a like character and amount to that imposed by said statute if such tax be actually paid, or guaranteed, or secured in accordance with law in such other State or country; if legally subject in another State or country to a tax of like character but of less amount than that imposed by the statute of this State, and such tax be actually paid, or guaranteed, or secured, as aforesaid, a transfer of such property shall be taxable under the statute of this State to the extent of the difference between the tax thus actually paid, guaranteed, or secured, and the amount for which such transfer would otherwise be liable under said statute, or within the jurisdiction thereof.

The provisions of said statute shall apply to the transfer of the following property belonging to the deceased persons, non-residents of this State, which shall pass by will or inheritance under the law of any other State or country, and such property shall be subject to the tax prescribed by this State, as follows: (a) All real estate and tangible personal property, including money on deposit in this State; (b) all intangible personal property, including bonds, securities, shares of stock and choses in action, the evidence of ownership to which shall be actually within this State; and (c) shares of capital stock of all corporations organized and existing under the laws of this State, the certificates of which shares of stock shall be within or without this State. The transfer of any property mentioned in (a) and (b) and the transfer of the shares of stock mentioned in (c), after the decease of the person owning the same, shall not be legal until the tax has been paid into the state treasury and a certificate of release to that effect executed by the state tax commissioner. No corporation organized or existing under the laws of this State shall transfer any such shares of stock, unless notice of the time of such intended transfer is served upon the state tax commissioner at least fifteen days prior to such transfer, or until the state tax commissioner shall consent in writing thereto. Any such corporation making such transfer before the tax is paid, or before obtaining such consent, shall be liable to the State for said tax, together with any interest that may accrue thereon, and in addition thereto a penalty of five hundred dollars. (Code, ch. 33, § 6.)

The state tax commissioner, whose office is at Charleston, West Virginia, assesses and collects the tax, and is the official with whom to communicate on all questions concerning the tax.

All such taxes, and the interest that may accrue thereon, shall be, and remain, until paid, a charge and lien upon the property transferred, superior to any line created after such transfer and no title shall vest or be transferred as to any such property except subject to the lien for such taxes. (Code, ch. 33, § 7.)

The law requires, under penalties provided, that the executor, administrator, or trustee of the estate shall file a statement with the clerk of the court showing, to the best of his judgment, whether any transfer of any property belonging to the estate is liable to such taxes. (Code, ch. 33, § 13.)

Insolvent Laws. — There are no insolvent laws in this State. See Assignments for Benefit of Creditors.

Interest. — The legal rate is six per cent.; provided, a charge of one dollar may be made for any loan or forbearance of money or other thing, where the interest at the rate aforesaid would not amount to that sum, and the same shall not be a usurious charge or rate of interest. (Code, ch. 96, § 4; Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 55.) Excess of interest cannot be recovered if usury is pleaded. The contracts of incorporated companies are excepted; they may borrow money at higher rates. The rate of interest upon judgments is six per cent. There is no prescribed or settled rule as to when interest shall commence upon open accounts. The Code provides that "the jury, in any action founded on contract, may allow interest on the principal due, or any part thereof, and in all cases they shall find the aggregate of principle and interest due, at the time of trial." (Code, ch. 131, § 14.)

Judgments. — All judgments for money are made a lien upon all the real estate of the debtor at or after their date, or, if rendered in court, from the first day of the term. But to secure the lien as against a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice, a memorandum of the judgment containing names of parties in full (and if the defendants are partners their partnership name shall be stated), the amount of the judgment and costs stated separately, the value of specific property, if any recovered, and damages for its detention, the court or justice rendering the judgment, and date of the judgment, must be docketed in the county court clerk's office, in the county wherein such real estate is, either within sixty days after the date of the judgment or before a deed therefor to such purchaser is delivered for record to the clerk of the county court. Judgment liens are enforced in chancery. No judgment has priority over another rendered at the same term of court. A judgment of a justice is only a lien as against such purchaser when docketed as aforesaid.

No lis pendens can bind or affect a purchaser of real estate for value without notice unless and until a memorandum setting forth the title of the cause, the court in which it is pending, the general object of the suit, attachment, or other proceeding, and location and quantity of the land as near as may be, and the name of the person whose estate therein is intended to be affected by the action, suit, attachment, or proceeding, shall be filed with the clerk of the county court of the county in which the land is situated. (Code, ch. 139, § 13.)

The records and judicial proceedings of any court of the United States, or of any State, Territory, or District, attested by the clerk thereof with the seal of the court annexed, if there be a seal, and certified by the judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate of such court, to be attested in due form, shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court within this State as they have in the courts of the State, Territory, or District whence the records come. (Code, ch. 130, § 19.) No judgment by default on a scire facias or summons shall be valid, if it become final within thirty days after the service of such process. It takes generally from thirty to sixty days to obtain a judgment where no defense is interposed. The judgment must be rendered in court in term time. A judgment may be confessed, however, in any suit in the clerk's office of the court, even if the summons has only just issued.

On a judgment, execution may issue in two years after its date, or, if none be so issued, the court in which the judgment was rendered may thereafter, and within ten years from the date of the judgment, upon ten days' notice to the party against whom the same is, order an execution to issue thereon for such sum as remains unpaid. Where execution issues within two years as aforesaid, other executions may be issued on such judgment without notice, within ten years from the return day of the last execution issued thereon, on which there is no return by an officer, or which has been returned unsatisfied. And an action, suit, or scire facias may be brought upon a judgment on which no execution issued within the said two years, or where there has been a change of parties by death or otherwise, at any time within ten years next after the date of the judgment. But if such action, suit, or scire facias be against the personal representative of a decedent, it shall be brought within five years from the qualification of such representative. Any time during which the right to sue out execution on a judgment is suspended by the terms thereof, or by legal process, is to be omitted from the computation of time during which an action, suit, or scire facias may be brought or an execution may issue, as well as the time during which the right is obstructed by direct or indirect ways or means by the debtor. There is also a saving in favor of infants, married women, and insane persons. (Code, ch. 139, §§ 10, 11.) The lien of a judgment expires with the right to an action, suit, or scire facias thereon, or the right to issue or obtain an order for the issue of an execution thereon.

License. — Commercial travelers are not required to take out a license before doing business, unless they carry property with them in the State and sell and deliver what is sold; but the state statute provides as follows: No person without a state license therefor shall, being a traveling agent, canvasser, or salesman, sell or contract to sell any lightning-rods, sewing-machine, stove or range, organ or other musical instrument, or books, maps, prints, pamphlets, or periodicals, except such books, pamphlets, and periodicals that be of a religious or ethical nature, whether manufactured within or without the State. (Code, ch. 32, § 2.) On every license to sell sewing-machines, stoves, or ranges, if the salesman thereof travels with or without a vehicle, ten dollars; on every license to sell organs or other musical instruments, if the salesman thereof travels with or without a wagon or other vehicle, twenty dollars; on every license to sell lightning-rods, if the salesman thereof travels, ten dollars; on every license to travel and receive subscriptions for, or in any manner furnish books, maps, prints, pamphlets, or periodicals, except such books, pamphlets, and periodicals that be of a religious or ethical nature, ten dollars; provided, that a license to travel and receive subscriptions for, or furnish books, maps, prints, pamphlets, or periodicals shall be granted by the auditor and be coextensive with the State. (Code, ch. 32, § 115.)

"Itinerant vendors" — defined as all persons, firms, or corporations, both principals and agents, who engage or conduct, within this State, either in one locality or in traveling from place to place, a temporary or transient business of selling goods, wares, and merchandise, but excluding commercial travelers, or selling agents in the usual course of business — are required to deposit five hundred dollars with the county clerk to protect creditors and to secure penalties, and in certain cases to file a sworn statement under oath regarding the goods to be sold, and to pay an annual license tax of five hundred dollars. (Acts 1917, 2d extra. sess., ch. 10.)

Limitation. — No person shall make an entry on or bring an action to recover land but within ten years after the time the right shall have first accrued. Every action to recover money which is founded upon an award, or on any contract other than a judgment or recognizance, shall be brought within the following number of years next after the right shall have accrued, namely: If the case be upon an indemnifying bond, taken under any statute, or upon a bond of any fiduciary or public officer, within ten years; if it be upon any other contract by writing under seal, within twenty years; but if executed on or after the first day of April, 1869, within ten years; if it be upon an award, or be upon a contract by writing, signed by the party to be charged thereby or by his agent, not under seal, within ten years; and if it be upon any other contract, within five years, unless it be an action of one partner against his copartner for a settlement of the copartnership accounts or upon accounts concerning the trade of merchandise between merchants, their factors or servants, where the action of account would lie, in either of which cases the action may be brought until the expiration of five years from a cessation of the dealings in which they are interested together but not after. Every personal action, for which no limitation is otherwise prescribed, shall be brought within five years, if it be for a matter of such nature that in case a party die it can be brought by or against his representatives; and if it be for a matter not of such nature, it shall be brought within one year next after the right to bring the same shall have accrued. Every action upon judgment or decree, rendered in any other State or country where such action would there be barred, shall be barred in this State; and whether so barred or not, no action against a person who shall have resided in this State during the ten years next preceding such action shall be brought upon any such judgment or decree rendered more than ten years before the commencement of such action. (Code, ch. 104.)

There is no special provision on claims to be filed with an assignee. Where a right of action accrues against a person who had before resided in this State, if such person shall, by departing without the same, or by absconding or concealing himself, or by any other indirect ways or means obstruct the prosecution of such right, or if such right has been or shall be hereafter obstructed by war, insurrection, or rebellion, the time that such obstruction may have continued shall not be computed. If another person be jointly or severally liable with the person so obstructing and no such obstruction exists as to him, the exception as to the person so absconding shall not apply to him. Upon a contract which was made and was to be performed in another State or country, by a person who then resided therein, no action shall be brought after the right of action thereon is barred by the laws of such State or country. These limitations do not apply to infants, married women (except in relation to her separate estate), or insane persons, they being allowed longer time; but in no case shall an entry be made on land or an action be brought to recover land or any such personal action, suit, or scire facias be brought after twenty years from the time when the right accrued. (Code, ch. 104.)

An acknowledgment of a debt and a promise of payment, express or implied, if in writing, will waive the statute, and the action may be brought within the same time thereafter. (Code, ch. 104, § 8.) No acknowledgment or promise by a personal representative of a decedent, or by one of two or more joint contractors, shall charge the estate, or any other contractor, where they would otherwise be protected under the statute of limitations. (Code, ch. 104, § 9.) For limitation as to an action, suit, or scire facias upon a judgment, and the right to executions thereon, as well as the limitation in respect to the lien of judgments, see Judgments.

Mechanics' Lien Law. — (a) Every person, firm, or corporation, which shall erect, build, construct, alter, remove, or repair any building or other structure, or other improvement appurtenant to any such building or other structure, under and by virtue of a contract with the owner or his authorized agent, either for an agreed lump sum or upon any other basis of settlement and payment; (b) every person, firm, or corporation, who, under and by virtue of a contract with such general contractor or with a sub-contractor for part of said work, either for an agreed contract price or by the day or by piece, or other basis of payment, shall furnish any part of the materials, machinery, or other necessary supplies or equipment, or shall perform any labor or do any work necessary to the completion of said general contract, in the erection, construction, building, alteration, repair, or removal of any building or other structure or improvement appurtenant thereto, as provided in such general contract; (c) every person firm or corporation, which shall furnish to any owner, for use in the erection, construction, alteration, repair, or removal of any building or other structure or improvement appurtenant thereto, any materials, machinery, or other equipment or supplies necessary to the completion of such building or other structure or improvement; (d) every person, firm, or corporation which shall furnish to any such general contractor or to any such sub-contractor any materials, machinery, or other equipment or supplies necessary to the completion of such building or other structure, or improvement appurtenant thereto, for use in the erection, construction, repair, or removal thereof, by virtue of a contract between such general or sub-contractor and the material-man or furnisher of machinery, or other supplies or equipment necessary to the completion of said general contract; (e) every workman, artisan, mechanic, laborer, or other person, who shall perform any work or labor in the erection, construction, repair, or removal of any building or other structure or improvement appurtenant thereto by virtue of contract for such work and labor directly with the owner thereof; (f) every workman, artisan, mechanic, laborer, or other person, who shall perform any work or labor under the employment of any general contractor or of any sub-contractor in the erection, construction, repair, or removal of any building or other structure or improvement appurtenant thereto necessary to the completion of said general contract: shall have a lien upon such building, or other structure, or improvement appurtenant thereto, and upon the interest of the owner in the lot or tract of land whereon the same stands. (Code, ch. 75, § 2, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess. ch. 6.)

Liens authorized by provisions (a), (c), and (e) shall be discharged, from and after ninety days from the completion of said contract, from the furnishing of the last of said materials, machinery, or other supplies and equipment, and from the date of the performing of the last of said work and labor, respectively; and liens authorized by provisions (b), (d), and (f) shall be discharged, from and after sixty days from the completion of said sub-contract, from the date of the furnishing of the last of said materials, machinery, or other equipment or supplies, and from the date of the performing of the last of said work and labor respectively: unless the claimants of any such liens shall have perfected and preserved the same — those named in provisions (a), (c), and (e) by recording, within the said ninety days, in the office of the clerk of the county court of the county wherein the property is situate, a notice of such lien in the form provided by the statute; and for those named in provisions (b), (d), and (f) by giving, within the said sixty days to the owner or his authorized agent, by any of the methods provided by law for the service of legal notices or summons, a notice of lien, in the forms provided by the statute for the several cases, and by recording, within ninety days after the completion of his said sub-contract, or his ceasing to furnish materials, machinery, or other equipment, or his ceasing to do work or perform labor, respectively, a notice in the same office and of the same character and form as is provided by the statute for those named in provisions (a), (c), and (e). Failure to comply with the above requirements within the time provided therefor operates as a complete discharge of the owner and of his property from all liens for claims and charges of such claimants. Where the owner of the property is a non-resident of the State, or where any officer of this State authorized by law to execute legal process should make return "not found" upon any notice of mechanics' lien which may be presented to him for service, then it shall be sufficient service of such notice to publish a copy thereof for two successive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation in said county, and to post a copy of such notice in a conspicuous place upon the property sought to be charged thereby, which publishing and posting shall be sufficient if commenced within the period provided by this act for the filing of such notice. (Code ch. 75, § 3, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

The liens created under the act have priority over liens created by trust deeds or otherwise subsequently to the time of beginning the labor or the furnishing of material, machinery, or equipment; and the liens of laborers, artisans, mechanics, workmen, and furnishers of material, machinery, and equipment have precedence over any lien of any contractor indebted to them, but among themselves they are of equal dignity without priority. (Code, ch. 75, § 5, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

The owner may, at any time, by notice in writing, require such laborer, mechanic, workman, or other person doing work or labor upon said building, structure, or improvement, or to any such material-man or other person furnishing materials, machinery, or equipment for such work, to file with said owner an itemized account of the work done or of materials, machinery, or equipment furnished, to show the dates upon which said work was done or said materials were furnished, the price charged therefor and the nature of such work or materials, and the neglect or failure of any such laborer, mechanic, or other person furnishing materials, machinery, or equipment so to file the said itemized statement with the said owner, within ten days after the receipt by him of the said written notice so to do, shall release the said owner from all responsibility and his property from all lien or charge. Any laborer or other person employed to do any work or furnish any materials or machinery for the erection, construction, alteration, repair, or removal of any building, structure, or improvement, by another who may have contracted with the owner therefor, may, before doing any work or furnishing any material or machinery, give the owner of such building, structure, or improvement notice in writing that if he is not paid therefor by the person employing him, he will look to the owner for payment; and it shall not be necessary for the person who has given such notice in writing to file the account and notice with the owner within sixty days of the date of the doing of the last work or of the furnishing of the last of said materials or machinery, unless he is required by the owner in writing within sixty days to do so, and his neglect or failure to file such notice and account within sixty days, unless so required to do so, shall in no way affect or impair his said lien, if it be otherwise perfected and preserved. (Code, ch. 75, § 6, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

Provision is made by the statute for the owner to limit his liability to the contract price by taking from his general contractor a bond in a prescribed form and recording the bond and his contract in the office of the clerk of the county court before the beginning of the building. (Code, ch. 75, §§ 8, 9, 10, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

The statute makes it the duty of public bodies having authority to contract for the erection, etc., of any public building to require, of every person with whom it shall enter into any contract for erection, etc., of such building, a bond in the penalty equal at the least to the reasonable cost of the materials, machinery, equipment, and labor required for the completion of said contract, conditioned that in the event such contractor shall fail to pay in full for all such materials, machinery, equipment, and labor used by him, then the sureties shall be responsible to said material-men, furnisher of machinery or equipment, and furnisher and performer of labor. (Code, ch. 75, § 12, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

Every workman, laborer, or other person who shall do or perform any work or labor for any incorporated company doing business in this State, by virtue of a contract either directly with such incorporated company or with its general contractor or with any subcontractor, shall have a lien for the value of such work or labor upon all real estate and personal property of said company, and such lien shall have priority over any lien created by deed or otherwise on such real estate or personal property subsequent to the time when the said labor was performed, but there shall be no priority of lien as between the parties claiming under this section. Such lien shall be discharged unless the person desiring to avail himself thereof, within ninety days from the time he shall have ceased to work or labor for such incorporated company or for such contractor, shall file with the clerk of the county court of the county in which such work or labor was performed, or in which the principal office, works, real estate, or personal property of such incorporated company is situated, a notice of lien containing the amount due him after allowing all credits, which notice shall be sworn to by such person, or by some one in his behalf. (Code, ch. 75, §§ 19, 20, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

Unless a suit (in chancery) to enforce any lien authorized by this act is commenced within six months after the person desiring to avail himself thereof shall have filed his notice in the clerk's office, such lien shall be discharged; but a suit commenced by any person having such lien shall, for the purpose of preserving the same, inure to the benefit of all other persons having a lien on the same property. In such suit, in addition to ordering a sale of the property to satisfy claims, the court may give a personal decree in favor of such creditors against any party to whom they may be established. (Code, ch. 75, §§ 22, 23, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

Any common law lien may be enforced against any personal property upon which the same may exist, by the methods used by a landlord to enforce the payment of rent due, and the owner of such property may defend by the methods used by a tenant in case of distress for rent. (Code, ch. 75, § 24, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

The citizens of this State shall have a lien upon all domestic steamboats, steamers, and vessels, propelled wholly or in part by steam, gas, fluid, naphtha, or electricity, which ply upon the navigable waters of this State, and which are registered in this State, for all work and labor done upon said vessels, and for all materials, goods, wares, and merchandise furnished said vessels; said lien to be enforced by appropriate remedy in courts having jurisdiction of the subject matter. (Code, ch. 75, § 26, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

Married Women. — The separate property, real and personal, and the rents, issues, profits, and increase thereof, of a married woman heretofore acquired under the laws of this State, or of any other State or country, shall be and remain her sole and separate property in all respects as if she were a single woman, and the same shall in no way be subject to the control of her husband, nor liable for his debts. (Code, ch. 66, § 1.) The real and personal property of any female who may hereafter marry, and which she shall own at the time of marriage, and the rents, issues, and profits thereof, shall not be subject to the disposal of her husband, nor be liable for his debts, and shall be and continue her sole and separate property as if she were a single woman. Any married woman may take by inheritance, or by gift, grant, devise, or bequest, from any person other than her husband, and hold to her sole and separate use, and convey and devise real and personal property, and any interest or estate therein, and the rents, issues, and profits thereof, in the same manner and with like effects as if she were unmarried, and the same shall not be subject to the disposal of her husband, nor be liable for his debts: provided, that no married woman, unless she is living separate and apart from her husband, shall sell and convey real estate unless her husband join in the deed or other writing by which the same is sold or conveyed. Any married woman may deposit and check out her own money in her own name, and be a stockholder in corporations; and, if a stockholder in a corporation of this State, may vote for directors and trustees by proxy or otherwise. An action may be maintained against the husband and wife jointly for any debt of the wife contracted before marriage; but the execution of any judgment in such action shall issue against, and such judgment shall bind, the separate estate and property of the wife only, and not that of the husband. Any husband who may hereafter acquire the separate property of his wife, or any portion thereof, by any ante-nuptial contract or otherwise, shall be liable for the debts of his wife contracted before marriage, to the extent of the property so acquired. The earnings of a married woman, or any and all property, real and personal, purchased by her with the proceeds of such earnings, shall in all cases be her sole and separate property, and shall not be subject to the control or disposal of her husband, nor liable for his debts. And the separate personal property of every married woman shall be liable for the payment of her debts contracted during the coverture, as well after the coverture is terminated as during its continuance. A married woman, living separate and apart from her husband, may, in her own name, carry on any trade or business; and the stock and property used in such trade, and the issues and profits thereof, together with her own earnings realized from such trade or business, or otherwise, shall be her sole and separate property, and shall not be subject to the control of her husband nor liable for his debts. A married woman may sue or be sued the same in all cases as if she were a feme sole, and any judgment rendered against her in any such suit shall be a lien against the corpus of her real estate. And an execution may issue thereon and be collected against the separate personal property of a married woman as though she were a feme sole. (Code, ch. 66, § 15.) Females become of age at twenty-one years.

Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, etc. — Mortgages are executed and acknowledged in the same manner as deeds, but contain a clause of defeasance. They can only be enforced and foreclosed by a decree of a court of equity. Mortgages are rarely executed in this State. Deeds of trust take their place under which the property is sold by the trustees when required by the creditor secured, after a default in payment; and the sale is made at public auction after due notice, without any proceeding in, or order of, court. The requisites for a mortgage or deed of trust on chattel property are the same as on real estate, when possession is not transferred.

The wife should join in mortgages or deeds of trust on real estate; otherwise she will not be barred of dower, except when given to secure purchase-money. These instruments are discharged by a short deed of release, acknowledged before an officer authorized to take acknowledge of deeds, and admitted to record in the proper county. The Code provides that the release may be in form or effect as follows: —

I, A. B., hereby release a mortgage (or deed of trust) made by C. D. to me (or to E. F., my trustee, or to and assigned to me), dated the day of 19 and recorded in the office of the clerk of the county court of county, West Virginia, in deed book page (Signed.) A. B.

Acknowledged before the subscriber, this day of 19 .

G. H. Justice (or Clerk of the County Court, Notary Public, etc., as the case may be).

Provided, that if any such lien shall have been assigned, when the same is released, the assignee thereof shall unite with the assignor in the release. (Code, ch. 76, §§ 1, 2, as amended by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 49.)

No specific time is prescribed by the statute within which mortgages or deeds of trust on either chattel or real property must be foreclosed, or the property sold. Payment will generally be presumed in equity after twenty years. (7 West Va. Rep. p. 63.)

Chattel mortgages and deeds of trust must be executed with the same formality as those on real estate. Chattel mortgages are seldom known. Chattel mortgages are not required to be renewed, and are foreclosed by decree of a court of equity. Deeds of trust are almost universally in use. The proceedings under them are the same as in cases of real estate. Mortgages of real property are usually accompanied by bonds or notes, and the same is true of deeds of trust. The grantor, cestui que trust, or beneficiary under a deed of trust to secure a debt may require a bond to be given by the trustee in a penalty equal at least to the value of the property to be sold. Such bond with security must be given, when thus demanded, before the clerk of the county court. If such bond is not given in twenty days after notice, the trustee vacates his office and a new one may be appointed.

Notaries Public. — The governor shall appoint and commission so many notaries in this State and for such counties as he may deem proper, who shall hold their offices respectively for a term of ten years from the date of their commission.

When any oath may lawfully be administered, or affidavit or deposition taken, within any county, it may be done by a notary thereof, unless otherwise expressly provided by law.

A notary, under the regulations prescribed by law, may take within his county, acknowledgments of deeds and other writings. He shall also be a conservator of the peace within his county, and as such conservator shall exercise all the powers conferred by law upon justices of the peace.

The certificate of a notary of this State in the cases specified in the two preceding sections may be under his signature, without his notarial seal being affixed thereto. (Code, ch. 51, §§ 2 to 5, both inclusive.)

The official signature of any notary shall state the date of expiration of his commission, but a misstatement of such date shall not invalidate any official act of such notary; provided his commission be at the time thereof in force. (Code, ch. 51, § 16.)

Certificates as to the official character of a notary public are issued by the clerk of the county court of the same county.

Notes and Bills. — The "Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law," substantially as recommended by the American Bar Association, was adopted in this State on February 22, 1907, and has been in effect since January 1, 1908. (Code, ch. 98 A.)

The following are to be regarded, treated, and observed as legal holidays, vis.: The first day of January, the twelfth day of February ("Lincoln's Birthday"), the twenty-second day of February, the thirtieth day of May, the fourth of July, the first Monday in September ("Labor Day"), the twelfth day of October ("Columbus Day"), the twenty-fifth day of December, any national or state election day, and all days that may be appointed or recommended by the governor of this State or the president of the United States as days of thanksgiving, or for the general cessation of business; and when either of said days or dates falls on Sunday, then it shall be lawful to observe the succeeding Monday as such holiday, provided that when the return day of any summons or other court proceeding, or any notice, or the time fixed for holding any court, or doing any official act, shall fall on either of said holidays, the ensuing secular day shall be taken as meant and intended. (Code, ch. 15 Q, § 1.)

Practice. — The common law and chancery practice remain in force, but largely relieved from their intricacies and technicalities by statute law.

Proof of Claims. — Claims cannot be proved by ex parte affidavits except when presented against estates of decedents and insolvents, nor then if the personal representative or other party in interest requires further evidence, and except, also, in the cases mentioned under Actions. Accounts should be made out in detail, and accompanied by such affidavit as is described hereinbefore under the head of Affidavits. In all cases where claims are sent for collection, the attorney should be furnished with the full name of the party who is to be plaintiff; and, in case of a partnership, with the full name of each partner and the name of the firm. In case the creditor is a corporation the letter forwarding the claim should so state, and also where incorporated. Non-residents of the State are generally required to give security for costs, by filing with the clerk of the court a bond payable to the State signed by one or more responsible persons, for the payment of all costs which may be awarded to the defendant, and all fees that may be due or become due in such suit to the officers of the court. (Code, ch. 138, § 2.)

Where a declaration or other pleading alleges that any person made, indorsed, assigned, or accepted any writing, no proof of the handwriting of such person is required, unless the a notice of lien containing the amount due him after allowing all credits, which notice shall be sworn to by such person, or by some one in his behalf. (Code, ch. 75, §§ 19, 20, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

Unless a suit (in chancery) to enforce any lien authorized by this act is commenced within six months after the person desiring to avail himself thereof shall have filed his notice in the clerk's office, such lien shall be discharged; but a suit commenced by any person having such lien shall, for the purpose of preserving the same, inure to the benefit of all other persons having a lien on the same property. In such suit, in addition to ordering a sale of the property to satisfy claims, the court may give a personal decree in favor of such creditors against any party to whom they may be established. (Code, ch. 75, §§ 22, 23, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

Any common law lien may be enforced against any personal property upon which the same may exist, by the methods used by a landlord to enforce the payment of rent due, and the owner of such property may defend by the methods used by a tenant in case of distress for rent. (Code, ch. 75, § 24, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

The citizens of this State shall have a lien upon all domestic steamboats, steamers, and vessels, propelled wholly or in part by steam, gas, fluid, naphtha, or electricity, which ply upon the navigable waters of this State, and which are registered in this State, for all work and labor done upon said vessels, and for all materials, goods, wares, and merchandise furnished said vessels; said lien to be enforced by appropriate remedy in courts having jurisdiction of the subject matter. (Code, ch. 75, § 26, as amended and reenacted by Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 6.)

Married Women. — The separate property, real and personal, and the rents, issues, profits, and increase thereof, of a married woman heretofore acquired under the laws of this State, or of any other State or country, shall be and remain her sole and separate property in all respects as if she were a single woman, and the same shall in no way be subject to the control of her husband, nor liable for his debts. (Code, ch. 66, § 1.) The real and personal property of any female who may hereafter marry, and which she shall own at the time of marriage, and the rents, issues, and profits thereof, shall not be subject to the disposal of her husband, nor be liable for his debts, and shall be and continue her sole and separate property as if she were a single woman. Any married woman may take by inheritance, or by gift, grant, devise, or bequest, from any person other than her husband, and hold to her sole and separate use, and convey and devise real and personal property, and any interest or estate therein, and the rents, issues, and profits thereof, in the same manner and with like effects as if she were unmarried, and the same shall not be subject to the disposal of her husband, nor be liable for his debts: provided, that no married woman, unless she is living separate and apart from her husband, shall sell and convey real estate unless her husband join in the deed or other writing by which the same is sold or conveyed. Any married woman may deposit and check out her own money in her own name, and be a stockholder in corporations; and, if a stockholder in a corporation of this State, may vote for directors and trustees by proxy or otherwise. An action may be maintained against the husband and wife jointly for any debt of the wife contracted before marriage; but the execution of any judgment in such action shall issue against, and such judgment shall bind, the separate estate and property of the wife only, and not that of the husband. Any husband who may hereafter acquire the separate property of his wife, or any portion thereof, by any ante-nuptial contract or otherwise, shall be liable for the debts of his wife contracted before marriage, to the extent of the property so acquired. The earnings of a married woman, or any and all property, real and personal, purchased by her with the proceeds of such earnings, shall in all cases be her sole and separate property, and shall not be subject to the control or disposal of her husband, nor liable for his debts. And the separate personal property of every married woman shall be liable for the payment of her debts contracted during the coverture, as well after the coverture is terminated as during its continuance. A married woman, living separate and apart from her husband, may, in her own name, carry on any trade or business; and the stock and property used in such trade, and the issues and profits thereof, together with her own earnings realized from such trade or business, or otherwise, shall be her sole and separate property, and shall not be subject to the control of her husband nor liable for his debts. Where a declaration or other pleading alleges that any person made, indorsed, assigned, or accepted any writing, no proof of the handwriting of such person is required, unless the fact be denied by an affidavit with the plea which puts it in issue. (Code, ch. 125, § 40.) A similar provision is made as to the proof of partnerships and corporations. (Code, ch. 125, § 41.) See Actions.

Written instruments, if thus denied, must be proved on the trial, or hearing, by oral testimony, or by depositions regularly taken in the cause.

Recording Deeds, etc. — No specific time is given for the record of deeds, mortgages, and contracts in writing relating to real and personal property. They are void as to creditors and subsequent purchasers for valuable consideration without notice, until and except from the time they are duly admitted to record in the county wherein the property embraced in such deed or contract may be. (Code, ch. 74, § 5.)

The clerk of the county court acts as the recorder of deeds, mortgages, etc.

Redemption. — There is no redemption of property sold on execution, deed of trust, or mortgage when foreclosed.

Replevin. — The action of replevin is abolished. (Code, ch. 103, § 4.) If the plaintiff, in an action of detinue, desires to have immediate possession of the property, he may at the commencement of the action, or at any time afterwards before judgment, upon affidavit, and giving security in double the value of the property, have the property seized by the proper officer. If the defendant within three days after its seizure executes a bond in a like sum, the officer must return the property to him; but if he fails to give such bond, the officer must deliver the property to plaintiff. (Code, ch. 102.)

Reports. — There are seventy-six volumes, styled West Virginia Reports.

Revision. — The last revision of the statutes in force was published by West Publishing Company in 1914, and is called West Virginia Code, Annotated, C. E. Hogg, 1913, 3 vols. This includes all general statutes now in force, except those enacted by the legislatures of 1915, extraordinary session of 1916, and 1917, known as Acts of West Virginia, 1915, 1916, and 1917, respectively. In 1916 a "Handy Edition" of the West Virginia Code, containing all statutes of a general nature then in force, was published by Uriah Barnes. This edition is usually cited as "Barnes' Code, 1916."

Sales in Bulk. — The sale in bulk of any part or the whole of a stock of merchandise otherwise than in the ordinary course of trade and in the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business, shall be fraudulent and void as against the creditors of the seller, unless the seller and purchaser, at least five days before the sale, make a written statement showing the nature and character of the sale and property to be sold and the price to be paid therefor, and unless the purchaser demands and receives from the seller a written list of names and addresses of creditors of the seller, with the amount of indebtedness due or owing to each and certified by the seller, under oath, to be, to the best of his knowledge, and belief, a full, accurate, and complete list of his creditors and of his indebtedness; and unless the purchaser shall, at least five days before taking possession of such merchandise or paying therefor, notify, personally or by registered mail, every creditor, whose name and address is stated in said list, of the proposed sale and of the price, terms, and conditions thereof.

Sellers and purchasers include corporations, associations, copartnerships, and individuals, but not executors, administrators, receivers, assignees for the benefit of creditors, trustees in bankruptcy, or public officers under judicial process. (Code, ch. 74, §§ 3 a I, 3 a II.)

This statute has been held constitutional, and to cover a transfer of a half interest in a business and stock of goods to another in consideration of the latter's placing in the store a quantity of goods equal in value to the stock then owned by the transferor, with a view to the formation of a copartnership to continue business at the same location. (Marlow v. Ringer, W. Va. 1917, 91 S. E. 386.)

Service. — Process against the defendant shall be returnable, within ninety days from its date, to the court on the first day of a term, or in the clerk's office on the first Monday in a month, or to some rule day. Rules are held on the first Monday of every month, except when a term of the court happens to commence on that day or either of the two following days, or on the preceding Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, or Saturday, they are then held on the last Monday of the next preceding month. Process must be served, to obtain judgment, at least two rule days before the term of court. See Actions.

In suits before a justice of the peace, the summons may be made returnable at any time not less than five days nor more than thirty from its date, but no trial shall be had or judgment rendered in less than five days after the summons has been served on the defendant. (Code, ch. 50, § 26.) Judgment may be taken after waiting one hour after the time of trial stated in the summons, on the return of summons served, if there is no defense interposed, in cases before justices, on plaintiff proving his claim.

On affidavit that a defendant is not a resident of this State, or that diligence has been used by or on behalf of the plaintiff to ascertain in what county he is, without effect, or that process directed to the officer of the county in which he resides, or is, has been twice delivered to such officer more than ten days before the return day, and been returned without being executed, or that the defendant is a corporation, and that no person can be found in the county upon whom the process can be legally served, and in chancery cases where parties are unknown, an order of publication may be made in court or at rules. The order must be published once a week for four successive weeks, in some newspaper published in the county in which the order is made or directed, if one is so published, to be designated by the party directing such order or his attorney, but if no paper be so designated, then in such paper as the circuit court may direct, or if the court make no direction, then as the clerk of the circuit court may prescribe; and if no newspaper be published in the county, then in such newspaper as the court may prescribe; or if none be so prescribed, as the clerk may direct. The order must also be posted at the front door of the court-house twenty days before judgment or decree is rendered. (Code, ch. 124, § 12.)

Stay of Execution. — Upon judgments in justices' courts on the execution of a bond by the debtor a stay of execution is allowed as follows: when the judgment, exclusive of interest and costs, does not exceed fifty dollars, two months; if over fifty dollars and not over one hundred dollars, four months; if over one hundred dollars, six months. No stay is allowed upon judgments on stay bonds or other bonds filed in justices' courts or against constables for official misconduct. (Code, ch. 50, §§ 125-128.) In the higher courts no stay is allowed.

Supplementary Proceedings. — To ascertain the estate on which a writ of fiery facias is a lien, and to ascertain any real estate in or out of the State to which a debtor named in such fiery facias is entitled, the judgment creditor may file interrogatories to the debtor with a commissioner of the court wherein the judgment is, or of the circuit court of the county wherein the defendant resides or may be found, who shall summon the defendant to answer said interrogatories, and compel him to disclose on oath such property. If it comes to the knowledge of the execution creditor that there are any debts owing to his debtor by any third party, such third party may by a summons on suggestion be required to answer whether or not he is indebted to such execution debtor; and if he answers affirmatively judgment may be entered against such garnishee in favor of the execution creditor. If the creditor is not satisfied with the answer of the garnishee a jury may be impaneled to try the question of his indebtedness. (Code, ch. 141.)

Tax Law. — The taxes for state, county, district, town, and school purposes are assessed annually as of the 1st day of April. (Code, ch. 29, § 12.) As to real property, the person who by himself or his tenant has the freehold in possession, whether in fee or for life, is deemed the owner for the purposes of taxation. A person who has made a mortgage or deed of trust to secure a debt or liability is deemed the owner until the mortgagee or trustee takes possession, after which such mortgagee or trustee is deemed the owner. Personal property mortgaged or pledged shall, for the purposes of taxation, be deemed the property of the person who has the possession. (Code, ch. 29, § 54.) Between the 1st day of January (now April) and the 20th day of June in each year, each assessor and assistant shall call upon every person liable to assessment for taxes, and thereupon such person shall furnish to the assessor or his assistant a report of all the real and personal property of which he was the owner on the 1st day of January (now April) of the current year, fixing what he deems to be the true and actual value of each item of property, both real and personal, for the guidance of the assessor, who shall finally settle and determine the actual value of each item of such property at the price at which it would sell if voluntarily offered for sale by the owner thereof upon such terms as such property is usually sold, and not the price which might be realized if such property be sold at forced sale. Such person also shall make a similar report to the assessor of all the property, real and personal, held, possessed, or controlled by him as executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, receiver, agent, partner, attorney, president or accounting officer of a corporation, consignee, broker, or in any representative or fiduciary character. The taxes for each year upon real and personal property shall be paid by those who are the owners thereof on April 1, whether it be assessed to them or others. (Code, ch. 29, §§ 12, 14, 52, 71.)

When Taxes become Due and when Delinquent. — It is provided by statute that all taxes shall be paid to the sheriff by the persons liable therefor, on or before the thirtieth day of November of the year for which they were levied. Interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum on the amount of each tax bill shall be added thereto from the first day of the ensuing January until payment. Any goods or chattels in the county belonging to the person or estate assessed with taxes may be distrained therefor after the last day of November in the year for which the taxes were assessed. (Code, ch. 30, §§ 8 and 10.)

There is a lien on all real estate for the taxes assessed thereon, from the first day of April in each year, and interest upon such taxes at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the first day fixed by law for the payment thereof into the treasury until payment. (Code, ch. 31, § 1.) The delinquent lists are made out by the sheriff on or before the first Monday in June next succeeding the year for which the taxes were assessed, and returned to the county court, which has the power to make corrections and certify the same by copy to the auditor of state. (Code, ch. 30.) On the first day of the November or December term of the circuit or county court of the county, whichever may be held first, after the posting of the list and publication of notice of sale, or if no term of either court be held in the county in November or December, then on the second Monday in December next thereafter, all the lands previously returned delinquent and not redeemed must be sold for the taxes. If the lists are not received by the sheriff from the auditor of state in time to publish the notice of sale and make the sale in the month of November or December, said sale shall be commenced on the first day of the circuit or county court of the county, whichever shall be held first, in the year next succeeding the publication of the notice. (Code, ch. 31, § 6.) One year after the sale is allowed for redemption. Silver coin is legal tender for all taxes.

Testimony. — The husband or wife of any party to a civil action, suit, or proceeding, or of any person on whose behalf any such action, etc., is brought, prosecuted, opposed, or defended, shall be competent to give evidence the same as any other witness on behalf of any party to such actions, etc., except that no husband or wife shall disclose any confidential communication made by one to the other during their marriage. No person offered as a witness in any civil action, etc., shall be excluded by reason of his interest in the event of the action, etc., or because he is a party thereto, except as follows: No party to any action, etc., nor any person interested in the event thereof, nor any person from, through, or under whom any such party or interested person derives any interest or title by assignment or otherwise, shall be examined as a witness in regard to any personal transaction or communication between such witness and a person at the time of such examination deceased, insane, or lunatic, against the executor, administrator, heir at law, next of kin, assignee, legatee, devisee, or survivor of such person, or the assignee or committee of such insane person or lunatic. But this prohibition shall not extend to any transaction or communication as to which any such executor, administrator, heir at law, next of kin, assignee, legatee, devisee, survivor, or committee shall be examined on his own behalf, nor as to which the testimony of such deceased person or lunatic shall be given in evidence. (Code, ch. 130, § 23.) Provided, however, that where an action is brought for causing the death of any person by wrongful act, neglect, or default under chapter 103 of the Code, the physician sued shall have the right to give evidence in any case in which he is sued; but in this event he can only give evidence as to the medicine or treatment given to the deceased, or operation performed, but he cannot give evidence of any conversation had with the deceased. (Code, ch. 130, § 23.) Persons charged with crime can testify in their own behalf. Depositions may be taken for a prisoner by leave of the court or the judge in vacation, and read on his behalf at the trial. (Code, ch. 159, § 1.)

Trust Deeds. — See Mortgages, etc.

Warehouse Receipts Act. — The Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act, as recommended by the American Bar Association, was adopted in this State February 8, 1917, and became effective May 9, 1917. (Acts 1917, reg. sess., ch. 8.)

Wills. — Every person, except of unsound mind or under the age of twenty-one years, may, by will, dispose of any estate, real and personal, to which he is entitled at his death, and which, if not so disposed of, would devolve upon his heirs, personal representative, or next of kin. There is no restriction as to the amount which the testator may leave for charitable trusts, or away from his family, except that a husband or wife cannot by will deprive the survivor of them of the right to the one third of the surplus of the personal estate, and to dower or curtesy in the surplus of the real estate, left after payment of the debts of the decedent out of his or her estate in due course of administration, such curtesy to be a life estate in the whole of such surplus of real estate, and such dower to be a life estate in the one third of such surplus or real estate.

The testator can entirely disinherit any or all of his children at his pleasure, with or without cause.

No will shall be valid unless it be in writing and signed by the testator, or by some other person in his presence and by his direction, in such manner as to make it manifest that the name is intended as a signature; and, moreover, unless it be wholly written by the testator the signature shall be made or the will acknowledged by him in the presence of at least two competent witnesses, present at the same time; and such witnesses shall subscribe the will in the presence of the testator, and of each other, but no form of attestation shall be necessary. (Code, ch. 77, § 3.)

The words "written" or "in writing" include any representation of words, letters, or figures, whether by printing, engraving, writing, or otherwise. But when the signature of any person is required, it must be in his own proper handwriting, or by his mark, attested, proved, or acknowledged. (Code, ch. 13, § 17.)

The will of a person domiciled out of this State at the time of his death shall be valid as to personal property in this State (but not as to realty), if it be executed according to the law of the State or country in which he was so domiciled. When executed out of this State, it must be executed according to the laws of this State, if intended to pass real estate in West Virginia.

A soldier, being in actual military service, or a mariner or seaman at sea, may dispose of his personal estate as he might heretofore have done by nuncupative will. (Code, ch. 77, § 5.) Minors, eighteen years of age or upwards, may by will dispose of personal estate.

WISCONSIN LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Bottum, Bottum, Hudnall & Lecher, of Milwaukee.

The next regular session of the legislature convenes on the second Wednesday in January, 1919.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — Actions are commenced by the service of a summons, by which, in courts of record, the defendant is required to appear or answer within twenty days; and in courts of justices of the peace the return day is designated. Circuit courts are courts of general jurisdiction. Actions relating to real estate must be brought in the county where the real estate is situated. Other actions may in general be brought in any county subject to the right of the defendant to demand a removal to the county where he resides. The place of trial of any action may be changed by an order of the court or presiding judge, if it appears to his satisfaction that there is reason to believe that an impartial trial cannot be had in the county designated, or where the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change. The court must change the place of trial if any party files an affidavit that he has good reason to believe and does believe that he cannot have a fair trial of such action on account of the prejudice of the judge, naming him, or in lieu thereof another judge may be called in to try such case.

Every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, except an executor or an administrator, or a trustee of an express trust, who may sue without joining with him the person for whose benefit the action is prosecuted. (§§ 2605, 2607.) Infants must appear in actions by guardians, who are appointed by the court in which the action is pending. (§§ 2613, 2614.)

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavit. — Affidavits for use in the courts of this State may be taken in any other State, Territory, or District of the United States, before any judge or commissioner of a court of record, master in chancery, notary public, justice of the peace, or other officer authorized by the law of such State, Territory, or District to administer oaths; and in case the same shall have been properly certified by any such officer to have been taken before him, and shall have attached thereto a certificate of the clerk of a court of record of the county or district within which such affidavit was taken, under the seal of his office, that the person whose name is subscribed to the jurat was, at the date thereof, such officer as he is therein represented to be, and that he believes the signature of such officer to be genuine, such affidavit may be used in any court within the State. When such affidavit is certified by any notary public and an impression of his official seal is thereto affixed, no further attestation is necessary. (§ 4203.)

Aliens. — A woman being an alien shall not on that account be barred of her dower; and any woman residing out of the State shall be entitled to dower, only, of lands of her husband, being in the State, of which he died seized. (§ 2160.)

It is unlawful for an alien not a resident of some State or Territory of the United States, or for a corporation not created under the laws of the United States or some State or Territory thereof, to acquire more than three hundred and twenty acres of land in the State except by devise, inheritance, or in good faith in the collection of debts by due process of law. No corporation more than twenty per cent. of whose stock is owned by non-resident aliens can acquire more than three hundred and twenty acres of land except in the collection of debts in good faith by judicial proceedings. (§ 2200 a.) Except as so restricted any alien may acquire and hold lands, or any right thereto, or interest therein, by purchase, devise, or descent, as freely as an American citizen; and he may convey, mortgage, and devise the same, and if he shall die intestate the same shall descend to his heirs. (§ 2200.)

Appeals. — Any party to a final judgment rendered by a justice of the peace may appeal therefrom to the circuit court, if such appeal be perfected within twenty days after the rendition of judgment. Such appeal is perfected by presenting to the justice a notice of appeal, together with an affidavit that the appeal is made in good faith and not for the purpose of delay, and by paying to the justice his fees in the action, together with one dollar for his return, two dollars clerk's fee, and one dollar for state tax. The proceedings on a judgment thus appealed from may be stayed by giving sufficient bond. When the judgment appealed from exceeds fifteen dollars, exclusive of costs, the appeal shall be tried in the appellate court as actions originally brought there. When the judgment appealed from is less than fifteen dollars, the appeal will be heard on the original papers and on the evidence returned by the justice. In some counties the appeal is to the county court or municipal or superior court. *

Appeals may be taken from judgments of the circuit court to the supreme court within one year after entry of judgment. (§ 3039.) Bill of exceptions must be made and served within sixty days after written notice of the entry of judgment. (§ 2876.)

Appeals may also be taken from the county court.

Arrest. — A defendant may be arrested on civil process: 1. In an action for the recovery of damages in a cause of action not arising out of contract, where the defendant is not a resident of the State, or is about to remove therefrom, or where the action is for injury to person or character, or for injuring or wrongfully taking, detaining, or converting property, and in actions to recover damages for the value of property obtained under false pretenses or false tokens. 2. In an action for a fine or penalty, or for money received or for property embezzled, or fraudulently misapplied by a public officer, or attorney, or an officer or agent of a corporation, or any factor, agent, broker, or any person in a fiduciary capacity, or for any misconduct or neglect in office or in a professional employment. 3. In an action to recover possession of personal property unjustly detained, where the property has been concealed, removed, or disposed of so that it cannot be found or taken by the sheriff; but no female shall be arrested in any action except for a willful injury to person, character, or property. (§ 2689.) An order of arrest is obtained from a judge of the court when it appears by affidavit that sufficient cause exists. (§§ 2690, 2691.) Before making an order of arrest the judge must require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff to the effect that if the defendant recover judgment the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the arrest, not exceeding the amount specified in the undertaking. (§ 2692.) The person arrested may be discharged from arrest upon giving bail. (§ 2696.) If the person arrested escape, the sheriff shall be liable as bail. (§ 2712.) The person arrested may apply to the court to vacate the order of arrest, or reduce the amount of bail. (§ 2715.)

Assignments. — Voluntary. This article is omitted for the reason that the national bankruptcy act of 1898 renders its insertion unnecessary.

Attachments. — Any creditor may procure a writ of attachment against the property of the debtor for a claim exceeding five dollars, whether a natural person or a corporation, except a municipal corporation, and except in an action brought to recover the value of spirituous, etc., liquors sold at retail. (§ 2729, as amended by ch. 276, Laws of 1909.) In the circuit court, the writ of attachment is issued by the clerk of the court at, or any time after, the issuing of a summons in the action before final judgment. (§ 2730.) Before the issuing of the writ of attachment the plaintiff, or some one in his behalf who has knowledge of the facts required to be stated, shall make an affidavit stating that the defendant named is indebted to the plaintiff in a sum exceeding fifty dollars, and specifying the amount of such indebtedness as near as may be, over and above all legal offsets, and that the sum is due upon a contract, express or implied, or upon a judgment or decree, and containing a further statement that deponent knows, or has good reason to believe, either: 1. That the defendant has absconded or is about to abscond from the State, or is concealed therein to the injury of his creditors, or keeps himself concealed therein with intent to avoid the service of a summons. 2. That the defendant has assigned, conveyed, disposed of, or concealed, or is about to assign, convey, dispose of, or conceal his property, or any part thereof, with intent to defraud his creditors. 3. That the defendant has removed or is about to remove any of his property out of the state, with intent to defraud his creditors. 4. That the defendant fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the obligation respecting which the action is brought. 5. That the defendant is not a resident of the State. 6. That the defendant is a foreign corporation; or, if created under the laws of this State, that all the proper officers thereof on whom to serve the summons do not exist, are non-residents of the State, or cannot be found. 7. That the action is brought against the defendant as principal on an official bond to recover money due the State or some county or other municipality therein, or that the action is brought against the defendant as principal on a bond or other instrument given as evidence of indebtedness for, or to secure the payment of, money embezzled or misapplied by such defendant whilst acting as an officer of the State or of any municipality therein. Or the affidavit shall state that a cause of action sounding in tort exists in favor of the plaintiff against the defendant; that the damages sustained and claimed exceed the sum of fifty dollars, specifying the amount claimed, and a further statement, either: 1. That the defendant, or any of the defendants, is, not or are not residents of this State, or that his or their residence is unknown and cannot with due diligence be ascertained; or, 2. That the defendant is a foreign corporation. A writ of attachment may be issued on a demand not yet due in any case mentioned under the first four subdivisions, but the affidavit must state that the debt is to become due. (§ 2731.)

If the affidavit for a writ of attachment be made by any person on behalf of the plaintiff, it must state that it is made on behalf of the plaintiff, and also the relation of deponent to plaintiff, and, unless he states that he knows the facts, it must give his grounds of information or belief. (58 Wis. 615.) But the indebtedness of the defendant must be stated positively, and by one having knowledge of the fact. (75 Wis. 212.) An affidavit for attachment may be amended before the trial. (§ 2731 a.)

Before the writ of attachment shall be executed, a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, with sufficient surety, — which, when the attachment is on a debt due, shall not be less than two hundred and fifty dollars, but when the attachment is on a debt not due must be three times the amount demanded, — shall be delivered to the officer to the effect that, if the defendant recover judgment, the plaintiff shall pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the writ. The surety shall justify his responsibility by affidavit annexed to the undertaking, setting forth that he is a resident and householder or freeholder within the State, and is worth the sum specified in the undertaking, in property within the State, over and above all his debts and exclusive of all property exempt from execution. (§§ 2731, 2732.) The defendant may apply to a judge of the court on a five days' notice for additional security, and the judge may require another undertaking in such sum as he shall deem proper, not exceeding the appraised value of the attached property. (§ 2733.) Alias writs of attachment may be issued in the same action to the sheriffs of different counties. (§ 2735.)

Personal property is attached by the officer by seizure; real estate, by filing in the office of the register of deeds a copy of the writ of attachment, with his certificate indorsed thereon, that by virtue of the original writ, of which such copy is a true copy, he has attached such real estate or all the interest of the defendant therein, describing the same with convenient certainty as the property of a defendant, naming him, in such writ. (§§ 2736, 2737.) The sheriff, when there is any reasonable doubt as to the ownership of the property, may require sufficient security to indemnify him. (§ 2739.) If the property attached shall be likely to perish or depreciate in value before the probable end of the action or the keeping thereof shall be attended with much loss or expense, the judge may order the same to be sold, and the proceeds will be held by the officer in lieu of the property sold. (§ 2740.) The defendant can secure a release of the property attached by delivering to the officer having the writ an undertaking, executed at least by two sureties, to the effect that they will on demand pay to the plaintiff the amount of the judgment, with all costs that may be recovered against such defendant in the action, with interest, in a sum at least double the amount alleged to be due in the affidavit annexed to the writ, or, at defendant's option, at least double the appraised value of the attached property; or, if real estate, in a sum to be fixed by the order of the judge. (§ 2742.) The defendant may traverse the affidavit for attachment by a special answer within ten days after notice of the issue of the writ, or within the time in which he may answer the complaint in the action, denying the existence of any or all the material facts stated therein, except the liability and the amount thereof. (§ 2745.) The assignee under a voluntary assignment for the benefit of creditors may also appear and traverse the affidavit. (§ 1693 b.) The issue so raised is tried by the court before the trial of the action, and the affirmative thereon is upon the plaintiff. (§ 2745.) If the court on the trial of such issue find for the defendant, and the attachment was on a debt not due, the action will be dismissed with costs (§ 2731); but if the attachment was on a debt due, an order will be entered that the attached property be delivered up to the defendant with costs; and then, upon the trial of the action, the jury must assess the damages sustained by the defendant by reason of the injury caused by the attachment, which amount shall be applied as a set-off to plaintiff's demand; and if in excess of it, the defendant may recover the amount of such excess. (§ 2746.) If the action be dismissed, or the defendant recover judgment, the jury shall specially assess the defendant's damages by reason of the attachment. (§ 2747.) Creditors attaching do not share pro rata, but according to their priority. Attachments may be issued from justice courts on similar conditions and in a similar manner, but no bond is required. The lien secured by attachment is dissolved if the debtor, being insolvent when the attachment was levied, within ten days after such levy make a voluntary assignment for benefit of his creditors, or if upon petition of two or more creditors filed within the additional time of thirty days a receiver is appointed as provided by § 1694 b.

Chattel Mortgages. — No form is prescribed by law. No mortgage of personal property is valid against any other person than parties thereto, unless the possession of the mortgaged property be delivered to and retain by the mortgagee, or unless the mortgage, or a copy thereof, be filed in the office of the clerk of the town, city, or village where the mortgagor resides, or, in case he is a non-resident, where the mortgaged property may be at the time of the execution of the mortgage, provided that when such mortgage be of a stock of goods, wares and merchandise or of the fixtures pertaining to the same, the mortgage, or a copy of it, shall in addition be filed in the office of the register of deeds of the county in which the town, village or city may be situated in the office of the clerk of which the mortgage or copy may be filed. (Ch. 575, Laws of 1913; §§ 2313, 2314.) Such mortgage ceases to be valid against the creditors of the persons making the same, or subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith, after the expiration of two years from the filing of the same unless within thirty days before the expiration of the two years the mortgagee, his agent or attorney, shall make and annex to the mortgage on file and in the proper case, to the copy on file in the office of the register of deeds an affidavit setting forth the interest which the mortgagee has by virtue of such mortgage in the property therein mentioned. (§ 2315.) By which means the mortgage remains valid for the two following years; and within thirty days of the expiration of said two following years a like affidavit may be filed with like effect. (§ 2316.) The mortgaged property cannot be sold until five days after it was taken under the mortgage except by consent of the mortgagor. (§ 2316 a.) No public sale shall be made unless at least five days before such sale the mortgagee shall serve upon the owner of the equity of redemption, if he reside within the county, written notice of such proposed sale either as a circuit court summons is served or by registered mail. At any time prior to forty-eight hours of such sale, the mortgagor may notify mortgagee that he elects to have such public sale conducted by an auctioneer or other competent person, not interested in the sale or the property, and thereafter no other person shall conduct the sale unless such person fails to attend, when any other person at the request of the owner of the mortgage may do it. § 2316 m; ch. 280, Laws of 1909.)

Chattel mortgages upon exempt personal property shall not be valid unless the same be signed by the wife of the mortgagor, if he be a married man, and his wife a member of his family, and her signature witnessed by two witnesses. (§ 2313.) Any person who has conveyed any personal property by mortgage, who shall, during the existence of the lien or title created by such mortgage, sell or remove said property with intent to defraud the mortgagee, shall be punished by imprisonment not more than six months, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. (§ 4467.)

A chattel mortgage transferring a stock of goods, except "such articles as are by law exempted from levy and sale under execution, is void for uncertainty of description." (Fowler v. Hunt, 48 Wis. 345.)

An agreement between the mortgagor and mortgagee, that the mortgagor may apply proceeds of the sale of mortgaged property to his support, renders a mortgage void as to creditors. (Steinar v. Deuster, 23 Wis. 136; Blakeslee v. Rossman, 43 Wis. 116.) It is unlawful to charge more than ten per cent. interest, or more than seven per cent. per annum on all sums of one hundred dollars or less, and four per cent. per annum on all sums over one hundred dollars, in full for examinations, views, commissions, or any other charges whatever for making or procuring a loan secured by chattel mortgage or by an assignment of wages. (§ 1691, ch. 278, Laws of 1905.)

A chattel mortgage executed by an insolvent debtor upon his property within sixty days prior to the making of an assignment, and in contemplation thereof or of insolvency, becomes void if the mortgagee knew or had reasonable cause to believe such debtor insolvent. (§ 1693 a.) Where the mortgagor retains possession of stock in trade under an agreement to apply proceeds of sales upon the debt, he must file in the office where mortgage is filed and a copy in the office of the register of deeds, in the proper case a sworn statement in writing of sales made, and amounts to be applied upon the mortgage debt, and the total valuation of stock added, every sixty days from the date of such mortgage, or last statement filed. A delay of fifteen days after the expiration of the sixty days to file such statement makes the mortgage due, and it ceases to be a lien as to third parties. Subject to the above conditions and requirements, a chattel mortgage may be made to cover after-acquired stock. (§ 2316 b.) On payment of mortgage debt, mortgagor may demand certificate from mortgagee stating such payment, and in case the mortgage or a copy thereof was filed in the office of the register of deeds, two certificates, which certificates may be filed by mortgagor, and he may then remove mortgage from files. (§ 2317 a.)

The mortgagor, his wife, or assignee, may redeem the mortgaged property at any time within five days after sale upon payment of the sale price, costs, and subsequent expenses. (Ch. 410, Laws of 1911.)

Claims against Estates. — These claims are usually required, by order of the county court in probate having jurisdiction, to be presented within six months after letters are issued, but the time may be fixed by the court not to exceed one year nor less than four months after filing of petition for administration, and the time may be extended in proper cases by the court, although rarely done; the application for an extension should be made before the time first limited expires, or within two months thereafter. (§ 3840.) Time for proving claims may be enlarged, but not to exceed two years in all from the granting of administration. (Ch. 171, Laws of 1893, § 1.) Claims not presented within the time fixed are forever barred. (§ 3844.) Notice of the order is given by its publication in some newspaper in the county. From the allowance or disallowance of a claim in the county court either party may appeal to the circuit court within sixty days. The only preferred debts are the expenses of the last sickness and the funeral, and those preferred by the United States laws. All others are paid equally by dividend, if the estate be insufficient to pay in full. (§ 3852.) No different proof is required of non-residents than of residents.

Claims when filed should be accompanied by a statement of account verified by affidavit showing that the claim is just and correct, and that no part thereof has been paid. Claims so verified, unless objected to by some person interested in the estate, may be allowed without further proof, in the discretion of the court. All claims are examined and adjusted by the judge, or by commissioners appointed by the court. The claimant is not competent as a witness in respect to any transaction or communication by him personally with the deceased person, unless the executor or administrator shall first be examined or examine some other witness in his behalf concerning the claim, or unless the testimony of the deceased given in his lifetime respecting the claim be first put in evidence by the executor or administrator. (§ 4069.)

A foreign executor or administrator may sue for the property, real or personal, belonging to the estate represented by him in this State when no executor or administrator has been appointed in this State, but must first file his original letters of appointment, or a copy thereof duly authenticated, in some county court of this State. He then has the same rights and remedies as an executor or administrator appointed in this State. (§ 3267.)

In granting letters of administration, preference is had to the persons named, in the following order: 1. The widow or next of kin, or both, as the court may think proper; or, upon request of the widow or next of kin, the court may appoint some other competent person. If widow or next of kin neglect for thirty days to apply, administration may be granted to some other person. 2. To one or more of principal creditors, if such are competent. 3. If there be no widow or next of kin or creditor competent, they may be granted to such other person as the court thinks proper. 4. If there be no application for administration by widow or next of kin or creditor, for sixty days after the death of any person, any one in whose favor a cause of action exists, which cannot be maintained without such appointment, may apply for and obtain appointment of administrator upon proper showing by petition. Bonds are required of the administrator in such sum as the court shall direct, with sureties to be approved by the court.

Certain allowances are made which take precedence of claims of creditors, heirs, legatees, and devisees. The widow is allowed all her own articles of apparel and ornaments and those of her husband, household furniture not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars in value, and other personal property not exceeding two hundred dollars. The widow and minor children, or either, constituting the family of deceased, are given a reasonable allowance out of the personal estate or income of the real estate pending the settlement of the estate, or until their shares are assigned to them, but, if the estate is insolvent, not for a longer time than one year after letters testamentary or of administration have been granted. Minor children are allowed their articles of apparel and ornaments, and if there is no widow and no will may take the same amount of household furniture and other personal property as a widow might and their father's articles of apparel and ornaments. If there are children under seven years of age and no widow an allowance is made for their necessary maintenance out of the personal estate or income of real estate until they reach the age of seven. If the whole estate does not exceed one thousand dollars in value in addition to the foregoing allowances, the whole of it, after payment of funeral and administration expenses, may be assigned to the widow and minor children and for the support of the children under seven years of age, if there be no widow. Any excess goes first to the payment of debts and after that to devisees and legatees, or heirs and next of kin, in accordance with the terms of the will, or the statutes of descent and distribution. (§ 3935.)

Within sixty days after time limited for creditors to present claims, administrator or executor must render account of his administration. Thereupon the court makes an order for application of the funds to the payment of debts. At the time of granting letters testamentary or of administration, the court may in that order provide that all claims for necessary funeral expenses, for those of the last sickness of the decedent and for preferred debts under federal laws, which shall have been presented within sixty days after the date of such order will be adjusted at the next regular or special term of that court following the expiration of the period of the sixty days. Upon allowance of such claims, the court shall forthwith order them paid, provided that if there are insufficient funds to pay them in full, they shall be paid in the order provided by § 3852 (as stated above). (§ 3840.) He must also render an account from time to time, whenever required by the court, until the settlement of the estate.

Conditional Sales. — Contracts for the sale of personal property, by the terms of which title is to remain in the vendor and the possession in the vendee until the purchase price is paid or other conditions of sale are complied with, are void as against any other person than the parties and those having notice, unless the contract be in writing, subscribed by the parties, and the same or a copy filed in the office of the clerk of the town, city, or village where the vendee resides, or, if he be a non-resident of the State, in the office of the clerk of the town, city, or village where the property may be at the time of making the contract. When so filed, the contract is valid for one year after the time fixed for payment of the contract price, or for the performance of the other conditions of the sale. (§ 2317.)

Contracts for the sale of furniture or other household effects made on condition that the title should not pass until the price is paid in full, whether such contract be in the form of a lease or otherwise, must be in writing and filed as above specified, and a copy thereof furnished the vendee by the vendor at the time of sale. All payments made by or on behalf of the vendee, and all charges, whether in the nature of interest or otherwise, as they accrue, must be indorsed by the vendor or his agents upon such copy, if the vendee so request. If the vendor fails to comply with any of these provisions through negligence, his rights under such contract are suspended while the default continues, and if he refuse or willfully or fraudulently fails to comply with these provisions he waives the conditions of the sale. The vendor, upon taking possession of such furniture or effects for non-compliance with the terms of the contract, must furnish the vendee or other person in charge of such property an itemized statement of account, showing the amount due, and the vendee may at any time within fifteen days after such taking redeem the property so taken, by paying the full amount of the price then unpaid, together with the interest and lawful charges and expenses. (§ 2319 b.)

Consignments. — Every consignee of property has a lien thereon for any money advanced or negotiable security given by him to or for the use of any person in whose name the shipment of such property is made, and for any money or negotiable security received by such person for his use, unless he shall, before advancing any such money or giving such actual security, or before it is so received for his use, have notice that such person is not the owner thereof. (§ 3345.)

Any factor, carrier, warehouseman, storage, forwarding or commission merchant, or any bailee, executor, administrator, guardian, or any trustee, agent, clerk, attorney, messenger, employee, or servant of any private person, corporation, copartnership, or association, except apprentices or other persons under the age of sixteen, who by virtue of his business or employment shall have the care, custody, or possession of, or shall be intrusted with the safe-keeping, disbursement, investment, or payment of any money, or shall have the care, custody, or possession of, or shall be intrusted with the safe-keeping, carrying, sale, or delivery of any goods, wares, merchandise, produce, lumber, or any other property or thing which is the subject of larceny, belonging to such other person, corporation, copartnership, or association, and shall embezzle or fraudulently convert to his own use, or to the use of any other person except the owner thereof, or shall take, carry away, or secrete, with intent to convert to his own use or to the use of any other person except the owner thereof, any such money, fund, goods, wares, merchandise, produce, lumber, or any other property or thing, shall be punished, if the money or property so embezzled shall exceed the value of twenty-five thousand dollars, by imprisonment in the state prison not more than twenty-five years nor less than ten years, and if the money or property so embezzled shall not exceed the value of twenty-five thousand dollars and shall exceed the value of ten thousand dollars, by imprisonment in the state prison not more than twenty years nor less than five years, or if the money or property so embezzled shall not exceed the value of ten thousand dollars and shall exceed the value of one thousand dollars, by imprisonment in the state prison not more than ten years nor less than one year; and if the money or property so embezzled shall exceed the value of one hundred dollars and shall not exceed the value of one thousand dollars, by imprisonment in the state prison not more than five years nor less than one year; and if the money or property so embezzled shall not exceed the value of one hundred dollars and shall exceed the value of twenty dollars, by imprisonment in the state prison or county jail not more than one year nor less than six months or by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars; and if the money or property so embezzled shall not exceed the value of twenty dollars, by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. (§ 4418.)

Corporations. -- Provision is made by law for the formation of corporations for almost any purpose, and the stockholders are liable only to the amount of stock subscribed by them until the same is fully paid, except in the case of banking corporations, in which the stockholders, in addition to the liability of their stock, are personally liable for the debts of the bank to the amount of their respective share or shares of stock. There is also a limited personal liability for wages in the case of corporations generally. The legislature is prohibited from granting corporate powers by special act. Delivery of certificates of stock with written transfer by the owner, to a bona fide purchaser, passes title. Each share is entitled to one vote at stockholder's meetings unless otherwise provided in the articles and certificates. The general provisions governing corporations are contained in chapters 85 and 86 of the statutes.

Corporations are organized by at least three citizens of Wisconsin making and acknowledging written articles containing a declaration that they associate under the statutes of Wisconsin, and of the business and purpose thereof; the name and location of such corporation; the capital stock; number of shares and par value of each; if formed without capital stock a statement of that fact; the designation of officers and their duties, and number of directors (not less than three); the method and condition of membership, and any other provisions or articles not inconsistent with law. (§§ 1771, 1772.) By-laws may be made not inconsistent with charter or law. The original articles, or a verified copy, must be filed with the secretary of state, and a verified copy and certificate of secretary of state must be recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county in which the corporation is located. There must be paid to the secretary of state for filing articles of incorporation for the manufacture of beet sugar, butter, cheese, or other dairy products or of corporations organized for the business of preparing for market, storing and selling products of the farms of members of such corporation, ten dollars, and five dollars for any amendment; for filing articles of incorporation of other corporations, unless specially provided otherwise, twenty-five dollars, if the capital stock is twenty-five thousand dollars or less, and if more, one dollar for each additional one thousand dollars of capital stock; for filing amendments ten dollars and in addition one dollar for each one thousand dollars of increase when the amendment increases the capital stock; but no fee is required from corporations without capital stock or organized exclusively for educational, benevolent, charitable, or reformatory purpose, the articles of which provide that no dividend or pecuniary profits shall be declared to the members thereof. (§ 1772.) For corporations formed for mining within the State, the maximum fee is one hundred and fifty dollars.

The directors need not be residents or citizens, but must be stockholders. Corporations are prohibited from transacting business with any others than their members until at least one half of the capital stock shall have been duly subscribed and at least twenty per cent. thereof actually paid in. (§ 1773.) Preferred stock may be issued.

Corporations organized as above have power to make all necessary contracts, to sue and be sued, to have a common seal, to appoint agents, to have such other powers as are necessary or convenient for the accomplishment of their purposes, including the right to take and hold mortgages and convey real and personal property, and they may hold stock in other corporations with the assent of the holders of three fourths of the capital stock of both companies, but in certain cases a corporation may hold stock in certain other corporations with the assent of the holders of three fourths of its own capital stock only. Such stock may be voted by the president or any other person authorized by the directors. (Ch. 12, Laws of 1905.) Conveyances of real estates by corporations should be authorized by a vote of a majority of the stock unless organized for the purpose of dealing in real estate. (Ch. 201, 1911; § 1775.) General authority regularly given by the stockholders to the officers to sell property would satisfy this statute. (111 Wis. 387.)

Corporations engaged in conducting a collection agency or collection office in the State are required, before engaging in business, to file a five thousand dollar bond with the secretary of state, conditioned to turn over all moneys collected. This does not apply to attorneys-at-law, banks or trust companies, or professional men's associations required by law to have a license or permit. (Ch. 267, Laws of 1915.)

Corporations controlled by aliens are subject to certain restrictions noted above under the title Aliens, which see.

Stock can only be issued on payment of its full par value in money, labor, or property. (§ 1753, amended by ch. 576, Laws of 1907.)

As to the sale of stocks and bonds of certain corporations, what is commonly known as The Blue Sky Law, which relates to dealers in stocks and bonds and the sale thereof in the organization and promotion of corporations, is now in force and effect. (Ch. 756, Laws of 1913.)

Domestic corporations for profit are required annually between the first day of January and the first day of March to file with the secretary of state a report governed by the provisions of § 1774a.

The method of organization and powers of railroad, insurance, building and loan, and religious corporations and societies are governed by chs. 87-93 of the statutes amended by later session laws. Ch. 94 covers the subject of banking corporations. Telegraph, telephone, trust, and log-driving corporations are governed by special provisions found in ch. 86 of the statutes of 1898 and subsequent amendments. See ch. 94, sub-chapter IV of Statutes, in regard to trust company banks.

Ch. 51 of the Statutes of 1917 prescribes the method of taxation of public utility corporations.

Express companies, companies owning dining, buffet, chair, parlor, palace, or sleeping cars, freight line companies and equipment companies, make reports to the state board of assessment in July and pay a tax to the state treasurer levied by the state board of assessment within thirty days after the mailing of notice of the tax. Real estate of railroad companies not necessarily used in operating the railroad is taxed in the same manner as that of individuals. Companies operating street railways, or manufacturing or furnishing electric light or power in connection with the operation of a street railway, pay an annual tax, levied by the state board of assessment, on or before the 1st day of December in each year, to the state treasurer. This tax is determined by the average rate of taxation within the State of other property. Elaborate reports are made by such corporations to the board of assessment annually between July 1 and September 1. Telegraph companies pay the state treasurer a tax upon the true cash value of all their property in the State, levied by the state board of assessment. Telephone companies pay an annual license fee, computed upon their total gross receipts, to wit: 1, five per cent. of the total gross receipts if such gross receipts equal or exceed five hundred thousand dollars; 2, four per cent, if gross receipts are between three hundred thousand dollars and five hundred thousand dollars; 3, three per cent, if gross receipts are between one hundred thousand dollars and three hundred thousand dollars; 4, two and one half per cent, if less than one hundred thousand dollars, on or before March 1. Eighty-five per cent. of such fee is paid to the city treasurer of the city in which any telephone exchange is located, and the balance to the state treasurer, and file a report at the same time with the state treasurer and the treasurer of every such city. Real estate of such companies not exclusively used in carrying on their business is taxed like that of individuals. (§ 1222 a, and ch. 488, Laws of 1905.) Life insurance companies, except such fraternal societies as have lodge organizations and insure the lives of their own members, pay the state treasurer on March 1 an annual license fee regulated in amount by circumstances too numerous to be stated here. Real estate is taxed in addition. Fire and inland navigation and transportation insurance companies, except certain restricted forms of mutual insurance companies organized under the laws of the State, file with the commissioner of insurance in the month of January a report and pay him on or before January 31 an annual license fee of two and three-eighths per cent. on the amount of gross income received for direct insurance, less return premiums and cancellations on direct insurance in the State. Companies for the guaranty of titles pay a small license fee in lieu of all taxes, and return to the state treasurer an annual report on the second Tuesday of January. (§ 1771 i.) The capital stock and property of trust company banks shall be assessed and taxed in the same manner as the stock and property of state banks.

Corporations, partnerships, and individuals operating coal docks, other than docks used solely in connection with an industry and handling no coal except that consumed by such industry, shall pay on or before December 15, an annual occupation tax equal to one and a half cents per ton upon all bituminous coal and two cents per ton upon all anthracite handled by or over such dock during the preceding year ending April 30, and such coal is exempt from all taxation either state or municipal. Reports are furnished local assessors of the coal handled. Such occupation tax is an offset against income taxes. (Ch. 555, Laws of 1917.)

Corporations operating grain elevators or warehouses in the State, except elevators and warehouses on farms for the storage of grain raised by the owner thereof, shall pay, on or before December 15, an annual occupation tax of a sum equal to one fourth of one mill per bushel on all wheat and flax and one eighth of one mill per bushel on all other grain received in or handled by such elevator or warehouse during the preceding year ending April 30, and such grain shall be exempt from all taxation.

Casualty and suretyship insurance companies pay to the insurance commissioner on or before March 1 in every year a license fee for transacting such business of two per cent. on gross premium receipts of the previous year on policies written on lives of residents or property in the State. (§ 51.313.)

Foreign fire or fire and inland navigation or transportation insurance companies pay same license fee at same time as domestic companies of same character. (See above.)

Foreign life insurance corporations must file in the office of the commissioner of insurance, on or before March 1, the same verified statements of their business, standing, and affairs covering the year ending on the preceding 31st of December required of domestic companies. They must pay the state treasurer on or before March 1 an annual license fee of three hundred dollars, but if the laws of the State of such company require a larger fee from foreign companies, the company shall pay such larger amount in this State. The payment of such license fee shall be in lieu of all taxes for any purpose except taxes on real estate. (§ 51.32.)

The property of railroad, street railway, telegraph, telephone, electric light or power companies, etc., is liable for special assessments for local improvements.

Foreign Corporations. — These are governed by §§ 1770 a to 1770 j, for the purpose of whose provisions the word "corporation" includes all corporations, associations, companies, joint stock or express companies organized otherwise than under the laws of Wisconsin, except railroad corporations, corporations or associations created solely for religious or charitable purposes, insurance, fraternal and beneficiary corporations, societies, orders, and associations. No such "corporation" shall transact business or acquire, hold, or dispose of property in this State until it has filed in the office of the secretary of state a copy of its charter, articles of association or incorporation and all amendments thereto, duly certified by the secretary of its home State or other officer with whom the originals are required to be filed, with a certificate of such secretary of state that such other officer is the proper one to certify the same, but this is not to be construed as prohibiting loaning money within the State and taking security therefor, provided such foreign corporation shall first file a written statement with the secretary of state appointing such officer its agent upon whom process may be served. (Ch. 26, Laws of 1915.) There must be filed with the copy of the articles of association or incorporation a sworn statement not unlike that required of domestic corporations, and in which the corporation is required to state that it appoints the secretary of state its lawful attorney to receive service of summons, notices, pleadings, or process in any action or proceeding against it in respect to any liability arising out of any business, contract, or transaction within the State, and that as a condition of doing business in the State it will comply with all the laws regarding foreign corporations. On filing the articles of association or incorporation a fee of twenty-five dollars is to be paid and one dollar additional for every thousand dollars of its capital stock in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars employed or to be employed in this State. Amendments must be filed within thirty days after filing with the proper officer in the home State. For filing an amendment a fee of ten dollars is to be paid, and in addition, where the amendment increases the capital stock, an additional dollar for every thousand dollars of increased capital stock to be used within the State. Annual reports are also to be filed with the secretary of state between the first day of January and the first day of March. A fee of two dollars is to be paid on filing such report, and if it shows an increase in its capital employed in the State there is a fee of one dollar to be paid for every thousand dollars of such increase. Every summons, notice, pleading, or process served on the secretary of state in suits against a foreign corporation licensed to carry on business in the State must be served in duplicate, and he is to mail one copy to the corporation at its principal place of business within the United States. The license to do business within the State will be revoked if such corporation remove into the federal courts any action brought against it by any citizen of this State upon any claim or cause of action arising within the State. A similar consequence follows the entry of any such corporation into an unlawful combination in restraint of trade within the State. An affidavit stating whether such corporation has entered into any such combination must be filed with its articles of association or corporation and with its annual report. Upon complying with the statute a license is issued by the secretary of state. All such corporations are subjected to all the liabilities and restrictions that are or may be imposed upon corporations of like character organized under the laws of this State, and have no other or greater power.

Courts, Terms, and Jurisdiction of. — See Court Calendar for Wisconsin.

Curtesy. — A husband holds lands of which his wife has died seized without having disposed of them by will, as tenant by the curtesy, but not against children of a former husband to whom such lands might descend. (§ 2180.)

Deeds. — A scroll or device used as a seal has the force and effect of a seal. (§ 2215.) No covenant shall be implied in any conveyance. (§ 2204.)

Every conveyance of land must be by sealed instrument, and it must, in order to entitle it to record, be acknowledged by the grantors and attested by two subscribing witnesses; if by a corporation, it shall be signed by its president or other authorized officer of the corporation, sealed with the corporate seal, and countersigned by the secretary or clerk thereof. A conveyance by a married man of his homestead except to her is of no effect without his wife's consent evidenced by her act of joining in the conveyance. (Ch. 45, Laws of 1905.) The persons executing any conveyance may acknowledge the execution thereof before any judge or clerk of a court of record, court commissioner, county clerk, notary public, justice of the peace, police justice, or United States court commissioner who has filed a certified copy of his appointment with the clerk of the circuit court of the county where he resides; and the officer taking such acknowledgment must indorse thereon a certificate of acknowledgment and the true date of the making of the same under his hand. Literal "indorsement," or writing the acknowledgment on the back of the instrument, is unnecessary. The acknowledgment may be upon a separate piece of paper attached to the instrument. (52 Wis. 662.)

The certificate of acknowledgment is sufficient if made substantially in the following form: —

[Certificate of acknowledgment before notary public by husband and wife.]

STATE OF WISCONSIN, COUNTY,

} ss.

Personally came before me this day of 19 the above (or within) named A. B. and C. B., his wife (or if an officer adding name of his office), to me known to be the persons who executed the foregoing (or within) instrument and acknowledged the same.

(Signature and designation of officer.)

If the acknowledgment is taken before a notary public it must be attested by a clear impression of the official seal of the officer, and in addition there must be written or stamped the day, month, and year when the commission of the notary public will expire.

Conveyances executed in other States and Territories of the United States may be executed and acknowledged in the same manner as conveyances which are executed and acknowledged within the State or according to the laws of such State or Territory, and the execution thereof may be acknowledged before any judge or clerk of a court of record, notary public, justice of the peace, master in chancery, or other officer authorized by the laws of such State or Territory to take acknowledgments of deeds therein, or before any commissioner appointed by the governor of the State for such purpose; and if executed within any military post within the United States it may be acknowledged before the commanding officer thereof. Unless acknowledgments be taken before a commissioner appointed by the governor of this State for that purpose, a clerk of a court of record, with his seal attached, a notary public, with his seal attached, or a commanding officer of a military post, such conveyances shall have attached thereto a certificate of the clerk or other proper certifying officer of a court of record of the county or district within which such acknowledgment was taken, under the seal of his office, that the person whose name is subscribed to the certificate of acknowledgment was at the date thereof such officer as he is represented to be, and that he believes the signature of such person subscribed thereto to be genuine, and if such deed be executed and acknowledged according to the laws of such States or Territories such certificate shall state that fact, and if such deed shall be executed and acknowledged according to the laws of such State or Territory, and before such commissioner, clerk of a court of record, notary public, or commanding officer of a military post, the certificate of acknowledgment shall certify that fact. If any conveyance be executed in a foreign country, it may be executed in the manner prescribed for conveyances within the State or according to the laws of such country, and the execution thereof acknowledged before an ambassador, minister, envoy, or chargé d'affaires of the United States in the country to which he is accredited, or before one of the following officers commissioned or accredited to act at the place where the acknowledgment is taken and having an official seal, viz: any consular officer of the United States, a notary public, or a commissioner or other agent of the State having power to take acknowledgments. The certificate of acknowledgment shall be practically the same as required on instruments executed within the State, except that in addition it shall contain a statement of fact that the person making the acknowledgment knew the contents of the instrument, also the name of the person before whom made, his official title and be sealed with his official seal, although an acknowledgment in the form required within the State shall be valid if executed before the above designated officers. (Ch. 275, Laws of 1915.) If executed according to the laws of such country the certificate of acknowledgment shall certify that fact.

Deeds and other written instruments heretofore executed and acknowledged in accordance with the foregoing provisions are declared to be entitled to be read in evidence and to be recorded.

Affidavits stating facts touching the identity of a party to any conveyance of record may be recorded in the office of the register of deeds in any county where such conveyance is recorded, and the record of any such affidavit, or a certified copy thereof, shall be prima facie evidence of the facts touching the identity of such party, which are therein stated. (Ch. 302, Laws of 1909.)

and shall serve a copy thereof on the adverse party, with a notice that at the expiration of ten days from the date of such service a commission will be issued to take the deposition of the witness accordingly, specifying the cause or reason for which the same is so to be taken. Within such ten days the adverse party may file with the clerk and serve upon the other party his objections to the interrogatories, and also his cross-interrogatories, and may state the name of any other person whom he desires to act as an additional commissioner, and his residence. At the expiration of the ten days the commission is issued with the interrogatories direct and cross, and transmitted to the commissioner first named. (§ 4114.) The commissioner named in the direct interrogatories shall fix the time and place for executing the commission and shall give notice to the other commissioner. (§ 4115.) The commissioner shall publicly administer an oath to each witness, that the answer that he shall make to each of the interrogatories propounded to him shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; which interrogatories shall then be propounded to him, and his answers thereto be correctly reduced to writing, and, with any exhibits thereto to be annexed, returned by the commissioner. (Rule of Court.) Each witness shall subscribe his name at the end of his answers, and the commissioners shall subscribe their names at the foot of each page of the testimony. (Rule of Court.) The commissioners shall certify in their return that each witness was duly sworn or affirmed before giving his evidence, and shall also state the time when the testimony was taken. (Rule of Court.) The return of the commissioner shall be indorsed on the commission. (Rule of Court.) When the answers to all interrogatories shall have been signed and annexed to the commission upon which the return shall be indorsed, the proper commissioner shall inclose the same in a suitable envelope, which shall be properly sealed, and direct the same to the clerk of the court from which the commission issued, at his place of office, with the title of the action indorsed thereon, and the package shall be immediately transmitted to him by mail or express. (Rule of Court.) The form of certificate set out above may be used when depositions are taken without the State.

Depositions in the nature of discovery may be taken at the instance of an adverse party at any time after the commencement of the action and before judgment, and the following classes of persons examined, to wit: a party, his or its assignor, officer, agent, or employee, or of the person who was such officer, agent, or employee at the time of the occurrence of the facts made the subject of the examination, or in case a county, town, village, or city be a party, the examination of any officer of such county, town, village or city may be taken. As many such examinations before issue joined may be had, at different times and places, as there are individuals to be examined; but no individual shall be examined more than once, except that there may be another examination after issue joined.

A party who is a non-resident may be examined, the court upon motion fixing the time and place of such examination. (§ 4096.)

Descent and Distribution of Property. — Real property undeviseed descends, subject to the debts of the decedent, also to homestead and dower rights of the widow, and husband's rights as tenant by the curtesy, as follows, if not a homestead: 1. In equal shares to the children and to the lawful issue of any deceased child by right of representation. 2. If no issue, to widow or surviving husband. 3. If no children, surviving husband, or widow, to the parents or surviving parent. 4. If no issue, widow, or parent, to decedent's brothers and sisters and their children by representation. 5. If no issue, widow, parent, brother, or sister, to his next of kin. 6. If no widow or kindred, the property shall escheat to the State and be added to the capital of the school fund. (§ 2270.)

The homestead, if undeviseed, shall descend free of all judgments and claims, except mortgages lawfully executed, laborers' and mechanics' liens, as follows: 1. If there be no lawful issue, to the widow. 2. If there be a widow and issue, to the widow during her widowhood, and upon her marriage or death, to the heirs. 3. If there be issue and no widow, to such issue; if there be no widow or minor child the homestead is chargeable with expenses of last sickness, funeral expenses, and expenses of administration; if there be no widow and no child, and no child of any deceased child, then to the heirs as other real estate subject to decedent's debts. (§ 2271.)

Personal property undeviseed after certain special allowances to widow and minor children (see ante under Claims against Estates) is to be distributed in the same manner as real estate, except that when the deceased shall leave a widow and lawful issue, the widow takes a child's share when there is only one child and in all other cases one-third. (§ 3935.)

If a person die leaving several children, or one child and the issue of one or more children, and any such surviving child die under age not having been married, all the estate that came to the deceased child by inheritance or by testamentary gift from such deceased parent, and the personal property which belonged to such deceased child by reason of distribution under subdivision 6 of section 3935 Statutes of Wisconsin, shall descend and be distributed in equal shares to the other children of the same parent, and to the issue of any such other children who shall have died, by right of representation. (§ 2270.) The county judge may issue certificate setting forth the names of heirs and the interest of each in the realty, which, or a certified copy thereof, may be recorded, and shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated. (§ 2276 a, amended ch. 196, Laws of 1909.) In the final settlement of an estate the county court makes an order naming the persons entitled to the real estate of the deceased and assigning to each his share. Such finding as to heirship and assignment of real estate is presumptive evidence of the facts so found, and is conclusive as to all persons appearing in the proceeding and all persons claiming under them. (Ch. 635. Laws of 1907.)

Divorce. — Divorce is of two kinds: 1. From the bonds of matrimony. 2. From bed and board. (§ 2353.)

No marriage shall be contracted while either of the parties has a husband or wife living, nor between persons who are nearer of kin than second cousins, computing by the rule of the civil law, whether of the half or of the whole blood, and no insane person or idiot shall be capable of contracting marriage. It shall not be lawful for any person who is a party to an action for a divorce from the bonds of matrimony in any court of this State to marry again until one year after the judgment of divorce is entered, and the marriage of any such person solemnized before such time has elapsed shall be null and void. It shall not be lawful for any person divorced from the bonds of matrimony by the judgment of any court of this State prior to the time this act shall go into effect to marry again within one year from the date of the entry of such judgment or decree, and the marriage of any such person solemnized within one year from the date of entry of any such judgment or decree of divorce shall be null and void. (§ 2330.) When the validity of a marriage is denied or doubted by either party, the other party may commence an action to affirm the marriage. (§ 2352.) A divorce from the bond of matrimony may be adjudged for: 1. Adultery. 2. Impotency. 3. Sentence to three years' or more imprisonment. 4. Willful desertion for one year next preceding commencement of suit. 5. Cruel and inhuman treatment, or when the wife shall be given to intoxication. 6. Habitual drunkenness for one year immediately preceding the commencement of the suit. 7. Voluntary separation for five years. (§ 2356.) When such a divorce is granted, the wife is not entitled to dower in her husband's lands. (§ 2373.)

A divorce from bed and board forever or for a limited time may be adjudged for: 1. The 4th, 5th, or 6th causes above specified; 2. Extreme cruelty of either party; 3. On complaint of wife, when the husband, being of sufficient ability, refuses or neglects to provide for her, or when his conduct toward her is such as may render it unsafe and improper for her to live with him. (§ 2357.) In any of these cases, the court may decree a permanent separation or for a limited time, with power in the parties, upon reconciliation, to obtain a revocation or suspension of the decree. (§ 2370.) The court may also in discretion grant a divorce from the bonds of matrimony for the second or third cause last stated. (§ 2358.)

A marriage may be annulled for any of the following causes existing at the time of marriage: 1. Incurable impotence, with ignorance of such state at the time of marriage by party making the application. 2. Consanguinity (see supra), but not after the death of either party. 3. Either party having another husband or wife living at the time of marriage. 4. Fraud or coercion, at suit of innocent party, unless the marriage has been confirmed by the injured party. 5. Insanity, etc., unless known of at time of marriage or subsequently confirmed. 6. At suit of wife, under sixteen years at time of marriage, or 7. Of husband, under eighteen years, unless confirmed by her or him after arriving at such ages respectively. (§ 2351.) In these cases jurisdiction is obtained by publication or personal service within the State when either party is a bona fide resident of the State at the time of the commencement of the action. (§ 2354.)

For the purposes of divorce, either a vinculo or a mensa et thoro, jurisdiction is acquired by publication or personal service upon the defendant within the State, 1, when, at the time the cause of action arose, either party was a bona fide resident of the State and has continued so down to the commencement of the action, except that no action for absolute divorce shall be commenced for any cause other than adultery or bigamy unless one of the parties has been for the two years next preceding the commencement of the action a bona fide resident of this State; 2, if, since the cause of action arose, either party for at least two years next preceding the commencement of the action has continued to be a bona fide resident of the State. (§ 2355.) Judgments of divorce provide for alimony and the care, custody, maintenance, and education of the children (§ 2362), and this may also be done even though the divorce be denied. (§ 2366.)

No divorce will be granted upon proof of collusion, connivance, or condonation. (§ 2360.) All hearings and trials shall be had before the court publicly. (§ 2360 g and j.) In all counties of less than two hundred and fifty thousand in population, the circuit or judges shall appoint a divorce counsel for that county. In other counties, the district attorney or any assistant district attorney shall so act. The divorce counsel must be served, within ten days after service on the defendant, with a copy of the summons and complaint by the plaintiff (§ 2360 h-1), and within ten days after the service of it, with a copy of the answer by the defendant. No decree in an uncontested matter shall be granted until the court is fully advised upon the case by the divorce counsel (§ 2360 h-2), and affirmative proof aside from any admission to the plaintiff by the defendant must be shown. (§ 2360 i.)

By § 2374, the judgment of divorce may be opened and is ineffective as affecting the status of the parties within one year from the date of its entry.

Full faith and credit shall be given in this State to a decree of annulment of marriage or divorce by a court of competent jurisdiction in another State, Territory, or possession of the United States when the jurisdiction of such court was obtained in substantial conformity with the provisions of sections 2358 and 2359. (§ 2360 r.)

Dower. — The widow of every deceased person is entitled to dower or use during her natural life of one third part of all the lands whereof her husband was seized of an estate of inheritance during coverture unless lawfully barred, except that a woman residing out of the State has dower only in lands of which her husband died seized; but in case of lands received in exchange for other land she must elect in which to have dower. (§§ 2159-2161.) A woman may be barred of her dower by a jointure settled upon her, with her assent, before the marriage, provided such jointure consists of at least a freehold estate in lands for the life of the wife, to take effect before or upon the death of the husband. (§ 2167.) Such assent shall be expressed, if the woman be of full age (twenty-one), by her becoming a party to the conveyance by which it is settled; and if she be under age, by her joining with her father or guardian in such conveyance. (§ 2168.) Dower may also be barred by joining in a conveyance at any time after she is eighteen, or by her quitclaim deed in case of prior conveyance of her husband's title in which she did not join. (§ 2222.) If any pecuniary provision be made for the benefit of an intended wife in lieu of dower, and she assents thereto by becoming a party to the conveyance, or if a woman elects, after the death of her husband, to take a jointure or pecuniary provision made for her after marriage, or, without her assent, before marriage, she thereby bars her right to dower. (§§ 2169, 2170.) If land be devised to a woman or other provision be made for her in the will of her husband, she must elect whether she will take the lands devised or the provision made, or whether she will claim the share of his estate to which she is entitled by law, unless it plainly appears from the will that she was intended to have both. (§ 2171.) When a widow is entitled to make an election, she will be deemed to have elected to take the jointure, devise, or other provision, unless within one year after the filing of a petition for the appointment of an administrator, or for the probate of the will, she file in the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of his estate notice in writing to the contrary; and upon filing such notice she will be entitled to the same dower in his lands and the same right to the homestead as if he had died intestate, leaving lawful issue; and to the same share of personal estate as if he had died intestate; provided that when he died testate the share of personal estate which she may take shall not exceed one third part of his net personal estate. The widow need not make an election if her husband die intestate without issue. (§ 2172.) Election may be made for an insane widow by her guardian, and if a widow die within the year not having made an election and leaving issue by such deceased husband the election shall be made by her executor or administrator. (§ 2172 a.) Where no provision is made in will for the widow she takes dower.

Provision is made for release of dower of insane wife. (§ 2225.)

Estates. — See Married Women, Claims against Estates, and Descent and Distribution of Property.

Evidence. — No person is disqualified as a witness by reason of his interest in the event of the action as a party or otherwise, but such interest or connection may be shown to affect the credibility of the witness. (§ 4068.) No person, or stockholder, officer or trustee of a corporation, in his or its own behalf or interest, nor any person, stockholder, officer, or trustee of a corporation through or under whom a party derives his interest or title can be examined as a witness in respect to any transaction or communication by him personally with a deceased person or with an insane person in any civil action or proceeding in which the opposite party derives his title or sustains his liability from, through, or under such deceased or insane person, or in which such insane person is a party prosecuting or defending by guardian, unless such opposite party shall be first examined or examine some other witness on his behalf concerning such transaction or communication, or unless the testimony of such deceased person or such insane person be first read or given in evidence by the opposite party. (§§ 4069, 4070.) The testimony of any deceased witness taken in any action shall be admissible in evidence in any other action where the party against whom it is offered shall have had the opportunity to cross-examine the deceased witness and where the issue upon which it is offered is substantially the same. (§ 4141 a.) Both husband and wife shall be a competent witness for or against the other except that neither one, without the consent of the other, shall disclose a private communication made during marriage when such is privileged. (Ch. 433, Laws of 1917.) Neither husband nor wife is allowed to disclose a confidential communication without the consent of the other. (§ 4072.) A clergyman is not allowed to disclose a confession made to him when in his professional character without the consent thereto of the party confessing. (§ 4074.) No physician or surgeon is allowed to disclose any information which he has acquired in attending any patient in a professional character. (§ 4075.) An attorney at law is not allowed to disclose a communication made by his clients to him, or his advice given thereon, in the course of his professional employment. (§ 4086.) No judgment shall be reversed or set aside or new trial granted in any action or proceeding, civil or criminal, on the ground of misdirection of a jury or the improper admission of evidence or for error as to any matter of pleading or procedure unless in the opinion of the court it shall appear that the error complained of has affected the substantial rights of the party making the application. Records and judicial proceedings of foreign courts are admissible when authenticated as prescribed by § 4140 or by Act of Congress. (Ch. 180, 1911; § 3072 m, ch. 192, Laws of 1909.) See, also, ch. 302, Laws of 1909, under Deeds (supra).

Executions. — There are three kinds of execution: one against the property of the debtor; another against his person; and third, for the delivery of real or personal property. (§ 2967.) Execution may be issued at any time within five years after rendition of judgment, and alias executions thereafter, upon leave of court; but in no case after twenty years from the time of the rendition thereof. (§ 2968.) The execution shall require the officer, if it be against the property of the judgment debtor, to satisfy the judgment out of the personal property of the debtor, and, if sufficient personal property cannot be found, out of the real property; if it be against the person of the judgment debtor, to arrest such debtor and commit him to jail until he shall pay the judgment, or be discharged according to law. (§ 2969.) Executions are made returnable within sixty days, and may be issued at the same time to different counties where the judgment has been docketed in said different counties. (§§ 2970, 2971.) Personal property is bound from the time of its seizure, and may be sold upon giving twenty days' notice. (§§ 2985, 2991.) Real estate is sold on execution, being publicly advertised for six successive weeks. (§ 2993.) Upon the sale of real estate the officer makes out and subscribes duplicate certificates of such sale, containing a particular description of the premises sold, the price bid for each distinct lot or parcel, the whole consideration money paid, and the time when such sale will become absolute and the purchaser entitled to a conveyance. One of said duplicates is filed in the office of the register of deeds, and the other delivered to the purchaser. (§ 3000.) Within one year from the time when such sale shall have been made, any part of the real estate may be redeemed by the payment to the purchaser, his personal representatives or assigns, or to the sheriff for the use of such purchaser, of the sum of money which was bid on the sale, together with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent. per year. (§ 3001.) Judgment and mortgage creditors may within 15 months from the sale by paying the amount paid by the original purchaser with interest at 6 per cent., acquire the latter's rights. (§ 3007.) Executions issued upon judgments rendered against husband and wife, for tort or wrong committed by the wife, shall be satisfied only out of the property of the wife. (§ 2969.) Executions are issued on judgments rendered by justices of the peace within five years from their rendition. The lien obtained by levy of execution is dissolved if the debtor, being insolvent at the time of such levy, make a voluntary assignment within ten days thereafter, or if, upon petition of two or more creditors, filed within the additional time of thirty days, a receiver is appointed as provided by § 1694 b. Execution may be levied on any share or interest of a stockholder in a corporation. (§ 2989.)

Exemptions. — The following personal property is exempt from seizure or sale on execution and from attachment or garnishment: 1. The family Bible. 2. Family pictures and school-books. 3. The library of the debtor. 4. The seat or pew in any place of public worship. 5. All wearing apparel of the debtor and his family; all beds and bedsteads and bedding kept and used for the debtor and his family; all stoves and appendages kept for the use of the debtor and his family; all cooking utensils and all other household furniture not exceeding two hundred dollars in value, and one gun, rifle, or other firearm not exceeding fifty dollars in value. 6. Two cows, ten swine, one yoke of oxen, and one horse or mule, or, in lieu of one yoke of oxen and horse or mule, two horses or two mules, or any automobile used or kept for the purpose of carrying on the debtor's trade or business not exceeding four hundred dollars in value, ten sheep and the wool from the same, either in the raw material or manufactured into yarn or cloth; the necessary food for one year's support for all such stock, also one wagon, cart, or dray, one sleigh, one plow, one drag, and other farming utensils, including a tackle for teams, not exceeding two hundred dollars in value. 7. The provisions for the debtor and his family necessary for one year's support, and fuel necessary for one year. 8. The tools, implements, and stock in trade of any mechanic, miner, merchant, trader, or other person, used or kept for the purpose of carrying on his trade or business, not exceeding two hundred dollars in value. 9. All sewing-machines owned by individuals and kept for the use of themselves or family. 10. Any sword, plate, books, or other articles presented or given to any person by congress, legislature of any of the United States, or by either body of congress or of such legislature, whether presented by vote or raised by subscription of the members of either of the aforesaid bodies. 11. Printing material and press or presses used in the business of any printer or publisher, to an amount not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars in value, provided no sum exceeding four hundred dollars shall be exempt for payment of employees. 12. Horses, arms, equipments, and uniforms of all officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates used for military purposes in the organized militia of the State. 13. All books, maps, plats, and other papers kept or used by any person for the purpose of making abstracts of title to land. 14. The interest owned by any inventor in any invention secured to him by letters patent of the United States. 15. The earnings of all married persons and other persons having a family dependent upon them for support, for three months next preceding the issue of an attachment, execution, or garnishment, to the amount of sixty dollars only for each month providing the debtor is actually contributing, according to his means, to the support of the family. (Ch. 187, Laws of 1913.) Such exemption shall not exceed one hundred and eighty dollars in all for the three months. 16. All fire-engines, apparatus, and equipments, used or to be used for the protection of property from fire. 17. All moneys arising from insurance of any exempt property, when such property has been destroyed by fire. 18. All private property is exempt from seizure and sale upon execution issued to enforce a judgment or decree which shall have been rendered against any county, town, city, village, or school district of the State. 19. All moneys arising on any policy of insurance on the life of a minor, payable to his father or mother, or both, shall be exempt against the creditors of such father or mother, but not against the creditors of such minor. Certain other life insurance moneys are also exempt. 20. All cemetery lots owned by individuals and all monuments therein, the coffins and other articles for the burial of any dead person, and the tombstone or monument for his grave, by whomsoever purchased. 21. Pensions paid policemen, firemen, their widows or minor children. 22. Shares of the value of one thousand dollars at time of withdrawal in a local building and loan association held by one not owning a homestead which is exempt. No property exempt by the provisions of this section shall be exempt from attachment or execution issued upon a judgment in an action brought by any person for the recovery of the whole or any part of the purchase-money of the same property. The exemptions provided for in subdivisions above numbered 3, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 13, 14, 17, 19, and 22 extend only to debtors having an actual residence in the State, and when such debtors and their families, or any of them, shall be removing from one place of residence to another. The property mentioned in subdivisions 5, 6, 11, 13, 14, 15, 17, 19, and 22 is not exempt as against domestic labor performed by a female in the dwelling-house of the employer. (§ 2982.) The exempt property may be selected by the debtor, his agent, clerk, or legal representative, when necessary to distinguish the same. When personal property is seized and a part of such property is exempt, the officer making such seizure shall cause an appraisal to be made of the exempt property, which appraisal shall be prima facie evidence of the value of the property appraised, for the purpose of such exemption. (§ 2982 a.) A homestead to be selected by the owner, consisting, when not included in any city or village, of any quantity of land not exceeding forty acres, used for agricultural purposes, and when included in any city or village, of any quantity of land not exceeding one fourth of an acre and the dwelling-house thereon and its appurtenances owned and occupied by any resident of the State, not exceeding five thousand dollars in value, is exempt from execution and from liability in any form except on laborers' or mechanics' and purchase-money liens and mortgages lawfully executed, and taxes. Proceeds of homestead not exceeding five thousand dollars are exempt for two years. (§ 2983.) Husband cannot assign exempt wages except by a written instrument signed by wife with two witnesses, nor for a longer period than two months in advance. (§ 2313 a.)

Garnishment. — A creditor who has a claim proceed may by garnishment, before or after judgment, at any time after the issue of summons. Any creditor is entitled to proceed by garnishment in the circuit court of a proper county against any person, except a municipal corporation, who shall be indebted to, or have any property whatever, real or personal, in his possession or under his control belonging to the debtor. Either at the time of the issuance of the summons or at any time thereafter, before final judgment, in any action to recover damages founded upon contract, express or implied, or upon judgment or decree, or at any time after the issuing in any case of an execution against property before the time when it is returnable, the plaintiff or some person in his behalf may make an affidavit stating the amount of the plaintiff's claim against the defendant or defendants, over and above all offsets, and stating that he verily believes that some person, naming him, is indebted to or has property, real or personal, in his possession or under his control belonging to the defendant, or either or any of the defendants, in the action or execution, naming him, and that the indebtedness or property mentioned in such affidavit is, to the best knowledge and belief of the person making such affidavit, not by law exempt from seizure or sale upon execution. Any number of garnishees may be embraced in the same affidavit and summons, but if a joint liability be claimed against any, it shall so be stated in the affidavit, otherwise the several garnishees shall be deemed severally proceeded against. (§§ 2752, 2753.) No garnishee proceeding shall be commenced to recover the value of spirituous, etc., liquors sold at retail. (§§ 2752 m, 3716 m.) In actions and garnishments against partnerships, where the names of the several partners are unknown to the plaintiff, all proceedings may be in the partnership name until the true names of the several partners are discovered. (§ 2612.) The affidavit for garnishment may be amended. (§ 2766.) In circuit court the plaintiff shall annex to such affidavit a garnishee summons, for which summons the statute prescribes a form. (§ 2754.) Such garnishee summons and affidavit must be served on the defendant and garnishee in the same manner as a summons in an action is served, and such service may be made by any person not a party to the action, and must be served on the defendant within ten days after service on the garnishee, unless the proof of service on the garnishee shows that after due diligence such service cannot be made within the State. (§ 2756.) Within twenty days from the service of such garnishee summons the garnishee may, if the truth warrant, file with the clerk of the court, and serve a copy thereof upon the plaintiff, his affidavit denying all liability, for which affidavit the statute prescribes a form. Thereby the proceedings against such garnishee shall be deemed discontinued, and the plaintiff shall pay the garnishee one dollar for his costs, unless within twenty days thereafter the plaintiff serve notice on such garnishee that he elects to take issue on his answer to the garnishee summons, and will maintain him to be liable as garnishee. In which case the issue shall stand for trial as in a civil action, in which the affidavit on the part of the plaintiff shall be deemed the complaint and the garnishee's affidavit the answer thereto. (§ 2759.) Unless the garnishee shall make the affidavit denying a liability, he shall, within twenty days from the service of the garnishee summons, file and serve an affidavit in which he shall state: 1. Whether he was at the time of the service, or has since become, indebted or under any liability to the defendant in any manner, or upon any account, specifying, if indebted or liable, the amount, the interest thereon, the manner in which it is evidenced, when payable, whether an absolute or contingent liability, and all the facts and circumstances necessary to a complete understanding of such indebtedness and liability. If he be in doubt he may set forth all the facts and circumstances and submit the question to the court. 2. Whether he held at that time, or now holds, the title or possession of any real estate, or any interest in land of any description, or any personal property, effects, or credits, or any instruments or papers relating to any such, belonging to the defendant, or in which he is in any wise interested, or if he have any doubt, he may submit the question to the court. If he claim any set-off or any defense to any indebtedness or liability, or any lien or claim to such property, he must set forth the facts and circumstances thereof fully. He may state any claim of exemption from execution on the part of the defendant, or other objection known to him against the right of the plaintiff to apply upon his demand the indebtedness or property disclosed. If he discloses any indebtedness or property to which any person except the defendant makes claim, he may set forth the names of such claimants, and so far as known the nature of their claims. (§ 2760.) If the garnishee fail to serve his affidavit, the court may render judgment against him for the amount of the judgment which the plaintiff shall recover against the defendant in the action, damages, and costs together with the costs in such garnishee action. (§ 2761.) If the answer of the garnishee show indebtedness to the defendant, he may pay the amount thereof, less three dollars for his costs, to the clerk of the court, or, if the garnishment be in aid of execution, he may pay the sheriff, and such officer shall give him a receipt specifying the facts, and such receipt shall be a complete discharge of all liability to any party for the amount so paid. If the answer discloses any credits, or other property, the officer having the writ of attachment or an execution may levy upon the interest of the defendant in the same, otherwise the garnishee shall hold the same until the order of the court thereon. (§ 2762.) The proceedings against a garnishee are deemed an action by the plaintiff against the garnishee and defendant as parties defendant, and all the provisions of law relating to proceedings in civil actions shall be applicable thereto. (§ 2766.) When the answer of the garnishee discloses that any other person than the defendant claims the indebtedness, or the property, such claimant may be interpleaded as a defendant to the garnishee action. (§ 2767.) From the time of the service of the summons upon the garnishee he shall stand liable to the plaintiff to the amount of the property, moneys, credits, and effects in his possession or under his control belonging to the defendant to the amount of the defendant's interest therein, except such as may be by law exempt from execution; conveyances void as to creditors may be attacked by garnishee proceedings. (§ 2768.) No judgment shall be rendered upon the liability of the garnishee, arising either by reason of his having drawn, accepted, made, indorsed, or guarantied any negotiable bill, draft, or other security; by reason of any money or other thing received or collected by a sheriff, or other officer, by force of an execution or other legal process in favor of the defendant, by reason of any money in his hands as a public officer, and for which he is accountable to the defendant merely as such officer, or by reason of any money or thing owing from him to the defendant, unless before judgment against the defendant it shall become due absolutely. Judgment may be given for any money or thing owing, although it has not become payable, in which case the garnishee shall not be required to pay or deliver it before the time appointed by the contract. (§ 2769.) No action shall be commenced by the defendant or his assignee against the garnishee upon any claim or demand liable to garnishment, or to recover any property garnished, until the termination of the garnishee action; and if commenced shall be stayed by the court or judge upon garnishee's application. (§ 2770.) The defendant may at any time before judgment secure a release and discontinuance of the garnishment proceeding by filing with the clerk of the court an undertaking with sufficient sureties. (§ 2771.) Any person assigning any claim for the purpose of having same collected out of the earnings of debtor, in courts of another State, when the parties all reside in Wisconsin, is punishable by penalty of not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars for each offense. (§ 4438 f.) Issue may be joined on answer of garnishee in justice court. The lien obtained by garnishment is dissolved if the debtor, being insolvent at the time of garnishment, make a voluntary assignment within ten days after service of garnishee process, or if upon petition of two or more creditors filed within the additional time of thirty days a receiver is appointed under the provisions of § 1694 b. A remedy in the nature of garnishment is given judgment creditors of officers and employees and creditors of municipal corporations as follows: A certified copy of any judgment recovered against any officer or employee of the State, or any municipal corporation, within thirty days after the entry thereof, may be filed with the secretary of state, or the clerk of the municipality, as the case may be, and thereupon it shall be the duty of the proper officers of the State or such municipality, after the expiration of thirty days, to pay to the owner of such judgment such sum as at the time of filing such certified copy is due or may thereafter become due from the State or other municipal corporation to such officer or employee as salary or wages, or such amount as may be due a creditor of such municipality, not to exceed the amount of such judgment, and deduct the sum so paid from such salary or wages, provided that such salary or wages are exempt to the same extent as salaries and wages are exempt from garnishment, and provided that this law applies only to the salaries and wages of such officers and employees as receive a fixed sum monthly or yearly. (Ch. 360, Laws of 1915.)

Inheritance Taxes. — Taxes are imposed on transfers by will or the intestate laws of the State from a person dying while a resident of the State, and on transfers by will or intestate law of property within the State, or within its jurisdiction, when the decedent is a non-resident of the State, and on transfers by deed, grant, bargain, sale, or gift made in contemplation of the death of the grantor, vendor, or donor, or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after such death, made by a resident of the State, or by a non-resident, of property within the State or within its jurisdiction.

Every transfer by deed, grant, bargain, sale, or gift made within six years prior to the death of the grantor, vendor or donor, of a material part of his estate or in the nature of a final disposition or distribution thereof, and without an adequate valuable consideration, shall be construed to have been made in contemplation of death.

The taxes are imposed upon the clear market value of the property transferred at the rates hereinafter described, and insurance payable upon the death of any person shall be deemed a part of his estate for the purpose of the tax, and taxable to the person or persons entitled thereto.

The statute classifies persons entitled to any beneficial interest in any such transfer of property as follows: (1) The husband, wife, lineal issue, or lineal ancestor of the decedent; any child adopted as such in conformity with the laws of the State; any child to whom such decedent, for not less than ten years prior to such transfer, stood in the mutually acknowledged relation of parent, provided such relationship began at or before the child's fifteenth birthday and was continuous for said ten years thereafter; and any lineal issue of such adopted or mutually acknowledged child; (2) the decedent's brothers and sisters and their descendants, the wife or widow of a son, and the husband of a daughter of the decedent; (3) the brothers and sisters of decedent's father and mother and their descendants; (4) the brothers and sisters of decedent's grandfather and grandmother and their descendants; (5) persons in any other degree of collateral consanguinity, strangers in blood to the decedent, and bodies politic or corporate.

The primary rates of said tax on the property, or any beneficial interest therein passing to members of the respective classes, where the amount of the property exceeds in value the exemption hereinafter specified, and does not exceed in clear value twenty-five thousand dollars, are as follows: first class, one per cent. of the clear value; second class, two per cent.; third class, three per cent.; fourth class, four per cent.; fifth class, five per cent.

When the amount of the clear value of such property or beneficial interest therein exceeds twenty-five thousand dollars, the tax on the excess, up to fifty thousand dollars, is two times said primary rates; on the excess over fifty thousand dollars and up to one hundred thousand dollars, three times said primary rates; on the excess over one hundred thousand and up to five hundred thousand dollars, four times said primary rates; and upon all in excess of five hundred thousand dollars, five times said primary rates.

If the tax is paid within one year from the accruing thereof a discount of five per cent. is allowed. If the tax is not paid within eighteen months from the accruing thereof, interest is charged at the rate of ten per cent. per annum from the time the tax accrued, unless the delay was caused by claims made upon the estate, necessary litigation, or other unavoidable cause, in which case interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum is charged upon such tax from the accrual thereof until the cause of such delay is removed, after which ten percent. is charged.

The statute allows the following exemptions: (1) All property transferred to municipal corporations of the State for strictly municipal purposes, or to Wisconsin corporations organized solely for religious, charitable, or educational purposes, which shall use the property so transferred exclusively for the purposes of their organization within the State; (2) property of the clear value of ten thousand dollars transferred to the widow of the decedent but this exemption shall include all her statutory and other allowances, and two thousand dollars transferred to each of the other persons included in said first class; (3) property of the clear value of five hundred dollars transferred to each of the persons included in said second class; (4) property of the clear value of two hundred and fifty dollars transferred to each of the persons included in said third class; (5) property of the clear value of one hundred and fifty dollars transferred to each of the persons included in said fourth class; (6) property of the clear value of one hundred dollars transferred to each of the persons and corporations included in said fifth class.

The validity of this inheritance tax was sustained and the law interpreted in 129 Wis. 190, and 121 N.W. (Wis.) 347, 351.

The tax is applicable to stocks, bonds, mortgages, or other securities of corporations organized under the laws of this State or of foreign corporations owning property or doing business in this State transferred by non-resident decedents, but is proportioned to the value of the property of the corporation in this State; also stocks, bonds, or mortgages of corporations organized in this State owned by non-residents thereof are subject to such tax, and the corporation is not authorized to transfer the same upon the books of the corporation until the tax has been paid.

The supervision of the administration of the inheritance tax is under the state tax commission, but all questions relating to the same are determined by the county court of the county in which the estate is administered. In each county of the State a public administrator is appointed by the county court whose duty it is to represent the State in all hearings before the court to determine the inheritance tax. Inquiries relating to the assessment or determination of the inheritance tax should be addressed to the public administrator of the county in which the estate is pending.

Insolvency. — This article is omitted for the reason that the National Bankruptcy Act of 1898 renders its insertion unnecessary.

Interest. — The rate of interest is six per cent. upon any loan or forbearance of any money, goods, or things in action, but parties may contract for any rate of interest not exceeding ten per cent., in which case such rate must be clearly expressed in writing. (§ 1688.) A higher rate than ten per cent. is prohibited. (§ 1689.) Contracts reserving more than ten per cent. are valid for principal. (§ 1690.)

Any person who has paid more than ten per cent. may recover treble the amount so paid above the legal rate, if an action be brought within one year of payment. Any person who as principal or agent for another asks, demands, receives, takes, accepts or charges more than ten per cent. per annum upon the sum of money actually loaned is guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to a fine of from twenty-five dollars to three hundred dollars, or imprisonment, or by both. When the money loaned is secured by chattel mortgage, bill of sale, pledge, receipt, assignment of wages, etc., any person who asks, demands, receives, takes, accepts, or charges, in addition to the interest, a sum more than ten per cent. on sums of one hundred dollars or less and four per cent. per annum on all other sums on the original sum actually loaned, for examination, review, fees, appraisals, commissions, renewals, and charges is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by fine of from twenty-five dollars to three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment, or by both. (Ch. 450, Laws of 1915.)

Judgments. — Judgments directing the payment of money are entered in a judgment docket. Such docket contains the name of each judgment debtor, the name of the judgment creditor, the name of the attorney for the judgment creditor, the date of the entry of the judgment, the day and hour of such docketing, and the amount of damages recovered, with the costs. (§ 2899.) Every judgment when so docketed shall for a period of ten years from the date of the rendition thereof be a lien in the county where the same is docketed, on the real estate of every person against whom such judgment was rendered. (§ 2902.) Judgments of courts of justices of the peace may be docketed by filing transcript of such judgments in the office of the clerk of the circuit court. (§ 2900.) A transcript of the original docket certified by the clerk of the circuit court may be filed in other counties, and thus become a lien upon real estate of the judgment debtors situated in such counties. (§ 2901.) Judgments of the federal courts may in like manner be docketed in the circuit court of any county. (§ 2902 b.) Judgments bear interest at the rate of six per cent. from date, except judgments of foreclosure, which bear interest at the rate specified in the note and mortgage not exceeding six per cent. (§ 3164.) A judgment may be satisfied in whole or in part by an instrument in writing signed and acknowledged by the owner thereof, or at any time within five years from the rendition thereof, when no assignment has been filed by the attorney of record of the judgment creditor, or by a brief acknowledgment of satisfaction signed as aforesaid and entered on the docket of the judgment with the date affixed, and witnessed by the clerk. (§ 2908.) Such entry of acknowledgment after five years can only be made by the judgment creditor. Judgments may be entered in certain cases in vacation.

Judgment Notes. — A judgment upon a bond or note, with or without a warrant of attorney, may be rendered without action, either for money due or to become due, or to secure any person against contingent liability on behalf of the defendant, or both, in the following manner: the plaintiff shall file with his complaint an answer signed by the defendant or some attorney in his behalf, confessing the amount claimed in the complaint, or some part thereof, and in case such answer is signed by an attorney, an instrument authorizing judgment to be confessed or entered must be produced to the court or judge signing the judgment, and shall be made a part of the judgment roll. The plaintiff or some one in his behalf must make and annex to the complaint an affidavit stating the amount due or to become due on the note or bond; or if such note or bond be given to secure contingent liability, the affidavit must state concisely the facts constituting such liability, and must show that the sum confessed does not exceed the same. No other affidavit shall be necessary although more than a year and a day may have expired since the date of the warrant or instrument. The judgment shall be signed by the court, a judge, or court commissioner, and shall be thereupon entered and docketed by the clerk, and enforced in the same manner as judgments in other cases. (§§ 2895, 2896.) A judgment by confession may be entered before a justice of the peace in a sum not exceeding three hundred dollars, for money due or to become due, or to secure any person against contingent liability, or both, and must be accompanied by a statement signed and verified by defendant showing the amount due or to become due and the facts constituting the contingent liability. (§ 3657.)

License. — Commercial travelers are not required to take out a license. Insurance agents must have licenses (§ 1976 as amended by ch. 116, Laws of 1909). Dealers in certain stocks and bonds must have a license. (Ch. 756, Laws of 1913.)

Liens. — See Mechanics' Lien Law; Judgments.

Limitations. — The following actions must be commenced within the period hereinafter prescribed after the cause of action has accrued: Within twenty years: an action upon a judgment or decree of any court of record of this State, or of the United States sitting within this State; an action upon a sealed instrument when the cause of action accrues within the State, except an action upon a bond, coupon, or interest bond made under seal by any municipality within the State. An action for damages for the taking and appropriation of the land by any railroad, electric railroad or power company, telephone or telegraph company, without purchase or condemnation of said land. (Ch. 280, Laws of 1913.) Within ten years: foreign judgments; an action upon a sealed instrument accrued without this State; an action for the recovery of damages for flowing lands by reason of the construction or maintenance of any mill-dam, an action for damages for flowing lands caused by dams used for driving saw logs in Chippewa, Menomonee, or Eau Claire rivers or their tributaries; certain equity actions. Within six years: an action upon any other contract, obligation, or liability, express or implied, and for injuries to property, person, character, or rights, not otherwise expressly limited. Within three years: actions against a sheriff, coroner, town clerk, or constable upon a liability incurred in his official capacity. Within two years: an action upon a penalty or forfeiture; an action to recover damages for libel, slander, assault, battery, or false imprisonment; an action brought by the personal representative of a deceased person to recover damages for negligently or wrongfully causing the death of such person. Within one year: an action against a sheriff or other officer, for the escape of a prisoner. In actions brought to recover the balance due upon a mutual and open account current, the statute begins to run from the date of the last item. (§§ 4220-4226.) No action to recover damages for injuries to the person received without this State shall be brought in any court of this State when such action shall be barred by any statute of limitations of actions of the State or country in which such injury was received, unless the person so injured shall at the time of such injury have been a resident of this State. In cases of actions for injury to the person notice must be given of the injury within two years, unless the complaint be served within two years; but this provision as to notice shall not apply to any event causing damage which happened before the passage and publication of this act (May 19, 1909). (§ 4222, amended by ch. 151, Laws of 1909.) Actions against sureties on guardians' bonds must be brought within four years after guardian's discharge or termination of ward's disabilities (§ 3968) provided that if an accounting is had within the time within which such action may be commenced shall not terminate until one year after the final determination of such accounting proceedings. (Ch. 202, Laws of 1913.) Actions by municipal corporations on official bonds within three years after discovery of default. (§ 984.) Action against bank for paying forged or raised check within one year after return of check to depositor. (Ch. 262, Laws of 1905.)

Infancy, insanity, and imprisonment extend the period of limitation during the continuance of the disability, except that the period within which the action must be brought cannot be extended more than five years by any such disability, except infancy; nor in any case longer than one year after the disability ceases. (§ 4233.) An attempt to commence an action is deemed equivalent to the commencement thereof, when the summons is delivered, with the intent that it shall be actually served, to the proper officer, provided service or publication follow in sixty days. (§ 4240.) No acknowledgment or promise shall be sufficient to take the cause out of the operation of the statute, unless it be in writing, and if by one or two joint contractors such new promise is only valid as to the one promising. (§§ 4243, 4244.) Part payment prevents the running of the statute. After the death of creditor before the limitation expires, the administrator or executor has one year in which to sue. After debtor's death before limitation has expired suit may be brought within one year after the appointment of his executor or administrator. (§ 4234.) The time when the defendant is absent from the State is not included in the period of limitation if either party be a resident of the State. (§ 4231.)

Married Women. — The real and personal property of an unmarried woman does not on her marriage become subject to the disposal of her husband or liable for his debts, but continues to be her sole and separate property, as if she were unmarried. (§ 2340.) Any married woman may receive real or personal property by inheritance, or by gift, grant, devise, or bequest from any person, and hold to her sole and separate use and convey and devise the same, including all held by her in joint tenancy with her husband. (§ 2342.) The individual earnings of every married woman except those accruing from labor performed for her husband, or in his employ, or payable by him, shall be her separate property. (§ 2343.) A married woman has the right to transact business in her own name and not be subject to her husband's control or interference, or liable for his debts, if her husband desert her, or for any cause neglects or refuses to provide for her support, or for the support and education of her children. (§ 2344.) Every married woman may sue and be sued in her own name, in regard to her separate property or business, and a judgment may be rendered against her and enforced against her separate property. Any married woman may sue in her own name for any injury to her person or character. (§ 2345.) Under chapter 17, Laws of 1905, a wife may sue for and recover damages for alienation of her husband's affection and loss of his society. In other actions than those mentioned above, except actions between herself and her husband, the latter must be joined with her as a party (§ 2608); but executions issued on judgments against husband and wife, when the husband is joined as defendant in an action to recover damages for tort committed by the wife, shall be satisfied from the property of the wife only, and such judgment is not a lien on property of the husband. (§ 2969.) In dealing with her husband in relation to her separate property she has all the power of a feme sole and may take title directly from him, the same as if the relation of husband and wife did not exist. (29 Wis. 136.) She may loan him money of her separate estate, take transfers of property in payment, and may buy of him in good faith. (31 Wis. 172.) She may convey directly to her husband and he to her. (§ 2342.)

Married women who have been authorized to practice law may act as court commissioners, assignees, and receivers, and are subject to the same liabilities as others. (§§ 2347 a, 2433.)

No marriage contracted since April 3, 1872, shall render the husband liable for the payment of the wife's ante-nuptial debts. These are enforceable out of her separate property. (§ 2346.) Any married woman may insure for her own use the life of her husband, son, or other person, and every policy of insurance expressed to be for the benefit of, or made payable to, any married woman shall inure to her separate use and benefit, free from the claims of her husband, his representatives and creditors. (§ 2347.) Women become of age at twenty-one, but married women may make will and bar dower at eighteen. (§§ 2222, 2277, 2281.)

Mechanics' Lien Law. — Every person who, as principal contractor, architect, civil engineer, or surveyor, performs work or labor, or furnishes materials, or prepares any plans or estimates for or in the erection, construction, repair, protection, or removal of any building, or any bridge, structure, fence, street, alley roadway, or gutter, pier, wall, screen, water lot, wharf, or machinery which is or becomes a part of the freehold, or making and repairing any walk, sidewalk, or curbing upon land, in dredging, digging, excavating, constructing, or equipping any channel, well, cellar, vault, fountain, fish-pond, trench, or tunnel, in filling, dredging, improving, driving, or removing piles in any water, watercourse, water-lot, meadow, marsh or low lands, in setting out any hedge or fruit or ornamental trees, or in performing manual labor for the purpose of preparing land for use as such, shall have a lien upon such structure and upon the owner's interest in the land upon which such structure is placed or such manual labor is done to the extent of forty acres, or, if within the limits of an incorporated city or village, one acre. If the road-bed, structure, or plant is not limited to one acre, or forty acres, and is intended for use as a single thing, the lien extends to the entire thing. Machinery placed in or connected with a building by one who has no interest in the land is subject to a similar lien and may be removed by the person furnishing it leaving the building in as good condition as before the machinery was placed there. (§ 3314.) A claim for a lien may be enforced by action, if filed with the clerk of the circuit court within six months from the date of the last charge, and the action be brought and summons and complaint filed within one year from such date, unless within thirty days next preceding the expiration of one year the person filing the lien annex to the claim for a lien on file an affidavit setting forth the interest which he has by virtue of such lien in the property mentioned therein. The effect of such affidavit continues the validity of the lien for one year. (§ 3318.) Sub-contractors and employees of contractors or sub-contractors have a similar lien if, within thirty days after performing the first work or labor or furnishing the first materials, they give notice in writing to the owner or his agent, or by letter addressed to such owner or his agent at their last known post-office address, of the furnishing of such labor or material and describing the real estate upon which the same is to be performed or furnished with reasonable certainty, and, within sixty days after the performance of the last work or of the furnishing of the last of the materials, shall file in the office of the clerk of the circuit court of the county in which such real estate is situated, a claim for lien together with a copy of the notice given. All moneys paid by the owner to a principal contractor shall constitute a trust fund for the benefit of materialmen or laborers entitled to a lien to the amount of such claims until all such claims shall have been paid, and the using of such moneys by the principal contractor for any other purpose until all such claims, except those disputed, are paid, constitutes embezzlement and is punishable as such. All contractors are required to deliver materialmen a description of the premises upon which the materials are to be used, and any contractor who shall thereafter use any of such materials in any other building than that designated shall be punished by fine or imprisonment. Actions on sub-contractors' liens are to be commenced and summons and complaint filed within one year unless affidavit continuing such lien is filed. Such provisions not to affect any contracts made prior to the publication of this act. (August 20, 1915; ch. 549; Laws of 1915.) (§ 3315.) There is no priority between lien claimants. (§ 3325.)

Mortgages. — Mortgages are executed the same as deeds. A mortgage may be in the form in common use, but a short form is prescribed by the statute as follows: —

A. B., mortgagor, of _____ county, Wisconsin, hereby mortgages to C. D., mortgagee of _____ county, Wisconsin, for the sum of _____ dollars, the following tract of land in _____ county (here describe the premises).

This mortgage is given to secure the following indebtedness (here state amount or amounts and form of indebtedness, whether on note, bond, or otherwise, time or times when due, rate of interest, by and to whom payable, etc.).

The mortgagor agrees to pay all taxes and assessments on said premises, and the sum of _____ dollars attorneys' fees in case of foreclosure hereof.

Witness the hand and seal of said mortgagor this _____ day of _____ 19 .

In presence of E. F., G. H.

[A. B Seal.]

(Acknowledgment.) (§ 2209.)

A mortgage may be foreclosed by action, or, if it contain a power of sale, by advertisement. In case of foreclosure by advertisement one year from the time of sale is allowable for redemption. In foreclosure by action no sale may be made until after the expiration of one year from the date of the judgment and after an additional six weeks' publication of notice of sale, and the property may be redeemed at any time before sale by the payment of the judgment and costs, with interest at the rate provided in the mortgage, but not exceeding six per cent.; if not so redeemed the sale, when duly confirmed, with the sheriff's or referee's deed thereon, passes title of mortgagor to the purchaser without any further period of redemption. No mortgage of a homestead is valid unless the wife join therein. A wife need not join in a purchase-money mortgage in order to bar her dower.

Mortgages may be discharged of record by presenting to the register of deeds a certificate, executed by the mortgagee, his personal representative or assignee, and acknowledged and certified so as to be entitled to be recorded, of payment or satisfaction, or by an entry in the margin of the record acknowledging satisfaction thereof, signed by the mortgagee in the presence of the register of deeds or his deputy, who shall subscribe the same as a witness. (§ 2247.) Neglect of mortgagee, his personal representative or assignee, to discharge the mortgage within seven days after demand and tender of discharge renders him liable to mortgagor in one hundred dollars damage. (§ 2256.) Circuit courts may order mortgages discharged on proof that mortgage has been fully paid and satisfied, and that the mortgagee is a non-resident of the county or is deceased and that there is no administrator on the estate of the deceased under the authority of this State. (§ 2252.) See, also, ch. 302, Laws of 1909, supra, under Deeds.

Notaries Public. — Notaries public are appointed by the governor for a term of four years in each county, but are state officers and have power to act by virtue of their office in any part of the State. They are required by law to have a seal. The clerk of the circuit court of the county where the notary resides is authorized to furnish a certificate of the latter's official character.

Chapter 38, Laws of 1901, requires a clear impression of the notary's seal and the day, month, and year when his commission expires written or stamped on acknowledgments before any notary public in Wisconsin.

When an affidavit is taken in another State or Territory before a notary public, and an impression of the official seal of the notary is affixed thereto, no further attestation is required.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — All instruments in writing, promising or ordering the payment of a sum certain in money on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time, payable to order or bearer, are negotiable, except county, town, city, village, and school district orders. There are no days of grace. Notes, bills, etc., falling due on Sunday or a holiday are payable on the next succeeding business day. Notice of dishonor may be oral or in writing and may be delivered personally or through the mails. An acceptance of a bill of exchange must be in writing signed by the drawee. When a bill of exchange drawn or indorsed within this State and payable without the United States has been protested for non-acceptance or non-payment, the party liable must pay the contents of the bill at the current rate of exchange with interest and damages at the rate of five per cent. upon such contents, in full for all damages, charges, and expenses. When such protested bill of exchange is payable out of this State but within some State or Territory of the United States, the party liable must pay such bill with legal interest according to its tenor and five per cent. damages, together with costs and charges of protest. (Ch. 356, Laws of 1899, amending ch. 78 of the Statutes of 1898.) Due bills for wages of persons engaged in lumbering, building, or the manufacture of lumber, are negotiable.

Notes given for lightning rod, patent right, stallion, or interest therein, must express such consideration in red ink and are then non-negotiable.

Patent Laws. — The interest owned by any inventor in any invention secured to him by letters patent of the United States is exempt from execution with exceptions noted above under the head of "exemptions." (§ 2982.) Persons traveling from place to place within the State, for the purpose of selling, or exposing for sale, patented articles, must obtain from the secretary of state a peddler's license, which costs from thirty to seventy-five dollars. (§ 1572.) No person is allowed to sell, or expose for sale, any patent right or territory for the sale, use, or manufacture of patent rights or articles without first obtaining a license as a patent right dealer, which costs from ten to twenty dollars. (§ 1573.)

Practice. — The civil practice is prescribed by and conducted under a code substantially taken from that of New York; it was adopted in 1856, but many of its original provisions have been amended many times.

Proof of Claims. — Persons sending claims for collection should state amount due, not due, and when due, the full name or names of the party or parties in whose name the suit is to be brought. If the claim belongs to a firm, the full name of each member should be given. If to a corporation, or stock company, its legal title, and, if organized under a special act of incorporation, the title of such act. An itemized statement of the account should always accompany the claims. See Claims against Estates.

Records. — Every conveyance of real estate within this State, which shall not be recorded, shall be void as against any subsequent purchaser in good faith and for a valuable consideration, whose conveyance shall first be duly recorded. (§ 2241.) Provision is made for the giving of constructive notice of the pendency of suits relating to real estate of attachments on real estate, and sales upon execution, by filing notice thereof in the office of the register of deeds. (§§ 2737, 3000, 3187.) Every instrument received by the register of deeds for record shall be considered as recorded from the moment of its entry on the index.

Redemption. — See Tax Law; Executions; Mortgages.

Replevin. — Actions of replevin may be commenced in justice court, if the value of the property is less than two hundred dollars, and in circuit court irrespective of value. No bond is required in justice court unless the plaintiff asks for an adjournment beyond the return day of the writ, which is on the third day after the writ issues. In the circuit court

ment of the wife's ante-nuptial debts. These are enforceable out of her separate property. (§ 2346.) Any married woman may insure for her own use the life of her husband, son, or other person, and every policy of insurance expressed to be for the benefit of, or made payable to, any married woman shall inure to her separate use and benefit, free from the claims of her husband, his representatives and creditors. (§ 2347.) Women become of age at twenty-one, but married women may make will and bar dower at eighteen. (§§ 2222, 2277, 2281.)

Mechanics' Lien Law. — Every person who, as principal contractor, architect, civil engineer, or surveyor, performs work or labor, or furnishes materials, or prepares any plans or estimates for or in the erection, construction, repair, protection, or removal of any building, or any bridge, structure, fence, street, alley roadway, or gutter, pier, wall, screen, water lot, wharf, or machinery which is or becomes a part of the freehold, or making and repairing any walk, sidewalk, or curbing upon land, in dredging, digging, excavating, constructing, or equipping any channel, well, cellar, vault, fountain, fish-pond, trench, or tunnel, in filling, dredging, improving, driving, or removing piles in any water, watercourse, water-lot, meadow, marsh or low lands, in setting out any hedge or fruit or ornamental trees, or in performing manual labor for the purpose of preparing land for use as such, shall have a lien upon such structure and upon the owner's interest in the land upon which such structure is placed or such manual labor is done to the extent of forty acres, or, if within the limits of an incorporated city or village, one acre. If the road-bed, structure, or plant is not limited to one acre, or forty acres, and is intended for use as a single thing, the lien extends to the entire thing. Machinery placed in or connected with a building by one who has no interest in the land is subject to a similar lien and may be removed by the person furnishing it leaving the building in as good condition as before the machinery was placed there. (§ 3314.) A claim for a lien may be enforced by action, if filed with the clerk of the circuit court within six months from the date of the last charge, and the action be brought and summons and complaint filed within one year from such date, unless within thirty days next preceding the expiration of one year the person filing the lien annex to the claim for a lien on file an affidavit setting forth the interest which he has by virtue of such lien in the property mentioned therein. The effect of such affidavit continues the validity of the lien for one year. (§ 3318.) Sub-contractors and employees of contractors or sub-contractors have a similar lien if, within thirty days after performing the first work or labor or furnishing the first materials, they give notice in writing to the owner or his agent, or by letter addressed to such owner or his agent at their last known post-office address, of the furnishing of such labor or material and describing the real estate upon which the same is to be performed or furnished with reasonable certainty, and, within sixty days after the performance of the last work or of the furnishing of the last of the materials, shall file in the office of the clerk of the circuit court of the county in which such real estate is situated, a claim for lien together with a copy of the notice given. All moneys paid by the owner to a principal contractor shall constitute a trust fund for the benefit of materialmen or laborers entitled to a lien to the amount of such claims until all such claims shall have been paid, and the using of such moneys by the principal contractor for any other purpose until all such claims, except those disputed, are paid, constitutes embezzlement and is punishable as such. All contractors are required to deliver materialmen a description of the premises upon which the materials are to be used, and any contractor who shall thereafter use any of such materials in any other building than that designated shall be punished by fine or imprisonment. Actions on sub-contractors' liens are to be commenced and summons and complaint filed within one year unless affidavit continuing such lien is filed. Such provisions not to affect any contracts made prior to the publication of this act. (August 20, 1915; ch. 549; Laws of 1915.) (§ 3315.) There is no priority between lien claimants. (§ 3325.)

Mortgages. — Mortgages are executed the same as deeds. A mortgage may be in the form in common use, but a short form is prescribed by the statute as follows: —

A. B., mortgagor, of _____ county, Wisconsin, hereby mortgages to C. D., mortgagee of _____ county, Wisconsin, for the sum of _____ dollars, the following tract of land in _____ county (here describe the premises).

This mortgage is given to secure the following indebtedness (here state amount or amounts and form of indebtedness, whether on note, bond, or otherwise, time or times when due, rate of interest, by and to whom payable, etc.).

The mortgagor agrees to pay all taxes and assessments on said premises, and the sum of _____ dollars attorneys' fees in case of foreclosure hereof.

Witness the hand and seal of said mortgagor this _____ day of _____ 19 .

A mortgage may be foreclosed by action, or, if it contain a power of sale, by advertisement. In case of foreclosure by advertisement one year from the time of sale is allowable for redemption. In foreclosure by action no sale may be made until after the expiration of one year from the date of the judgment and after an additional six weeks' publication of notice of sale, and the property may be redeemed at any time before sale by the payment of the judgment and costs, with interest at the rate provided in the mortgage, but not exceeding six per cent.; if not so redeemed the sale, when duly confirmed, with the sheriff's or referee's deed thereon, passes title of mortgagor to the purchaser without any further period of redemption. No mortgage of a homestead is valid unless the wife join therein. A wife need not join in a purchase-money mortgage in order to bar her dower.

Mortgages may be discharged of record by presenting to the register of deeds a certificate, executed by the mortgagee, his personal representative or assignee, and acknowledged and certified so as to be entitled to be recorded, of payment or satisfaction, or by an entry in the margin of the record acknowledging satisfaction thereof, signed by the mortgagee in the presence of the register of deeds or his deputy, who shall subscribe the same as a witness. (§ 2247.) Neglect of mortgagee, his personal representative or assignee, to discharge the mortgage within seven days after demand and tender of discharge renders him liable to mortgagor in one hundred dollars damage. (§ 2256.) Circuit courts may order mortgages discharged on proof that mortgage has been fully paid and satisfied, and that the mortgagee is a non-resident of the county or is deceased and that there is no administrator on the estate of the deceased under the authority of this State. (§ 2252.) See, also, ch. 302, Laws of 1909, supra, under Deeds.

Notaries Public. — Notaries public are appointed by the governor for a term of four years in each county, but are state officers and have power to act by virtue of their office in any part of the State. They are required by law to have a seal. The clerk of the circuit court of the county where the notary resides is authorized to furnish a certificate of the latter's official character.

Chapter 38, Laws of 1901, requires a clear impression of the notary's seal and the day, month, and year when his commission expires written or stamped on acknowledgments before any notary public in Wisconsin.

When an affidavit is taken in another State or Territory before a notary public, and an impression of the official seal of the notary is affixed thereto, no further attestation is required.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — All instruments in writing, promising or ordering the payment of a sum certain in money on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time, payable to order or bearer, are negotiable, except county, town, city, village, and school district orders. There are no days of grace. Notes, bills, etc., falling due on Sunday or a holiday are payable on the next succeeding business day. Notice of dishonor may be oral or in writing and may be delivered personally or through the mails. An acceptance of a bill of exchange must be in writing signed by the drawee. When a bill of exchange drawn or indorsed within this State and payable without the United States has been protested for non-acceptance or non-payment, the party liable must pay the contents of the bill at the current rate of exchange with interest and damages at the rate of five per cent. upon such contents, in full for all damages, charges, and expenses. When such protested bill of exchange is payable out of this State but within some State or Territory of the United States, the party liable must pay such bill with legal interest according to its tenor and five per cent. damages, together with costs and charges of protest. (Ch. 356, Laws of 1899, amending ch. 78 of the Statutes of 1898.) Due bills for wages of persons engaged in lumbering, building, or the manufacture of lumber, are negotiable.

Notes given for lightning rod, patent right, stallion, or interest therein, must express such consideration in red ink and are then non-negotiable.

Patent Laws. — The interest owned by any inventor in any invention secured to him by letters patent of the United States is exempt from execution with exceptions noted above under the head of "exemptions." (§ 2982.) Persons traveling from place to place within the State, for the purpose of selling, or exposing for sale, patented articles, must obtain from the secretary of state a peddler's license, which costs from thirty to seventy-five dollars. (§ 1572.) No person is allowed to sell, or expose for sale, any patent right or territory for the sale, use, or manufacture of patent rights or articles without first obtaining a license as a patent right dealer, which costs from ten to twenty dollars. (§ 1573.)

Practice. — The civil practice is prescribed by and conducted under a code substantially taken from that of New York; it was adopted in 1856, but many of its original provisions have been amended many times.

Proof of Claims. — Persons sending claims for collection should state amount due, not due, and when due, the full name or names of the party or parties in whose name the suit is to be brought. If the claim belongs to a firm, the full name of each member should be given. If to a corporation, or stock company, its legal title, and, if organized under a special act of incorporation, the title of such act. An itemized statement of the account should always accompany the claims. See Claims against Estates.

Records. — Every conveyance of real estate within this State, which shall not be recorded, shall be void as against any subsequent purchaser in good faith and for a valuable consideration, whose conveyance shall first be duly recorded. (§ 2241.) Provision is made for the giving of constructive notice of the pendency of suits relating to real estate of attachments on real estate, and sales upon execution, by filing notice thereof in the office of the register of deeds. (§§ 2737, 3000, 3187.) Every instrument received by the register of deeds for record shall be considered as recorded from the moment of its entry on the index.

Redemption. — See Tax Law; Executions; Mortgages.

Replevin. — Actions of replevin may be commenced in justice court, if the value of the property is less than two hundred dollars, and in circuit court irrespective of value. No bond is required in justice court unless the plaintiff asks for an adjournment beyond the return day of the writ, which is on the third day after the writ issues. In the circuit court plaintiff must give security in double the value of the property, and defendant can secure a return of the property pending the suit, upon giving like security. (§§ 2720, 2722.) Where property has been returned to defendant, on his giving security, and the plaintiff recover judgment, the plaintiff may have, at his option, judgment for the delivery of the property or its value.

Reports. — The reports of decisions of the supreme court are published in the Wisconsin Reports, viz., Chandler, 4 vols., Burnett, 1 vol., Pinney, 3 vols., and Wisconsin, 165 vols. (Cases in Burnett and Chandler are re-reported in Pinney, with one or two exceptions.)

Revision. — A revision of the general statutes was adopted in 1897 to take effect September 1, 1898. These statutes are now in force and are known as Statutes of 1898. A supplement to these statutes containing subsequent enactments down to and including the year 1905, was published in 1906. The latest session laws are those of 1917. The next legislature convenes in January, 1919. By comparatively recent legislation a permanent office of revisor of statutes was created, and all laws are revised and published in full by such revisor after each session of the legislature. The Wisconsin Statutes of 1917 will contain all of the general statutory law of the State.

Sales in Bulk. — The sale, transfer or assignment in bulk otherwise than in the ordinary course of trade and in the regular prosecution of the business of the seller of a part or the whole of any stock of goods, wares and merchandise, or of the fixtures pertaining to the same, including such sales made in consideration of the existing indebtedness shall be conclusively presumed to be fraudulent and void as against existing creditors of the seller, unless the seller and the purchaser shall at least five days before the sale, make an inventory showing the quantity and the cost price to the seller of each article to be included in the sale; and unless the purchaser demand and receive from the seller, and the seller make and deliver to the purchaser a written list of the names and addresses of all the creditors of the seller with the amount of the indebtedness owing to each and certified by the seller under oath to be a complete list of creditors, and unless the purchaser shall at least five days before taking possession of such goods, etc., or of such fixtures, or paying therefor, notify personally every creditor whose name and address is stated in said list, of the proposed sale, and of the price, terms and conditions thereof, or in lieu of such services, deposit such notices in the post-office, properly addressed to each creditor, to be sent by registered mail at least ten days before such property is paid for. Any purchaser who shall not conform to these provisions shall be liable to the creditors of the seller for all goods, wares and merchandise, and fixtures coming into his possession or control by virtue of such sale. Any seller making materially false or incomplete answers to the inquiries of the purchaser is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed two hundred and fifty dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed one year. Sales by executors, administrators, guardians, receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, public officers under judicial process, assignees under a voluntary assignment for the benefit of creditors, or sales made by order of a court, or on foreclosure of a chattel mortgage, or to or by any person to whom such property may be assigned in trust for the creditors for the purpose of liquidating the debts are expressly exempted from the provisions of the act. (Ch. 270, Laws of 1913.)

Service. — A summons is served by delivering a copy thereof to the defendant personally, or, if not found, by leaving a copy thereof at his usual place of abode, in the presence of some one of the family of suitable age and discretion, who shall be informed of the contents thereof. Special provision is made for the service of summons on minors, insane persons, joint-stock companies, and corporations. Service may be made upon non-residents by publication, or by service without the State pursuant to an order of the court. See Actions.

Stay of Execution. — In all cases stay of execution may be had on appeal, upon giving undertaking with sufficient sureties, as provided by the statute. (§ 3053.) Stays may also be obtained on justice court judgments, where no appeal has been taken, on giving security for payment, but in no case for more than four months. (§ 3674.) See also Executions.

Supplementary Proceedings. — Upon an affidavit showing the return wholly or partly unsatisfied of an execution, the creditor is entitled to an order for the examination of the judgment debtor concerning his property. (§ 3031.) The judgment debtor as also other witnesses are examined under oath, and no person on such examination shall be excused from answering any question on the ground that his examination or answer will tend to convict him of the commission of a fraud, but his answer shall not be used as evidence against him in any criminal action. (§ 3033.) Any property discovered may at once be applied in payment of the judgment, and a receiver may be appointed, and the transfer of the debtor's assets enjoined. (§§ 3035, 3036.)

Tax Law. — Taxes for each year are levied on real estate and personal property, and are payable between the third Monday of December of that year and the last Monday in the following January. (§§ 1081, 1089.) Personal property is assessed as of the first day of May in the year for which it is to be taxed and real estate at any time between said date and the last Monday of June. (§§ 1033, 1060.) Taxes not paid as above are returned as delinquent. (§ 1113.) Those on personal property are collected by the sheriff with interest at twelve per cent. from the first day of January, and the costs of collection. (§§ 1126, 1127.) Lands upon which taxes remain unpaid are advertised and sold, unless redeemed on the second Tuesday of June, for the tax, interest at twelve per cent., and costs. (§§ 1130, 1135.) On such sale a certificate issues to the purchaser, which, if unredeemed, entitles him to a deed in three years from the sale. (§ 1140.) Land may be redeemed at any time after the sale until a deed on the sale is recorded, by payment to the county clerk of the amount for which sold, with ten per cent. interest and costs. Any interest of a minor may be redeemed from tax sales at any time before the expiration of one year after the attainment of his or her majority; and any interest of an idiot or insane person within five years after sale. (§ 1166.) Tax sales for city taxes usually at another date. Part of premises may be redeemed. Notice of expiration of time to redeem must be published. (§ 1170.) Chapter 378, Laws of 1903, provides for the taxation of mortgages as an interest in real estate.

An income tax law with ratio varying from one per cent. to six per cent., was enacted by ch. 658, 1911, and applies to income received after January 1, 1911. The validity of this income tax law was sustained in 134 N. W. 673.

Testimony. — See Evidences.

Trust Deeds. — Trust deeds are not in general use in the State.

Wills. — Every person of full age, and any married woman of the age of eighteen years, may dispose of his or her property by a last will and testament in writing. (§ 2277.) No will, except a nuncupative will, is valid unless it be in writing, and signed by the testator, or by some person in his presence, and by his express direction, and attested and subscribed in the presence of the testator by two or more competent witnesses in the presence of each other. (§ 2282.) No will shall be effectual to pass either real or personal estate unless it shall have been duly proved and allowed in the county court, and the probate of a will is conclusive as to its due execution. (§ 2294.) When a will devising real estate has been proved and allowed in the proper court of any of the United States or Territories, a copy of the will, and probate thereof, duly authenticated, may be recorded in the office of the register of deeds, and when so recorded shall be as valid and effectual to pass the title to real estate of the testator situated within such county as if such will had been probated in this State. (§ 2295.) Any will duly probated without the State in the place of the testator's domicile will receive the same force and effect as if probated here, when an exemplified copy of the same, and the probate thereof, is filed in the county court, and proof has been made upon notice to the interested parties, and it appears to the court that the admitting of such will to probate was made by a court of competent jurisdiction. (§§ 3789, 3790.) See Dower.

Wills are sometimes dictated to stenographers, and then produced on the typewriter. There can be no doubt but this is a compliance with the statute requiring wills to be "in writing." "And in these later days there can be no question but that a will may be partially written and partially printed, engraved, or lithographed. Temple v. Mead, 4 Vt. 535; Henshaw v. Foster, 9 Pick. 312." (Jarman on Wills, 33.)

There is no restriction as to the amount of property which a testator may leave to charity. As already stated, a widow is entitled to certain rights in her husband's property which may be increased but cannot be diminished by the husband's will. There is no limitation by statute in favor of children, on the power of a parent to devise or bequeath his property as he pleases, except the provisions already noted under the head of Claims against Estates, for allowances to children under the age of seven years, and certain others to minor children.

When the mortgage is duly filed the mortgagor may retain possession of the mortgaged property, but it is made a felony to sell the same, or to remove the property out of the county with the intent to deprive the mortgagee of his security, without the consent of the mortgagee, the penalty being imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years. These mortgages are foreclosed by selling the property at public auction for cash, at which sale the mortgagee may be a bidder, at a time and place named in a notice of sale required by the statute to be advertised and published for three weeks before the day of sale.

Mortgage may cover future advances when specific sum as ultimate amount to be secured, date prior to completion of advances, and date on which last installment of indebtedness secured shall mature, are stated.

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — In granting letters of administration, preference is given as follows: 1. The surviving husband or wife, or some competent person whom he or she may request to have appointed. 2. The children. 3. The father or mother. 4. The brother. 5. The sister. 6. The grandchildren. 7. The next of kin who are entitled to share in the distribution of the estate. 8. The creditors. 9. Any person legally competent. The following persons are incompetent: No person is competent to serve as administrator or administratrix who is under the age of majority; not a bona fide resident of State; convicted of an infamous crime; adjudged incompetent to exercise the duties of the trust by reason of drunkenness, improvidence, or want of understanding or integrity; a married woman. When an unmarried woman appointed as administratrix marries, her authority is extinguished. Petitions for letters of administration must be in writing signed by the applicant or his counsel, and filed with the clerk of the court, stating the facts essential to give the court jurisdiction over the case.

Every person to whom letters testamentary or of administration are directed to issue must, before receiving them, execute a bond to the State of Wyoming, with two or more sufficient sureties to be approved by the district court, a judge thereof, or commissioner or clerk. The bond must be in form joint and several, and the penalty not less than twice the value of the personal property, and twice the probable value of the rents and profits of the property belonging to the estate, the value to be ascertained by the district court. An additional bond may be required by the district court whenever the sale of any real estate belonging to the estate is ordered. The penalty of the bond must, under all circumstances, be equal to twice the value of the personal property, and moneys to come into the hands of the administrator or executor.

Within thirty days after letters are granted, the executor or administrator is required to publish in some newspaper published in the county or of general circulation in the State, for three weeks, a notice that letters testamentary or of administration have been granted to him, stating the date, and requiring all persons having claims against the estate to exhibit them for allowance to the executor or administrator within six months after the date of the letters, or they may be precluded from any benefit of such estate; and that, if such claims be not exhibited within one year from the date of the said letters, they shall be forever barred.

Demands against the estate are divided into the following classes, and payable and have preference of payment accordingly: 1. Funeral expenses and expenses of administration. 2. Expenses of the last sickness, and of any sums of money that may be due by decedent personally to servants and employees for services rendered within the sixty days next preceding his death. 3. Claims for medicine and medical attendance during the last sickness of the deceased. 4. Judgments rendered against the decedent in his lifetime; mortgages given by him in the order of their date, and liens upon his real estate. 5. All debts, without regard to quality, which shall be exhibited within six months after granting of the first letters on the estate. 6. All demands thus exhibited within one year after the letters are granted. Preference as to mortgages only extends to the proceeds of the property mortgaged. If the estate is insufficient to pay all of any one class, every creditor must be paid a dividend on portions of his claim, and no creditor of any one class shall receive any payment until all those of the preceding class are fully paid. If disputed by the representative of the estate, they must be proved up by disinterested testimony. The district court is vested with jurisdiction in probate matters. No different proof required of non-residents.

The court, or a judge thereof, must make such reasonable allowance out of the estate as shall be necessary for the maintenance of the family, according to their circumstances, during the progress of the settlement of the estate. Until letters are granted, and the inventory of the estate is returned, they are entitled to remain in possession of the homestead, of all the wearing apparel of the family, and of all the household furniture of the decedent, and are also entitled to a reasonable provision for their support, to be allowed by the court, or a judge thereof or a commissioner thereof, pending the application for letters. Any allowance made in accordance with this provision must be paid in preference to all other charges, except funeral charges and expenses of administration. If, upon return of the inventory of the estate of a deceased person, it shall appear therefrom that the value of the whole estate does not exceed the sum of fifteen hundred dollars, and if there be a widow or minor child of the deceased, the court or judge thereof shall, by order, request all persons interested to appear on a day fixed, to show cause why the whole of said estate should not be assigned for the use and support of the family of the deceased. Notice thereof shall be given, and proceedings had in the same manner as provided for settlement of accounts, and the partial distribution of estates. If the court finds that the value of the property does not exceed fifteen hundred dollars, then the court will, by decree for that purpose, assign the entire estate for the use and support of the widow and minor children.

The administrator is required to make an accounting every six months.

Conditional Sales. — No sale contract, or lease, wherein the transfer or title of ownership of personal property is made to depend upon any condition, is valid against any purchaser, judgment creditor of the vendee, or lessee in possession, without notice, unless same is in writing, signed by the vendee or lessee, and the original or a copy thereof filed in the office of the county clerk of the county where the property is. Said instrument so filed must have attached thereto an affidavit of such vendor or lessor, or his agent or attorney, setting forth the names of the vendor and vendee, or lessor and lessee, with a description of the property transferred, and the full and true interest of the vendor or lessor therein. All such sales or transfers cease to be valid against purchasers in good faith, judgment or attaching creditors, without notice at the expiration of one year from date of such sale, unless the vendor or lessor shall, within thirty days prior to one year from the date of such sale or transfer, file a similar affidavit to the one above provided for, in the office of said county clerk, and the said vendor or lessor may preserve the validity of such sale or transfer of such personal property by an annual refiling in the same manner as aforesaid, of such copy. The county clerk, on presentation, must file such instrument in his office, indexing the same as chattel mortgages are required to be indexed, and collecting a fee therefor of twenty-five cents.

Corporations. — A corporation can be organized by three or more persons who may desire to form a company for the purpose of carrying on business. There is no law as to the amount to be paid in. The incorporators shall make, sign, and acknowledge, before some officer competent to take the acknowledgment of deeds, duplicate certificates in which shall be stated the corporate name of such company; the object for which it was formed; the amount of its capital stock; the term of its existence, not to exceed fifty years; the number of shares of stock; the number of directors and their names, who shall manage the affairs of the corporation for the first year; the name of the town and county in which the operations of the company are to be carried on; and shall file one of said certificates in the office of the county clerk of each county where the operations of said company are carried on, and one in the office of the secretary of the State. The county clerk shall record said certificate in a book kept by him for that purpose; provided that when any company which is organized to promote the industries of the State, but without any purpose of direct gain to itself, shall not have any capital stock, the certificate shall not contain any statement relating thereto, and in lieu thereof the certificate shall state that the company is not organized for direct gain and has no capital stock. The persons so incorporating, and their successors, shall be a body corporate and politic, in fact and in name, by name stated in such certificate, and by that name have succession and be capable of suing and being sued, and they shall adopt and have a common seal, and in their corporate name be capable in law of acquiring by purchase, donation, or otherwise, and of holding and conveying by deed or otherwise, such real and personal property as will enable it to carry on the operations named in the certificate. The certificate may state one or more places where the company may carry on its business. If any company shall be formed for the purpose of carrying on any part of its business outside of this State, the certificate shall so state, and also state the name of the county and town in which the principal part of the business of said company within the State is to be transacted, and said place shall be deemed its principal place of business within the meaning of the law. Within thirty days after filing its certificate each corporation must publish three times in a newspaper of general circulation in the State a notice stating its name, object, amount of capital stock, number of shares, number and names of directors, place of principal office, and name of agent in charge. Proof of publication must be filed within thirty days in the office of the secretary of state. The business of the company shall be managed by not less than three nor more than nine directors, who shall each be stockholders therein, and who shall, after the first year, be annually elected by the stockholders at such time and place as shall be designated by the by-laws of the company. Public notice of the time and place of holding such elections shall be published not less than ten days previous thereto, in a newspaper printed nearest the place where the operations of the company are carried on. The election shall be by such of the stockholders as shall attend for that purpose, either in person or by proxy. Each stockholder shall be entitled to as many votes as he has shares of stock, and a majority of votes shall elect. Cumulative voting is permitted. All elections shall be by ballot; and at least one half of the stock must be represented. When any vacancy by death, resignation, or otherwise shall happen among the directors, it shall be filled as the by-laws of the company may provide. Failure to elect on the day designated in the notice shall not operate as a dissolution, and in such case an election may be held in the manner provided in the by-laws, and the acts of directors so elected shall be valid and binding until their successors shall be elected. There shall be a president designated from the number of the directors, and also such officers as the by-laws shall designate, who may be elected or appointed, and required to give such security for the faithful performance of the duty of the office as the company by its by-laws may require. The directors may call in and demand from the stockholders all sums of money by them subscribed at such time and in such payments as the directors deem proper, not to exceed ten per cent. in any one month. When sixty days after demand by personal service, or publication for six weeks in a newspaper published nearest the principal place of business, has elapsed, the stock and previous payments may be declared forfeited. The stockholders of the corporation, or the directors, if the certificate of incorporation so provide, shall have power to make by-laws for the management of the business affairs of the company, prescribing the duties of officers and regulating its business methods. The stock may be transferred as the by-laws of the company may provide, but no corporation can purchase stock. Stockholders are severally liable to the creditors of the company to the amount of unpaid assessments thereon. The president and a majority of the directors, within thirty days after payment of last installment of capital stock, shall make a sworn certificate stating the amount of the capital so fixed and paid in, and the same shall be recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county where the business of the company is carried on. If the directors of any company declare or pay any dividend when the company is insolvent, or when such payment would render it insolvent or decrease the amount of its capital stock, they shall be severally liable for all the then existing debts of the company. The capital stock may be increased or diminished, and the business extended or changed, in the following manner: the owners of a majority of the shares shall make application in writing to the chief officer of the company to call a meeting of the stockholders, which application shall state the purpose for which such meeting is desired. It then shall be the duty of such officer to publish a notice to be signed by him, in a newspaper in the county wherein is situated the principal place of business of such company, for four weeks, and mail to each stockholder a printed copy thereof, at least fifteen days previous to the time of meeting. The notice shall state the time and place of the meeting, and specify the object thereof. A vote of two thirds is necessary to change capital stock or business. Domestic and foreign corporations are required to file a certificate designating a statutory agent and an office for service of process.

Every foreign corporation doing business in the State is required to file its certificate in the office of the secretary of state and of the county where it does business. A failure to do so renders the officers, agents, and stockholders jointly and severally liable. A corporation, either foreign or domestic, organized for gain shall upon filing its certificate of incorporation with the secretary of state pay said secretary of state the following fees, to wit: (1) (a) If the corporation is not organized for profit, and has no capital stock, five dollars. (b) If the capital stock is not in excess of ten thousand dollars, the sum of ten dollars. (c) If the capital stock is more than ten thousand dollars and not more than twenty-five thousand dollars, the sum of fifteen dollars. (d) If the capital stock is more than twenty-five thousand dollars and not more than fifty thousand dollars, the sum of twenty dollars. (e) If the capital stock is more than fifty thousand dollars and not more than one hundred thousand dollars, the sum of twenty-five dollars. (f) If the capital stock is more than one hundred thousand dollars, the sum of twenty-five dollars, and twenty cents for each one thousand dollars of capital stock in excess of one hundred thousand dollars. (2) For filing amendments increasing the capital stock, the fees shall be at the same rate as for filing the original articles of incorporation. (3) For filing other amendments, five dollars. Property is taxed like that of individuals.

Every corporation, both foreign and domestic, is required to file with the secretary of state a certificate, signed by its president or secretary, designating the location by town or city, giving the street and number, if any there be, of its principal office in this State, and the name of the agent in charge thereof and upon whom process against said corporation may be served. The fee for filing such certificate is two dollars and fifty cents. Such agent of the corporation shall have the right to resign the agency by giving thirty days' notice, in writing, to any officer of such foreign or domestic corporation by which he was appointed, and is required to file a copy of the notice of resignation in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Wyoming within ten days after service of the same shall have been made. Upon the resignation of such an agent, it shall be the duty of such domestic or foreign corporation to file a new certificate appointing an agent, as hereinbefore described. Upon failure of the corporation to comply with this requirement, the corporation shall be deemed to have forfeited its privileges and franchises, immediately after the secretary of state has published in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the principal officer of the corporation was located, in one issue each week for a period of three weeks, the name of the corporation failing to comply with the provisions of law in this particular.

State board of equalization assesses franchises, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, and all other property used in the operation of all railroads and other common carriers, except machine shops, rolling mills, and hotels in this State; such assessed valuation is apportioned by mileage to the several counties in which the carriers are located as a basis for taxation; but such assessment does not apply to incorporated towns and cities. Railroad, telegraph, and telephone companies and owners or custodians of car lines, making regular trips in the State, are required to make a verified return to the State auditor on or before July 3, each year, of the actual cash value of the property, and the number of miles of railroad, telegraph, or telephone line in each organized county in the State. Board meets second Monday in August. Express companies are taxed five per cent. on gross receipts within the State.

Insurance Companies — Are required to pay to the insurance commission, between February 1 and March 30, a tax of two and one half per cent. on gross premiums received by it on insurance within this State, for preceding calendar year; this in lieu of all taxes except on real or personal property owned or held in trust, and fees for transacting business in the State. Insurance companies are required to file with state auditor sealed authority, accompanied by resolution of board of directors, authorising state auditor to acknowledge or receive service of process.

Courts, Jurisdiction and Terms of. — See Court Calendar for Wyoming.

Deeds, Acknowledgments, etc. — Conveyances of land, or of any estate or interest therein, may be made by deed signed by the grantor, or by his lawful agent or attorney, and acknowledged or proved and recorded. Such deed must be executed in the presence of one witness, who shall subscribe his name to the same as such; and any person executing a deed or mortgage may acknowledge the same before any judge or clerk of a court of record or any United States commissioner, or before any county clerk, notary public, or justice of the peace within the State. The acknowledgment may be either printed or written on the deed, or a slip containing the same may be attached to the deed. The date on which commission of notary expires should appear on acknowledgment.

The following form may be used: —

THE STATE OF }
COUNTY OF } ss.

I, a in and for said county, in the State aforesaid, do hereby certify that said personally known to me as the person whose name subscribed to the annexed deed, appeared before me this day in person and acknowledged that signed, sealed, and delivered said instrument of writing as free and voluntary act, for the uses and purposes therein set forth, and expressly waived and released all right, title, and benefit of exemption, under any and all homestead exemption laws so called, of said State of Wyoming.

And I further certify that wi of the said w by me first examined in reference to the signing and acknowledging such deed, the nature and effect of said deed being explained to by me, and that being by me fully appraised of right, and of the effect of signing and acknowledging said deed, did sign the same, and did then acknowledge that freely and voluntarily signed and acknowledged the same for the uses and purposes therein set forth, and expressly waived and released all rights and advantages under and by virtue of all laws of said State of Wyoming relating to the exemption of homesteads.

Given under my hand and this day of A. D. 19 . (Signature.)

My commission expires on the day of A. D. 19 .

In the case of natural persons acting by attorney the certificate may be as follows: —

On this day of , 191 , before me personally appeared A. B., to me known to be the person who executed the foregoing instrument in behalf of C. D., and acknowledged that he executed the same as the free act and deed of said C. D.

In the case of corporations or joint-stock associations the certificate of acknowledgment may be in the following form: —

On this day of , 191 , before me appeared A. B., to me personally known, who, being by me duly sworn (or affirmed), did say that he is the president (or other officer or agent of the corporation or association) of (describing the corporation or association), and that the seal affixed to said instrument is the corporate seal of said corporation (or association) and that said instrument was signed and sealed in behalf of said corporation (or association) by authority of its board of directors (or trustees), and said A. B. acknowledged said instrument to be the free act and deed of said corporation (or association).

In case the corporation or association has no corporate seal, omit the words "the seal affixed to said instrument is the corporate seal of said corporation (or association), and that," (and add at the end of the affidavit clause the words "and that said corporation or association) has no corporate seal."

In all cases prefix to the form a caption specifying the State and county where the acknowledgment is taken and append signature and title of the officer taking the acknowledgment. If the acknowledging officer is a notary public, justice of the peace, or commissioner, show also date of expiration of commission or term, with statement as follows, "My term or commission expires ."

A married woman may by deed or mortgage convey her real estate in like manner as she might do if she were unmarried.

No covenant shall be implied in any conveyance of real estate, whether such conveyance contain special covenants or not. No mortgage shall be construed as implying a covenant for the payment of the sum intended to be secured thereby, and where there is no express covenant to pay such sum in the mortgage, nor any bond or separate instrument to secure such payment, the mortgagee is confined to the lands named in the mortgage for his security, and has no personal claim on the mortgagor.

"If any deed or mortgage shall be executed in any other State, Territory, or District of the United States or foreign country, the same must be executed according to the laws of this State, and may be acknowledged before any officer authorized by law to take acknowledgments at the place where such acknowledgment is taken, or before any commissioner appointed by the governor of this State for that purpose." In the cases where deeds or mortgages are executed and acknowledged out of the State, unless the acknowledgment is taken before a commissioner appointed by the governor of this State for that purpose, or an officer having a seal, such deed or mortgage shall have attached thereto a certificate of the clerk of other proper certifying officer of a court of record of the county or district within which such acknowledgment was taken, under the seal of his office, that the person whose name is subscribed to the certificate of acknowledgment at the date thereof was such officer as he is therein represented to be, that he knows the signature of such person subscribed thereto to be genuine, and that the deed or mortgage is executed according to the laws of such State, Territory, or District.

Want of record of a deed or mortgage does not affect the validity of the same except as to subsequent purchasers of the same premises in good faith and for a valuable consideration whose conveyances are first duly recorded. A power of attorney to convey real estate must be executed with the same formalities as the conveyance itself.

Except as will be gathered from the foregoing provisions relating to the form of acknowledgment of deeds and mortgages, the statute makes no provision as to the form of acknowledgment, either as to natural persons or corporations, save that a mortgage or conveyance of a homestead shall be void unless the wife of the grantor, if he have one, shall freely and voluntarily sign and acknowledge the same, after being apprised of her right, and the effect of such act.

The execution of deeds must be acknowledged in all cases. Proof of execution will not answer in lieu of acknowledgment.

Depositions. — The deposition of a witness may be used only in the following cases: 1. When the witness does not reside in, or is absent from, the county where the action or proceeding is pending, or by change of venue is sent for trial. 2. When the witness is dead, or from age, infirmity, or imprisonment is unable to attend court. 3. When the testimony is required upon a motion, or where the oral examination of the witness is not required.

Either party may commence taking testimony by depositions at any time after service upon the defendant.

Depositions may be taken out of the State before a judge, justice, or chancellor of any court of record, a justice of the peace, notary public, mayor or chief magistrate of any city or town corporate, a commissioner appointed by the governor of this State to take depositions, or any person authorized by a special commission from this State.

The officer before whom depositions are taken must not be a relative or attorney of either party, or otherwise interested in the event of the action or proceeding.

Written notice of the intention to take a deposition must be given to the adverse party, specifying the action or proceeding, the name of the court or tribunal in which it is to be used, and the time and place where it will be taken; and in case the deposition of a party to the suit is taken, the same cannot be used in his own behalf unless the notice shall also specify that his deposition would be taken. The notice must be served so as to allow the adverse party sufficient time (exclusive of Sundays, the day of service, and one day for preparation) to travel by the usual routes and modes of conveyance to the place named in the notice; and the examination may, if so stated in the notice, be adjourned from day to day. But an adjournment from Saturday to Monday is good.

Depositions thus taken by any judicial or other officer authorized as above to take depositions, having a seal of office, must be admitted in evidence upon the certificate and signature of such officer, under the seal of the court of which he is an officer, or his official seal, and no other or further act of authentication is required. If the officer taking the same have no official seal, the deposition, if not taken in this State, must be certified and signed by such officer, and be further authenticated, either by parole proof adduced in court, or by the certificate and seal of any secretary or other officer of state keeping the great seal thereof, or of the clerk or prothonotary of any court of the State having a seal, attesting that such officer was, at the time of taking the same, authorized within the meaning of the law as above given to take the same. The deposition must be filed at least one day before the day of trial.

Forms and Instructions. — The following forms may be used: —

" Deposition of witnesses taken in a cause pending in the court of (here name the court in which the suit is pending) wherein is plaintiff, and defendant, and for said plaintiff (or defendant, as the case may be), in pursuance of the notice hereto attached." (Here state which of the parties were present.)

" A. B. of the county of of lawful age, being first duly sworn (or affirmed) by me, as hereinafter certified, deposes and says." (Here insert the depositions, either by stating the facts in a narrative form, or in the form of answers to questions first written down.)

If more than one witness, the next deposition may be commenced immediately below the preceding, as follows: —

" Also C. D. of of lawful age, being," etc. (same as in first deposition).

At the end of the whole the certificate of the officer must be annexed and may be as follows: —

" I, E. F. (naming the official character of the officer), do hereby certify that the above named (naming all the witnesses) were by me first duly sworn (or affirmed) to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth in the above entitled cause, and that the foregoing depositions by them respectively subscribed were reduced to writing by me and subscribed by the said witnesses in my presence (or if by any other person, here insert his name, and state that he was a disinterested person, and they were written in the presence of the officer), and were taken at time and place in the inclosed notice specified. That I am not a relative or attorney of either party or otherwise interested in the event of the action. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand (if the officer have a seal add) [and official seal] this day of a. d. 18 ." (Sign, stating official character.)

If adjournments, instead of the words "and were taken at the time and place in the inclosed notice specified," insert "and were commenced at the time and place in the notice specified, and continued by adjournment from day to day, at the same place, and between the same hours, as in the notice specified, and for the reasons above stated."

The sealed package containing the deposition should be addressed to "The clerk of the court naming the court in which suit is pending), at Wyoming." Across the seals write, "Depositions in the case of A. B. v. C. D., taken, sealed up, addressed, and transmitted by me." (Signed, with official character.)

If the suit is pending before a justice, the address should be "To justice of the peace, within and for county, Wyoming."

Fees for taking depositions in this State are fifteen cents per folio, and five dollars for all other services in taking, certifying, directing, indorsing, and transmitting the same.

Descent and Distribution of Property. — Property of an intestate descends as follows: (1) If such intestate leaves husband or wife and children, or the descendants of any children, him or her surviving, one half of such estate shall descend to such surviving husband or wife, and the residue thereof to such surviving children and descendants of children, as hereinafter limited; if such intestate leaves husband or wife and no child or descendants of any child, then the real and personal estate of such intestate shall descend as follows, to wit: All of said estate up to the sum of twenty thousand dollars, after the payment of the debts of such intestate and the expenses of administration, shall descend and vest in the surviving husband or wife, and the balance of such estate over and above the sum of twenty thousand dollars, left after the payment of the debts and the expenses of administration, shall descend as follows, to-wit: Three fourths thereof to such surviving husband or wife, and one fourth thereof to the father and mother of the intestate, or the survivor of them, of, if both parents be dead, to the brothers and sisters, and to the descendants of brothers and sisters who are dead (the descendants, collectively, taking the share which their parents would have taken if living), in equal parts. Provided, that if such intestate leave a husband or wife and no child or descendants of any child, and no parents, and no brothers and sisters, or descendants of deceased brothers and sisters, then the whole of the estate of such intestate, real and personal, irrespective of its value, shall descend to and vest in the surviving husband or wife, or his or her absolute estate, subject to the payments of the debts as aforesaid. (2) Except in cases above numerated, the estate of any intestate shall descend and be distributed as follows: (a) To his children surviving, and the descendants of his children who are dead (the descendants, collectively, taking the share which their parents would have taken if living). (b) If there be no children, or their descendants, then to his father, mother, brothers, and sisters, and to the descendants of brothers and sisters who are dead (the descendants, collectively, taking the share which their parents would have taken if living), in equal parts. (c) If there be no children or their descendants, or father, mother, brothers, sisters, or descendants of deceased brothers and sisters, or husband or wife, living, then to the grandfather, grandmother, uncles, aunts, and their descendants (the descendants taking, collectively, the share of their immediate ancestors), in equal parts. (3) Dower and curtesy are abolished. A widow residing in this State is entitled to certain specific exemptions, "and also the same amount and species of property as is, or may be by law, exempt from execution." The court may, on its own motion, or on petition, "set apart for the surviving husband or wife, or in case of his or her death, to the minor child of the decedent," all exempt property, including the homestead. It is, in the same section, provided that the court "must select and set apart a homestead for the use of the surviving husband or wife and the minor children"; the statutes being ambiguous whether the homestead is for the sole benefit of the husband or wife, on the one hand, or for the common benefit of the husband or wife and the minor children, on the other.

Divorce and Alimony. — Marriages are void without any decree of divorce that may hereafter be contracted in this State, (1) when either party has a husband or wife living at the time of contracting the marriage; (2) when either party is insane or an idiot at the time of contracting the marriage; (3) when the parties stand in the relation to each other of parent and children, grandparent and grandchildren, brothers and sisters, of half as well as of whole blood, uncle and niece, aunt and nephew, and first cousins, and this subdivision extends to illegitimate as well as legitimate children and relations; provided, that this prohibition shall not extend to any persons not related by consanguinity.

Voidable Marriages. — In case of a marriage solemnized when either of the parties is under the age of legal consent, if they shall separate during such non-age, and not cohabit together afterwards, or in case the consent of one of the parties was obtained by force or fraud, and there shall have been no subsequent voluntary cohabitation of the parties, the marriage shall be deemed voidable. Voidable marriages may be annulled by decree of the district court on petition duly filed, and the proceedings will conform, in all such cases, to proceedings on petition for divorce; and where the validity is questioned or doubted, a petition may be filed and proof made of validity, and a decree entered in accordance with such proof confirming the matter.

Causes for Divorce. — A divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed by the district court of the county where the parties, or one of them, reside, on the application of the aggrieved party by petition, in either of the following cases: 1. When adultery has been committed by husband or wife. 2. When one of the parties was physically incompetent at the time of the marriage, and the same has continued to the time of the divorce.

3. When one of the parties has been convicted of a felony and sentenced to imprisonment therefor in any prison; and no pardon granted, after a divorce for that cause, shall restore such party to his or her conjugal rights. 4. When either party has willfully deserted the other for the term of one year. 5. When the husband or wife shall have become an habitual drunkard. 6. When one of the parties has been guilty of extreme cruelty to the other. 7. When the husband for the period of one year has neglected to provide the common necessities of life, when such neglect is not the result of poverty, on the part of the husband, which he could not avoid by ordinary industry. 8. When either party shall offer such indignities to the other as shall render his or her condition intolerable. 9. When the husband shall be guilty of such conduct as to constitute him a vagrant within the meaning of the law respecting vagrancy. 10. When prior to the contract of marriage, or the solemnization thereof, either party shall have been convicted of a felony or infamous crime in any State, Territory, or country without knowledge on the part of the other party of such fact at the time of such marriage. 11. When the intended wife at the time of contracting marriage, or at the time of the solemnization thereof, shall have been pregnant by any other man than her intended husband, and without his knowledge at the time of such solemnization. No divorce will be decreed in any case where it appears that the petition therefor was founded in collusion. No divorce will be granted unless the plaintiff has resided in the State for one year immediately preceding the time of filing the petition, unless the marriage was solemnized in the State and the applicant resided therein from the time of the marriage to the time of filing the petition. Each party to a divorce proceeding is a competent witness to testify in his or her own behalf. Service in actions for divorce may be had by publication. Temporary alimony may be granted by the court, requiring the husband to pay a sum necessary to enable the wife to carry on or defend the action and for her support and the support of the children of the parties, during the pendency of the action. The care and custody of the minor children of the parties and their suitable maintenance during the pendency of the action may be ordered by the court, and in granting final decree the court may make such disposition and provision for the children as shall appear most expedient under all the circumstances and most expedient for their present comfort and future welfare. The court may also make such disposition of the property of the parties as shall appear just and equitable, and the court may also decree to the wife reasonable alimony out of the estate of the husband, having regard for his ability, and to effectuate the purposes aforesaid may order so much of his real estate or the rents and profits thereof as is necessary to be assigned and set out to the wife for life; or may decree a specific sum to be paid by him to her and use all necessary legal and equitable processes to carry its decrees into effect.

Dower. — Under our state statutes there is neither dower nor tenancy by curtesy.

Evidence. — All persons are competent witnesses except those of unsound mind and children under ten years of age, who appear incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts and transactions, respecting which they are examined, or of relating them truly. Husband and wife cannot be a witness against each other, except in criminal proceedings for a crime committed by one against the other, or in a civil action by one against the other. In all civil and criminal cases they may be witnesses for each other. An attorney cannot testify concerning a communication made to him by his client in that relation, or his advice to his client; neither can a physician concerning a communication made to him by his patient in that relation, or his advice to his patient; but the attorney or physician may testify by express consent of the client or patient, and if the client or patient voluntarily testify, the attorney or physician may be compelled to testify on the same subject. A clergyman or priest cannot testify concerning a confession made to him in his professional character. Neither can a person testify who assigns his claim or interest concerning any matter in respect to which he would not, if a party, be permitted to testify. A person shall not testify who, if a party, would be restricted in his evidence under the provisions of law, where the controversy is between parties, one of whom acts in a representative capacity. A party may compel the adverse party to testify orally or by deposition. In both civil and criminal cases the party presenting the witness cannot impeach his credit by evidence of bad character, but may contradict him by other evidence and may also prove that he has made at other times statements inconsistent with his present testimony. Printed copies of written law enacted by any other State, Territory, or foreign government, purporting to have been made public by the authority thereof, or proved to be commonly admitted as evidence of the existing law in the courts or tribunals of such State, Territory, or government, are admitted by the courts and officers of this State on all occasions as presumptive evidence of such law. The unwritten law of any other State, Territory, or foreign government may be proved by parole evidence, and the books and reports of cases adjudicated in their courts are also admitted as presumptive evidence of such law. Copies of papers, books, and records on file or deposited by virtue of any law in the office of the governor or secretary of state, and certified by the said secretary under the state seal, are competent evidence. See also Proof of Claims.

Executions. — Land levied upon must be appraised at its real value in money, by the oath of three disinterested freeholders, residents of the county, called by the sheriff, and sworn by him to impartially appraise such land upon actual view. And no tract of land can be sold for less than two thirds this appraisement, except in the sale of certain land by the State, and the property of certain county officers, levied on for any money by them received or collected in their official capacity. Lands cannot be sold until the officer cause public notice of the time and place of sale to be given for six consecutive weeks before the day of sale, by advertisement in some newspaper printed and of general circulation in the county, or, in case no paper be printed in the county, in some newspaper of general circulation therein, or posting advertisements in certain places. The sale of lands must be held at the court-house in the county where such lands are situated, unless ordered by the court to be sold on the premises. Executions for judgments may be issued at any time on demand and may be directed to different counties at the same time. They must be returned by the sheriff within sixty days from the date thereof; stay of execution is allowed on petition in error or on appeal, and for six months upon filing bond conditioned for payment of judgment and costs and in cases before a justice of the peace.

The debtor against whom any judgment for the payment of money has been rendered may be arrested upon execution and committed to the jail of the county until he pays the judgment, or is discharged according to law, in the following cases: 1. When he has removed, or begun to remove, any of his property out of the jurisdiction of the court, with the intent to prevent the collection of the money due on the judgment. 2. When he has property, rights in action, evidences of debt, or interest or stock in a corporation or company which he fraudulently conceals with like intent. 3. When he has assigned or disposed of all or part of his property or rights in action, or has converted the same into money with intent to defraud his creditors or with the intent to prevent such property from being taken in execution. 4. When he fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the obligation upon which the judgment was rendered. 5. When the judgment was rendered for money or other valuable thing lost by playing at any game or by means of any bet or wager. 6. When he was arrested on an order before judgment and has not been discharged as an insolvent debtor, or the order has not been set aside as improperly made. An execution to arrest a debtor for the causes aforesaid can be issued, with certain exceptions, only when allowed by the supreme court, the district court, or the probate court, or any judge of either, upon being satisfied by the affidavit of the judgment creditor or his attorney, and such other evidence as may be presented, of the existence of one or more of the particulars mentioned above.

Females are exempt from arrest for any debt or demand arising from contract. Sundry other persons are likewise exempt by reason of occupying certain public positions, or by reason of certain occasions.

Garnishment notices may be issued and served by officers holding execution.

Exemptions. — Every one being the head of a family, and residing with the same, is entitled to a homestead not exceeding in value twenty-five hundred dollars, exempt from execution or attachment for any debt, contract, or civil obligation, while such homestead is actually occupied as such by the owner thereof, or his or her family. The homestead may consist of a house and lot or lots in any town or city, or a farm of not more than one hundred and sixty acres. The owner of a homestead may mortgage the same, but such mortgage shall not be binding against the wife of a married man who may be occupying the premises with him unless she shall freely and voluntarily acknowledge and sign the same, and the officer taking such acknowledgment shall fully apprise her of her rights and of the effect of signing such mortgage.

Besides the homestead above mentioned, the wearing apparel of every person is exempt from judicial or ministerial process; also the following property when owned by any person being the head of a family and residing with the same, to wit: the family bible, pictures, and school-books; a lot in any cemetery or burial ground; furniture, bedding, provisions, and such other articles as the debtor may select, not to exceed in all the value of five hundred dollars, to be ascertained by the appraisement of three disinterested householders; provided that no personal property of any person about to remove or abscond from the State shall be exempt. The tools, team, and implements, or stock in trade of a mechanic, miner, or other person, and used and kept for the purpose of carrying on his trade or business, is exempt to a value not exceeding three hundred dollars; also the library, instruments, or implements of any professional man, not to exceed in value three hundred dollars. The person claiming exemption must in all cases be a bona fide resident of the State. Half the earnings of a debtor for his personal services within sixty days before levy are exempt from levy, when it is made to appear that such earnings are necessary, for the use of his family, supported wholly or in part by his labor.

Frauds, Statute of. — See Statute of Frauds.

Garnishment. — See Attachment.

Inheritance Taxes. — By enactment effective February 21, 1903, a state inheritance tax is imposed upon all property passing by will or the intestate laws of this State from any resident, or all property in this State of a non-resident, or by gift or grant, causa mortis, of two per cent. where the decedent's father, mother, husband, wife, child, brother, sister, wife, or widow of the son or husband of the daughter, or any child or children adopted by law or acknowledged for at least ten years as a child, or any legitimate lineal descendant, is the beneficiary; and of five per cent. in all other cases. Ten thousand dollars of each estate is exempt. Estates for life or a less term are not taxable. The tax becomes due at death, upon the clear market value of the estate, to be ascertained by tax appraisement. Interest runs from death at six per cent., with a discount of five per cent. and all interest if paid within six months. The tax is collected by the county treasurer and paid over to the state treasurer, and may be refunded within two years if found erroneous. The county treasurer may be addressed relative to the proper assessment.

Insolvent Laws. — See Assignments.

Interest. — Any rate may be agreed upon in writing not to exceed twelve per cent., but in the absence of express contract, all moneys, claims, or judgments draw interest at the rate of eight per cent. per annum; unsettled accounts draw interest after thirty days from date of last item.

Judgments, and their Effect. — Judgments constitute a lien upon the real estate of the debtor, subject to execution within the county where the same is entered from the first day of the term at which the judgment is entered; but judgments by confession and judgments rendered at the same term at which the action is commenced bind such lands only from the day on which such judgments are rendered. All other lands as well as goods and chattels of the debtor shall be bound from the time they are seized in execution. If execution is not sued out within five years from the date of the judgment it becomes dormant, and ceases to be a lien upon the estate of the judgment debtor.

Judgments can be entered up only in term time, in open court, and execution may issue at any time after the order for judgment is granted. In default cases the clerk may enter judgment. In justices' courts judgment is entered immediately after trial or verdict; and in case of default, after proof of plaintiff's claim or demand. Judgments may be obtained in justices' courts in four days after suit is brought, if no defense be interposed.

No attorneys' fees are taxable in bills of costs; but if in a written contract or note of hand attorneys' fees have been specially provided for, and agreed to, the courts will allow a reasonable amount to be taxed and added to the amount of the judgment, not exceeding the amount stipulated for in the contract. See Executions.

License. — No non-resident company, person, or corporation shall in person or by employee, or agent, sell by sample or otherwise, any goods, wares, or merchandise, without having first obtained a license. But this does not apply to traveling agents or salesmen who sell by sample or otherwise exclusively to regular merchants doing business in the State. Such traveling salesmen are not required to pay a license. City and town licenses are regulated by ordinance.

Liens. — Common carriers are given a lien by statute for charges for transportation; also mechanics and material-men have a lien for labor and materials employed or used in the erection or repair of buildings. The claim, therefore, must be made out and filed in four months if by original contractor, or within ninety days if by sub-contractor, from the time the work is finished or the last item of material furnished, and proceedings to foreclose the lien must be commenced in six months. Any person performing any work in the making or repair of any article of personal property has a lien on the same for his charges.

Limitation. — Civil actions can be brought only within the following periods after the cause of action shall have accrued: 1st. An action for the recovery of lands, tenements, and hereditaments, within ten years. 2d. An action upon a specialty or any agreement, contract, or promise in writing, within ten years. 3d. An action upon a contract not in writing, within eight years; but on all foreign claims, judgments, or contracts, express or implied, contracted or incurred before the debtor becomes a resident of this State, actions shall be commenced within five (ch. 63, L. 1911) years after the debtor shall have established his residence in this State. 4th. An action for trespass upon real property, or for taking, detaining, or injuring personal property, including actions for the specific recovery of personal property, within four years. 5th. An action for libel, slander, assault and battery, malicious prosecution, or false imprisonment, within one year. 6th. An action upon the official bond or undertaking of an executor, administrator, guardian, sheriff, or other officer, or upon the bond or undertaking, given in attachment, injunction, arrest, or any cause whatever required by statute, within ten years. 7th. An action for any cause not before enumerated, within ten years. If a person entitled to bring any of the foregoing actions, except an action for the recovery of real property, and except a penalty or forfeiture, be at the time the cause of action accrues within the age of twenty-one years, a married woman, insane, or imprisoned, the action may be brought within the times above limited after such disability shall have been removed. If when the cause of action accrues against a person he be out of the State, or shall have absconded or concealed himself, the period limited for the commencement of the action shall not begin to run until he comes into the State, or while he is absconded or concealed. If after the cause of action accrues he depart from the State, or absconds or conceals himself, the time of such absence or concealment shall not be computed as any part of the period within which the action must be brought.

Where the cause of action has arisen in another State or Territory, between non-residents of this State, and by the laws of the State or Territory where the cause of action arose an action cannot be maintained thereon by reason of lapse of time, no action can be maintained thereon in this State.

In any case founded on contract, part payment of principal or interest, or an acknowledgment of existing debt, liability, or claim in writing signed by the party to be charged, takes the case out of the statute, and an action may be brought within the time limited, after such part payment or acknowledgment.

Married Women. — The rights of a married woman in this State are very nearly the same as those of an unmarried woman, as respects her property, both real and personal. She may make a will, sue and be sued, make contracts, carry on a trade or business, retain her own earnings, and hold property, real or personal, with the rents and profits of the same, in her own name, free from the control or interference of her husband, the same as though she were sole and unmarried. And her property is exempt from execution or attachment for the debts of her husband. Her property is subject to debts on account of necessary family expenses and for children's education.

She has also all the rights of an elector, and may hold office and vote at all elections in the same manner as other electors. She may not, however, be appointed administratrix or hold that trust after marriage. See Deeds, Acknowledgments, etc.

Women become of age at twenty-one.

Mechanics' Liens. — See Liens.

Mortgages of Real Estate — May be foreclosed by decree of court, or by advertisement under power of sale if so provided in mortgage, and the decree in all cases directs a sale of the property; but the mortgagee may bid at the sale. Mortgages given in this State are usually accompanied by a note or notes for the amount to be secured. See Deeds, Acknowledgments, etc.; Recording of Deeds.

The cancellation or discharge of a mortgage or trust deed may be entered in a book kept for that purpose, and signed by the mortgagee or trustee of the deed of trust, his attorney in fact, executor, administrator, or assigns, in presence of county clerk, who subscribes as a witness. Discharge may also be made by deed of release executed as other deeds.

Notaries Public. — Notaries public are appointed by the governor upon petition of five freeholders, and for a term of four years. A seal is required. The jurisdiction of a notary public is limited to the county in which he resides. In case of the acknowledgments of papers to be recorded in this State the notary is required to certify the date of the expiration of his commission. County clerk authenticates notaries' official character and signature.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — This State, on February 15, 1905, adopted the uniform statute on negotiable instruments passed by many of the States in recent years.

Legal holidays are: January 1, February 12, February 22, Arbor Day, May 30, July 4, General Election Day, Thanksgiving, and December 25.

Practice. — This State has adopted the Ohio Code of Civil Procedure in substance.

Process. — See Actions.

Proof of Claims. — All demands, if put in suit, must be proved by the production of the witnesses before the court, if the testimony of living witnesses is necessary and they are within the county where the cause is tried. If the witnesses are without the county their depositions may be taken and used in all cases. Parties may testify in their own behalf in all cases except where the adverse party sues or is sued in a representative capacity, and the party he represents by reason of death or some disability cannot testify. Every written contract on which an action is brought proves itself unless the execution thereof is denied by the answer of the party under oath against whom it is plead. Judgment may be rendered on statement of account supported by affidavit or a duly verified pleading.

Recording of Deeds. — All deeds, mortgages, bonds, contracts, agreements, or other instruments concerning any interest in lands in this State, made in writing, under seal, attested by one witness, and acknowledged before some person authorized by law to take acknowledgments of deeds, may be recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county where the lands lie; and shall be notice to, and take precedence of, any subsequent purchaser or purchasers, from the date of such record. See Deeds, Acknowledgments, etc.

Redemption of Real Property. — Within six months from the time when any real property in this State is sold under the order, judgment, or decree of any court, or upon execution, or by the foreclosure of any mortgage or deed of trust, either by advertisement or by action, or by any proceeding provided or known to the law, except the sale of realty for taxes or the sale of the realty of the estate of a decedent, which shall be governed by the laws specially relating to the same, the real estate so sold, or any distinct lot, parcel, or portion thereof, that may have been separately sold, may be redeemed by the payment to the purchaser, his personal representatives, heirs, or assigns, or to the sheriff or other officers who sold the same, for the use of such purchaser, his heirs or assigns, of the sum of money for which such property was sold on such sale, together with the interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum from the date of such sale.

Any heir or devisee, grantee, mortgagee, creditor, or successor of the person or persons, either natural or artificial, who was the owner of such real property sold, may make such redemption, and in that case shall be subrogated to and stand in the place of the owner as to such realty.

Replevin. — Possession of personal property may be recovered by action of replevin. The plaintiff, his agent or attorney, must make affidavit, to be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court in which the action is brought, describing the property, stating that the plaintiff is the owner of the property, or has a special interest therein, with the facts showing such special interest; that the property is wrongfully detained by the defendant, and that it was not taken upon any process issued against the plaintiff, or, if taken under such process, that the property was exempt from execution, expressly or upon demand or selection by the plaintiff, and is not held for a tax, or, if held for a tax, that it is not held for any tax legally assessed or levied against the plaintiff.

The plaintiff must execute to the defendant a written undertaking in double the value of the property taken, conditioned that the plaintiff shall duly prosecute the action and pay all costs and damages which may be awarded against him and the undertaking. The undertaking must have one or more sufficient sureties.

When the property claimed is not taken, or is returned to the defendant by the sheriff for want of undertaking, the action may proceed as one for damages. If, within forty-eight hours from the time the sheriff levies the writ of replevin upon the property, there is executed by sufficient sureties by defendant a written undertaking to the plaintiff in at least double the value of the property taken, to the effect that the defendant will deliver the property to the plaintiff if such delivery be adjudged, and will pay all costs and damages that may be awarded against him, the sheriff must redeliver said property so taken on the writ of replevin, the sheriff returning with his writ the undertaking thus furnished by the defendant.

Reports, Judicial. — Wyoming Reports, volumes 1 to 23 are published.

Revision. — The statutes of Wyoming were last revised in 1910. The revision contains all laws in force in the State, including acts of 1909 session of legislature. Revision provided for by legislature of 1909.

Sales in Bulk. — Sale and transfer of stock of goods in bulk made fraudulent without first having given notice to creditors of transferor. (Laws 1911, p. 46; also Laws 1913, p. 10.)

Service of Summons. — Service of summons must be made by delivery at any time before the return day, of a copy of the summons, with indorsements thereon, together with a copy of the petition, to the defendant personally, or by leaving a copy of the summons and petition at his usual place of residence with some member of his family, or other person in his employ, over the age of fourteen years; or if the defendant is a partnership sued by its company name, by leaving a copy of the summons and petition at its usual place of doing business. The return must be made at the time mentioned in the writ, and the time and manner of service shall be stated in the writ.

Statute of Frauds. — Every agreement that by its term is not to be performed within a year; every special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another; every agreement, promise, or undertaking made upon consideration of marriage, except mutual promises to marry; every special promise by an executor or administrator to answer any demand out of his own estate; every agreement or contract for the sale of real estate or the lease thereof for more than one year, is void unless such agreement, or some note or memorandum thereof, be in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged.

Every contract for the sale of any goods, chattels, or things in action for the price of fifty dollars or more shall be void unless the same be in writing, signed by the party to be charged, or unless the buyer shall accept or receive part of such goods, or the evidences, or some of them, of such things in action, or unless the buyer shall at the time pay some part of the purchase-money.

To charge any person upon or by reason of a representation or assurance concerning the character, credit, ability, trade, or dealings of another to the intent or purpose that such other may obtain credit, money, or goods such representation or assurance must be in writing and signed by the person sought to be charged.

Stay of Execution. — Stay of execution in actions before justices of the peace, and in the district courts, is now provided for six months by statute, upon filing bond conditioned for payment of judgment and costs. Where cases are carried to the supreme court by petition in error, a supersedeas may be had, by filing a bond to pay costs and damages.

Taxes. — Taxes are levied on real estate and personal property, and are payable each year between the third Monday of September and the last day of December. Taxes are a lien upon all property, real and personal. After the 31st day of December a penalty of eight per cent. is added to the taxes. State, county, city, and school taxes are collected by county treasurer. Assessments are made as of April 1, for the calendar year.

Real property may be sold, on advertisement, for taxes, and may be redeemed any time within three years after such sale, by payment to the treasurer of the proper county of the amount for which the same was sold and fifteen per cent. of the same added thereto, with ten per cent. interest per annum on the whole amount from the day of sale and any subsequent taxes paid by the purchaser with ten per cent. interest thereon.

A certificate of purchase is given by the treasurer to the purchaser of property for taxes, which said certificate is held by the purchaser for a period of three years, unless the property has been redeemed, and at the expiration of three years, redemption not having been made, he is entitled to a deed for the lands so purchased.

There must be levied annually for state purposes a tax not to exceed four mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation, and such additional sum as may be required for state educational and charitable institutions, payment of the state debt and interest thereon.

For county revenue the annual levy is limited to twelve mills on the dollar, except for payment of county debt and interest thereon, and a two-dollar poll tax for school purposes on persons between the ages of twenty-one and fifty years.

Any incorporated city or town is permitted to levy a tax not to exceed eight mills on the dollar in any one year, except for the payment of its public debt and the interest thereon. There is an inheritance tax varying from two per cent. to five per cent., with varying exemptions according to relationship of distributees.

Mortgages are exempt from taxation.

Trust Deeds. — For securing debts, or to indemnify sureties, are provided for by statute. In case of default the lands may be sold by the trustee, to satisfy the debt or other trust named in the deed, at public auction for cash, after publishing the usual notice of sale for thirty days.

Wills. — Any person, including married women, of full age and sound mind, may dispose of his or her property by will. All wills to be valid must be in writing, witnessed by two competent witnesses, and signed by the testator, or caused to be signed by him in his presence. The testator may name in his will an executor or executors, provided that such shall be residents and citizens of the United States. But whenever any executor thus named is not a resident of the State, the probate judge shall require such executor to designate some resident of the State as agent or attorney, upon whom any notice of probate court may be served. If no executor is named in a will, or if the executor fail to act, the probate court shall appoint an executor to carry the will into effect; and if any person appointed is disqualified from acting, the probate judge shall appoint an executor until such disqualification is removed. Any person having custody of a will shall, on information of the death of the testator, file the same with the probate judge, who shall open and read the same. The probate court shall give notice of the time fixed for proving a will, by publishing a notice in a daily or weekly newspaper published in the county where the will is filed, and the last publication must be at least ten days before the time fixed for the proving of the will. Wills when proved and allowed shall have the certificate of the probate judge and seal of the probate court annexed thereto, and every will so certified, its record or transcript, may be read in evidence in all courts. By law the executors are entitled to the following commissions on property accounted for by them: For the first one thousand dollars, ten per cent. For the overplus between one and five thousand dollars, five per cent. thereon. For any amount over five thousand dollars, and not over twenty thousand dollars, three per cent.; for all above twenty thousand dollars at the rate of two per cent. Wills probated in any other State or Territory upon proper authentication may be admitted to probate in this State.

The district courts of the State sit as courts of probate, and all wills, letters testamentary and of administration, and all proceedings relating to the settlement of decedents' estates, are recorded in these courts. The care and guardianship of minor children, of the persons and estates of lunatics and drunkards, and estates in assignment, are under the direction and control of district courts. District courts, as courts of probate, are always open for the transaction of business, but the regular terms are held as provided by law. (See Court Calendar.) The district court now exercises jurisdiction over all probate matters.

PATENT LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Revised December 1, 1918, by Messrs. Howson & Howson, of Philadelphia, New York, and Washington.

Among the express powers given to Congress by the Federal Constitution is that of promoting "the progress of science and the useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." (Article 1, section 8.) Congress was prompt to exercise this power and passed the first patent act April 10, 1790, under the title "An act to promote the progress of useful arts," 1 Statutes at Large, 109. This act provided for the issue of letters patent to the inventor or discoverer of "any useful art, manufacture, engine, machine, or device, or any improvement therein not before known or used" granting to such inventor or discoverer for any term not exceeding fourteen years, "the sole and exclusive right and liberty of making, constructing, using and vending to others to be used, the said invention or discovery." The officials charged with the duty of granting patents were the secretaries of state and war and the attorney-general or any two of them. The patent system thus inaugurated has since existed without interruption, although other enactments have taken the place of the original statute.

General revisions of the patent statutes occurred in 1836 (Act July 4, 1836, 5 Stat. at Large, 117), and in 1870 (Act July 8, 1870, 16 Stat. at Large, 198), the latter act being reenacted in substantial entirety in the general revision of 1874. The Patent Office was established in 1836, being at first attached to the State Department, and later (1849) transferred to the Department of the Interior.

The main body of the patent laws now in force are found in secs. 4883-4923 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended. Sec. 4886, defining what inventions are patentable, reads as follows: "Sec. 4886. Any person who has invented or discovered any new and useful art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, not known or used by others in this country, before his invention or discovery thereof, and not patented or described in any printed publication in this or any foreign country, before his invention or discovery thereof or more than two years prior to his application, and not in public use or on sale in this country for more than two years prior to his application, unless the same is proved to have been abandoned, may, upon payment of the fee required by the law, and other due proceeding had, obtain a patent therefor." Secs. 4888-4892 regulate the mode of application for patent. Sec. 4898 provides for the transfer of patents. Secs. 4900-4901 regulate the marking of articles patented. Secs. 4904-4908 provide for and regulate interference proceedings between co-pending applications for the same invention. Sec. 4916 provides for the reissue of defective patents. Secs. 4919-4922 regulate matters connected with patent litigation. Secs. 4929-4933 provide for the issue of patents for original and ornamental designs. Other sections of the Revised Statutes provide for the organization, equipment, and regulation of the Patent Office; and acts in addition to the Revised Statutes relating to patents, are the acts of March 3, 1891, establishing the United States circuit court of appeals, with appellate jurisdiction in patent infringement suits, the act of February 9, 1893, establishing the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, with jurisdiction over appeals from the commissioner of patents, acts of March 3, 1897, regulating the jurisdiction of the United States circuit courts over patent infringement suits, and act of June 25, 1910, amended July 1, 1918, providing for a remedy in the court of claims in case of unauthorized use of an invention by or for the United States.

Abandonment. — R. S. sec. 4886, after enumerating the conditions under which an inventor may obtain a patent for his invention, adds "unless the same is proved to have been abandoned." It is also provided in the same section that patents shall not be granted for inventions which have been in public use or on sale in this country, or patented or described in this or any foreign country more than two years prior to an application for patent therefor. It has been customary to treat the bar raised by such public use or sale or prior patenting or publication, as in the nature of constructive abandonment of the invention on the part of an inventor in favor of the public, and this notwithstanding the use or sale or publication may be by others than the inventor or in fact not known to him or in any way the result of his invention. In other words an inventor, after having completed an invention, delays his application for a patent at his own risk, and while delay amounting to more than two years need not necessarily amount to abandonment, if two years' public use intervenes the inventor's delay has lost him his rights, whether the public use is his or not. A complete invention may therefore be abandoned by intent, or through the occurrence of facts constituting a constructive abandonment regardless of intent. The test of abandonment of the first sort is intention, which must be clearly proved. (Emery v. Cavanagh, 17 Fed. 242; Kellog Co. v. International Co. 158 Fed. 104.) Delay in applying for a patent is not per se an abandonment, even though extending over a longer period than two years. (Agawam Co. v. Jordan, 7 Wall. 583; Appert v. Brownsville Co. 144 Fed. 115.) On the other hand, abandonment may be evinced by the inventor's conduct at any time, even within the two years named by the law. (Elisabeth v. Pavement Co. 97 U.S. 126.) A finding of abandonment by a jury was held to be warranted, where the inventor laid the parts of his machine aside, never intending to restore them in the form of an operative machine without material alterations, and then doing nothing for over four years, there being no reasonable excuse for the delay. (Johnson v. Root, 2 Cliff. 637.) The most common form of abandonment, however, is that due to a failure to claim when patent is applied for. The patentee may claim the whole or only a part of his invention, and if he only claims a part he is presumed to have abandoned the residue to the public. (McClain v. Ortmayer, 141 U.S. 419.) Such abandonment does not take place, however, where there is pending in the Patent Office another application by the same inventor in which the subject is properly claimed. (Id. v. Trorlicht, 115 F.R. 137; Westinghouse Co. v. Electric Co. 142 Fed. 545.) For a discussion of matters working constructive abandonment, see the titles Public Use; On Sale.

Accident. — Patents may be reissued in proper cases, where through accident, inadvertence, or mistake a patentee has claimed more than he is entitled to, or his patent is invalid or inoperative through a defective or insufficient specification. (R. S. sec. 4916.) See Reissue.

Accounting. — R. S. sec. 4921 provides that where infringement has been found in a suit in equity, the complainant shall be entitled to recover the profits to be accounted for by the defendant, and in addition the damages the complainant has sustained. The account is taken under the direction of a master in chancery to whom the cause is referred for that purpose, and who hears the testimony of such witnesses as are produced before him. The general burden of proof is on the complainant to establish the amount of defendant's profits, as well as to prove damages definitely, and if for any reason the profits or damages cannot be ascertained with reasonable certainty there can be a nominal recovery only. This doctrine has its limitations. However, see Westinghouse Co. v. Wagner Co. 225 U.S. 604. Neither damages nor profits can be guessed at. (Williames v. McNeely, 77 Fed. 894.) The master has full power to regulate the proceedings before him, including the right to sit outside the jurisdiction of his appointment. (Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Gillette, 28 Fed. 673; Consolidated Co. v. Columbian Co. 85 Fed. 54.) He can at his discretion require the defendant to produce an account setting forth the number of infringing articles sold, the cost thereof, or the prices obtained therefor, etc., and the approved practice in some circuits is to require the filing of such account before witnesses are examined. (Kerosene L.H. Co. v. Fisher, 1 Fed. 91.) Equity Rules Nos. 73 to 84, regulate the proceedings before masters, the filing of reports, etc. The master's finding of facts will not be disturbed except in case of clear error. (Welling v. LeBau, 34 Fed. 40; Jaffrey v. Brown, 29 Fed. 476.) As to the manner of computing profits see the title Profits.

Acknowledgment. — Assignments, grants, or conveyances of patents may be acknowledged before a notary public, a United States commissioner or a secretary of legation, or consular officer authorized to administer oaths, and the certificate of such acknowledgment is prima facie evidence of execution. R. S. sec. 4898.

Actions. — (a.) Actions for infringement of patents must be brought in the federal courts (R. S. sec. 711), and may be at law for the recovery of damages, or in equity for injunction and accounting. Action may be brought in the district court for the district in which the defendant is an inhabitant, or any district in which the defendant shall have committed infringement and have a regular and established place of business. In the latter case service of process may be made upon the agent engaged in conducting such business in the district in which suit is brought. (R. S. sec. 629.) Recovery for unauthorized use of patented invention by or for the government may be had in the Court of Claims. (Act June 25, 1910; July 1, 1918.)

(b.) Actions involving patent rights, other than suits expressly provided for by the patent statutes, must be brought in the state courts, except in cases of diverse citizenship, and this notwithstanding the interpretation or construction of the patent, or even the determination of its validity, may be a necessary incident to the suit. (Hartell v. Tilghman, 99 U.S. 547; Standard Dental Co. v. Nat. Tooth Co. 95 Fed. 291.) For example, a licensee under a patent who agrees to pay a royalty upon each of the patented articles manufactured by him, may, in a suit against him to recover royalty, defend on the ground that the articles made by him do not come within the patent. Such a suit will be brought in a state court, and the patent must necessarily be construed in determining the soundness of the defense.

(c.) Action to compel the issue of a patent. R. S. sec. 4915 provides that whenever a patent on application is refused by the commissioner of patents, the applicant may have remedy by bill in equity; and if the court shall adjudge the applicant entitled to the patent, such adjudication shall authorize the commissioner to issue such patent. Where there is another party whose interests are adverse to the issue of the patent, that party should be made the defendant, and the bill be brought in the district court for the district where he is an inhabitant. If there is no opposing party, the action will be brought against the commissioner of patents, in the supreme court of the District of Columbia. This bill will not lie until after the applicant has exhausted his remedies in the Patent Office, including his appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia. (Kirk v. Commissioner, 37 O. G. 440.)

(d.) Actions relating to interfering patents. R. S. sec. 4918 provides that where there are interfering patents, any person interested in one of them may have relief against the owner of the interfering patent by suit in equity; and the court in such proceedings may adjudge either of the patents void in whole or in part. See the title Interfering Patents.

Action at Law. — "Damages for the infringement of any patent may be recovered by action on the case." (R. S. sec. 4919.) This action is rarely resorted to, however, first because the equitable remedy of injunction is usually desired, and secondly because of the inadequacy of the jury trial to determine the issue of the average patent case. In the case of an expired patent, however, suit to recover back damages must be on the law side, as an injunction can no longer be obtained, and equitable jurisdiction is consequently lacking. (Root v. Rwy. Co. 105 U.S. 189.)

Actions in Equity. — For infringement of patents. R. S. sec. 4921 provides that "the several courts vested with jurisdiction of cases arising under the patent laws shall have power to grant injunctions according to the course and principles of courts of equity, to prevent the violation of any rights secured by patents, on such terms as the court may deem reasonable." By the same section of the statute power is given to the court to assess, in the same action, the defendant's profits and the complainant's damages. The usual action for infringement is by bill in equity for injunction and accounting. Action may be brought to restrain threatened infringement, whether infringement has actually taken place or not. (Nat. Meter Co. v. Thomson Meter Co. 106 Fed. 531; Canton Co. v. Kanneberg, 51 Fed. 599.) A bill in equity cannot, however, ordinarily be brought under an expired patent to recover past profits or damages; resort in such case must be had to the action at law. (Root v. Lake Shore, etc. R. Co. 105 U.S. 189.)

The action in equity should be brought by the holder or holders of the complete title to the patent. (Postal Co. v. Netter, 102 Fed. 691.) An exclusive licensee is a proper, but not an indispensable party complainant. (Comptograph Co. v. Universal Co. 142 Fed. 539.) Where a corporation is made defendant, it is not improper to join as defendants such officers as actually commit or direct the infringing acts. (Cleveland Forge Co. v. U.S. Rolling Stock Co. 41 Fed. 476; McSherry Co. v. Dowagiac Co. 160 Fed. 948.)

The bill in equity in stating complainant's right makes profert of the patent sued upon, and, if complainant holds the patent by assignment, sets forth the facts showing title. It is not necessary that the bill be sworn to unless it is to be used in support of a motion for preliminary injunction. (Foster, Fed. Practice, sec. 87.)

The defendant in his answer may attack the validity of the patent, as well as deny the charge of infringement. Among the defenses which may be set up, are the following specifically provided for in R. S. sec. 4920: "First. That for the purpose of deceiving the public the description and specification filed by the patentee in the Patent Office was made to contain less than the whole truth relative to his invention or discovery, or more than is necessary to produce the desired effect; or, second. That he had surreptitiously or unjustly obtained the patent for that which was in fact invented by another, who was using reasonable diligence in adapting and perfecting the same; or, third. That it has been patented or described in some printed publication prior to his supposed invention or discovery thereof, or more than two years prior to his application for a patent therefor; or, fourth. That he was not the original and first inventor or discoverer of any material and substantial part of the thing patented; or, fifth. That it has been in public use or on sale in this country for more than two years before his application for a patent, or had been abandoned to the public." The statute further provides that where the defenses of previous invention, knowledge or use of the thing patented are relied upon, the defendant shall in his answer "state the names of the patentees and the dates of the patents, and when granted, and the names and residences of the persons alleged to have invented or to have had prior knowledge of the thing patented, and where and by whom it had been used."

Under the new rules of practice for the courts of equity of the United States, promulgated by the supreme court, November 4, 1912, the testimony is now required to be taken orally in open court. See Testimony. The complainant's prima facie case usually consists simply of proof of the patent and complainant's title, proof of the defendant's alleged infringing acts and the deposition of an expert witness comparing said acts with the things claimed in the patent. Complainant's discussion of the prior art relating to the invention is usually left to the proofs taken in rebuttal of defendant's case. Proofs relating to the accounting are taken before a master in chancery to whom the case is referred by the court, if upon the hearing of the case the patent is sustained and infringement found.

For other matters relating to the action in equity, see the titles Damages; Injunction; Profits; Testimony.

Administrator. — See Executors and Administrators.

Aggregation. — The courts which have been charged with the construction and interpretation of the patent laws, in passing upon questions as to what constitutes a patentable invention, have established certain standards by which that matter is to be tested. One of these rules is that a mere aggregation of old devices each operating in the way it did before and effecting no new result, does not amount to invention, notwithstanding all of the devices have not before been assembled in one machine or device. • (Overweight Co. v. Vogt Machine Co. 102 Fed. 961. Brown Co. v. King Bridge Co. 107 Fed. 498.) See Combination; Invention.

Amendments to Specification. — An application for patent may be amended during the pendency of the case in the Patent Office, for the purpose of correcting inaccuracies of description, canceling claims, substituting new ones, or presenting those rejected in different form, or to secure correspondence between the claim, the specification, and the drawing. All amendments must conform either to the original drawing or original specification; matter not found in either, involving a departure from the original invention, can be shown or claimed only in a separate application. (Rules of Practice, secs. 68, 70, 71.)

Answer. — Defendant's answer to a bill in equity charging infringement of patent is prepared in accordance with the general rules governing equity pleadings. It should be noted, however, that certain special defenses provided for by the statute require notice in the answer. See Actions in Equity.

Appeals. — 1. In Patent Office. In case of final rejection of an application on its merits by a primary examiner, an appeal lies to the board of examiners-in-chief. The examiners-in-chief under the statute (R. S. sec. 482) are persons of competent legal knowledge and scientific ability, whose duty it shall be, on the written petition of the appellant to revise and determine upon the validity of the adverse decisions of examiners upon applications for patents, and for reissues of patents, and in interference cases." From an adverse decision of the board on the merits of an application appeal lies to the commissioner in person and from him to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia. Errors of the primary examiner as to matters of form or other intermediate matters which do not relate to the merits of the invention, may be corrected upon petition direct to the commissioner. In interference cases the course of appeals is the same as in ex parte cases. 2. Appeals in Infringement Suits. In patent causes appeal lies from the United States district court to the circuit court of appeals, where the matter is final, except that the latter court may certify to the supreme court any questions or propositions of law concerning which it desires the instruction of that court. Also it is competent for the supreme court to require, by certiorari or otherwise, any such case "to be certified to the supreme court for its review and determination with the same power and authority in the case as if it had been carried by appeal or writ of error to the supreme court." (Act March 3, 1891.) Since the passage of this act the supreme court has exercised this right of certiorari in a number of important patent cases.

Bills are now pending in Congress looking to the establishment of a single court of patent appeals. This movement has had the backing of patent law associations and also of the American Bar Association, but there now seems little likelihood of the legislation being enacted in the near future.

Applications for Patents. — 1. Who may apply. Patents must be applied for by the true and original inventor, or if he be dead, by his executor or administrator. The patent may be issued to an assignee, if the assignment be properly drawn and recorded. (See Assignments.) If there be a joint invention the application must be made by the inventors jointly. (Bannerman v. Sanford, 99 Fed. 294.) The applicant for a patent need not be a citizen of the United States, nor a resident therein. 2. Mode of Application. Application is made by written petition to the commissioner of patents, accompanied by a specification, drawings where required, and an oath in particular form prescribed by the statute. The specification must include a written description of the invention, "and of the manner and process of making, constructing, compounding, and using it," in terms sufficiently clear to enable one skilled in the art to which the invention relates to make use of it, and the applicant must "particularly point out and distinctly claim the part, improvement, or combination which he claims as his invention or discovery." (R. S. sec. 4888.) As the claim is the measure of the patentee's protection it is in many respects the most important part of his specification. See the title Claims. The rules of practice in the United States Patent Office prescribe with particularity the form of the various documents going to make up the application, and these forms should be closely adhered to. 3. Practice in the Patent Office. After the application is filed, if found to be in proper form, it is referred to that particular examiner who has charge of the class of inventions to which the application relates, and is subjected to a thorough examination to determine the questions of novelty and patentability of the invention claimed. Examination is made through United States and foreign patents and such technical publications as are found in the possession of the Patent Office. If in the judgment of the examiner the matters claimed or some of them are not novel, or are unpatentable as lacking invention, the applicant is informed that such claims are rejected, and he has then an opportunity to limit his claims by amendment, or he may persist in his original claims, and in case the examiner cannot be convinced of their patentability, appeals may be taken to higher tribunals in the Patent Office. See the title Appeals. The practice in the Patent Office is quite formal, and is regulated by numerous technical rules of procedure, some contained in the published "Rules of Practice," many based only on precedent and to be found in the reported decisions of the commissioners of patents. The commissioner of patents has supervisory authority over the various officials in the office, and except where specifically regulated by statute, matters of procedure are largely left to his discretion.

After the Patent Office has been satisfied as to the patentability of the original or amended claims, the application is formally allowed and the patent will issue approximately four weeks after the payment of the final government fee. Unless this payment is made within six months after allowance of the application, the latter will become forfeited, although it may be renewed at any time within two years after the date of original allowance. (For other matters relating to Patent Office practice, see the titles Appeals; Commissioner of Patents; Interferences; Trading with the Enemy.)

Art. — The statute provides for the patenting of a new and useful "art." (Sec. 4886.) The term "art" is not used in its broadest sense in the statute, but is commonly considered equivalent to "method" or "process." So Morse was held not entitled to claim broadly the art of printing at a distance by means of the electric current. (O'Reilly v. Morse, 15 How. 62.) As to what "processes" are patentable see the title Process.

Articles of Manufacture. — By R. S. sec. 4886 a patent may be granted for a new and useful "manufacture." The term manufacture, as used in the patent law, has a very comprehensive sense, embracing whatever is made by the art or industry of man, not being a machine, a composition of matter, or a design. (Curtis, Pat. sec. 27; 1 Rob. Pat. sec. 183; Johnson v. Johnston, 60 Fed. 618.)

Assignments. — By R. S. sec. 4898, patents, or interests therein, are assignable by instrument in writing. No particular form of assignment is prescribed. An instrument to be an assignment, however, must convey either the entire title to the patent or an undivided part thereof throughout the United States. If the exclusive rights under the patent for a specified territory less than the entire United States be transferred, the instrument is known as a grant. Assignments and grants are void as against a subsequent purchaser for value without notice, unless recorded in the Patent Office within three months after the date thereof. (R. S. sec. 4898.) Record after three months, however, constitutes constructive notice to subsequent purchasers. If an assignment or grant be acknowledged before a notary public or United States commissioner, the certificate of such acknowledgment is prima facie evidence of execution of the instrument. (Sec. 4998.) The grant of an exclusive right of use, or of manufacture and sale, throughout the United States or any part thereof is a license, which instrument is not subject to the foregoing provisions as to recording and acknowledgment. But an instrument purporting to be a license and conveying the exclusive right to make, use, and sell the invention throughout the United States for the full term of the patent, is an assignment, as it conveys everything which the patentee has in his patent. (Johnson Signal Co. v. Union Signal Co. 59 Fed. 20.)

An assignment which is not on its face a mere quit claim, implies a warranty of title. (Curran v. Burdsall, 20 Fed. 835; Brush Co. v. California Co. 52 Fed. 963.) But no warranty of validity of the patent. (Causler v. Eaton, 55 N. C. 499; Schwarzenbach v. Odorless Co. 65 Md. 34; Hiatt v. Twomey, 21 N. C. 315; Foss v. Richardson, 81 Mass. 303.) Rights of action for past infringement are not conveyed by an assignment of the patent unless expressly included. (Emerson v. Hubbard, 34 Fed. 327; Jones v. Berger, 58 Fed. 1006.) An invention may be transferred prior to the issue of a patent therefor, and when such assignment is made and recorded pending an application for patent, the patent will upon the assignor's request contained in the instrument issue to the assignee.

Bankruptcy. — By sec. 70 of ch. 7 of the Bankruptcy Act of July 1, 1898, the trustee of the bankrupt's estate is vested, upon his appointment and qualification, and by operation of law, with the title of the bankrupt to all patents and patent rights. It is not necessary that the patentee should execute a transfer to the trustee, as title vests without that. (In re McDonnell, 101 Fed. 239.) The act does not operate upon unpatented inventions, or patents granted subsequent to the adjudication. (Ibid.)

Bill in Equity. — See Action in Equity.

Burden of Proof. — In actions for infringement the burden is on complainant to establish title and the fact of infringement. The patent is presumptively valid and the burden is on defendant to establish invalidity. (Hunt Co. v. Cassidy, 53 Fed. 257; Wilkins Co. v. Webb, 89 Fed. 996.) Where an alleged prior use is set up by defendant the burden is upon him to establish such use beyond a reasonable doubt. (Barbed Wire Patent, 143 U.S. 284.) Where defendant establishes a use by the inventor more than two years prior to the application for the patent, the burden is on complainant to show that such use was experimental rather than a public use, and such evidence must be clear. (Swain v. Holyoke Machine Co. 111 Fed. 408.) In the absence of proof to the contrary the date of application for patent is the presumptive date of invention. (National Co. v. Brown, 36 Fed. 321.) If the defendant proves a prior patent or prior use, the burden is on complainant to carry the date of invention of the patent in suit back of the reference. (Clark Thread Co. v. Williamatic Linen Co. 140 U.S. 492.)

Caveat. — R. S. sec. 4902 provided that "any person who makes any new invention or discovery and desires further time to mature the same may . . . file in the Patent Office a caveat setting forth the design thereof and of its distinguishing characteristics, and praying protection of his right until he shall have matured his invention." By act of Congress taking effect July 1, 1910, this section of the Revised Statutes was repealed, and the filing of caveats abolished.

Claims. — By R. S. sec. 4888 an applicant for patent is required, in his specification, to "particularly point out and distinctly claim the part, improvement, or combination which he claims as his invention or discovery." The claim is the measure of the right to relief, and the object of the patent law in requiring the claim is not only to secure to the inventor "all to which he is entitled, but to apprise the public of what is still open to them." (McClain v. Ortmayer, 141 U.S. 419.) And as said by the Supreme Court in the case just cited, "Nothing is better settled in the law of patents than that the patentee may claim the whole or only a part of his invention, and that if he only described and claim a part, he is presumed to have abandoned the residue to the public." The necessity of care in the preparation of claims is thus apparent. A claim must be for a concrete thing or process and not for an abstract idea, it must cover a single invention, it must be definite, and not vague in language. The terms used in the claim should be those contained in the description. It must not describe an element by reference merely to the function performed by that element. (Ex parte McClain, 119 O. G. 585.) Alternative expressions are not proper in claims, and undue multiplicity of claims is to be avoided. (17 Wall. 463; 112 Fed. 431.) It is also a rule of the Patent Office that while a single application may contain a generic claim, and a claim to one specific embodiment of the invention, claims to other specific forms must be made in other applications. For matters concerning the construction of claims, see that title, infra.

Combination. — A combination of elements or devices coöperating to produce a new or improved result or mode of operation is patentable, though all the elements be old. (Seymour v. Osborne, 11 Wall. 516; Nat. Hollow Brake Beam Co. v. Interchangeable B. B. Co. 106 Fed. 693.) Coöperation of action does not mean simultaneous action (Holmes Co. v. Domestic Co. 42 Fed. 220), nor is it necessary that the mode of operation of every element included in the combination should be changed by each of the others. (Nat. Cash Register Co. v. Am. Cash Register Co. 53 Fed. 371.) It is sufficient if a new machine be formed, of a distinct character and function, or a result be produced due to the joint action of all the elements which is not the mere adding together of separate contributions. (Brinkerhoff v. Aloe, 146 U.S. 516.) But a mere putting together of desirable parts of different machines, each operating in the same way as it did in the old, and effecting the same result, is not a true combination, but a mere aggregation, and is unpatentable. (Overweight Co. v. Henry Vogt Mach. Co. 102 Fed. 957; Jas. Spear Stove & Heating Co. v. Kelsey Co. 158 Fed. 622.)

Commissioner of Patents. — The commissioner of patents, under the direction of the secretary of the interior, is charged with the performance of all duties respecting the granting and issuing of patents, and with the custody of the records and other property belonging to the Patent Office. (R. S. sec. 481.) He is appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. (R. S. sec. 476.) For a discussion of the duties of the commissioner, the matters within his discretion, and the character of the supervisory authority of the secretary of the interior, see Butterworth v. Hoe, 112 U.S. 150.

Composition of Matter. — A composition of matter may be roughly defined as anything compounded of more than one ingredient, in which the ingredients unite, chemically or physically, to produce a new and homogeneous mass. Such compositions are patentable if new and useful and involving invention. (R. S. sec. 4886.)

Construction of Letters Patent. — While it is the law that a patentee is bound by his claim (McClain v. Ortmayer, 141 U.S. 427) and that matters not claimed cannot be brought within the patent, it is also true that patents are to be liberally construed to cover if possible the patentee's real invention. (Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 788; McBride v. Kingman, 72 Fed. 911.) And it is not always an easy matter to determine the true scope of a claim, even where the language is apparently clear and definite. Some of the familiar rules of construction are: 1. The patent is to be read as a single entire document, and the claims construed in the light of the rest of the specification. (Jones Co. v. Munger Co. 49 Fed. 65; Robins Co. v. American Co. 145 Fed. 923.) 2. The patent is to be construed if possible to uphold rather than to destroy it. (Turrill v. Railroad Co. 1 Wall. 491.) 3. A claim is not to be construed to cover that which during the pendency of the application was sought to be covered, but upon rejection by the Patent Office, was deliberately abandoned, and this rule applies whether the rejection was warranted or not. (Roemer v. Peddie, 132 U.S. 317.) 4. While a claim may, if such be not inconsistent with its terms and those of the description, be narrowly construed to avoid anticipation by prior devices (Robbins v. Watch Co. 43 Fed. 521), such construction will not be given if the clear language of the specification does not admit of it (McCarthy v. R. R. Co. 160 U.S. 110), nor on the other hand will matters shown and described but not made elements of the claim be imported into it merely to enable an infringer to escape. (Risdon Works v. Trent, 92 F. 375.) 5. A patent, unless limited by the prior art to the specific things claimed, will be construed to cover things which, while differing specifically or in matters of form, yet contain the substance of the invention described by the claim. This rule is termed the "doctrine of equivalents." The range of equivalents varies with the character of the inventive act. If the invention is of a broad and meritorious character, such as to work a decided advance in the art, the range of equivalents will be liberal; if on the other hand the step has been slight, the range of equivalents will be correspondingly narrow. Even in the case of a primary patent, that is to say a patent for a pioneer invention, a claim will not be construed to cover all possible ways of obtaining a result, but will be limited to means equivalent (in a very liberal sense) to those described in the patent. (Boyden Power-Brake Co. v. Westinghouse, 170 U.S. 537.)

Contracts. — A contract to assign an invention to be made in the future is valid and will be enforced. (Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. Chicago Co. 85 Fed. 786.) A patentee may make a valid contract to assign all future improvements upon an invention, and such contract will be enforced as against assignees of patents for the improvements who took with knowledge of the contract. (Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. Chicago Co. 85 Fed. 786.) Whether an agreement to assign all future inventions relating to a given art is valid is doubtful. (Aspinwall Mfg. Co. v. Gill, 32 Fed. 697.) For matters concerning assignments and patent rights and licenses thereunder, see the titles Assignments; Licenses.

Courts. — See Actions; Appeals; State Courts.

Co-owners of Patents. — Where a patent is owned by a plurality of persons, a non-exclusive license granted by any one of them is good against all. (Pusey & Jones Co. v. Miller, 61 Fed. 401; Lalanc Co. v. Nat. Co. 108 Fed. 77.) It has been held in such a case, that the licensor is not accountable to his co-owners for any part of the profits arising from the license. (Blackledge v. Weir & Craig Mfg. Co. 108 Fed. 71.) Nor is one of two co-owners responsible to the other, in the absence of agreement, for profits arising from his individual manufacture and sale or use of the patented article. (Ibid.) One joint owner may transfer his interest in the patent without the consent of the other. (May v. Chaffee, 2 Dillon, 385.)

Damages. — Damages for infringement of patent may be recovered by action on the case (R. S. sec. 4919) and may also be assessed in an action in equity upon a decree being rendered in such case for an infringement. (R. S. sec. 4921.) The burden is on complainant to prove the amount of damages with reasonable certainty (Robertson v. Blake, 94 U.S. 728), and in the absence of such proof nominal damages only can be found. There can be no recovery save as to infringement committed after notice of the patent, either constructive notice through the marking of the article "patented" or, in the absence of such marking, actual notice to defendant of the patent and of the infringement thereof (R. S. sec. 4900), and in no event can there be a recovery for infringement occurring more than six years prior to the commencement of the action. (R. S. sec. 4921.) Where the patentee has made use of his exclusive rights to grant licenses to others, the established royalty is the measure of damages due to defendant's unlicensed use. (Brickill v. Baltimore, 60 Fed. 98.) Such rate of royalty must have been uniform (Westcott v. Rude, 19 Fed. 833) and actually paid by a number of persons. (Ibid.) Where there is no established rate of royalty, damages may be shown by showing that the patentee would have made the sales if defendant had not and computing the patentee's profit thereon, or showing that owing to defendant's competition the patentee's prices have been affected. In a proper case damages may be based upon proof of what would have been a reasonable royalty. (Dowagiac Co. v. Minnesota Co., 235 U.S. 641.) In any case the proof of damage must be reasonably definite and not left to conjecture. (Hohorst v. Hamburg-American Co. 91 Fed. 655.) Under the statute (R. S. sec. 4921) the court has power to increase the damages, according to the circumstances of the case, not exceeding three times the amount of actual damages found. See Profits.

Defective Specification. — See Reissues.

Defenses. — See Action in Equity.

Demurrer. — A patent, void on its face, may be so declared upon demurrer to a bill for want of equity. By the profert of the patent, it is carried into the bill. (Richards v. Chase Elevator Co. 158 U.S. 299; Fowler v. City of New York, 121 Fed. 747.) The invalidity in such cases must be free from doubt, and as a matter of fact demurrers of this character are rarely sustained. (Caldwell v. Powell, 73 Fed. 488; Chinnock v. Patterson, 112 Fed. 531.) Under the new Equity Rules demurrers are abolished, and motion to dismiss substituted. (Equity Rule 29.)

Depositions. — See Testimony.

Design Patents. — Design patents are granted for any new, original, and ornamental design for an article of manufacture. (R. S. sec. 4929.) Such patents are intended to encourage the decorative arts in connection with articles of manufacture, and concern matter of appearance, and not matters of mechanical function or effect. (Wood v. Dolby, 7 Fed. 475; Rowe v. Blodgett, 103 Fed. 873.) The term of a design patent is three and a half, seven, or fourteen years, as the applicant may, in his application, elect. A patent granted for one of the shorter terms cannot be extended. In determining whether a design patent is infringed, the test is "sameness of appearance." (Ripley v. Elson Glass Co. 49 Fed. 927.) Act February 4, 1887, provides for the recovery of a penalty against one who infringes a design patent, there being also the usual remedies of injunction and action for damages.

Diligence. — See Priority of Invention; Reissues.

Disclaimer. — R. S. sec. 4917 provides "that whenever through inadvertence, accident, or mistake and without any fraudulent or deceptive intention, a patentee has claimed more than that of which he was the original or first inventor or discoverer, his patent shall be valid for all that part which is truly and justly his own," and a disclaimer of the parts claimed in excess of the real invention may be filed, the same to be in writing and attested by one or more witnesses, which disclaimer shall become a part of the specification of the patent. In the absence of such disclaimer the patentee in a suit for infringement of the patent as to its valid claims shall not recover costs. (R. S. secs. 973, 4922.) Such disclaimer must be filed with reasonable diligence, and to affect the question of costs, must be filed prior to the commencement of the action. (R. S. sec. 973.) A disclaimer is usually employed for the surrender of a distinct claim in the patent. It may also be used to limit a claim to a particular class of objects. But it cannot be used to change the character of the invention. (Hailes v. Albany Stove Company, 123 U.S. 582.)

Discovery. — The patent statutes authorize the grant of patents to the person who has invented or discovered certain specified new things. (R. S. sec. 4886.) No sharp line of distinction has been or can be drawn between the term "discovery" and the term "invention" as used in the statute. To determine patentability the inquiry ordinarily is whether the new art, machine, manufacturer, or composition of matter so differs from the prior art that something more than the ordinary skill of the calling was exercised in its production. See the title Invention. If that be answered in the affirmative it is of little consequence whether the act of production be termed "invention" or "discovery."

Drawings. — Where the character of invention admits of it a drawing is a necessary part of the descriptive portion of an application for patent. The drawing must be prepared in accordance with certain formalities which are set forth with particularity in the printed rules of practice issued by the commissioner of patents.

Double Patenting. — Two patents may not be obtained for the same invention. If two patents are granted to an inventor for the same invention, the later in date is void. (Miller v. Eagle Co. 151 U.S. 197.) Whether or not two patents are for the same invention is frequently a matter very difficult to determine, for the terms of the claims in the two patents may differ, one containing broad claims, the other specific claims, and yet the inventions covered be essentially the same. (Ibid.) On the other hand matters fully shown and described in one patent, may be safely claimed in another, if the subject-matter of the two patents is separable, and there has been no abandonment or dedication of the matters not claimed in the earlier patent. See Abandonment. The only rule that can be stated is that if the matters claimed in the second patent, are essential and inseparable parts of the matters claimed in the earlier patent, the second patent is void. (Otis Elevator Co. v. Portland Co. 127 Fed. 557; Morse Chain Co. v. Link Belt Co. 164 F. 331.) It is the rule, however, that where a patent for an improvement on or modification of the main invention, issues during the pendency of the earlier application for the main invention, the generic claims for the main invention are not invalidated by the incident that they can be read upon the specific device forming the subject of the improvement patent. (Westinghouse El. Co. v. Electric Appliance Co. 142 Fed. 545.)

Employer and Employee. — The relation of employer and employee may affect the ownership of the employee's invention, or the employer's right to use said invention without regard to ownership. In the absence of a specific undertaking on the part of the employee to transfer his inventions to the employer, the employee remains the owner of the invention and of any patent which may be obtained therefor. (Hapgood v. Hewitt, 119 U.S. 226; Dalzell v. Mfg. Co. 149 U.S. 315.) If, however, the employment is for the specific purpose of making inventions for the benefit of the employer, the ownership of the employee's inventions is in the employer in accordance with the contract. (Bonsack Co. v. Hulse, 57 Fed. 5 9.)

No ownership or right of use in an invention accrues to an employer merely because the invention was made by the employee during the period or in the course of his employment. (Solomons v. United States, 137 U.S. 346.) But if the employee permits his employer to put such inventions into use, without demanding a consideration, a free license in favor of the employer is implied, coextensive with the apparent permission granted by the employee. (Gill v. U.S. 160 U.S. 426.) If the invention be a machine, the license applies to the actual number of machines made without protest. (Blauvelt v. Interior Co. 80 Fed. 906.) If the invention be a process, and the employer be permitted to introduce that process into regular use in his shop, his license amounts to the free right to continue the use of the process in his business to the full end of the term of the patent.

Enemy Patents. — The Trading with the Enemy Act (Oct. 6, 1917) provides that citizens of the United States may secure licenses under United States patents owned or controlled by enemy subjects, subject to the payment of a reasonable royalty. Application for such license is made to the Federal Trade Commission.

Equivalents, Doctrine of. — See Construction of Patents; Infringement.

Executors and Administrators. — In case of an inventor's death, the right of applying for and of obtaining the patent devolves upon his executor or administrator, in trust for the heirs at law, or in case of a will, in trust for the devisees. (R. S. sec. 4896.) In case of insanity of the inventor the application is made by his legally appointed guardian, conservator, or representative. (Act February 28, 1899.)

Execution. — Patent rights, being incorporeal, not existing in any one State, are not subject to seizure and sale on execution. (Stevens v. Gladding, 17 How. 447; but see Erie Wringer Co. v. Nat'l. Co. 63 F. 248.) By creditor's bill, however, they can be reached, and applied to satisfy a judgment against the owner, and a transfer by him for that purpose will be compelled by the court. (Ager v. Murray, 105 U.S. 126.)

Extensions of Patents. — In 1836 Congress passed an act authorizing the commissioner of patents to grant extensions of the terms of patents upon a proper showing that for reasons beyond his control the patentee had not had a due use of his monopoly. This provision was abolished in 1861, as to all patents thereafter granted. Efforts have been made from time to time to have this feature restored to the patent system, but so far without avail. Congress always has the power to grant extensions of patents, by special act, and the power has been occasionally exercised.

Expert Witnesses. — The function of the expert witness in a suit involving letters patent, is to explain for the benefit of the court or jury the meaning of technical expressions used in the patent in suit, or other patents requiring consideration, and the construction and mode of operation of mechanisms or devices which might not otherwise be understood by those unskilled in the art to which the devices relate. It is not the function of the expert witness to testify as to the construction to be put upon the patent, that being matter for the court (Corning v. Burden, 15 How. 252), but in practice the expert witness, in comparing the patented device with those of the prior art, or that claimed to be infringed, is in the habit of placing his own construction upon the patent, which construction the court is at liberty to adopt if it sees fit.

Federal Courts. — See Actions.

Fees of Patent Office. — On filing an application for patent, except in design cases, fifteen dollars. On issuing a patent, twenty dollars. For design applications, ten dollars, fifteen dollars or thirty dollars, according to the term, there being no fee upon issue of the patent. On filing an application for reissue, thirty dollars. On filing a disclaimer, ten dollars. For uncertified copies of patents, five cents. For the Official Gazette published by the Patent Office, single numbers, ten cents, annual subscription, five dollars. For other fees see the rules of practice issued by the Patent Office.

Foreign Inventions. — Letters patent are granted here for inventions made abroad, upon the same terms and conditions as if made in this country. If the invention be first patented abroad, application must be made in this country within twelve months after the date of the foreign application, unless said foreign application has been made or caused to be made without the knowledge or consent of the inventor or his assignee. (R. S. sec. 4887.) By Act of August 17, 1916, nine months' extension may be secured in certain cases because of the present European war. In interference cases involving questions of priority of inventions, the date of conception abroad is irrelevant, the effective date of invention being the date when knowledge of the invention was received in this country, except in case of earlier description in a foreign patent or printed publication (Thomas v. Reese, 17 O. G. 12; Boulton v. Illingworth, 43 O. G. 32), or except in case of the filing of an application for patent in certain countries abroad within twelve months prior to the filing of the application in this country, in which case the date of the foreign application is the date given to the invention in this country. (Winter & Eichberg v. Latour, 157 O. G. 209.) As against an infringer, however, in a suit brought upon a patent on a foreign invention, the date of conception abroad may be proved for the purpose of antedating a reference. (Hanifen v. Godschalk Co. 78 Fed. 811; Welsbach Light Co. v. American Co. 98 Fed. 613.) See title Enemy Patents.

Foreign Patents. — An invention is not patentable in this country if patented by others abroad prior to the date of invention here or more than two years prior to date of application here. (R. S. sec. 4886.) Prior to March 3, 1897, patents issued in this country upon inventions first patented abroad (by the inventor, or his assignee, or with his knowledge or consent) were limited in duration to the term of the foreign patent, or if there were more than one such foreign patent, to the term of the earliest to expire. From March 3, 1897, to March 3, 1900, no patent could be secured in this country upon an invention first patented abroad by the inventor or with his consent, unless the application was filed in this country within seven months after the date of foreign application. On March 3, 1900, the statute was again amended, changing the seven month period to twelve months. No patent issued since March 3, 1897 is affected as to its term by an earlier patent secured abroad. See title Trading with the Enemy.

Fraud. — The United States may maintain a suit in equity to cancel a patent obtained by fraud. (U.S. v. Am. Bell Telephone Co. 128 U.S. 315, and see U.S. v. Am. Bell Telephone Co. 167 U.S. 224.)

Government Use of Invention. — See title Use of Invention by the Government.

Improvement. — Patents are granted for "new and useful arts, machines, manufactures and compositions of matter," or for "any new and useful improvement thereof." A change in the construction of an old machine, which increases its usefulness, may for example be said to be an "improvement" in that machine, and the great majority of patents are for improvements in well-known devices, or on patented inventions. (Seymour v. Osborne, 11 Wall. 516.) Two patents may both be valid when the invention secured by the second is an improvement on that secured by the first, but if the second includes the first, neither patentee can use the invention of the other without his consent. (Cantrell v. Wallick, 117 U.S. 689.)

Infringement. — Letters patent contain "a grant to the patentee, his heirs or assigns, for the term of seventeen years, of the exclusive right to make, use and vend the invention or discovery throughout the United States." (R. S. sec. 4884.) An invasion of this exclusive right either with respect to manufacture or use or sale, is an infringement of the patent. Infringement may therefore be committed by either manufacture or use or sale, and that whether the act has been done in ignorance of the patent or not. (U.S. v. Berdan Arms Co. 156 U.S. 566; Bate Co. v. Gillett, 31 Fed. 815.) A patent is infringed when any one claim is infringed; whether or not there are other claims in the patent which are not infringed; each claim constitutes in this respect, as it were, a single patent. (Pitts v. Whitman, 2 Story, 609; Celluloid Co. v. Zylonite Brush Co. 27 Fed. 291.) In the case of a process patent, infringement is committed by the unauthorized practice of the several steps going to make up the process as covered by the claim. Infringement is not avoided by the substitution of an equivalent for one of the steps described, but the omission of a single step without the substitution of an equivalent avoids infringement. (Cotter v. New Haven Copper Co. 13 Fed. 234; United States Glass Co. v. Atlas Glass Co. 90 Fed. 724.) Infringement of a process may be committed regardless of the character of the apparatus employed. In the case of a patented machine or article of manufacture the same rule as to equivalents applies. See title Construction of Letters Patent. It is not infringement to omit an element of a combination claim, although the substitution of an equivalent for one of the elements will not avoid infringement. (McMurray v. Mallory, 111 U.S. 97; Black Diamond Co. v. Excelsior Co. 156 U.S. 611.) Addition to a machine or article of manufacture does not ordinarily avoid infringement (Williams v. Barnard, 41 Fed. 358; Bonnette Co. v. Koehler, 82 Fed. 428), nor does a change in the relative arrangement of parts without any substantial change of function or mode of operation. (Schroeder v. Brammer, 98 Fed. 880; Western Co. v. Sperry Co. 58 Fed. 186.) The question of infringement is in itself one of fact, but the construction of the claim upon which the question of infringement depends is for the court. (Tyler v. Boston, 7 Wall. 327; Holmes v. Truman, 67 Fed. 545.)

One who knowingly aids and abets another to infringe a patent is himself chargeable with infringement. Thus one who sells a part of a patented device, knowing it is to be used in constructing the thing covered by the patent, is guilty of infringement. (Keystone Bridge Co. v. Phoenix Iron Co. 95 U.S. 274; Robbins v. Columbus Watch Co. 50 Fed. 545.) So also is one who sells a machine, useful only in the production of a patented article. (American Graphophone Co. v. Hawthorne, 92 Fed. 516.) This is the doctrine of contributory infringement, based on the principle that he who consents with another to commit a tort is himself a tortfeasor. Where a patented machine is sold subject to the license restriction that it is to be used only with supplies bought from the patentee, one who sells to the owner of the machine supplies not made by the patentee but intended for use with the machine, is a contributory infringer. (Henry v. A. B. Dick Company, 224 U.S. 1.) For the limitations upon this doctrine see Bauer v. O'Donnell, 229 U.S. 1.

Infringement by or for Government. See title Use of Invention by the Government.

Injunction. — By R. S. sec. 4921 the federal courts are specifically authorized to grant injunctions to prevent the violation of any right secured by patent, on such terms as the court may deem reasonable. Such injunction is the patentee's principal remedy in case of infringement and is uniformly granted upon final hearing on the merits, where the validity of the patent has not been successfully attacked and infringement is made out. A decree upon final hearing granting an injunction and sending the case to a master to take an account of profits and assess damages, is an "interlocutory decree granting an injunction," from which an appeal lies under 31 Stat. at Large, 660. Preliminary injunctions are not ordinarily granted except in cases free from doubt, and where a defendant makes any showing at all on the question of infringement or the possible invalidity of the patent a preliminary injunction will not be granted in respect to a patent not previously adjudicated. (Standard Co. v. Crane Co. 56 Fed. 718; Ertel v. Stahl, 65 Fed. 517.) General acquiescence in the patentee's rights for a number of years is sometimes given the weight of a previous adjudication in favor of the patent. (Peck, Stow & Wilcox Co. v. Fray, 88 Fed. 784.)

Insufficient Description. — See Reissue.

Interference. — See, also, Motions, Privy of Invention. By sec. 4904, the commissioner of patents is authorized to determine questions of priority of invention arising between co-pending interfering applications and between pending applications and unexpired patents. The proceeding established for this purpose is termed an interference, and the practice in such cases is governed by the rules established by the commissioner, based on the practice of courts of equity. An issue having been framed, each party is required to file a preliminary statement, in the nature of a pleading, setting forth the date of conception of the invention, and the dates of such subsequent acts as have been performed by him in completing, or adapting and perfecting the invention. The allegations of the statements are then proved by the respective parties, the practice governing the production of evidence being similar to that of the federal courts sitting in equity, and upon completion of the proofs the case is heard and decided by an examiner of interferences, from whose decision appeals lie in succession to the board of examiners-in-chief, the commissioner of patents, and the court of appeals of the District of Columbia. Upon the determination of the interference, a patent for the subject-matter in issue may be granted to the successful party, and this notwithstanding the defeated party is already a patentee. (Hubel v. Dick, 28 Fed. 139.) The commissioner has no authority, however, to revoke or cancel a patent once issued. For the rules of decision governing the determination of the question of priority see Priority of Invention.

Interfering Patents. — Where two patents have issued to different parties for the same invention, an action in equity may be brought by either patentee to have the conflicting patent declared void. (R. S. sec. 4918.) In such a suit, previous decision in the Patent Office on the question of priority will be accepted as controlling, unless the contrary is established by testimony which in character and amount carries thorough conviction. (Ecaubert v. Appleton, 67 Fed. 917.)

Invention. — To be patentable a device, article, or process must not only be novel, but its production must have involved invention. The term invention as used in the patent law is incapable of precise definition. It is something more than the expected skill of the mechanic, but whether in a given case there has been an exercise of the inventive faculty or on the other hand an exercise of simple mechanical skill, is frequently a question very difficult to answer, and to determine which there is no fixed standard. (McClain v. Ort-mayer, 141 U.S. 427.) Each case stands on its own facts. Long and painful study is not the criterion, as the most brilliant invention may result from a single flash of thought. (Magio Ruffle Co. v. Douglas, 2 Fish. Pat. Cas. 330.) Nor is the apparent simplicity of the change, viewed after it is accomplished, a safe test of invention. (Frost v. Cohn, 119 Fed. 505.) The many decisions of the supreme court and circuit courts of appeals, finding invention or the lack of it in specific cases, indicate some fairly definite classes of acts or changes which are not considered to amount to invention, but the negative rules thus obtained are subject to numerous exceptions, and their application to particular cases is frequently difficult. Some of these rules are: 1. Invention is not involved in changing an old machine or device, even to produce highly useful results, in such a way as would naturally occur to any skilled mechanic, familiar with the art, when placed in the supposed inventor's circumstances. (Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U.S. 199.) Also it would seem that the more advanced the general skill of the calling to which the invention relates, the higher the degree of ingenuity required to involve invention. (Dodge Coal Storage Co. v. N. Y. Central R. R. 150 Fed. 738.) 2. Superiority of workmanship does not constitute invention. (Edison v. Am. Mutoscope Co. 114 Fed. 935.) 3. The mere substitution of one material for another in an article or device without the production of a new function or mode of operation is not ordinarily invention. (Hicks v. Kelsey, 18 Wall. 670.) 4. Changes in size or degree or mere duplication do not in the ordinary case amount to invention. (Thomson Houston Co. v. Nassau Co. 98 Fed. 111.) 5. It is not invention to aggregate in a single structure a number of old devices, each device doing just what it did before and the function of the entire structure being none other than the combined old functions of the aggregated devices. (Hailes v. Van Wormer, 20 Wall. 353; Burt v. Ivory, 133 U.S. 349; Jas. Spear Stove & Heating Co. v. Kelsey Co. 158 Fed. 622.) 6. Invention is not involved in the use of an old device for a new purpose analogous to that for which the device had been used previously, even though the new form of result had not before been contemplated. (Penna. R. R. Co. v. Locomotive Truck Co. 110 U.S. 494.)

Where the question of invention is doubtful, proof that the new thing is highly useful (Electric Ry. Co. v. Jamaica, 61 Fed. 655), or has been long sought by others (ibid.), or has replaced old devices (ibid.), may be accepted as some evidence of invention, on the theory that if invention had not been present the thing would have been produced before. (Diamond Rubber Co. v. Consolidated Co. 220 U.S. 428.) However, any amount of proof of utility will not avail, if invention be clearly lacking.

Joint Invention. — Where two persons cooperate in the production of an invention, each furnishing inventive thought, the final result being reached as the result of mutual discussion and suggestion, a joint invention is made, and a patent, to be valid, must be applied for in the names of the two, jointly. (Bannerman v. Sanford, 99 Fed. 294.) One who simply works out the mechanical details of a machine or device, however, under the supervision and on the basis of a general idea furnished by another, does not thereby become a joint inventor, and this is true even where he goes so far as to suggest some detail, which, through the extreme liberality of the Patent Office, may in itself be the proper subject of a patent claim. (Smith v. Stewart, 55 Fed. 481; Huebel v. Bernard, 15 App. Cas. (P. C.) 610.)

Joint Owners. — See Co-owners of Patents.

Judgment. — The final judgment of a court in one circuit, sustaining the validity of a patent or holding the same invalid, is not binding upon the courts of another circuit, except where the rules as to the effect of a judgment upon parties and privies is applicable. (New Departure Bell Co. v. Hardware Specialty Co. 69 Fed. 152.) On the principle of comity, however, the decisions of the courts in one circuit with reference to any particular patent are ordinarily followed in other circuits upon substantially the same set of facts, and it has been held by the supreme court (Kessler v. Eldred, 206 U.S. 285) that a final decree for the defendant in one circuit in a suit upon a patent upon the ground of non-infringement entitled the defendant to continue the business throughout the United States without the molestation of his customers through the patent in suit. But see Rubber Tire Co. v. Goodyear Co. 232 U.S. 413; Woodward Co. v. Hurd, 232 U.S. 428.

Jurisdiction. — See Actions.

Letters Patent. — Letters patent for inventions are issued in the name of the United States of America, under the seal of the Patent Office, and signed by the commissioner of patents, and they are recorded together with the specifications in the Patent Office. (R. S. sec. 4883.) Each patent contains a short title or description of the invention or discovery, indicating its nature and design, and the grant to the patentee, his heirs or assigns, for the term of seventeen years of the exclusive right to make, use, and vend the invention or discovery throughout the United States and the territories thereof. (R. S. sec. 4884.) A copy of the specification and drawings is annexed to the patent and forms part thereof. (R. S. sec. 4884.)

Licenses. — A license may be roughly defined as a permission on the part of the owner of the patent granted to another to make use of a portion of the exclusive rights secured by the patent. It is to be distinguished from a transfer of the title to the patent, or of any part thereof. See Assignments. Licenses may be oral or written (Jones v. Berger, 58 Fed. 1006), and express or implied. They may be exclusive throughout the United States or a part thereof, or they may be mere naked rights of use, conveying no power on the part of the licensee to exclude others. In the absence of words to the contrary a license is personal to the licensee and cannot be transferred. (Oliver v. Chemical Works, 109 U.S. 75.) If no term is expressed the license continues to the end of the term of the patent. (St.

Paul Plow Wks. v. Starling, 140 U.S. 184.) A failure to pay royalty as provided for in a license does not make the licensee an infringer; the remedy of the licensor is by action on the contract. (White v. Lee, 3 Fed. 222; Hanifen v. Lupton, 95 Fed. 465; Consolidated Co. v. Wolf, 28 Fed. 814.) If, however, the licensee repudiates the license and continues to make use of the patented invention, he becomes an infringer. (Mudgett v. Thomas, 55 Fed. 645.) A licensee may not, when sued for royalties, defend on the ground that the patent is invalid. (Moore v. Nat. Boiler Co. 84 Fed. 346.) If, however, the license is exclusive, and because of the invalidity of the patent, there has been such an unlicensed use by others as to deprive the licensee of the fruits of the monopoly for which he bargained, there has been an eviction which will be a good defense to an action for royalties. (Hardwick v. Galbraith, 147 Pa. 333.) A license from one of several joint owners of a patent is good as against all. (Lalanc Co. v. Nat. Co. 108 Fed. 78.)

Implied licenses arise from circumstances from which intention to permit the manufacture, use, or sale of a patented invention may be legitimately inferred; thus an express license to use a specified number of machines implies the right on the part of the licensee to make or have made that number of machines for his own use. (Johnson Signal Co. v. Union Switch & S. Co. 55 Fed. 487.) So, also, a license to make and sell implies the right on the part of the vendee to use or resell. (Edison v. Peninsular Co. 101 Fed. 831.) So, also, a license is implied in favor of an employer, when an employee having made an invention in the course of his employment, permits that employer to take up the manufacture, use, or sale of the invention without restriction. See Employer and Employee.

Limitations of Actions. — By R. S. sec. 4921, rights of recovery for infringement are limited to acts committed within six years next preceding the bringing of the action.

Marking "Patented." — Patentees are required to give notice to the public that their articles are patented "either by fixing thereon the word 'patented' together with the day and year the patent was granted, or when, from the character of the article, this cannot be done, by fixing to it, or to the package wherein one or more of them is inclosed, a label containing the like notice." In case of failure to so mark, no damages may be recovered except for such infringement as may have been committed after actual notice of the patent given to the infringer. (R. S. sec. 4900.) Failure to observe the provisions as to marking does not affect the right to injunction. (Horn v. Bergner, 68 Fed. 428.) R. S. sec. 4901 provides a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars for each offense of falsely marking articles patented, one half of the penalty to go to the person who shall sue for the same, the other half to the use of the United States.

Mistake. — Where through mistake a patentee has claimed more than he had a right to claim, or his patent is invalid through a defective or insufficient description, the patent may under proper conditions be reissued. See title Reissues. Or a disclaimer may be filed. See title Disclaimer.

Models. — R. S. sec. 4891 provides that a model, if required by the commissioner, shall form part of the application for a patent. The filing of models is not ordinarily required, nor indeed permitted, by the commissioner at the present time.

Motions. — To Dissolve Interference. — The practice in interference cases provides for interlocutory motions to dissolve an interference on the ground: 1. Of such informality in declaring the same as will preclude a proper determination of the question of invention; 2, that the invention in issue is unpatentable; 3, that the opponent is not entitled to make the claim in issue; or 4, that the claim in issue has different meanings in the two cases. These motions are determined in the first instance by the law examiner, and concern matters which are, ordinarily, to be determined before the contest as to priority proceeds.

Notice of Patent. — See Marking "Patented."

Novelty. — An invention is not novel, in the eye of the patent law, when it has been previously known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in any printed publication in this or any foreign country. (R. S. sec. 4886.) Prior knowledge or use abroad unknown to the inventor does not negative novelty (Westinghouse El. & Mfg. Co. v. Saranac Light Co. 108 Fed. 226), even if such use abroad was known to others here. (Doyle v. Spalding, 19 Fed. 746.) A prior patent or printed publication to negative novelty must be so full, clear, and precise as to enable one skilled in the art to practice the invention so described or patented. (Seymour v. Osborne, 11 Wall. 516.) But the inventor's ignorance of an anticipating use in this country, or a prior publication or patent here or abroad, does not render the invention novel. (New Departure Bell Co. v. Bevin Bros. Co. 73 Fed. 476.)

On sale. — No patent may be obtained for that which was "on sale" in this country more than two years prior to the application for patent. (R. S. sec. 4886.) A single unrestricted sale is sufficient to constitute the bar (Consolidated Fruit Jar Co. v. Wright, 94 U.S. 92), and that which is offered for sale is "on sale" within the meaning of the statute. (Covert v. Covert, 106 Fed. 183.) Where, however, a machine is used experimentally, the sale of the product thus produced does not necessarily constitute a bar to the patenting of the machine, notwithstanding such sale is made more than two years prior to the application for patent. (Westinghouse Co. v. Saranac Light Co. 108 Fed. 221.)

Originality. — Interference proceedings, although ordinarily concerning questions of priority as between two rival inventors each having an independent conception, sometimes require a determination of the question of originality as between two persons each laying claim to a single inventive conception. In such a case the burden of proving disclosure from one to the other is on him who alleges it, and a simple denial by the other will in the absence of other evidence defeat the claim. (Clauss v. Cherney, 116 O. G. 597.) Where, however, one is employed to work out an invention in accordance with a preconceived general idea of the employer, the burden is heavily upon the employee to prove any resulting invention his own. (Thibodean v. Hildreth, 117 O. G. 601; Gallagher v. Hastings, 103 O. G. 1165.)

Patents. — See Letters Patent.

Patentability. — Patentable things comprise arts, machines, manufactures, and compositions of matter. See those titles. See also the titles Abandonment; Invention; Novelty; Utility.

Priority of Invention. — R. S. sec. 4920 provides that the defendant in an infringement suit may prove as a defense among other things, that the patentee "has surreptitiously or unjustly obtained the patent for that which was in fact invented by another, who was using reasonable diligence in adapting and perfecting the same." This has been held to establish the rule that as between two rival inventors, he is the first inventor who was first to reduce to practice, unless another who was the earlier to conceive the invention, exercised reasonable diligence in reducing to practice, and was in the exercise of such diligence at the time his rival entered the field. (Seeberger v. Dodge, 114 O. G. 2382.) Reduction to practice in the case of a process is the practice of the process on such a scale as to show its success to one skilled in the art. (Pohie v. McKnight, 119 O. G. 2519.) Reduction to practice of a machine or device is the construction and test of the same in full-sized operative form. (Gallagher, Jr. v. Hein, 115 O. G. 1330.) Test by use is necessary except in the case of inventions so simple as to require no test to demonstrate their success. (Mason v. Hepburn, 84 O. G. 147.) For the purposes of the Patent Office, the filing of an allowable application for patent is held equivalent to an actual reduction to practice, and is termed a constructive reduction to practice. (Seeberger v. Dodge, 114 O. G. 2382; Automatic Co. v. Pneumatic Co. 166 Fed. 288.) As to what constitutes due diligence in reducing to practice, see Waston v. Thomas, 106 O. G. 1776; Dailey v. Jones, 670 O. G. 1719; Fowler v. Dodge, 82 O. G. 595; Hallword & Lalor v. Bockhoff, 103 O. G. 887; Wyman v. Donnelly, 104 O. G. 310; Austin v. Johnson, 95 O. G. 2685; Miehl v. Read, 96 O. G. 426; Jackson v. Knapp, 91 O. G. 1034; Seeberger v. Dodge, 1140 O. G. 2382.

Prior Knowledge and Use. — See Novelty.

Process. — A process has been defined as "a mode of treatment of certain materials to produce a given result — an act, or a series of acts, performed upon the subject-matter to be transformed and reduced to a different state or thing." (Cochrane v. Deener, 94 U.S. 780.) Processes are included among things made patentable by the statute, under the term "useful art." (Corning v. Burden, 15 Howard, 267.) Processes primarily intended to be covered by the statute are those involving chemical or other elemental action for example, processes of "tanning, dyeing, making waterproof cloth, vulcanizing India rubber, smelting ores." (Corning v. Burden, supra.) Patents are also granted, however, for mechanical processes, as "the folding of a paper in a peculiar way for the manufacture of paper bags, or a new method of weaving a hammock." Such patents have been sustained. (Eastern Paper Bag Co. v. Standard Co. 30 Fed. 63; Travers v. Am. Cordage Co. 64 Fed. 771.) But their propriety has been questioned. (Risdon Works v. Medart, 158 U.S. 68; Westinghouse v. Boyden Co. 170 U.S. 537; but see Expanded Metal Co. v. Bradford, 214 U.S. 366.) It is undoubted law, however, that a process which is simply the function or operative effect of a machine is not patentable; it may be patentable if, though most successfully performed by machinery, it may also be performed by hand. (Westinghouse v. Boyden Co. supra.)

Profits. — An infringer's profits are recoverable in equity on the general theory that the infringer is a trustee of such profits for the benefit of the owner of the patent. (Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U.S. 148.) Where only a part of a thing made and sold by defendant is covered by the patent, only that portion of the profits due to the particular invention is recoverable. (Robertson v. Blake, 94 U.S. 728; Dobson v. Hartford Co. 114 U.S. 439.) And the burden is ordinarily on complainant to apportion those profits. (Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U.S. 147; Westinghouse v. New York Air Brake Co. 115 Fed. 645. But see Westinghouse Co. v. Wagner Co., 225 U.S. 604.) Where, however, the patent covers the entire article sold (Warren v. Keep, 155 U.S. 265), or where the thing sold would be useless without the particular part (Hurlburt v. Schillinger, 130 U.S. 456), the entire profits are recoverable. Profits are not confined to moneys actually earned, but include moneys directly saved by reason of the invention. (Mowry v. Whitney, 14 Wall. 651; Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, 43 Fed. 675.) In such cases the next best thing which defendant could have used, had he not made use of the patented invention, is termed the "standard of comparison." (Brickil v. New York, 112 Fed. 71.) In computing defendant's profits he is entitled to include in the cost, to be deducted from the returns, the salaries and wages of those engaged in the infringing business, selling and advertising expenses, remuneration for his labor in carrying on the infringement, etc. (Sayre v. Scott, 55 Fed. 971.) Interest on the profits is recoverable from the date when the profits are definitely ascertained by the master of the court. (Crosby Valve Co. v. Safety Valve Co. 141 U.S. 457.)

Public Use. — A valid patent cannot be obtained upon an application filed more than two years after the invention has gone into public use in this country, whether such use was with or without the inventor's knowledge or consent. (R. S. sec. 4886. Andrews v. Hovey, 123 U.S. 267; McClurg v. Kingsland, 1 How. 202.) Such use is said to constitute a constructive abandonment of the invention. (Gates Iron Works v. Fraser, 153 U.S. 332.) Public use is unrestricted use by the public, or any portion thereof, or a use by the inventor in public for purposes other than experiment. (Elisabeth v. Pavement Co. 97 U. S. 135; Root v. Railroad Company, 146 U.S. 221.) The use of a single embodiment of the invention may be a public use. (Egbert v. Lippman, 104 U.S. 336.) While on the other hand a long-continued use known to numerous persons may, if honestly experimental, not constitute public use. (Elisabeth v. Pavement Co. 97 U.S. 134.) While the general burden of establishing public use as a defense to a patent suit is on defendant, the proof of a use more than two years prior to the application shifts the burden of proving that use experimental, and therefore not "public," to the complainant. (Smith Mfg. Co. v. Sprague, 123 U.S. 264.) For a leading case on the subject of public use, see Warren Bros. v. City of Owosso, 166 Fed. 309.

Qui Tam Actions. — Such actions are brought for illegal marking of articles patented, or with the name of a patentee. (R. S. sec. 4901; Hotchkiss v. Wooden Ware Co. 53 Fed. 1018; Wilson v. Mfg. Co. 12 Fed. 57; Russell v. Newark Machine Co. 55 Fed. 300.) See title Marking "Patented."

Recording Assignments. — By sec. 4898 assignments and other conveyances of patents are to be recorded within three months after the date of execution and such record is constructive notice of the transfer. Licenses are not required to be recorded, but the commissioner of patents will record them if presented for that purpose. To be recordable the instrument should identify the patent by date and number, or if the invention be unpatented, the name of the inventor and serial number and filing date of the application should be given. The fees for recording are for instrument of three hundred words or under, one dollar; over three hundred and under one thousand words, two dollars; for each additional thousand words or fraction thereof, one dollar.

Reduction to Practice. — See Priority of Invention.

Reissues. — "Whenever any patent is inoperative or invalid, by reason of a defective or insufficient specification, or by reason of the patentee claiming as his own invention or discovery more than he had a right to claim as new, if the error has arisen by inadvertence, accident or mistake, and without any fraudulent or deceptive intention," the patent may be surrendered and reissued, upon the payment of the proper fees. (R. S. sec. 4916.) A patent is "inoperative or invalid," within the meaning of the statute, if it fail to secure to the patentee all of that which he has invented and claimed; it is not necessary that the patent be wholly inoperative or invalid. (Hobbs v. Beach, 180 U.S. 384.) These conditions are essential to a valid reissue: 1. Bona fide mistake. 2. The reissue must be for the same invention as the original. 3. The reissue application must have been filed with diligence. As an example of the requirement of actual mistake, it is the rule that a reissue may not be granted to cover matter which was deliberately abandoned during the course of the original application, notwithstanding such abandonment was unnecessary and was an error of judgment. (Hartshorn v. Earrel Co. 119 U.S. 667; Dobson v. Lees, 137 U.S. 258.) The rule as to identity of invention means that the reissue must cover only what was intended to be claimed in the original; mere description in the original, without an intent to claim, is not sufficient. (Corbin Lock Co. v. Eagle Lock Co. 150 U.S. 38.) The rule as to diligence applies to all reissues, but with particular severity in cases where the claims of the original are broadened in the reissue. In fact it has been stated as a general rule that a broadened reissue will not be valid unless applied for within two years after the issue of the original. (Miller v. Bridgeport Brass Co. 104 U.S. 350.) There is, however, no set time within which application must be made, and an unexplained delay of less than two years is sufficient to defeat a broadened reissue. (Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U.S. 354.) More especially is there a rigid application of the rule requiring diligence where the reissue would affect rights established between the date of the original patent and that of the application for reissue. (Eby v. King, 158 U.S. 366.) If a reissue application be rejected the surrender of the original does not go into effect (Allen v. Culp, 166 U.S. 501), but if a reissue be granted and subsequently held void, the surrendered original is not thereby reinstated. (Eby v. King, 158 U.S. 366.) The reissue is granted for the unexpired term of the original (R. S. sec. 4916) and is subject to the same defenses as to want of novelty, etc., as if it were granted on the original application. (Robertson v. Secombe Mfg. Co. 10 Blatch. 481.)

Remedies for Infringements. — See Actions; Damages; Injunctions; Profits; Use of Invention by the Government.

Restraint of Trade. — Reasonable and legal conditions imposed by the patentee in a license of the right to manufacture and sell the patented article, restricting the terms upon which the article manufactured under such license may be used and the price to be demanded therefor do not constitute such a restraint on commerce as is forbidden by the act of Congress of July 2, 1890 (Sherman Act), to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraint. (Bement v. National Harrow Co. 186 U.S. 70.) But the right to restrict prices in patented articles does not extend to articles made by secret proprietary unpatented process, or to any unpatented article. (Dr. Miles Medical Company v. John D. Park & Sons Company, 220 U.S. 373.) And even in the case of a patented article, when the same is once sold to a jobber or retailer, the patentee or original vendor may not control the price at which the jobber or retailer may sell. (Bauer v. O'Donnell, 229 U.S. 1. By act of October 15, 1914, sec. 3, it is made illegal to lease or sell a patented (or unpatented) article upon condition that the lessee or purchaser shall not secure supplies from a competitor of the lessor or vendor, where the effect may be to substantially lessen competition or tend toward monopoly.

Royalties. — Consideration for the grant of a license under a patent frequently takes the form of a royalty or license fee paid by the licensee with respect to the patented articles or devices made or sold under the license. Actions on the contract to recover royalties are not causes arising under the patent laws of the United States. (Standard Dental Mfg. Co. v. Nat. Tooth Co. 95 Fed. 291.) An established rate of royalty is in some cases a measure of damages as against an infringer. See Damages.

Specification. — The term "specification" may refer to the description forming part of the application, or it may refer to the description and claims. (Wilson v. Coon, 6 Fed. 611.) For the requirements as to the specification, see Applications for Patents.

State Courts. — The state courts are without jurisdiction as to causes arising under the patent laws. (Standard Dental Mfg. Co. v. Nat. Tooth Co. 95 Fed. 291.) This applies to actions for infringement and all other actions expressly provided for by the patent statutes. In contractual actions relating to patents, or actions affecting title, the jurisdiction of state and federal courts is concurrent. See Actions.

State Regulations. — State regulations inconsistent with or restrictive of the rights secured to a patentee by the grant of his patent are invalid and unenforceable. Thus it is held that the State anti-trust laws cannot affect contracts which under the patent law are a proper exercise of the patentee's privileges. (U.S. Consolidated Seeded Raisin Co. v. Griffin, 126 Fed. Rep. 364.) However, reasonable police regulations providing for certain formalities upon the sale of a patent right are not necessarily invalid. (Reeves v. Corning, 51 Fed. Rep. 774.) See, also, titles Restraint of Trade; State Taxation.

Subjects of Patents. — Patentable subject-matter comprises arts (processes), machines, manufactures, and compositions of matter. See those titles.

Surrender of Letters Patent. — Patents in certain cases may be reissued. In such cases the original grant must be surrendered up for cancellation. If, however, for any reason, the reissue is not granted, the patent deed will be returned by the Patent Office. See Reissues.

Supreme Court of the United States. — As to the jurisdiction of the supreme court in patent causes, see Appeals.

Taxation of Patents. — Patent rights are not subject to state taxation. (In re Sheffield, 64 Fed. 836; People v. Campbell, 138 N.Y. 547.) So, also, corporate stock issued for patent rights merely is not taxable by the State. (157 Pa. 527.) But articles of merchandise are not exempt from taxation within a State merely because patented. (In re Sheffield, 64 Fed. 836.) A State has no power to impose a license tax on the sale of patent rights. (Com. v. Petty, 96 Ky. 453.)

Testimony. — (a.) In Actions in Equity for Infringement. Prior to February 1, 1913, all testimony in actions in equity in the federal courts was taken out of court, before an examiner or by deposition. This practice was changed by the new rules of practice, promulgated by the supreme court, November 4, 1912, and effective from and after February 1, 1913. Under the new practice equity cases are tried in open court, and testimony is taken orally at the trial. (Equity Rule 46.) For good and exceptional cause, the court may permit depositions of named witnesses, for use at the trial, to be taken before an examiner, and depositions of certain witnesses may also be taken under the provisions of R. S. 863, 865, 866, and 867. (Equity Rules 47 and 54.) At the present time the practice under this provision is not settled, the conditions under which leave will be granted to take depositions being different in the various districts. In patent cases the court may, upon petition, order that the testimony in chief of expert witnesses be set forth and filed in affidavit form, the witness to be produced at the trial for cross-examination. (Equity Rule 48.) (b.) In Interference Cases. Testimony in interference cases may be taken before any person within the United States authorized by law to administer oaths, provided he shall not be connected by blood or marriage with either of the parties nor interested in the matter of controversy. (R. S. sec. 4905, Rule 156 of the Rules of Practice of the Patent Office.) Depositions are taken in notice to the opposite party of time and place and names and residences of the witnesses. (Rule 154.) Notices may be served personally upon counsel, or by registered mail. (Ibid.) Upon notice to the opposite party before the closing of the testimony any official record, if competent and pertinent, may be used as evidence at the hearing. (Ibid.) The testimony may be written out, or by consent taken stenographically. (Rule 156.)

Trading with the Enemy. — During the war, the Commissioner of Patents may order that an invention, for which application for patent is filed, be kept secret, and may withhold the grant of a patent until the termination of the war. When an applicant whose patent is withheld shall tender his invention to the Government for its use, he shall, if and when he ultimately receives a patent, have the right to sue for compensation in the Court of Claims, beginning from the date of the use by the Government (Act Oct. 6, 1917).

Section 10 of Trading with the Enemy Act (Oct. 6, 1917) provides that citizens of the United States, when authorized by the President, may file and prosecute applications for letters patent in enemy countries. By presidential order (April 11, 1918) the granting of authority to file such applications has been indefinitely suspended. See also title Enemy Patents.

Trusts and Monopolies. — The fact that conditions in a patentee's license contract aid him in maintaining a monopoly in the patented article, does not render the contract illegal under the Sherman anti-trust act (26 Stat. L. 209, ch. 647) as the Sherman Act was not intended to restrict rights granted under the patent laws. (Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U.S. 70.) But where by a system of such contracts a number of patents relating to the same art are united in the same ownership and the transaction is intended to create a monopoly in the manufacture of a certain class of article by securing and holding all patents relating to the general subject, it may constitute a conspiracy and combination in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman Act. (Indiana Mfg. Co. v. Case Threshing Machine Co. 148 F. 21; and see National Harrow Co. v. Quick, 67 F. 130.) For the most recent cases on this general subject see Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Co. v. U.S. 226 U.S. 20; U.S. v. Winslow et al. 227 U.S. 202; Virtue v. Creamery Package Co. 227 U.S. 8. And see title Restraint of Trade.

Use of Invention by the Government. By Act of June 25, 1910, amended July 1, 1918, it is provided that whenever a patented invention shall be used or manufactured by or for the United States without license of the owner, such owner's remedy shall be suit against the United States in the Court of Claims for the recovery of his reasonable and entire compensation for such use and manufacture.

Utility.—Inventions to be patentable must be useful. (R. S. sec. 4886.) An invention is useful if not frivolous and not injurious to morals, health, or good order. (Nat. Device Co. v. Lloyd, 40 Fed. 89.) The degree of utility is immaterial. (Mergenthaler Co. v. Press Pub. Co. 57 Fed. 505.) Where an invention can be put to no other use than for gambling purposes, or to deceive the public, it is not useful. (Nat. Automatic Device Co. v. Lloyd, 40 Fed. 89.)

Warranty. — Neither an assignment of a patent right nor a license thereunder implies a warranty of validity of the patent in the absence of specific words to that effect.

INTRODUCTION.

By act of Congress of March 3, 1911, ch. 231 (36 Stat. 1087), effective January 1, 1912, known as "The Judicial Code" (§ 296), the laws relating to the judiciary were largely revised and codified, and to that act the practitioner should first turn for the rules of procedure and practice. It should be noted, however, that many of the laws relating to procedure were not affected by this Code, and the schedule of repeals contained in § 297 thereof should be compared with the Revised Statutes, whenever a given subject does not appear to be covered by the Code.

The most important change in the old law made by this Code was the abolition of the circuit court and the transfer of its jurisdiction to the district court, making the latter the sole federal court of original and general jurisdiction. (§§ 24, 289, 290; 195 Fed. 778.) It did not, however, abolish the office of circuit judge, nor alter the constitution and jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeal established by the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517 (26 Stat. 826). It increased to three thousand dollars the amount necessary to establish the jurisdiction of the federal courts in those cases where the jurisdiction depends upon the amount in controversy. (§ 24, par. 1.) It made the decision of the circuit courts of appeal final in cases arising under the copyright laws, as theretofore under the patent laws. (§ 128, as amended January 28, 1915, ch. 22; 38 Stat. 803.) It provided that, upon the filing of an affidavit of bias or prejudice, supported by certificate of counsel, a judge before whom a case is pending may be displaced (§ 21, construed in 191 Fed. 868; 194 Fed. 978; 195 Fed. 780); that where a receiver is appointed of property lying within different States in the same circuit, upon giving the required bond, he shall be vested with full control over all such property, subject to the disapproval of the circuit court of appeal or a circuit judge within thirty days, provided within ten days a certified copy of the bill and order of appointment be filed in the district court for each district where any portion of the property may lie (§ 56); and that interlocutory injunctions suspending the enforcement of a state law can be granted only after a hearing upon notice before three judges, of whom one must be a justice of the supreme court or a circuit judge. (§ 266. See Act October 15, 1914, ch. 323, § 17; 38 Stat. 730, § 17.)

It must be borne in mind that this article is confined by limitations of space to a general consideration of the subject. The subject is highly technical, and the statutes, adjudged cases, and complete textbooks should be freely consulted. Of the latter the following may be found especially useful: Bates's Federal Procedure at Law (1908, 2 vols.); Bunn's Jurisdiction and Practice of the U.S. Courts (1914); Dewhurst's Rules of Federal Courts (2d ed., 1914); Foster's Federal Practice (5th ed., 1913, 3 vols.); Hopkins' U.S. Judiciary Code (1911); Hopkins' Federal Equity Rules (1913); Hughes' Federal Jurisdiction and Procedure (2d ed., 1913); Long's Federal Courts (2d ed., 1911); Rose's The Federal Courts; Loveland's Appellate Jurisdiction of Federal Courts (1910); Montgomery's Manual of Federal Practice (1914); Rose's Code of Federal Procedure (1907, 3 vols.; 1915); Shield's Federal Courts and Practice (1912); Simpkins' Federal Equity Suit (2d ed., 1911); Simpkins' Federal Suit at Law (1912); Street's Federal Equity Practice (1909, 3 vols.); Thayer on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts (2d ed., 1914).

I. COURTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

For judicial purposes, the United States is divided into nine circuits and numerous districts. Every State either constitutes one district or is divided into two or more districts. There are two or more circuit judges for each circuit and one or more district judges for each district. (Judicial Code, chs. 1, 5, 6, and 37 Stat. 58, 59, 76, 118, 120, 265, 314, 357, 663, 674, 698, 730, 734, 1017, and 38 Stat. 203, 385, 580, 703, 713, 728, 802, 956, 1187, and Acts of Feb. 28, 1916, April 27, 1916, May 16, 1916, June 12, 1916, and July 17, 1916.)

1. District Court. In each district a district court is held by a district judge, or by a circuit judge when the public interest requires. (Judicial Code, ch. 1.) It has cognizance of common law, equity, admiralty, bankruptcy, and criminal causes, and is the federal court of general, original jurisdiction. (Judicial Code, ch. 2.)

2. Circuit Courts of Appeals. In each circuit there is a circuit court of appeals consisting of three judges. The justice of the supreme court assigned to a given circuit and the district judges within such circuit, as well as the circuit judges, are competent to sit; but in practice the court is commonly composed of three circuit judges, or two of them and a district judge. It has appellate jurisdiction over decisions of the district courts within its circuit, save those from which there is a direct appeal to the supreme court as hereafter noted; and, excepting where it asks the instruction of the supreme court on a question of law, or the latter in its discretion grants a certiorari, its judgments are final in all cases in which jurisdiction is dependent entirely upon the opposite parties to the suit being aliens and citizens of the United States, or citizens of different States, and in all cases arising under the patent laws, the copyright laws, the revenue laws, the criminal laws, in admiralty and in bankruptcy. (Judicial Code, ch. 6; ch. 9; 37 Stat. 52; ch. 22; 38 Stat. 803, § 4.)

3. Apart from any judicial district is the Court of Claims, which consists of a chief justice and four judges, sits in Washington and has jurisdiction of claims against the United States (except for pensions) not sounding in tort. (Judicial Code, ch. 7.) It was established by Act of February 24, 1855 (R.S. §§ 1049-1093). There is also a Court of Customs Appeals, which consists of a presiding judge and four associates and sits at Washington, but may also hold sessions in the several circuits. It has jurisdiction to review decisions of the board of general appraisers under the tariff laws. (Judicial Code, ch. 8.) It was established by Act of August 5, 1909, ch. 6, 36 Stat. 11, ch. 32; § 28. (The Commerce Court was abolished by Act of October 23, 1913, 38 Stat. 219, its jurisdiction being conferred upon the district courts. 229 Fed. 11.)

4. Supreme Court. The supreme court consists of the chief justice and eight associates and holds an annual term at Washington commencing on the second Monday in October. It has original jurisdiction of cases in which a State is a party and of cases brought by ambassadors or other public ministers or in which a consul or vice-consul is a party; and original and exclusive jurisdiction of cases between States or between a State and the United States and of cases brought against ambassadors and other public ministers or their domestics. It has appellate jurisdiction: (a) To review, by writ of error only, final judgments or decrees of the highest court of a State in any case where is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute or of an authority exercised under the United States and the decision is against its validity, or where a state statute is assailed as repugnant to the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States and is sustained, or where any right or privilege is claimed under the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States and the decision is against the same. (b) To review directly through writ of error or appeal the decisions of the district courts where their jurisdiction is in issue (the question of jurisdiction alone being certified to the supreme court in such cases); in prize cases; in cases involving the construction or application of the Constitution or the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty of the United States; and in cases in which the constitution or law of a State is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States. (c) To review through writ of error or appeal any judgment or decree of a circuit court of appeals where not made final as above stated, and where the matter in controversy exceeds one thousand dollars besides costs. (d) To review certain judgments of the court of claims, the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, the supreme courts of Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands, and the district court of Alaska. (Judicial Code, ch. 10; Act of January 28, 1915, § 2; 38 Stat. 803; 239 U.S. 283.)

What follows relates only to the jurisdiction and practice of the district court — the court of general, original jurisdiction — in civil cases, and writs of error, appeals, or other proceedings to review judgments and decrees therein, and incidentally writs of error from the supreme court to state courts.

II. JURISDICTION OF DISTRICT COURTS.

1. District in which to sue.

The objection that a suit is not brought in the proper district does not go to the jurisdiction of the court in the fundamental sense, and therefore may be waived and is waived if not taken before pleading to the merits. (96 U.S. 369, 378; 141 U.S. 127, 131; 209 U.S. 490, 500-508; 237 U.S. 1.)

Section 51 of the Judicial Code provides that no civil suit may be brought in any district court against any person by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant; except that, where the jurisdiction is founded only on the fact that the action is between citizens of different States, suit may be brought in the district of the residence of either plaintiff or defendant.

This provision has no application to cases within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. (134 U.S. 488, 491.) Where the suit can be brought only in the district whereof defendant is an inhabitant, if there are two or more defendants all must be inhabitants of the same State though not of the same district except in local actions. (Judicial Code, §§ 52, 53, post, II.); but all the plaintiffs need not be inhabitants of the same State. (199 U.S. 252, 258, 259.) When the suit can be brought in the district of the residence of either plaintiff or defendant and there are two or more plaintiffs or defendants, it is enough that all plaintiffs or all defendants are inhabitants of the district in which suit is brought. (199 U.S. 252, 258, 259.) Where the case arises under a law of the United States, and there is also diverse citizenship, the jurisdiction is not founded only on diverse citizenship, and suit cannot be brought in either the district of plaintiff's or defendant's residence, but only in the latter. (215 U.S. 501.)

A corporation is an inhabitant and resident of the State which incorporated it. (145 U.S. 444, 452; 146 U.S. 202, 205; 160 U.S. 222, 228-230; 215 U.S. 501, 509.) If such State contains more than one district, the corporation is an inhabitant and resident of the district where it has headquarters. (151 U.S. 496, 503, 504.) Aliens and foreign corporations may be sued in any district in which valid service can be made upon the defendant. (170 U.S. 100, 112.)

The foregoing general provisions as to the district where suit may be brought are subject to certain qualifications. Penalties and forfeitures may be sued for either in the district where they accrue or that in which the offender is found. (Judicial Code, § 43.) The place of bringing proceedings on seizures upon the high seas and elsewhere is further specially provided for. (Ibid. §§ 45, 46, 47.) Internal revenue taxes may be sued for either in the district where the liability therefor occurs or in the district where the delinquent resides. (Ibid. § 44.) In suits for infringement of patents the district courts have jurisdiction in law or equity in the district of which defendant is an inhabitant, or in any district where the defendant, whether a person, partnership, or corporation, shall have committed acts of infringement and has a regular and established place of business. (Ibid. § 48.) Proceedings under the national banking laws by any national bank to enjoin the comptroller of the currency shall be had in the district where such bank is located. (Judicial Code, § 49.)

If in a suit to enforce a lien upon or claim to, or to remove a lien or cloud upon, real or personal property situated within the district where brought, any defendant shall not be an inhabitant of or found within said district, or shall not voluntarily appear, the court may order such absent defendant to appear and plead, which order shall be served upon him wherever found and upon the persons (if any) in charge of the property; or where such personal service is not practicable the order shall be published not less than once a week for six consecutive weeks; and if such absent defendant still does not appear and plead the court may entertain jurisdiction and proceed as if he had been served within the district; but as regards him the judgment shall affect only property which was the subject-matter of the suit and under the jurisdiction of the court therein, within said district; provided that when a part of the property against which such proceedings are taken is in another district within the same State, such suit may be brought in either district. (Judicial Code, § 57.) Suits in the district court to recover claims against the United States must be brought in the district where plaintiff resides. (Act of March 3, 1887, ch. 359, § 5; 24 Stat. 505.) Cases in admiralty in personam may be brought in any district where a motion can be served upon defendant or his goods or credits attached; and in rem in the district where the property proceeded against is situated. (134 U.S. 488, 490, 493; 18 Wall. 272; 10 Wheat. 473.) Suits in equity by tenants in common or joint tenants for the partition of lands where the United States is one of such tenants must be brought in the district in which the lands are situated. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 25.) It has been held that in suits of a local nature, which must be brought in the district where the property affected is located, neither party need be a resident of the district where brought. (191 Fed. 899.) The venue of suits respecting orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission is regulated by Act of Oct. 22, 1913; 38 Stat. 219. (See Montgomery, p. 99.)

When there are several defendants and one or more are neither inhabitants of, nor found within, the district in which suit is brought, and do not voluntarily appear, the court may entertain jurisdiction as to the parties properly before it; but the judgment or decree shall not conclude others, not regularly served or voluntarily appearing; and non-joinder of parties not inhabitants of, nor found within, the district shall not constitute matter of abatement or objection to the suit. (Judicial Code, § 50.) When a State contains more than one district, every suit not of a local nature against a single defendant, inhabitant of such State, must be brought in the district where he resides; but if there are two or more defendants residing in different districts of the State it may be brought in either, and a duplicate writ may issue against the defendants directed to the marshal of the district in which any defendant resides. (Ibid. § 52.) When a district contains more than one division, every suit not of a local nature against a single defendant must be brought in the division where he resides; but if there are two or more defendants residing in different divisions of the district it may be brought in either division, and process may be served in any or all of the divisions of the district. (Ibid. § 53.) Suits of a local nature, where the land or other subject-matter of a fixed character lies partly in one district and partly in another of the same State, may be brought in either district. (Ibid. § 55.) In any suit in which a receiver is appointed and the property constituting the subject-matter of the suit lies within different States in the same judicial circuit, the receiver, upon giving bond, becomes vested with full jurisdiction and control over all such property within said circuit, subject to disapproval within thirty days by the circuit court of appeal of said circuit or a circuit judge thereof. (Ibid. § 56.)

2. Original Jurisdiction.

The district courts have original jurisdiction as follows: —

- (1.) Of all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, brought by the United States or any officer thereof authorized to sue (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 1).
- (2.) Of all suits between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants from different States. (Ibid. § 24, par. 1.)
- (3.) Of all suits arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, where the matter in controversy, exclusive of interest and costs, exceeds three thousand dollars. (Ibid. § 24, par. 1.)

Such a suit exists only when the plaintiff's statement of his own cause of action shows that it is based on the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States. To set forth an anticipated defense and allege it to be invalidated by that Constitution or those laws or treaties is not enough. (211 U.S. 149.)

A suit by or against a corporation created by the United States is, except as hereafter noted, one arising under the laws of the United States. (9 Wheat. 738, 817, 828; 115 U.S. 1; 212 U.S. 374, 384; 240 U.S. 97.) So also is a suit against such a corporation and a local defendant upon a joint liability. (214 U.S. 153.) But a national banking corporation is deemed a citizen of the State in which located, and in actions by or against it the circuit and district courts do not have jurisdiction other than they would have in cases between individual citizens of the same States. (Acts March 3, 1887, ch. 373, § 4; 24 Stat. 554; August 13, 1888, ch. 866, § 4; 25 Stat. 433; Judicial Code, § 24, par. 16; 238 U.S. 107.) And an Act of January 28, 1915, ch. 22, § 5 (38 Stat. 803) provides that no United States court shall have jurisdiction of any action or suit by or against any railroad company upon the ground that said railroad company was incorporated under any act of Congress, nor can such jurisdiction be taken on the ground of diversity of citizenship, since a railroad corporation so organized is not a citizen of any State. (241 U.S. 295.)

An action based upon the liability imposed on the initial common carrier of an interstate shipment by the Carmack amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act (34 Stat. 593) is an action arising under a law of the United States. (229 Fed. 11.)

Even though the damages alleged exceed the requisite amount, the district court cannot take jurisdiction if the prayer for judgment is for less than the jurisdictional amount. (236 U.S. 305.) As to requisite amount in controversy in cases which accrued prior to January 1, 1912, see 197 Fed. 323, 494.

Where the jurisdiction of the federal district court is invoked because of a constitutional question, it extends to the determination of all questions presented, irrespective of the disposition that may be made of the federal questions or whether it is necessary to decide them at all. (235 U.S. 601.)

(4.) Of all suits (except certain ones by an assignee of a chose in action specified below) between citizens of different States or between citizens of a State and foreign States, citizens, or subjects, where the matter in controversy, exclusive of interest and costs, exceeds three thousand dollars. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 1.)

The diversity of citizenship must appear in some form on the face of the record. (119 U.S. 237, 469.) It is usually alleged in the declaration or bill. It may be challenged not merely by plea in abatement or otherwise in limine, but at any stage of the case. (198 U.S. 141, 142; Judicial Code, § 37.) An averment of diversity of residence is not sufficient. (120 U.S. 223.) It has been held that failure to allege diversity of citizenship may be cured by amendment even after verdict. (193 Fed. 475, 608.) Failure to allege it correctly cannot now have such unfortunate results as in many past cases, since a recent statute provides for curing the defect by amendment of the pleadings at any stage of the proceedings and in the appellate court upon such terms as the court may impose. (Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 90; 38 Stat. 956; Judicial Code, § 274 c; 226 Fed. 581.)

All the plaintiffs must be citizens of different States from all the defendants. (100 U.S. 457, 468, 469.) The test is whether each plaintiff can sue each defendant in the federal court because of diversity of citizenship. (166 U.S. 395.) It is not necessary that all the plaintiffs or defendants be citizens of the same State. (199 U.S. 252, 257.) To determine whether diversity of citizenship exists, the court has power to arrange the parties on the sides of the dispute to which they really belong, irrespective of their arrangement in the pleadings. (100 U.S. 457, 468; 101 U.S. 289, 298.) Mere formal parties may be ignored. (101 U.S. 577.) Representatives, such as executors, administrators, guardians, trustees, stand upon their own citizenship irrespective of the citizenship of those whom they represent. (138 U.S. 595, 606; 187 U.S. 429, 434, 436.)

Jurisdiction once acquired by the requisite diversity of citizenship is not lost by any subsequent change in the citizenship of either party. (174 U.S. 552.) A bill of revivor by the representative of a deceased party is but a continuation of the original suit, and therefore the jurisdiction still attaches though such representative be a citizen of the same State as the opposite party. (12 Pet. 164.)

For jurisdictional purposes a corporation is deemed a citizen of the State or government which created it, irrespective of the citizenship or residence of its stockholders. (16 How. 814, 328, 329; 8 Wall. 177; 13 Wall. 270, 283; 106 U.S. 118.) A corporation created by one State, which afterwards becomes compulsorily a corporation of another State for some purposes in order to extend its powers, remains, for jurisdictional purposes, a citizen of the State by which it was originally created (174 U.S. 552, 563; 190 U.S. 326, 332, 337; 207 U.S. 277, 284), although its rights and duties as a corporation of the second State only cannot be adjudicated in a suit wherein the opposite party is also a citizen of such second State. (174 U.S. 576.) But where a corporation is created substantially simultaneously in two or more States and is a corporation of each for every purpose, as in the case of consolidations, it exists in each as a corporation of that State for the purpose of determining jurisdiction, and therefore may be sued there by a citizen of either of the other States in which it is also incorporated. (207 U.S. 277, 283, 284.) A national bank is to be deemed a citizen of the State in which it is located. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 16; 238 U.S. 107.) State Constitution and laws denying a foreign corporation doing business in the State the right to remove causes against it to the federal court under penalty of being denied the benefit of limitation statutes, are invalid. (233 Fed. 980.)

A suit between citizens of a State and of the District of Columbia or a Territory is not one between citizens of different States. (2 Cranch, 445; 166 U.S. 395.) The federal courts have jurisdiction of proceedings for the taking of land within a State by eminent domain under the authority of a state statute, if between citizens of different States. (196 U.S. 239.)

(5.) Of all crimes and offenses cognisable under the authority of the United States. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 2; 240 U.S. 60.)

(6.) Of all civil causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, saving to suitors in all cases the right of a common-law remedy where the common law is competent to give it, and to claimants the rights and remedies under the Workmen's Compensation Law of any State. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 3; Act Oct. 6, 1917, ch. 97, § 1; 40 Stat. 395.)

The determination of the limits of the admiralty jurisdiction under the Constitution is a judicial function which Congress cannot control. (21 Wall. 558, 576.) Within those limits the rules of law applicable consist of the general system of maritime law of the commercial nations of Europe (not the more restricted system of England) as adapted to the needs of this country and modified by enactments of Congress. (21 Wall. 558, 572-577.) The admiralty and maritime jurisdiction in this country includes not only controversies affecting commerce and navigation on tidal waters, as in England, but on all navigable rivers, lakes, or other waters — even wholly artificial canals — forming, either by themselves or in connection with other waters, highways of commerce between different States. (12 How. 443; 109 U.S. 629;

191 U.S. 17, 28.) "If the water was navigable it was deemed to be public; and if public, was regarded as within the legitimate scope of the admiralty jurisdiction conferred by the Constitution." (12 How. 443, 457.) Torts, to come within the admiralty jurisdiction, must have been committed on a navigable water as above described. (11 Wall. 1, 25; 195 U.S. 361; 208 U.S. 321.) In the case of contracts, the true test is their nature and subject-matter, irrespective of where made and performed. (11 Wall. 1, 26-29.)

(7.) Of all seizures on land or waters not within admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 3.)

(8.) Of all prizes brought into the United States and of all proceedings for the condemnation of property taken as prize. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 3.)

(9.) Of all suits arising under any law relating to the slave trade. (Ibid. § 24, par. 4.)

(10.) Of all cases arising under any law providing for internal revenue, or from revenue from imports or tonnage, except those cases arising under any law providing revenue from imports jurisdiction of which has been conferred upon the court of customs appeals. (Ibid. § 24, par. 5.)

(11.) Of all cases arising under the postal laws. (Ibid. § 24, par. 6.) The reclamation act is not a revenue act. (192 Fed. 583, 596.)

(12.) Of all suits at law or in equity arising under the patent, the copyright, and the trademark laws. (Ibid. § 24, par. 7.)

(13.) Of all suits and proceedings arising under any law regulating commerce. (Ibid. § 24, par. 8.) But it has been held that this does not apply to actions against an "initial carrier" under the Carmack amendment to the Interstate Commerce Law. (210 Fed. 362.)

(14.) Of all suits and proceedings for the enforcement of penalties and forfeitures incurred under any law of the United States. (Ibid. § 24, par. 9.)

(15.) Of all suits by the assignee of any debenture for drawback of duties, issued under any law for the collection of duties, against the person to whom such debenture was originally granted, or against any indorser thereof, to recover the amount of such debenture. (Ibid. § 24, par. 10.)

(16.) Of all suits brought by any person to recover damages for injury to his person or property on account of any act done by him, under any law of the United States, for the protection or collection of any of the revenues thereof, or to enforce the right of citizens of the United States to vote in the several States. (Ibid. § 24, par. 11.) It is held, however, that the fact that the defendant is an officer of the United States and claims to have done the things complained of while acting under a law of Congress does not give the district court jurisdiction. (192 Fed. 596.)

(17.) Of all actions under the so-called "Civil Rights" acts of Congress, including suits to recover any office except that of elector of president or vice-president, representative or delegate in Congress, or member of the State legislature, where the sole question touching the title to such office arises out of the denial of the right to vote to any citizen on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. (Ibid. § 24, pars. 12, 13, 14, 15.)

(18.) Of all cases commenced by the United States, or by direction of any officer thereof, against national banking associations, including those for winding up their affairs, and of all suits by any banking association, established in the district for which the court is held, under the provisions of title "National Banks," Revised Statutes, to enjoin the comptroller of the currency, or any receiver acting under his direction, as provided by said title. (Ibid. § 24, par. 16.)

(19.) Of all suits brought by any alien for a tort only, in violation of the laws of nations or of a treaty of the United States. (Ibid. § 24, par. 17.)

(20.) Of all suits against consuls and vice-consuls. (Ibid. § 24, par. 18.)

(21.) Of all matters and proceedings in bankruptcy. (Ibid. § 24, par. 19.)

(22.) Concurrently with the court of claims, of all claims (excepting civil war claims and claims rejected prior to March 3, 1887, and claims for fees or salaries), not exceeding ten thousand dollars, and prosecuted within six years from the time they accrued, founded upon the Constitution or any law of Congress, or upon any regulation of an executive department, or upon any contract with the United States, express or implied, or for damages, liquidated or unliquidated, in cases not sounding in tort, in respect to which claims the party would be entitled to redress against the United States, if suable, and of all set-offs, counter-claims, or other demands whatsoever on the part of the United States against any claimant. (Ibid. § 24, par. 20.)

(23.) Of proceedings to enjoin violations of the laws of the United States to prevent the unlawful inclosure of public lands. (Ibid. § 24, par. 21.)

(24.) Of all proceedings arising under laws regulating the immigration of aliens, or under the contract labor laws. (Ibid. § 24, par. 22.)

(25.) Of proceedings arising under any law to protect trade and commerce against restraints and monopolies. (Ibid. § 24, par. 23.)

(26.) Of all proceedings involving the right of any person, in whole or in part of Indian blood or descent, to any allotment of land under any law or treaty. (Ibid. § 24, par. 24.)

(27.) Of suits in equity by any tenant in common or joint tenant for the partition of lands in cases where the United States is one of such tenants, such suits to be brought in the district in which the lands are situated. (Ibid. § 24, par. 25.)

(28.) The district court for the district of Wyoming has jurisdiction of all felonies committed within the Yellowstone National Park. (Ibid. § 26.)

(29.) The district court for the district of South Dakota has jurisdiction of certain named crimes committed on Indian reservations in South Dakota. (Ibid. § 27.) By Act of July 9, 1918, ch. 143, sub-ch. XIX, § 4; 40 Stat., the district courts concurrently with any other competent court are given jurisdiction over criminals found within or brought into their jurisdiction who have committed offenses against this act, regulating use of navigable rivers and coast artillery and proving grounds.

(29a.) By Act of October 6, 1917, ch. 106, § 18; 40 Stat. 425, the courts of first instance in the Philippine Islands and the district court of the Canal Zone are given jurisdiction of offenses under the Trading with the Enemy Act committed in their districts; and concurrent jurisdiction with district courts of the United States of offenses under this act on the high seas; and of conspiracies to commit such offenses as defined by § 37 of the Penal Laws of the United States of March 4, 1909; the provisions of said section are extended to the Philippine Islands and to the Canal Zone.

(30.) The district court has jurisdiction to compel production of books and testimony to secure compliance with the Income Tax Law. (Act of October 3, 1913, ch. 16, § 2; 38 Stat. 166.)

(31.) By Act of July 15, 1913 (ch. 6; 38 Stat. 103), controversies between common carriers and employees may be arbitrated. Power is given to secure testimony with the aid of the United States courts. (38 Stat. 103, § 6.) The award should be filed in the district court and may be appealed from as provided. (Ibid. § 8.)

(31a.) By Act of October 6, 1917, ch. 105, § 2; 40 Stat. 399, the Bureau of War Risk Insurance has power to issue subpoenas to compel attendance of witnesses and production of books, etc. In case of disobedience to a subpoena at the instance of the bureau, any district court of the United States within whose jurisdiction such inquiry is made may compel such party to answer the subpoena. Similar provision is made by Act of March 21, 1918, ch. 25, § 3; 40 Stat.

(32.) Where a federal court has actual custody and control of property through its receiver, such possession gives that court jurisdiction, exclusively, over all suits and proceedings with respect to that property. (95 Fed. 497; 102 U.S. 256; 110 U.S. 276.)

(33.) By Act of February 22, 1917, it was provided that district courts have original jurisdiction of suits begun by bills of interpleader filed by any insurance company or fraternal beneficiary society, where one or more persons, being bona fide claimants against such company or society, reside in the jurisdiction of said court. The policy or certificate which is the basis of the claim must provide for the payment of at least five hundred dollars; the amount of such insurance or benefit must be paid into said court by the company or society; the two or more adverse claimants must be citizens of different States.

The foregoing jurisdiction is exclusive of the courts of the several States in cases: —

(1) Of crimes; (2) of suits for penalties and forfeitures; (3) of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, saving to suitors any common-law remedy and to claimants the rights and remedies under the Workmen's Compensation Law of any State; (4) of seizures and prizes and condemnations of property taken as prize; (5) under patent or copyright laws; (6) in bankruptcy; (7) of a civil nature where a State is a party, except between a State and its citizens or citizens of other States or aliens; (8) against ambassadors, or other public ministers or their domestics, or consuls or vice-consuls. (Judicial Code, § 256; Act October 6, 1917, ch. 97, § 2; 40 Stat. 395.)

Where the jurisdiction of the court depends upon the amount in controversy, "exclusive of interest and costs," such amount is ordinarily the sum of money or the value of the thing for which judgment is demanded in the complaint (179 U.S. 58), or on appeal the sum claimed as a set-off by the appellant, if it exceeds the amount of the judgment (212 U.S. 397), but where the record fails to disclose the amount involved, it may be established by affidavits and counter-affidavits filed under directions from the court (119 U.S. 387). If it appears from the pleadings that judgment for the required amount could not legally be given, jurisdiction is not conferred by a mere demand for a greater sum (170 U.S. 468), though the existence of a valid defense to a bona fide claim does not oust the court of jurisdiction (147 U.S. 500). The amount in controversy in an action by several plaintiffs is the aggregate of their claims upon a single liability of a single defendant (163 U.S. 353), even though, under the State law, separate judgments be entered for the several plaintiffs (163 U.S. 353), but claims based upon distinct acts of the defendant of course cannot be added together to give jurisdiction (239 U.S. 621). Similarly, a joint claim against several defendants represents the amount in controversy (204 U.S. 632), but the aggregate of claims against a number of defendants if the liability is several, does not (214 U.S. 268). In any case, the sum involved is that directly dependent upon the result of the litigation, and does not include liabilities merely contingent thereupon (217 U.S. 561). Objections that the amount in controversy is not sufficient to give jurisdiction may be made in the district court by demurrer, answer, or motion to dismiss, if the action be at law, or, as provided by Equity Rule 29, if it be in equity, and on appeal it is the duty of the federal courts to pass first upon the question of jurisdiction, even though it was not raised by the parties. (220 U.S. 413.)

(34.) By Act of October 6, 1917, ch. 105, § 2; 40 Stat. 399, it was provided that in the event of a disagreement as to a claim under a contract of insurance between the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and any beneficiary or beneficiaries thereunder, an action on the claim may be brought against the United States in the district court of the United States in the claimant's district.

(35.) By Act of October 6, 1917, ch. 106, § 9; 40 Stat. 419, it was provided that any claimant against property in hands of the Alien Property Custodian may, at any time before the expiration of six months after the end of the war, institute a suit in equity in the district court of the United States for the district in which such claimant resides, or, if a corporation, where it has its principal place of business (to which suit the Alien Property Custodian or the Treasurer of the United States, as the case may be, shall be made a party defendant).

(36.) By Act of October 6, 1917, ch. 106, § 17; 40 Stat. 425, the district courts are given jurisdiction to make rules as to notices, etc., and to make such orders and decrees, and to issue such process as may be necessary and proper to enforce the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act. There is a right of appeal as provided in §§ 128 and 238 of the Judicial Code.

(37.) By Act of March 1, 1918, ch. 19; 40 Stat., it is provided that when the Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation shall acquire by requisition or condemnation any property or interest therein for its purposes, and the party whose property is thus taken is not satisfied with the compensation set by the Board, he may accept seventy-five per cent. of such sum and sue the United States as provided by § 24, par. 20, and § 145 of the Judicial Code. Similar provisions are made by Act of March 16, 1918, ch. 74, § 2; 40 Stat.; Act of March 21, 1918, ch. 25, § 3; 40 Stat.; Act of April 22, 1918, ch. 62, §§ 1, 2, 3; 40 Stat.; Act of July 1, 1918, ch. 114; 40 Stat.; Act of July 16, 1918; 40 Stat.

By Act of July 9, 1918, ch. 143, sub.-ch. XXIV, §§ 1, 2; 40 Stat., it is provided that any one engaged in generating electric power for war purposes may institute condemnation proceedings in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction of the property.

(38.) By Act of March 8, 1918, ch. 20, §§ 100, 101, 102; 40 Stat., federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction with state courts to suspend legal proceedings against persons in military service of the United States.

No district court has cognizance of any suit (except upon foreign bills of exchange) to recover upon any promissory note or other chose in action in favor of any assignee, or of any subsequent holder if such instrument be payable to bearer and be not made by a corporation, unless such suit might have been prosecuted in such court if no assignment had been made. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 1.) The plaintiff's pleading must show that the suit could have been brought by the assignor if no assignment had been made. (200 U.S. 76, 83.) The question is could the assignor have sued at the time the assignee commenced his action. (186 U.S. 33.)

The exception to the jurisdiction made by this provision extends "only to rights of action founded on contracts which contained within themselves some promise or duty to be performed, and not to mere naked rights of action founded on some wrongful act or some neglect of duty to which the law attaches damages." (137 U.S. 480, 483.) Nor does this prohibition apply to suits by assignees to recover a specific thing or damages for its taking. (235 U.S. 589.) But suits to enforce specific performance of contracts and to foreclose mortgages are within the operation of this provision. (200 U.S. 76, 82, 83.)

Since an indorsement creates an independent contract, the indorsee of a note may sue the indorser if they are citizens of different States, although suit could not have been brought in the district court on the original contract. (200 U.S. 76, 83.) For like reason the payee of a draft may sue the acceptor if they are citizens of different States, notwithstanding the acceptor and the drawer are citizens of the same State. (138 U.S. 93.) And the first indorsee of an accommodation note may sue the maker if they are citizens of different States (although the latter and the payee were of the same State), on the theory that the payee here is really a maker or original promisor and did not by his indorsement assign any right of action held by him against the nominal makers. (147 U.S. 150, 161.)

A municipality is a corporation within this provision, and therefore a bona fide assignee of its obligations payable to bearer may sue on them in the district court although the assignor could not. (173 U.S. 191, 243.)

The assignee of a judgment founded on contract stands in the same position as the assignee of a contract. (128 U.S. 586, 587.)

If it shall appear that any suit commenced in a district court or moved thereto from a state court does not really and substantially involve a controversy properly within the jurisdiction of said district court, or that the parties to said suit have been improperly or collusively made or joined either as plaintiffs or defendants for the purpose of creating a case cognizable by said court, the latter shall proceed no further but shall dismiss the suit or remand it to the court from which it was removed, as justice may require, and shall make such order as to costs as shall be just. (Judicial Code, § 37.)

No particular mode of showing lack of jurisdiction is necessary; it may be done by affidavits. (129 U.S. 315, 326.) If it appears that the district court is without jurisdiction the suit must be dismissed though neither party has questioned the jurisdiction, and the supreme court will so direct of its own motion if the district court has failed so to do. (211 U.S. 149, 152.)

Where a corporation is organized for the sole purpose of invoking the jurisdiction of a federal court on the ground of diverse citizenship, and is under the control of and acting for a corporation or individuals of the same citizenship as the defendant, the suit will be dismissed as collusive. (211 U.S. 293, 603.)

Congress has not conferred upon the district courts jurisdiction in original cases of mandamus. They can issue that writ, however, in aid of their jurisdiction in cases already pending on other grounds. (203 U.S. 109, 111.)

3. Appellate Jurisdiction.

The district courts have appellate jurisdiction as follows: —

(1.) Of judgments and orders of United States commissioners in cases arising under the Chinese exclusion laws. (Judicial Code, § 25.)

(2.) The district court for the district of Wyoming has appellate jurisdiction of judgments in cases of conviction before the commissioner appointed under section 5 of the Act of May 7, 1894 (ch. 72; 29 Stat. 73), to protect the birds and animals in Yellowstone National Park and to punish crimes in said park. (Judicial Code, § 26.)

4. Removal Jurisdiction.

a. What Suits are Removable. — (1.) Any suit of a civil nature at law or in equity, arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, of which the district courts are given original jurisdiction by The Judicial Code, excepting suits arising under the act of Congress relating to the liability of common carriers to their employees (35 Stat. 65), or any amendment thereto, may be removed by the defendant or defendants from a state court to the United States district court for the proper district. (Judicial Code, § 28, cls. 1, 5; 193 Fed. 293; 303; 685; 768; 194 Fed. 747. See, also, 197 Fed. 715.)

In this class of cases only a defendant may remove, and if there is more than one all must join in the application. (199 U.S. 260, 270.)

A suit against a corporation created by Congress is none the less removable as a suit arising under the laws of the United States because some of the defendants are residents of the same State as plaintiff, provided the liability of the defendants is joint. (212 U.S. 374.)

Actions against a common carrier to recover damages for delay, loss of, or injury to, property received for transportation cannot be removed unless the value of the matter in controversy exceeds three thousand dollars. (38 Stat. 278; 210 Fed. 362.)

(2.) Any other suit of a civil nature at law or in equity of which the district courts are given jurisdiction by The Judicial Code may be removed from a state court to the United States district court for the proper district by the defendant or defendants, being non-residents of that State. (Judicial Code, § 28, cl. 2.)

The statutory provision for removal to the district court of the "proper district" (Judicial Code § 28), has given rise to a serious conflict of authority on the question of jurisdiction in cases of diverse citizenship, where neither plaintiff nor defendant is a resident of the State in which suit is brought. Some judges hold that the removal should be to the district of defendant's residence (211 Fed. 343; 222 Fed. 979); others hold that the proper district is that of the locality where suit is brought (218 Fed. 91; and cf. 214 U.S. 506); while others hold that no district court can compulsorily take jurisdiction of such suits begun in the courts of a State where neither party resides (213 Fed. 685; 226 Fed. 120; 230 Fed. 295; and cf. 203 U.S. 449). The objection that the district court into which a case is removed is not in "the proper district" may, however, be waived. (159 U.S. 569; 209 U.S. 490.)

Where the basis of federal jurisdiction is diverse citizenship, this must exist both at the commencement of the suit and at the time of removal. (111 U.S. 358.) The right to remove on the ground of diverse citizenship cannot be defeated by the plaintiff's joining with the real defendant a codefendant of plaintiff's State who has no relation to the cause of action, when it is shown that such joinder was for the purpose of defeating the jurisdiction of the federal court. (200 U.S. 206; 204 U.S. 176.) A mere allegation of such purpose, however, is not enough. (215 U.S. 308.) Where the complaint in good faith alleges a joint liability, the cause of action, for the purposes of removal, may be deemed to be that which plaintiff has undertaken to make it. (200 U.S. 206; 204 U.S. 176, 183.) A suit between plaintiffs who are citizens of different States and a defendant which is a corporation of a State other than that in which the suit is brought is not removable on ground of diverse citizenship under Judicial Code, § 28. (195 Fed. 350. See, also, 197 Fed. 488.)

A suit by a non-resident against an alien corporation is removable. (196 Fed. 340.) An alien defendant, however, cannot remove a suit brought against him by a State in its own courts. (202 U.S. 501.)

In this class also only defendants may remove, and all must join in the application. (199 U.S. 260, 270.) But where a suit in a state court involving a controversy between citizens of different States is brought in the State of which plaintiff is a citizen, any defendant who is a citizen of another State may remove such suit into the United States district court for the proper district at any time before trial on showing said district court that, from prejudice or local influence, he will not be able to obtain justice in such state court or in any other state court to which he might remove the suit on account of such prejudice or local influence; provided, however, that if said suit can be fully and justly determined as to the other defendants in the state court, without being affected by such prejudice or local influence, and that no party will be prejudiced by a separation of the parties, the district court may direct the suit to be remanded to the state court so far as relates to such other defendants. (Judicial Code, § 28, cl. 4.) This provision does not create an independent class of suits removable from state courts, but only specifies a distinct ground for removing one class of such suits previously defined, namely, that class in which there is a controversy between citizens of different States (199 U.S. 260, 270, 271). It, therefore, is applicable only to cases wherein the controversy is between citizens of the State in which the suit is pending and citizens of other States; and not to cases wherein the controversy is partly between citizens of the same State. (199 U.S. 260, 272.) It enables any one defendant who can show prejudice against him to remove the suit to the district court although his co-defendants decline to join in the application. (199 U.S. 260, 273.) Prejudice or local influence as between defendants is not enough: it must be in favor of plaintiff. (153 U.S. 192, 198.)

(3.) When in any suit above mentioned — that is, any civil suit at law or in equity arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, of which the district courts are given original jurisdiction, or any other civil suit at law or in equity of which the district courts are given original jurisdiction and in which the defendant or defendants are non-residents — there shall be more than one controversy or cause of action, and one such controversy is wholly between citizens of different States and can be fully determined as between them, then either one or more of the defendants actually interested in such controversy may remove said suit into the United States district court for the proper district. (Judicial Code, § 28, cl. 3.)

This provision makes possible the removal by any one defendant of a cause of action wholly between citizens of different States and therefore within the original jurisdiction of the district court, but which has been joined with another controversy not within the jurisdiction of the district court, thereby making the suit as a whole one not within the original jurisdiction of the district court. To come within this provision "there must exist in the suit a separate and distinct cause of action in respect to which all the necessary parties on one side are citizens of different States from those on the other" — "the case must be one capable of separation into parts, so that, in one of the parts, a controversy will be presented with citizens of one or more States on one side, and citizens of other States on the other, which can be fully determined without the presence of any of the other parties to the suit as it has been begun." (104 U.S. 409; 106 U.S. 194; 190 U.S. 428, 432.) Where the suit contains but a single cause of action there is no separable controversy, though there are several defendants, each with a separate defense. (132 U.S. 571.) A suit against several defendants as for a joint liability does not present a separable controversy because the defendants were also separately liable. (132 U.S. 599; 217 U.S. 209.)

(4.) Any suit between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants from different States, in which the matter in dispute exceeds three thousand dollars, may be removed from a state court to the United States district court by plaintiffs or defendants or any one of them. (Judicial Code, § 30.) It will be noted that suits of this class are differentiated from class (2) in that on the one hand they may only be removed where involving more than three thousand dollars (although apparently the district courts have original jurisdiction of such suits without reference to the amount involved); while on the other hand they may be removed by either plaintiffs or defendants or any one of them. The statute provides how it shall be determined that the parties claim under grants from different States. (Ibid.)

(5.) When a personal action has been brought in any state court by an alien against any citizen of a State, who is, or at the time the alleged action accrued was, a civil officer of the United States and a non-resident of the State, jurisdiction having been obtained by personal service of process, such action may be removed into the United States district court for the district in which defendant was served with process. (Judicial Code, § 34.)

(6.) Any civil suit or criminal prosecution in any state court against any person who is denied or cannot enforce in the judicial tribunals of the State, or in the part of the State where such suit or prosecution is pending, any right secured to him by any law providing for the equal civil rights of persons within the jurisdiction of the United States, or against any official for acting or refusing to act under the authority of such laws, may be removed by the defendant into the next district court for the district where it is pending. (Ibid. § 31.)

(7.) Any civil suit or criminal prosecution in any state court against any officer for acts done under color of authority of the revenue laws of the United States, or against any person holding property by title derived from such officer and affecting the validity of any such revenue law, or against any person for anything done by him while an officer of either house of Congress in the discharge of his official duty, may be removed into the next district court for the district where the same is pending. (Ibid. § 33.)

b. When Cases will be Remanded. — Where a suit is removed by any defendant on the ground of prejudice or local influence, if it further appear that such suit can be fully and justly determined as to the other defendants in the state court without being affected by such prejudice or local influence, and that no party will be prejudiced by the separation, the district court may direct the suit to be remanded to the state court so far as relates to such other defendants. (Judicial Code, § 28.)

If in any suit commenced in a district court, or removed thereto from a state court, it shall appear to the satisfaction of the district court, at any time after such suit has been brought or removed thereto, that the same does not really and substantially involve a controversy properly within the jurisdiction of the district court, or that the parties have been improperly or collusively made or joined, either as plaintiffs or defendants, for the purpose of creating a case cognizable or removable, the district court shall proceed no further therein; but shall dismiss the suit or remand it to the state court, as justice may require, and shall make such order as to costs as shall be just. (Ibid. § 37.) When such a suit is remanded to the state court the order to that effect shall be immediately executed, and no appeal or writ of error therefrom shall be allowed. (Ibid. § 28; 169 U.S. 92.)

A party who has wrongfully removed a suit from a state court to the district court must pay the costs in the latter court and also the costs of any appeals in the case. (153 U.S. 192.) The supreme court will issue the writ of mandamus to compel a federal district court to remand a suit to the state court whence it was removed, where it is apparent, as a matter of law from the record itself, that the district court was without jurisdiction (213 U.S. 458); and this is so although the aggrieved party may also be entitled to a writ of error or an appeal, since the latter remedy, being only available at the end of long proceedings, is inadequate. (Ibid. pp. 466, 467.) Where, however, there are questions of fact upon whose determination the right of removal depends, the district court has jurisdiction to decide those questions, and its decision in such case refusing to remand can only be reviewed by writ of error or appeal after final judgment. (Ibid. p. 468; 206 U.S. 323; 209 U.S. 436; 217 U.S. 586.) See, especially, as to use of mandamus to remand causes, 219 U.S. 363.

III. PROCEDURE IN ACTIONS AT LAW.

1. General.

All writs and processes issuing from the courts of the United States must be under the seal of the issuing court and signed by the clerk thereof. (R. S. § 911.)

The practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of proceeding in civil actions at law, other than admiralty causes, in the district courts must conform, as near as may be, to those existing at the time in like actions in the courts of record of the State within which such district courts are held, any rule of court to the contrary notwithstanding. (R. S. § 914.) Subject to this provision, the district courts may regulate their own practice. (R. S. § 918.) "A strict and literal conformity by the United States courts to the state provisions regulating procedure is practically impossible . . . without overturning . . . the settled practice in the federal courts." "While it was the purpose, of course, to bring about a general uniformity in federal and state proceedings in civil cases, and to confer upon suitors in courts of the United States the advantage of remedies provided by state legislation, yet it was also the intention to reach such uniformity often largely through the discretion of the federal courts, exercised in the form of general rules adopted from time to time, and so regulating their own practice as may be necessary or convenient for the advancement of justice and the prevention of delays." (168 U.S. 618, 624, 625. See, also, 220 U.S. 329, 336, 337.) The personal conduct and administration of the judge in the discharge of his separate functions is neither practice, pleading, nor a form or mode of proceeding within the meaning of this provision, "which was not intended to fetter the judge in the personal discharge of his accustomed duties, or to trench upon the common-law powers with which in that respect he is clothed." (131 U.S. 100, 120.) Equitable defenses are now allowed in actions at law in the district courts, and equitable relief respecting the subject-matter of the suit may be obtained by answer or plea. (Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 90; 38 Stat. 956; Judicial Code, § 274 b.) Moreover, if the court finds that a suit at law should have been brought in equity, the court must order any amendments to the pleadings which may be necessary to conform them to the proper practice and the cause is to proceed and be determined upon the amended pleadings. (Ibid. § 274 a.)

Where suits are brought against the United States in the district courts to recover claims the procedure is governed by Act of March 3, 1887, ch. 359 (24 Stat. 505), §§ 4, 5, 6, 7, and 10. Under R. S. § 918 the court may make a rule providing for the examination of judgment debtors in supplementary proceedings on return of execution unsatisfied. (196 Fed. 206.)

The district courts have power to issue all writs not specifically provided for by statute which may be necessary for the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, and agreeable to the usages and principles of law. (Judicial Code, § 262.)

2. Original Process.

The summons should be substantially in the form prescribed by the state practice, but under the seal of the district court and signed by the clerk and with tests of the district judge. (R. S. § 911.) It must be served within the district where suit is brought (12 Pet. 300, 330); and where a particular method of service is prescribed by the state law that method must be followed (130 U.S. 301). A writ to which the clerk's name has been signed without authority is not void but only voidable, and may be amended by substituting the true for the purported signature. (222 U.S. 107.)

A court cannot acquire jurisdiction over the person of one who has no residence within its territorial jurisdiction, except by actual service of notice within the jurisdiction upon him or upon some one authorized to accept service in his behalf, or by his waiver of due service. Therefore a foreign corporation can be served with process in a personal action in the district court only when present in the district where suit is brought by virtue of doing business there. It is not enough that an officer or director be found there, even though such service might be good in the state courts. (156 U.S. 518; 205 U.S. 530; 215 U.S. 437.) But when so present, although the cause of action arose outside of the district and State, the service is valid, notwithstanding that under such circumstances it might be invalid in the state courts. (170 U.S. 100.) A railroad company having no tracks or other facilities and doing no transportation in a given district, but which has there a traffic solicitor, who, however, does not sell tickets or receive payment for transportation, is not doing business in the district. (205 U.S. 530.) Service upon a foreign corporation doing business in a State must be upon an agent representing it in such business. (205 U.S. 364.) For adequate evidence of service in such case, see 195 Fed. 158.

In suits of a local nature, where defendant resides in a different district, in the same State, from that in which suit is brought, the plaintiff may have original and final process against him directed to the marshal of the district where he resides. (Judicial Code, § 54.) Where suit for infringement of letters patent is brought in a district of which defendant is not an inhabitant, but in which he has a regular and established place of business, service of process, summons, or subpoena upon him may be made by service upon his agent or agents conducting his business in the district in which suit is brought. (Judicial Code, § 48.)

When in any suit in a district court to enforce any legal or equitable lien upon, or claim to, or to remove any incumbrance or lien or cloud upon the title to real or personal property within the district, any defendant is not an inhabitant of or found within the district, or does not voluntarily appear, the court may make an order directing such defendant to appear, plead, answer, or demur by a day certain, which order must be served on such defendant, if practicable, wherever found, and also upon the person or persons, if any there be, in possession or charge of the property; or if such personal service upon such defendant is not practicable, such order must be published in such manner as the court may direct, not less than once a week for six consecutive weeks; and in case such defendant does not appear, plead, answer, or demur within the time so limited, or within such further time as may be allowed by the court in its discretion, the court, upon proof of the service or publication of the order, and of the performance of the directions contained therein, may proceed to the hearing and adjudication of such suit as if such defendant had been served with process within the district; but such adjudication shall, as regards such absent defendant, affect only the property which is the subject of the suit. Any defendant not actually notified may within one year after final judgment enter his appearance in the suit, and thereupon the court must set aside the judgment and permit such defendant to plead on payment of such costs as the court deems just. (Judicial Code, § 57; 229 Fed. 234.) It is enough if the order is served on defendant personally or by publication at any time before final decree. (131 U.S. 352.) A partition suit comes within this statute, and suit may be brought in the district where the land lies, although some or all of the defendants be non-residents of the district or citizens of other States. (155 U.S. 58.) Also, a suit to determine the title to shares of corporate stock; and this may be brought in the district where the corporation has its domicile, although the certificates are in another State and are held by residents of such other State. (177 U.S. 1.)

3. Pleadings.

In actions at law in the district courts the pleadings must conform as near as may be to those existing at the time in like cases in the courts of record of the State within which such district courts are held. (R. S. § 914.)

Any party to a suit now has the right, at any stage of the cause, to amend his pleadings so as to obviate the objection that his suit was not brought on the right side of the court. All testimony taken before such amendment, stands as if the pleadings had been originally in the amended form. (Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 90; 38 Stat. 956; Judicial Code, § 274 a.)

Equitable defenses may now be interposed by answer, plea or replication and equitable relief may be obtained by answer or plea, the defendant, having the same rights in such case as if he had filed a bill embodying the defense or seeking the relief. Where affirmative relief is thus prayed, plaintiff must file a replication. (Ibid. § 274 b.)

Where diverse citizenship is a jurisdictional matter and is defectively alleged, but such diverse citizenship in fact exists, either party may amend at any stage of the proceedings and in the appellate court upon such terms as the court may impose, so as to show such jurisdictional facts on the record, and thereupon the suit is to be proceeded with as though the diverse citizenship had originally been fully and correctly pleaded. (Ibid. § 274 c.)

4. Provisional Remedies.

a. Attachment of Property. — In common-law causes in the district courts the plaintiff is entitled to similar remedies, by attachment or other process, against the property of defendant, as were provided by laws of the State in which such court is held when the Revised Statutes took effect (December 1, 1873); and such district courts may from time to time, by general rules, adopt such state laws as may be in force in the States where they are held in relation to attachments or other process; provided, that similar preliminary affidavits or proofs, and similar security, as required by such state laws, shall be first furnished by the party seeking such attachment or other remedy. (R. S. § 915.) Such attachments shall be dissolved upon the occurrence of any contingency which would dissolve them under the laws of the State where the district court is held. (R. S. § 933.) Attachment is but an incident of a suit, and therefore cannot be invoked unless the suit can be maintained. (214 U.S. 173.)

b. Arrest. — This remedy is governed by the law of the State where the district court is held. (R. S. §§ 990, 991.) No person shall be arrested in one district for trial in another in any civil action before a district court (Judicial Code, § 51), except as provided in §§ 52-56, Judicial Code.

c. Discovery. — In the trial of actions at law, the courts of the United States may, on mo-

8. Enforcement of Judgments.

The effect of judgments of the federal district courts as liens, and the remedies for satisfying them, by execution against the person or property of the judgment debtor or by proceedings supplementary to execution to reach such property, or otherwise, are as provided by the laws of the respective States where such courts are held. (R. S. §§ 916, 966, 967, 990, 991, 993; Act of August 1, 1888, ch. 729 (25 Stat. 357), as amended by Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 180 (30 Stat. 813); 8 How. 111; 2 Black, 430; 12 Wall. 158; 123 U. S. 376.) Changes in the boundaries of a district do not affect lien of judgments. (Judicial Code, § 60.)

Where judgment is obtained against a municipality upon municipal bonds or coupons, mandamus will issue to compel the levying of such tax as may be lawful for the purpose of paying the judgment, notwithstanding that a state statute may prescribe a different method of enforcing payment. (24 How. 376; 6 Wall. 166; 9 Wall. 415; 95 U. S. 360; 196 Fed. 849.)

Where writ of error may be a supersedeas, execution shall not issue until the expiration of ten days. (R. S. § 1007.)

Executions may run into any district or part of the same State, but shall be issued from and made returnable to the court in which judgment was rendered. (R. S. § 985.) Executions upon judgments for the United States may run into any State or Territory. (R. S. § 986.)

When a district court enters judgment in a civil action, execution may, on motion of either party, at the discretion of the court, and on such conditions for the security of the adverse party as it may judge proper, be stayed forty-two days from the time of entering judgment, to give time to file a petition for a new trial. If such petition is filed within forty-two days, with a certificate from any judge of such court that he allows it to be filed, which certificate he may make or refuse at his discretion, execution will be further stayed until the next session of the court. If a new trial is granted the former judgment is thereby rendered void. (R. S. § 987.)

In any State where judgments are liens upon the property of the defendant, and where, by the laws of such State, defendants are entitled, in the courts thereof, to a stay of execution for one term or more, defendants in actions in the courts of the United States held in such State are entitled to a stay of execution for one term. (R. S. § 988.)

By Act of March 21, 1918, ch. 25, § 13; 40 Stat., it is provided that where a judgment or decree is had against any transportation system under the Interstate Commerce or Anti-Trust Acts, execution thereon may be stayed upon application of the United States until such time as it shall deem proper.

IV. PROCEDURE IN SUITS IN EQUITY.

1. General.

The Constitution requires that in the United States courts the distinction between the common-law and equity jurisdictions shall be preserved. (11 How. 669.) "The chancery jurisdiction given by the Constitution and laws of the United States is the same in all the States of the Union, and the rule of decision is the same." (6 Pet. 648, 658.) "Alterations in the jurisdiction of the State courts cannot affect the equitable jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, so long as the equitable rights themselves remain," but an enlargement by State Laws of equitable rights may be administered by the courts of the United States as well as by the courts of the State. (21 Wall. 520; 110 U. S. 15, 24; 215 U. S. 33, 43; 217 U. S. 268, 281.) Where under any circumstances relief in equity is admissible it is too late on appeal to contend for the first time that there is an adequate remedy at law. (223 U. S. 70.)

In the exercise of their equity jurisdiction the district courts are not governed by the State practice, as in actions at law, but by "the principles, rules, and usages which belong to courts of equity," except when otherwise provided by act of Congress or rules of court in pursuance thereof, and subject to alterations and additions from time to time by the supreme court and the respective district courts. (R. S. §§ 913, 917; 6 Pet. 648, 658.) Under this authority the supreme court has prescribed rules of practice in equity for the district courts, making equity practice in those courts uniform throughout the United States.

On November 4, 1912, the Equity Rules which had been in force since 1866 were abrogated by the adoption by the supreme court of a new set of rules of practice for the courts of equity of the United States. The obvious intent of the new equity rules is to simplify the practice, and as far as possible to do away with technicalities which do not affect the merits of an action or proceeding, expedite trials, and diminish their expense.

The district courts as courts of equity are deemed always open for the purpose of filing pleadings, issuing process, and of making motions, orders, and all interlocutory proceedings.

"Rule day" is now abolished. Each district court must now establish at least one regular motion day a month, when motions requiring notice and hearing may be made returnable.

The office of the clerk is open during business hours on all days except Sundays and holidays, and the clerk is deemed in attendance for the purpose of receiving and disposing of motions and other proceedings which are grantable as of course, including applications for issuance of process and of taking judgment pro confesso. (Rules 2, 5.)

2. Original Process.

The subpoena, the original process in a suit in equity, is issued by the clerk upon the filing of a bill of complaint. (Rules 7, 12.) It is returnable in the clerk's office twenty days from the issuing thereof, but the defendant has until the twentieth day after service of subpoena, excluding the day of service, within which to file his answer or other defense. If there be more than one defendant a joint subpoena or separate subpoena may be issued at plaintiff's option. (Rule 12.) Service may be made only by the marshal of the district, his deputy, or by some one specially appointed by the court (Rule 15), and may be served on defendant personally or by leaving it at his usual place of abode with an adult member of, or resident with, the family. (Rule 13.)

The territorial restrictions as to service are the same as in the case of original process in actions at law. See ante, IV, 2.

In suits to enjoin violations of the laws of the United States to prevent the unlawful inclosure of public lands, it shall be sufficient to give the court jurisdiction if service of original process be had on any agent or employee having charge or control of the inclosure. (Judicial Code, § 24, par. 21.)

3. Pleadings.

Technical forms of pleading in equity are now abolished. (Rule 18.) The bill of complaint need only contain, in addition to the caption, the names, residence, and citizenship of parties, and the fact of the disability of any party; the facts upon which the court's jurisdiction depends; a simple statement of the ultimate facts constituting the cause of action; a statement of the reasons why parties who appear to be necessary parties are not joined; and a prayer for any special relief desired during the pendency of the action. It need be verified only in case such special relief be asked, and then by the party or some one else having knowledge of the facts. (Rule 25.)

As many causes of action in equity as the plaintiff, or plaintiffs jointly, have against the defendant, or defendants jointly, may be joined in one bill. (Rule 26.)

Plaintiff may file amended bill before defendant's answer or other defense is filed, but afterwards only by consent or leave of court. (Rule 28.) In furtherance of justice, an amendment of any pleading, process, or proceeding may be allowed at any time. (Rule 19.)

Every pleading must be signed by a solicitor of record, whose signature is taken as the equivalent of a certificate that there is good ground for the same, that it contains no scandalous matter and is not interposed for delay. (Rule 24.)

Demurrers and pleas are now abolished, and the remedy now for misjoinder, nonjoinder, or insufficiency of facts is by motion to dismiss or by answer, which points may be disposed of separately before trial. Matters in bar and abatement must be raised by answer and may be likewise disposed of. A motion to dismiss may be heard on five days' notice. If denied, answer must be filed within five days or decree pro confesso will be entered. (Rule 29.) Objection of defect of parties may be brought on for hearing by plaintiff on fourteen days' notice.

An answer may contain a specific denial of facts alleged in the bill, or the defendant may deny knowledge of such facts; it may also contain one or more separate defenses stated in simple terms. It may contain any counter-claim arising out of the same transaction and any matter by way of counter-claim or set-off which would constitute an equitable cause of action in defendant's favor, a cross-bill being now no longer necessary. (Rule 30.)

A reply is not necessary except to a counter-claim or where an order is made requiring a reply to a separate defense. Reply to counter-claim must be filed within ten days from filing of answer or decree pro confesso thereon may be entered. (Rule 31.)

Exceptions to an answer for insufficiency or because containing scandalous or impertinent matter are abolished. Such points are now raised by motion to strike out. (Rule 21.)

An action at law erroneously commenced in equity may be transferred to the law side for further proceedings (Rule 22). Under Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 90 (38 Stat. 956), amending the Judicial Code by adding §§ 274 a, b, and c, a party may so freely amend his pleadings that a motion to dismiss because complainant has an adequate remedy at law will no longer lie. (227 Fed. 199.) Matters ordinarily determinable at law arising in an equity suit may be determined in that suit and need not be sent to the law side. (Rule 23.) If the court finds that the suit should have been brought at law, the court must order any amendments to the pleadings which may be necessary to conform them to the proper practice, and the cause is to proceed and be determined upon such amended pleadings. Any party to a suit now has the right, at any stage of the cause, to amend his pleadings so as to obviate the objection that his suit was not brought on the right side of the court. All testimony taken before such amendment stands as if the pleadings had been originally in the amended form. (Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 90; 38 Stat. 956; Judicial Code, § 274a.)

Where diverse citizenship is a jurisdictional matter and is defectively alleged, but such diverse citizenship in fact exists, either party may amend at any stage of the proceedings and in the appellate court upon such terms as the court may impose, so as to show such jurisdictional facts on the record, and thereupon the suit is to be proceeded with as though the diverse citizenship had originally been fully and correctly pleaded. (Ibid. § 274 c.)

A bill by a stockholder to enforce a remedy belonging to the corporation must allege not only that the suit is not a collusive one, for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction, but that unsuccessful efforts have been made to induce the corporation to bring the suit or the reasons for not making such efforts. (Rule 27; 235 U.S. 635.)

4. Provisional Remedies.

a. Writs of ne exeat. — No writ of ne exeat shall be granted unless a suit in equity is commenced and satisfactory proof is made to the court or judge granting the same that the defendant designs quickly to depart from the United States. The writ may be granted by any justice of the supreme court in cases where it might be granted by the supreme court, and by any district judge in cases where it might be granted by the district court of which he is judge. (R. S. § 717.)

b. Injunctions. — Writs of injunction may be granted by any justice of the supreme court in cases where they might be granted by such court, and by any judge of a district court in cases where they might be granted by such court. But no justice of the supreme court shall hear or allow any application for an injunction or restraining order in any cause pending in the circuit to which he is allotted, elsewhere than within such circuit, or at such place outside of the same as the parties may stipulate in writing, except when it cannot be heard by the district judge of the district. In case of the absence from the district of the district judge, or of his disability, any circuit judge of the circuit in which the district is situated may grant an injunction or restraining order in any case pending in the district court, where the same might be granted by the district judge. (Judicial Code, § 264.)

No injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any state court, except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to bankruptcy proceedings. (Ibid. § 265.) This provision has no application where the suit in the state court has been removed into the district court. (22 Wall. 250.) And, despite this provision, a United States court may enjoin the enforcement of a void judgment of a State court. (236 U.S. 115.)

"No preliminary injunction shall be granted without notice to the opposite party," nor any temporary restraining order unless it clearly appears by verified bill or affidavit that immediate and irreparable loss or damage will result before the matter can be heard on notice. Where such order is granted speedy hearing must be had. (Rule 73; 228 Fed. 26.)

No interlocutory injunction suspending or restraining the enforcement, operation, or execution of any state statute by restraining the action of any officer of such State in the enforcement of such statute, or the enforcement of an order made by an administrative board or commission acting under state statutes, shall be granted by any justice of the supreme court, or by any district court or judge thereof, or by any circuit judge acting as district judge, upon the ground of the unconstitutionality of such statute, unless the application be presented to a justice of the supreme court or a circuit or district judge, and shall be heard and determined by three judges, of whom at least one shall be a justice of the supreme court or a circuit judge, and the other two may be either circuit or district judges, and unless a majority of said three judges shall concur in granting such application. At least five days' notice of the hearing of said application shall be given the governor and attorney-general of the State and such others as may be defendants; but if of opinion that irreparable loss would result unless a temporary restraining order is granted, any justice of the supreme court, or any circuit or district judge, may grant such order at any time before the hearing of the application for an interlocutory injunction, but it shall remain in force only until the hearing and determination of the aforesaid application for an interlocutory injunction. If before the final hearing of such application a suit shall have been brought in a court of the State having jurisdiction thereof under the laws of such State, to enforce such statute or order, accompanied by a stay in such state court of proceedings under such statute or order pending the determination of such suit by such State court, all proceedings in any court of the United States to restrain the execution of such statute or order shall be stayed pending the final determination of such suit in the courts of the State. Such stay may be vacated upon proof made after hearing, and notice of ten days served upon the attorney general of the State, that the suit in the state courts is not being prosecuted with diligence and good faith. (Judicial Code, § 266, as amended by Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 160; 37 Stat. 1013.)

The issuance of injunctions and restraining orders is further regulated and restricted by §§ 17-22 of the Act of October 15, 1914, ch. 323 (38 Stat. 730), entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes." The details of those regulations cannot feasibly be set forth in this synopsis, but the act mentioned must be examined on any question of practice relating to such remedies.

c. Receivers. — The cases in which receivers may be appointed by the district courts are determined by the settled principles of equity jurisprudence.

Where the property lies in different States in the same circuit, the receiver appointed by the district court of one district, upon giving bond, shall be vested with control over all such property (not alone that in the particular district), subject, however, to disapproval by the circuit court of appeals or a circuit judge, and subject also to the filing and entering in the district court for each district in which any portion of the property lies of a certified copy of the bill and order of appointment. (Judicial Code, § 56.) Receivers must manage the property in accordance with the valid laws of the State in which it is located. (Ibid. § 65.) Receivers may be sued without previous leave of court, but subject to its general equity jurisdiction.

(Ibid. § 66.) No person may be appointed a receiver by any court who is related to the judge thereof by affinity or consanguinity within the degree of first cousin. (Ibid. § 67.) No clerk or deputy clerk of a district court shall be appointed a receiver, except where the judge shall determine and certify in the order of appointment that special reasons exist therefor. (Ibid. § 68.)

5. Modes of Proof.

Under the old equity rules the taking of oral evidence in open court in equity causes was the exception rather than the rule. Under the new rules all testimony in equity suits is taken in open court as in actions at law, save in exceptional cases otherwise provided for by statute or by rule. (Rule 46.) Section 863 U.S. R. S., providing for the taking of the depositions of witnesses without the jurisdiction, etc., applies to equity cases as do the provisions of section 866, and what was said above regarding such sections (ante, IV, 5) applies here. (227 Fed. 1084.)

Testimony of expert witnesses in patent or trade-mark cases may be taken by affidavits subject to cross-examination afterwards. (Rule 48.) Plaintiff after filing bill, and defendant after answer not later than twenty-one days after joinder of issue, and either party thereafter by leave of court, may file interrogatories to obtain from the opposite party material facts and documents. Answers must be made within fifteen days, but within ten days objections may be made and answer deferred until their determination. (Rule 58.)

The manner of the taking of testimony and the time within which it must be completed are regulated by Equity Rule 47, et seq.

If any witness shall refuse to appear or give evidence it shall be deemed a contempt of court, which being certified to the clerk's office by the commissioner or examiner, an attachment may issue by order of the court or any judge thereof in same manner as if the contempt were for not attending or for refusing to give testimony before the court. (Rule 52.)

Subpoenas for witnesses outside the district run only for one hundred miles from the place of holding court. (R. S. § 876.) But a witness living in a district other than that in which the suit is pending may be subpoenaed to appear before an examiner sitting in such other district. (R. S. § 863. Rule 54.)

6. The Hearing.

In equity cases issues of fact as well as of law are heard and determined by the court without the intervention of a jury. (R. S. §§ 566, 648.)

References to masters are now exceptional except in matters of account. With the consent of both parties, however, the court may refer the whole case — issues of law as well as of fact — to a master. (129 U.S. 512, 524, 525.) In such case the master is something more than an arm of the court. He is a tribunal of the parties' own selection, and his determinations may not be disregarded at the mere discretion of the court, but are to be taken as presumptively correct, like those of an independent tribunal. (129 U.S. 512, 524.) The parties have one month within which to file exceptions to the master's report; if none are filed it will stand confirmed. (Rule 66.) The proceedings before a master are regulated by Rules 60, et seq.

A complainant is not entitled to dismiss without prejudice after replication filed, and after the expiration of the time for taking testimony without having taken any, but in such case defendant is entitled to have the case submitted on the pleadings. (192 Fed. 362.)

The practice in application for continuances and adjournments is regulated by new Rule 57.

7. Costs.

What was said above regarding costs in actions at law (ante, IV, 7) applies here.

Where exceptions are taken to the report of a master, the party whose exceptions are overruled shall, for every exception overruled, pay five dollars costs to the other party, and for every exception allowed shall be entitled to the same costs. (Rule 67.)

8. Enforcement of Decrees.

Decrees rendered by a district court as a court of equity have the same effect as liens on property throughout the State in which such court is held as decrees of the state courts. (Act of August 1, 1888, ch. 729 (25 Stat. 357), as amended by Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 180 (30 Stat. 813); R. S. § 967.) Liens already acquired by virtue of any decree are not divested by any change in the territorial boundaries of the district. (Judicial Code, § 60.)

Final process to execute any decree solely for the payment of money may be by writ of execution in the form used in the circuit [district] court in actions of assumpsit at common law. (Rule 8.) Decrees in foreclosure suits for any balance due over and above the proceeds of sale may also be thus executed. (Rule 10.) If the decree be for the performance of any specific act it shall prescribe the time within which the act shall be done, and upon plaintiff's affidavit filed in the clerk's office that the same has not been complied with, the clerk shall issue a writ of attachment against the delinquent party, from which, if attached thereon, he shall not be discharged unless upon full compliance with the decree and the payment of all costs, or upon order of the court or a judge thereof enlarging the time for performance; or if the delinquent party cannot be found a writ of sequestration shall issue against his estate to compel obedience to the decree. Upon the failure by a party to comply with an order or decree of specific performance, the act required may be done by a person appointed by the court. (Rule 8.) When the decree is for the delivery of possession of property, upon proof by affidavit of a demand and refusal, the clerk must issue a writ of assistance. (Rule 9.)

Real estate or any interest in land sold under any order or decree of any United States court must be sold at public sale at the court-house of the county, parish, or city in which the property, or the greater part thereof, is located, or upon the premises, as the court may direct. Personal property must be sold in like manner, unless the court shall consider some other manner best. Notice of such sales of real estate shall be published at least once a week for four weeks in a newspaper issued and having a general circulation in the county and State in which the property is situated. (Act of March 3, 1893, ch. 225; 27 Stat. 751.)

V. PROCEDURE IN SUITS IN ADMIRALTY.

1. General.

The forms and modes of proceeding in suits of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction shall be according to the principles, rules, and usages which belong to courts of admiralty, except when otherwise provided by act of Congress or rules of court in pursuance thereof, and subject to regulation from time to time by rules of the supreme court and the respective district courts. (R. S. §§ 913, 917.) The forms and modes of proceeding in admiralty here alluded to were those of our own courts in 1792 as "grafted upon the British practice." (10 Wheat. 473, 489, 490.) Under this authority the supreme court has prescribed rules of practice in admiralty cases.

Admiralty proceedings are either in personam against the owner or master of the ship, or in rem against the ship or ship and freight. In both classes the complaining party is called the libellant, while the defending party is called the defendant in proceedings in personam and the claimant in proceedings in rem. Whether a proceeding may be only in personam or only in rem, or either, or both, is determined by Admiralty Rules of the Supreme Court Nos. 12-19.

2. Original Process.

a. In suits in personam.— Process issues from the clerk's office upon the filing of the libel, and must be served by the marshal or his deputy, or where he or they are interested, by some person appointed by the court. (Adm. Rule No. 1.) The defendant is summoned either by a simple monition directing him to appear and answer to the suit, or by a simple warrant of arrest, or by a warrant of arrest with a provision that if he cannot be found to attach or garnishee his goods, chattels, or credits. (Adm. Rule No. 2.) But no warrant of arrest, either of the person or property of the defendant, shall issue for a sum exceeding five hundred dollars, unless by the special order of the court on a showing of the propriety thereof. (Adm. Rule No. 7.) And imprisonment for debt, on process issuing out of the admiralty, is only allowable where it would be upon similar or analogous process issuing from a state court. (Adm. Rule No. 47.) An attachment of defendant's goods in the district in which suit is brought is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction, although defendant resides in another district. (18 Wall. 272.) Thus, unlike common-law and equity cases, attachment may be used in admiralty to compel the appearance of an absent defendant in a suit in personam. (10 Wheat. 473.) Attachments made in suits in personam may be dissolved by giving bond to abide any order or decree in the case. (Adm. Rules Nos. 4, 5.) Where the defendant's property in the hands of a third party is attached, such garnishee must answer as to the debts or effects of the defendant in his hands, and to such interrogatories touching the same as may be propounded in the libel, and if he does not do so the court may award compulsory process in personam against him. If he admits having any such debts, etc., he must hold them to answer the exigency of the suit. (Adm. Rule No. 37.) As to bail, where defendant has been arrested, see Admiralty Rules Nos. 3, 6, and 47. As to process in petitory and possessory suits, see Admiralty Rule No. 20. As in the common-law and equity jurisdictions, original process must be served within the district of the court from which it issues.

b. In suits in rem.— The process here is by a warrant of arrest of the ship, goods, or other thing, which issues from the clerk's office on the filing of the libel and a proper bond. (Adm. Rules Nos. 1, 9; see, also, rules of each district.) The warrant is directed to the marshal, who thereupon takes possession of the property, giving due notice. (Adm. Rule No. 9.) Where the property is perishable special provision is made for its disposition. (Adm. Rule No. 10.) If the property is in the custody or possession of a third person, the court may, after a due motion and a hearing, direct it to be delivered to the marshal, if required by law and justice. (Adm. Rules Nos. 8, 38.) The manner of staying execution of warrant for arrest of property and the manner of procuring discharge of property after arrest or making other disposition thereof, are regulated by R. S. § 940; R. S. § 941, as amended by Act of March 3, 1899, ch. 441; and Admiralty Rules Nos. 10 and 11.

3. Pleadings.

The modes of framing and filing proceedings and pleadings in admiralty are under the regulation of the supreme court. (R. S. § 917.) Subjects not provided for by the supreme court may be regulated by the respective district courts. (Adm. Rule No. 46.)

The ordinary pleadings are the libel, which begins the suit, the answer, and exceptions to the answer for insufficiency. (Adm. Rules Nos. 22, 23, 27, 28.) There is no replication unless allowed by the court for cause. New facts set up in an answer are deemed denied by the libelant unless confessed and avoided or explained by amendment of his libel. (Adm. Rule No. 51.) In proceedings in rem any person may appear and make claim to the property and defend the suit. The contents, verification, and amendment of pleadings, the time within which they may be filed, and other matters relating hereto, are regulated by the Admiralty Rules of the supreme court (Nos. 22-37, 48, 51, 53) and of the respective district courts.

Interrogatories may be propounded at the end of both libel and answer and must be answered under oath. (Adm. Rules Nos. 23, 32.)

If defendant has not answered upon the return day of the process, the court will declare the libel to be taken pro confesso and proceed to hear the cause ex parte and adjudge therein as law and justice require. (Adm. Rule No. 29.)

The proceedings in cases where the owner or owners of a vessel desire to claim the benefit of the limitation of liability provided for in the Revised Statutes, §§ 4283-4285, are regulated by Admiralty Rules Nos. 54-58.

Proceedings by interveners are regulated by Admiralty Rules Nos. 34 and 43.

4. Provisional Remedies.

Where perishable property is arrested, on application by either party the court may direct it to be sold and sufficient of the proceeds brought into court to satisfy any decree; or, upon application of the claimant, such perishable property, and also any ship which shall have been arrested, may, upon appraisement, be ordered delivered to him, upon the giving of sufficient security to satisfy any decree. (Adm. Rules Nos. 10, 11.)

In cases of mariners' wages, or bottomry, or salvage, or other proceeding in rem, where freight or other proceeds of property are attached to or are bound by the suit, which are in the possession of any person, the court may, upon petition of the party interested, require the party charged with the possession thereof to appear and show cause why the same should not be brought into court to answer the exigency of the suit; and if no sufficient cause be shown, the court may compel the property to be brought into court by attachment or other compulsive process if necessary. (Adm. Rule No. 38.)

5. Modes of Proof.

The mode of proof in admiralty causes may be regulated by the supreme court subject to the acts of Congress. (R. S. § 862.)

Where the witnesses are within the jurisdiction of the court and can conveniently attend, it is usual to have their testimony taken orally before the court or before a commissioner appointed under the 44th Admiralty Rule of the supreme court. Testimony may also be taken by deposition according to the acts of Congress. (R. S. §§ 863-870; Act of March 9, 1892; ante, IV, 5.) Depositions de bene esse may be taken under the same circumstances as in other civil cases. (R. S. § 863.) The same rules as to competency of witnesses and the service of subpoenas apply here as in other civil cases. (R. S. §§ 858, 876.)

6. Hearing.

In cases relating to any matter of contract or tort arising upon or concerning any vessel of twenty tons burden or upward, enrolled and licensed for the coasting trade, and at the time employed in commerce between places in different States and Territories upon the lakes and navigable waters connecting them, the trial of issues of fact shall be by jury when either party requires it. (R. S. § 566.)

All other cases are heard and determined by the court both as to issues of fact and of law, as in the equity jurisdiction. But the court may refer, for hearing and report thereon, any matters arising in the progress of a case to one or more commissioners, who shall have the powers usually exercised by masters in chancery, including the power to administer oaths and examine the parties and witnesses. (Adm. Rule No. 44.)

7. Costs.

The provisions regarding costs in actions at law (ante, IV, 7), except where inapplicable, obtain in admiralty cases. Admiralty Rules Nos. 25 and 26 make special provision for security for costs in certain cases, and Rule No. 40 directs that costs be imposed upon defendant when a decree by default is opened and a rehearing granted. When several libels are brought against a vessel and cargo, where a single libel might legally have been brought, costs shall be allowed on one libel only unless special cause is shown for libeling vessel and cargo separately. And in several libels against any cargo, etc., seized as forfeited for the same cause, the costs of one libel only shall be allowed, whatever the number of owners or consignees concerned. (R. S. § 978.)

8. Enforcement of Decrees.

In all cases of a final decree for the payment of money the libelant shall have a writ of execution, in the nature of a fieri facias, commanding the marshal to collect the amount thereof out of the goods and chattels, lands and tenements, or other real estate, of the defendants or stipulators. (Adm. Rule No. 21.)

Where bond or stipulation has been given conditioned to abide by the orders of the court and pay the money awarded by any final decree of the trial or appellate court, summary process of execution may issue against the principal and sureties to enforce such decree. (Adm. Rules Nos. 3, 4.)

A decree in rem is enforced by the sale of the property and the application of the proceeds as directed in the decree. (Adm. Rules Nos. 41, 42, 43.)

Decrees in admiralty cases have the same effect as liens on property, throughout the State in which the court is held, as decrees of the State courts. (Act of August 1, 1888, ch. 729, as amended by Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 180; R. S. § 967; 2 Black, 430.)

VI. PROCEDURE IN BANKRUPTCY.

1. General.

The district courts of the United States and of the Territories and the supreme court of the District of Columbia are the courts of bankruptcy, and they may exercise their jurisdiction as such in chambers, in vacation, and in term time. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 2, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797, and Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 412, 36 Stat. 838.)

The supreme court is authorized to prescribe all necessary rules, forms, and orders as to procedure in bankruptcy. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 30.) Pursuant to this authority it has prescribed a system of "General Orders in Bankruptcy" and forms, which must of course be consulted in a given case.

2. Original Process.

The defendant in a petition for involuntary bankruptcy is brought into court by serving upon him a subpoena in the same manner as in a suit in equity, except that it shall be returnable in fifteen days unless the judge shall for cause fix a longer time; but if personal service cannot be had, notice may be given by publication in a manner specified. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 18, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797, § 6.)

3. Pleadings.

The initial pleading is a petition in duplicate, filed in cases of voluntary bankruptcy by the person seeking to be adjudged bankrupt, and in cases of involuntary bankruptcy by three or more creditors having provable claims aggregating five hundred dollars or over, or if there be less than twelve creditors, by any one whose claim equals that amount. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, §§ 18, 59.) A petition of voluntary bankruptcy must be accompanied by a schedule of the bankrupt's property and exemptions claimed, in triplicate, one copy for the clerk, one for the referee, and one for the trustee; and in involuntary bankruptcy, such schedule shall be filed within ten days after the adjudication unless further time shall be granted. (Ibid. § 7, cl. (8).)

The bankrupt or any creditor may appear and plead to the petition within five days after the return day, or within such further time as the court may allow. (Ibid. § 18 b.)

All pleadings setting up matters of fact shall be verified under oath. (Ibid. § 18 c.)

4. Referees.

The courts of bankruptcy are authorized to appoint referees (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, §§ 33-37), who have power, subject to review by the judge, to consider petitions in bankruptcy referred to them by the clerks and make the adjudications or dismiss the petitions; to examine witnesses and require the production of documents but not to punish for contempt; and in general to exercise the powers of the courts of bankruptcy except as to questions arising out of applications of bankrupts for compositions or discharges. (Ibid. § 38.)

5. Modes of Proof.

Evidence may be taken orally before the court of bankruptcy or before a referee; and upon filing notice with the referee, depositions may be taken according to the laws of the United States as in other cases. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 21, cls. a, b, c, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797, § 6; also see ante, IV, 5.)

6. The Adjudication of Bankruptcy.

If the bankrupt or any creditor shall appear within the time limited and controvert the facts alleged in the petition, the judge of the court of bankruptcy shall determine the issues presented, without a jury except where a jury trial is given by the Bankruptcy Act, and make the adjudication of bankruptcy or dismiss the petition. If no pleadings are filed by the bankrupt or any creditor within the time limited, the judge shall thereupon make the adjudication or dismiss the petition. No such pleadings having been filed, if the judge is absent from the district or division thereof in which the petition is pending, on the next day after the expiration of the time of filing, the clerk shall refer the case to a referee. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 18, cls. d, e, f, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797, § 6.) A person against whom an involuntary petition is filed is entitled to trial by jury of the question of his insolvency or as to whether he has committed an act of bankruptcy, upon making application thereof before the time within which an answer may be filed. If no application is made, trial by jury is waived. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 19, cl. a.)

Upon the filing of a voluntary petition, the judge, having heard the same, shall make the adjudication of bankruptcy or dismiss the petition. If the judge is absent from the district or division thereof in which such petition is filed at the time of the filing, the clerk shall forthwith refer the case to a referee. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 18, cl. g, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797, § 6.)

7. Proceedings after Adjudication.

After a person has been adjudged a bankrupt the creditors shall meet and appoint a trustee or trustees of the bankrupt's estate; or if they fail to do so the court shall make the appointment. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 44.) Thereupon the court may cause the trustee to proceed with the administration of the estate, or refer it generally to the referee or specially to consider particular issues. (Ibid. § 22.) Within one year after the adjudication creditors must file proofs of their claims, which are allowed or disallowed by the court, or by the referee if the case has been referred. (Ibid. § 57, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797, § 12; 204 U.S. 96.) Under No. 21 of the general orders in bankruptcy, filing proofs with the trustee is a sufficient filing, as it is his duty to deliver them to the referee court. (204 U.S. 96, 102.) For the nature of the proofs to be filed see General Order in Bankruptcy, No. 21, as amended November 1, 1915. (239 U.S. 623.)

8. Composition.

After its acceptance in writing by a majority in number and amount of his creditors whose claims have been allowed, and compliance with certain other conditions, a bankrupt may offer a composition, either before or after the adjudication, but not before he has been examined in open court or at a meeting of his creditors and has filed the required schedule of his property and list of creditors. After a hearing, the judge shall confirm the composition if satisfied that it is for the best interests of creditors, and that the bankrupt has not done or omitted anything which would be a bar to his discharge, and that the offer and acceptance are in good faith. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 12, as amended June 25, 1910, ch. 412, 36 Stat. 838, § 5.) Confirmation of a composition discharges the bankrupt's debts other than those agreed to be paid by the terms of the composition and those not affected by a discharge. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 14, cl. c.) A composition may be set aside within six months if fraud was practiced in procuring it. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 13.)

9. Discharge.

Any bankrupt may apply to the court for a discharge after one month and within the next twelve months subsequent to being adjudged a bankrupt; and if he is unavoidably prevented from applying within that time he may have an extension of six months. The judge shall hear the application and such proofs and pleas in opposition as the trustee or other parties in interest may offer, and shall discharge the applicant unless he has committed certain specified acts. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 14, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797, § 4, and as amended by Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 412, 36 Stat. 838.) A discharge may be revoked within one year if obtained through fraud of the bankrupt and where the actual facts did not warrant the discharge. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 15.) A discharge releases a bankrupt from all his provable debts with specified exceptions. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 17, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797, § 5.)

10. Costs.

The fees and charges of referees, trustees, clerks, and marshals are fixed respectively by Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 40, as amended by Act of February 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. 797; Ibid. § 48, as amended by the same Acts; Ibid. § 52. See, also, General Orders in Bankruptcy, No. 35.

In contested cases of involuntary bankruptcy, if the debtor is adjudged a bankrupt, the petitioning creditor shall recover and be paid out of the estate the same costs that are allowed to the successful party in a suit in equity; and if the petition is dismissed, the debtor shall recover like costs against the petitioner. (General Orders in Bankruptcy, No. 34.)

The rules of the several courts of bankruptcy should also be consulted on this subject.

VII. PROCEDURE IN REMOVAL OF CASES.

1. Procedure for Removal.

In suits of class (1), class (2) excepting those removable on the ground of prejudice or local influence, class (3), and class (4), ante, II, 4, a, the removal is accomplished by filing a verified petition in the state court setting forth the ground of removal, accompanied by a bond stipulating for the filing in the district court within thirty days of a certified copy of the record, and for paying all costs awarded if the district court shall hold that the suit was improperly removed, and also for appearing and entering special bail if originally requisite, written notice of such petition and bond being given the adverse parties prior to filing same. (Judicial Code, § 29.) As to what the petition should contain in various cases, see 121 U.S. 422; 95 U.S. 183; 97 U.S. 646; 106 U.S. 561; 117 U.S. 197; 130 U.S. 230; 106 U.S. 118; 120 U.S. 223; 127 U.S. 322. It is to be noted that the Judicial Code departs from the old law by requiring the petition to be verified and notice thereof given, and by requiring the bond to stipulate for the filing of the record within thirty days. (195 Fed. 786; 198 Fed. 305.)
